The τὶς Βασιλικὸς here signifies an officer of the Kings, one that had some place at the court of Herodes Antipas, who was then the Tetrarch of Galilee, S. Jerome renders it Palatinus. The Latine interpreter reads regulus, by a mistake reading Βασιλίσκος, see Casaub: ad Baron: p.210.

CHAP. V.

1. After this there was a feaſt of the Jewes, and Jeſus went up to Jeruſalem.

2. Now there is at Jeruſalem [* by a the ſheep-market a poole, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda,] having five porches.

* at the ſheep-poole a houſe &c. or, the ſheep-pool ſurnamed in Hebrew

a. 2. on, or by the poole where the ſacrifices are wont to be waſhed, an houſe, or building, or place, ſurnamed בית חסדא an houſe of mercy, becauſe the ſick lay there to be cured.

3. In theſe lay a great multitude of impotent folk, blind, halt, withered, † waiting for [the moving of the water.]

† ſick of the palſie, for ſo the antient Greek and Latine MS. addes after ξηρων, παραλυτικων, paralyticorum.

3. a time of advantage to goe into the water, which had this healing force in it but at certain times, and when it had been newly troubled; See note a.

4. See note on Act. 12. d. and here note a.

4. For [* an Angel] went down into the pool at a certain ſeaſon, and troubled the water, whoſoever then firſt after the troubling of the water ſtepped in, was made whole of whatſoever diſeaſe he had.

* a meſſenger at a ſeaſon ἀγγελος κατα καιρον

5. And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.

6. When Jeſus ſaw him lie, and knew that he had [been now a long time in that caſe,] he ſaith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole?

6. had a tedious chronical ſickneſſe of it,

7. The impotent man anſwered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool, but while I am coming, another ſteppeth down before me.

8. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Riſe, take up thy bed, and walk.

9. And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed and walked, and on the ſame day was the ſabbath.

10. The Jewes therefore ſaid unto him that was cured, It is the ſabbath day, [it is not lawfull for thee to * carry thy bed.]

* take up ἀραι

10. the carrying of thy bed is the carrying of a burthen, and that a labour contrary to the Sabbatick reſt, and therefore unlawfull to be done by thee.

11. He anſwered them, He that made me whole, the ſame ſaid unto me, Take up thy bed and walk.

12. Then asked they him, What man is he that ſaid unto thee, Take up thy bed and walk.

13. And he that was healed wiſt not who it was, for Jeſus * had conveighed himſelf away, a multitude being in that place.

* was gone out private. ly ἐξενευσεν

14. Afterward Jeſus findeth him in the Temple, and ſaid unto him, Behold, thou art made whole, ſinne no more, leſt a worſe thing come unto thee.]

14. The cure that was lately wrought upon thee thou knew'ſt not by whom, muſt oblige thee to an upright reformation of life, or els thou art to expect more fearfull judgments then that diſeaſe was.

15. The man departed, and told the Jewes, that it was Jeſus which had made him whole.

16. And therefore did the Jewes perſecute Jeſus, and ſought to ſlay him, becauſe he had [done theſe things] on the ſabbath day.

16. both wrought a cure (which they thought unlawfull on the ſabbath, Mar. 3. 2.) and alſo bad him to carry his bed v. 10.

17. But Jeſus anſwered them, My Father worketh * hitherto, and I work.]

* untill now ἑως ἀρτι

17. To this exception of theirs againſt him, becauſe of his curing on the ſabbath, Jeſus made this reply, God my Father, from whoſe reſt you take the celebration of the ſabbath, did not ſo reſt from all work on the ſabbath day, but that ever ſince he hath done works of preſervation and mercy every day, And why may not I his Son doe ſo without exception, my Fathers actions and mine being the ſame?

18. Therefore the Jewes ſought the more to kill him, not only becauſe he had broken the ſabbath, but * ſaid alſo that God was his father, [making himſelf equall with God.]

* alſo called God his own father, ἀ πατερα ἰδιον ἐλεγε τον θεον.

18. which the Jews, that knew that the ſon of God muſt be of the very divine nature (as a ſon is of the ſame nature with his father) and therefore equall with God, interpreted to be a blaſphemy in him, whom they believed not to be the Meſſias, and therefore fit to be puniſhed with death.

19. Then anſwered Jeſus and ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, The Son can doe nothing of himſelf but what he ſeeth the Father doe: For what things ſoever he doth, theſe alſo doth the ſon likewiſe.]

19. To this exception of theirs againſt Chriſt he anſwers, Although I affirm my ſelf the ſon of God, and ſo am rightly concluded by you to be equall with my Father, yet this is farre from being matter of impiety in me, farre from oppoſing my ſelf againſt God, For I doe nothing but what is the expreſſe will of my Father that I ſhould doe, and therefore twas reaſonable for me to ſay what I did, v. 17. that my Fathers actions will juſtifie me in doing the ſame.

20. For the Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that he doth; and he will ſhew him greater things then theſe, that ye may marvaile.]

20. For out of the infinite love my Father bears to me, he communicates all things to me, and by that means you are likely to have greater matter of wonderment, then this curing a ſick man on the ſabbath can amount to.

21. For as the Father raiſeth up the dead and quickneth them, even ſo the Son quickneth whom he will.]

21. For even to the raiſing of the dead, farre greater then the curing of the ſick, my Father hath communicated his power to me, and as my Father raiſeth, ſo will I whomſoever I pleaſe.

22. For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son.]

22. And for the office of judging (Angels, or Men) my Father doth it not himſelf, but hath put all into the Sons hand, both the preſent governing of the Church, and finall ſentencing of all.

32. That

23. That all men ſhould honour the Son, even as they honour the Father, he that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath ſent him.] 23. And ſo by this means it appears that as it was no fault in me to ſay what I did v. 17. though it were the equalling my ſelf with the Father, ſo it muſt needs be great hypocriſie in you to think and pretend that you zealouſly honour my Father, when you doe deſpiſe and diſhonour me, which am ſent with this power at this time, on purpoſe to be honoured by all men, in the ſame manner as my Father is honoured, that ſo I may work a reformation among you.

24. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that heareth my word, and beleiveth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting life, and ſhall not come into condemnation, but is paſſed from death unto life.] 24. This is ſo perfectly the will of my Father, that I muſt tell you, that on your heeding and hearkning to me at this time, and beleiving and entertaining my doctrine, as the meſſage of God, depends your eternall well-being, your eſcaping eternall death, and attaining eternall life.

25. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead ſhall heare the voice of the ſon of God, and they that heare ſhall live.] 25. And I aſſure you, this power which God my Father hath given me at this time, extendeth to the greateſt things, even to raiſing the dead out of their graves (as alſo ſinners out of their graves of ſinne,) which power you ſhall ſhortly ſee (nay in the ſpirituall ſenſe is already) exerciſed by me.

26. For as the Father hath life in himſelf, ſo hath he given to the Son to have life in himſelf.] 26. For as God hath of & from himſelf power to give life to any thing, ſo hath he given this power to me, and I have it.

27. And he hath given him authority to execute judgment alſo, becauſe he is the ſon of man.] 27. And as I am God-man, i.e. in that I have thus humbled my ſelf to this mean eſtate (which ought not to leſſen, but rather encreaſe the account which is due to me in the world) my Father, by way of reward, (Phil. 2. 8, 9.) hath given me all power and authority, both now and hereafter, in and over his Church. And ſo again in other reſpects, as 1. that men having a mercifull high prieſt, (not ſuch an one as cannot ſuffer, or conſequently be touched with our infirmities, but one, that is a man upon the earth, in all things, tempted like unto us, yet without ſinne) might have confidence of acceſſe to him, in his preſent government of all things, and 2. that men which have bodies and ſo are viſible (and are to be judged hereafter as well as Angels) may have a viſible judge of them, and of all things done in their bodies.

28. Marvaile not at this, for the houre * is coming, in which all that are in their graves ſhall heare his voice.] * cometh ἔρχ 28. Let not what I ſay be matter of wonderment to you, for certainly there ſhall be (as certainly as if it were come already) a time of generall reſurrection for all the dead; (and an eſſay thereof ſhall ſhortly be ſeen among you.)

29. And ſhall come forth, they that have done good unto the reſurrection of life, and they that have done evil, unto the reſurrection of damnation.] 29. And the righteous ſhall have their bodies and ſouls united in bliſſe, and the wicked ſhall alſo have a reſtitution of their bodies, to receive their ſentence and puniſhment.

30. I can of mine own ſelf doe nothing, as I hear, ſo I judge, and my judgment is juſt becauſe I ſeek not mine own will, but the will of † the Father which hath ſent me.] † him that ſent me, for in the Syriack and antient Latine and many Greek copies τοῦπεμψαντός is left out 30. My judgment is a righteous judgment and agreeable to my Fathers method, and decree, that they which beleive on me, ſhall be ſaved, and they that reject me, damned. This my Father hath declared, and therefore 'tis not the ſeeking either honour or revenge to my ſelf, that I ſay or doe this, but the going according to my Fathers preſcript, and nothing elſe.

31. If I bear witneſſe of my ſelf, my witneſſe is not true. 31, 32. If I did any thing that tended to mine own honour,

32. There is another that beareth witneſſe of me, and I know that the witneſſe which he witneſſeth of me, is true.] and were a ſingle witneſſe therein, you might reaſonably except againſt it, but as that which I doe, is not to honour my ſelf, but only to execute my Fathers will, ſo for the truth of what I ſay, my Father bears witneſſe of me, and hath done it already, by ſending the Spirit, and a voice from heaven, and giving me power to doe miracles, and that ſure is a competent teſtimony, which can deceive none.

33. Ye ſent unto John, and he bare witneſſe unto the truth.] 33. And for the triall hereof, you have ſent to John, who baptized me, when the Spirit ſo deſcended on me, and he that ſaw it, teſtified to you the truth of it.

34. But I receive not teſtimony from man, but theſe things I ſay, that ye might be ſaved.] 34. But as for me I need not the teſtimony of John, or any man, but yet that you that beleive him, may beleive him of me, and ſo eſcape and flie from the danger, which approacheth you, I thus mention to you his teſtimony, which was of ſuch authority with you.

35. He was * a burning and ſhining light, and ye were † willing for a ſeaſon to rejoice in his light.] * the lamp burning and ſhining, ὁ λύχνος ὁ καιόμενος καὶ φαίνων, † pleaſed for a while, ἐθελήσατε 35. He was that Elias, deſcribed Eccleſ. 48. by being like fire, and his word burning like a lamp, and for a while you liked well to hear him, but aſſoon as he teſtified of me, then you preſently rejected him.

36. But I have * greater witneſſe then that of John, for the works which the Father hath given me to finiſh, the ſame works that I doe, bear witneſſe of me, that the Father hath ſent me.] * a teſtimony greater τὴν μαρτυρίαν μείζω 36. But I have no need of that teſtimony of his; for the working of thoſe miracles, which God hath enabled me to work, is a greater demonſtration of my being ſent by God, then John Baptiſt's teſtimony, that he ſaw the Spirit deſcend upon me.

37. And the Father himſelf which ſent me, hath born witneſſe of me, Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor ſeen his † ſhape.] † appearance εἶδος 37. And God the Father by voice from heaven hath teſtified of me, But ye, as, according to your Fathers deſire, expreſt Exod. 20. 19. Deut. 5. 25. and 18, 16. ye have not heard the voice of God, nor ſeen his appearance, ſo it appears by your actions, ye behave your ſelves as thoſe that know nothing of God, ungodly impious men, ſee 1 Joh. 3. 6.

38. And ye have not his word abiding in you, for whom he hath ſent, him ye beleive not.] 38. And for that only means left you, the

the word of God revealed to you, ye doe not make uſe of that, or live according to it, as is apparent by your not beleiving on me, who have ſeen, and heard, and know his will, and am ſent by God, as the only means of declaring that will to you, and am foretold in the ſcripture, as the Meſſias to come.

39. Look into, and examine the writings of the Old Teſtament, whereon you depend, and beleive that through performance of the Moſaicall precepts, you ſhall have eternall life. And on examination you ſhall find that all thoſe prophecies and types are fulfilled in me, and that all the promiſes of life there made, have an aſpect on me, the giver of life.

39. Search the ſcriptures, for in them ye think * ye have eternall life, and they are they which teſtifie of me.]

* to have ἔχειν

40. But ye, though ye look upon theſe as the repoſitory of your preſent and eternall bliſſe, and though they direct you to me as the only means to attain it, yet wilfully reject me, and by that means your eternall bliſſe alſo.

40. And ye will not come to me that ye might have life.]

41, 42. Alas, tis not your approbation, or eſtimation (to be acknowledged, or wel-ſpoken of by you) that I contend for, while I thus ſpeak. But to this purpoſe I ſay it. By your dealing with me, who come with this teſtimony of my Father, it is apparent and diſcernible, how farre you are (whatever you pretend) from all piety and love of God, that this teſtimony of God cannot work on you to receive me, but the being wel-ſpoken of by men (ſee c. 12. 43.) is all you care for, and becauſe that may be loſt by receiving me, therefore am I rejected by you.

41. I receive not honour from men.

42. But I know you that ye have not the love of God in you.]

43. But to ſee the ſottiſhneſſe of your dealings: I bring my commiſſion from God, and ye heed it not, and yet if another without any commiſſion from God, a meer counterfeit, ſhall, in his own name, come, and undertake to ſeduce you, ſuch as Simon Magus, (ſee note on 2 Theſſ. 2. a.) what multitudes of you Jewes will follow him?

43. I am come in my Fathers name, and ye receive me not, If another ſhall come in his own name, him ye will receive.]

44. 'Tis not poſſible you ſhould beleive aright, that are ſo in love with the praiſe of men, as to take him for a prophet, who hath no other teſtimony that he is ſo, but his own, or the voice of other men, and dare not beleive on me, the rulers, for fear of diſpleaſing the people, and the people, the rulers, and mean while both contemn the favour, and approbation of God, and ſet his teſtimony at nought, reject me, who come authoriz'd with that.

44. How can ye beleive which receive † honour of one another, and ſeek not the honour, that cometh from God only?]

† glory δόξαν

45. 'Tis not ſo much I, to whom you have done this affront, and therefore I ſhall not need to bring any complaint or endictment againſt you before my Father, but 'tis your own prophet Moſes, on whom you pretend to depend ſo much, and he will riſe up to teſtifie againſt you.

45. Doe not think that I will accuſe you to my Father, there is one that accuſeth you, even Moſes, * in whom you truſt.]

* on whom ye have truſted, εἰς ὃν ὑμεῖς ἠλπικατε.

46. Had you but beeded and beleived Moſes, that prophet ſo valued by you, his predictions and typicall repreſentations would have led you to beleive on me, in whom they are all fulfilled.

46. For had ye beleived Moſes, ye would have beleived me, for he wrote of me.]

47. But if your own Moſes cannot be heard by you, I cannot expect to have that authority with you.

47. But if you beleive not his writings, how ſhall ye beleive my words.]

a. ἐπὶ τῇ Βηθεσδὰ κολυμβήθρᾳ. Beſides ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ κολυμβήθρᾳ both in the dative caſe, the only nominative caſe in the period muſt be ἡ ἐπιλεγομένη Βηθεσδὰ, and then there can be no way of tranſlating it, but by underſtanding the word בית houſe, which is after contained in the word Bethesda, and which muſt be the ſubject to which the following adjunct belongs, πέντε στοὰς ἔχουσα, having five porches which cannot be ſaid ſo properly of any thing as of an houſe; If this be the reading, then this houſe called in Syriack בית ורחומתא the houſe of mercy, as the Syriack now reads it, i. e. the almes-houſe literally (not as Beza would have it domus effuſionis) muſt be reſolved to have been a noſocomium or hoſpital for thoſe that are ſick, and hoped for cure at this poole, and that it was built ἐπὶ τῇ κολυμβήθρᾳ, upon, or adjoyning to that poole, (or, as the Kings MS. reads, ἐν τῇ, on it,) and had five porches, or paſſages out to it. Others anciently did read it (ſee Rob: Steph: var: lect:) without [ἐπὶ τῇ] in the nominative caſe, ἦν δὲ ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις προβατικὴ κολυμβήθρα, there was at Jeruſalem a ſheep-poole, So S. Chryſoſtome, and S. Cyrill of Alexandria, Theophylact, Theophilus Antioch: and S. Jerome, Bethesda, ſaith he, in Locis Hebr: piſcina in Jeruſalem quæ vocatur petulialis, Bethesda is a pool in Jeruſalem, called the cattel-poole, which if it be the right reading, then may that poole be there ſet for this houſe and poole together, and both (ἐπιλεγομένη) with the agnomen of Bethesda the almes-houſe, or elſe בית may be taken in a larger notion to ſignifie any place, and ſo ſignifie the poole only, without ſuppoſing any houſe there, but only ſome buildings as porches or entrances into the poole v. 7. As for that third reading, which Beza uſed ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ, and then κολυμβήθρα in the nominative, this agrees not with the ancient readings, and being not intelligible but by underſtanding πύλῃ, and ſo making it the ſheep-gate, Nehem. 12. 39. that is no way agreeable to this purpoſe. For ſuppoſing, what is ſo often affirmed by thoſe that favour this reading, that the ſheep that were brought in at this gate for ſacrifice, were there wont to be waſhed, before they were brought into the Temple (or as Beza, potare & merſari, to drink, and be waſhed) yet 'tis neither imaginable that the waſhing or drinking of ſheep there, ſhould make the poole medicinable, or being ſo of it ſelf, that it ſhould be thus employed to thoſe common uſes, for which any other poole would have been as good. That which I conceive of it is this, not that here the live ſheep were waſhed by thoſe that brought them, but the carcaſſes or entrailes of them, when they were ſlain, and this by the officers of the Temple. Agreeable to which is the account which Brocardus hath hath rendred of this matter at large, In area Templi, ſaith he, contra Aquilonem eſt porta vallis ducens in vallem Joſaphat, & hac etiam vocatur Gregis, quòd per eam introducebantur greges in templo immolandi. Intrantibus porrò portam Gregis ad ſiniſtram occurrit piſcina probatica, in qua Nathinæi lavabant hoſtias quas tradebant ſacerdotibus in Templo offerendas. It was ſo called, becauſe the ſacrifices were there waſhed by the Nethinim (or inferiour officers) which they delivered to the prieſts to be offered in the Temple, ſuppoſing this waſhing to be intermediate between the ſlaying, and offering of the ſacrifices, and to belong to all the ſacrifices (as S. Ieromes [Peculialis] alſo denotes) not the ſheep only. This, it ſeems, Theophylact did beleive, who gives this for the commonly aſſigned reaſon of the divine healing power that theſe waters had, ἀπὸ τῆς πλύσεως τῶν ἐντοσθίων τῶν ἱερείων, becauſe the entrails of the ſacrifices were waſhed there. And, I ſuppoſe, theſe words in *S. Ieromes (lacus alter mirum in modum rubens quaſi cruentis aquis, another poole looking wonderful red, as it were with bloody waters &c.) doe intimate it alſo. And it is obſervable that thoſe that here waited for cures, are not men of all ſorts of diſeaſes, but only the blind, the halt, the withered, and perhaps the Paralytical ver. 3. and therefore perhaps the [whatſoever diſeaſe] ver. 4. may not denote an unlimited univerſality, but only a reſtrained, ᾧ δήποτε κατεχόμενο νοσήματι, whatſoever diſeaſe he was held with, i. e. which ſoever of theſe foremention'd, for which they came thither for cure. And that a medicinable force to the curing of lameneſſe, &c. might naturally come to the waters by that means, will not appear ſtrange, if the cures that are wrought by putting the patient into the belly of a beaſt newly opened, or into the skin of a ſheep newly ſlead, or by the application of the warm vital parts of any beaſt, be conſidered. For the like virtue might well be transfuſed to this pool by the daily waſhing of the entrails of the ſacrifices in it, at the time of the feaſts (ſuch as is here mentioned v. 1.) where ſo many thouſand ſacrifices were killed at once, as may be gueſs'd by the number of the two hundred fifty five thouſand, and ſix hundred Paſchal ſacrifices, which was teſtified to Ceſtius by the prieſts at a Paſſover in Nero's time. Theſe might well die and colour the water, and give a force to it, and that at ſuch a time, when the waters were warm with the freſh waſhing of the ſacrifices in it, and eſpecially when by a mans going in to move or trouble the water v. 4. thoſe groſſer thicker parts, which came from the beaſts, the congelations of blood, which went to the bottome, were ſtirr'd up, and made to infuſe themſelves more ſtrongly into the water; which ſeems to be the reaſon, why to the work ing of a cure by thoſe waters theſe two circumſtances are made neceſſary, 1. that it ſhould be, not at any time, but καθ' καιρὸν, v. 4. at a ſet ſeaſon, which that it ſignified a feſtivall time, (if not ſolely that) appears probable, becauſe now v. 1. ἦν ἑορτὴ Ἰουδαίων, there was a feaſt of the Jewes, and at this time the ſick man waited that καιρὸν opportunity, though he were deprived of it v. 7. And if from v. 6. it be imagined that he had lain a long time in that place, that is a miſtake, for the [πολὺν χρόνον, long time] belongs to the length of his diſeaſe v. 5. and to nothing elſe. 2ly, that the ſick perſon ſhould go in immediately upon the troubling of the waters, which muſt ſignifie that immediatly upon the moving they had a force, wch ſoon cool'd or decay'd again, by the ſinking of that, wch was ſtirr'd up, or by the evaporating of it. All which, if it be a naturall, and no miraculous way of curing, it will be the more unlikely that the ἄγγελος here v. 4. ſhould be an Angel of Gods. It may eaſily be ſuppoſed that there was an officer or ſervant, ſent down by them, that had skill in it, to trouble the waters at a fit time, and he being a meſſenger ſent before, as it were, to prepare for the ſick mans coming after him, might well be called ἄγγελος, not an Angel but a meſſenger, ſee Act. 12. 8. But it is very uncertain, from the variety of copies, what is to be determin'd in this matter, For as the Kings MS. makes one great change here, and reads Ἄγγελος γὰρ Κυρίου καθ' καιρὸν ἐλούσατο, The Angel of the Lord waſhed, or bathed at a ſeaſon, v. 4. ſo on the other ſide, the antient Greek and Latine MS. which Th: Beza preſented to the Univerſity of Cambridge, wholly leaves out the 4th verſe, wherein the only mention of ἄγγελος, whether Angel or meſſenger, is.

* departed to the other ſide of the ſea of Galilee, that of Tiberias, or, into the coaſts, or parts of Tiberias, for the old Greek and Latine MS. reads εἰς τὰ μέρη τῆς Τιβεριάδος, in fines Tiberiadis.

1. After theſe things Jeſus * went over the [ſea of Galilee, which is the ſea of Tiberias.]

1. lake of Genneſareth in Galilee, to that part of it which is neer the city Tiberias, ſee note on Lu. 8. c.

2. And a great multitude followed him, becauſe they ſaw [his miracles which he did] on them that were diſeaſed.

2. the miraculous cures which he wrought

3. And Jeſus went up into a [mountain,] and there he ſate with his diſciples.

3. mountainous deſert part, belonging to the city Bethſaida, Lu. 9. 10.

4. And the Paſſover, a feaſt of the Jewes, was nigh.

5. When Jeſus then lift up his eyes, and ſaw a great company come unto him, he ſaith unto Philip, [Whence ſhall we buy bread that theſe may eat?]

5. Where ſhall we have money with which we may buy bread enough to feed all this multitude?

(6. And this he ſaid to prove him, for he himſelf knew what he would doe.)

7. Philip anſwered him, Two hundred penyworth of bread is not ſufficient for them, that every one of them may [take a little.]

7. receive a ſmall proportion to refreſh him.

8. One of his diſciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, ſaith unto him,

9. There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two ſmall fiſhes, but what are they among ſo many?

10. Settle and diſpoſe them in ranks, and in a poſture for eating.

10. And Jeſus ſaid, [Make the men * ſit down.] Now there was much graſſe in the place. So the men ſate down in number about five thouſand. * lie down ἀναπεσεῖν

11. having bleſſed the bread and fiſhes, thanked God for them,

11. And Jeſus took the loaves, and [when he had given thanks, he diſtributed to the diſciples, and the diſciples to them that were ſet down, and likewiſe of the fiſhes, as much as they would.]
and implored his bleſſing on them, he as the Maſter of the feaſt gave the ſeverall proportions to the diſciples, and they as waiters diſtributed them to the gueſts, every man his portion of bread, and of fiſh, as much as they deſired to eat.

12. When they were filled, he ſaid unto his diſciples, Gather up the fragments that † remain, that nothing be loſt. † ſuperabound, are to ſpare, περισσεύσατα

13. Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

15. When Jeſus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, [and [a] make him a King, he departed † again into a mountain himſelf alone *.] † again, is wanting in the Syriack and many copies, * and prayed there, ſo the old Greek and Latine MS. adds καὶ προσηύξατο ἐκεῖ & ibi orabat.

16. And when even was now come, his diſciples went down unto the ſea,

17. were paſſing, or in their paſſe over the ſea toward Capernaum,

17. And entred into a ſhip and [went over the ſea towards Capernaum,] and it was now dark, and Jeſus was not come to them.
See Act. 28. 14.

18. began to grow tempeſtuous.

18. And the ſea [aroſe by reaſon of a great wind that blew.]

19. When therefore by the contrariety of the winds they had been forced to fall to their oares, and had done ſo for ſome ſpace, they diſcern one walking on the ſea and coming toward the ſhip, This was Jeſus, but they not knowing it was ſo, (ver. 20.) were affrighted with the ſight.

19. So when they had rowed about twenty five or thirty furlongs, they ſee Jeſus walking on the ſea, and drawing nigh unto the ſhip, and they were afraid.]

20. But he ſaith unto them, It is I, be not afraid.

21. gladly took him into the ſhip, ſee Mar. 6. 51.

21. Then they [willingly received him into the ſhip, and immediately the ſhip was at the land whither they went.] and aſſoon as ever they received him in, the ſhip arrived at their intended ſhore.

22. The day following, when the people, which ſtood on the other ſide of the ſea, ſaw that there was none other boat there, ſave that one, whereinto his diſciples were entred, and that Jeſus went not with his diſciples into the boat, but that his diſciples were gone away alone.

23. where they now were, and where they had eaten bread, when by bleſſing the five loaves he ſo multiplied them that they were ſufficient to feed five thouſand.

23. † Howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias, nigh unto the place [where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks.] † But other veſſels from Tiberias went neer that place, Ἄλλα ἦλθε πλοῖα ἐκ Τιβεριάδος ἐγγὺς τοῦ τόπου -

24. When, I ſay, the multitude ſaw Jeſus was gone from that place,

24. When the people therefore ſaw that Jeſus was not there, neither his diſciples, they alſo took ſhipping, and came to Capernaum, ſeeking for Jeſus.]
and that his diſciples were not come, and from thence concluded it moſt probable, that Jeſus, though he went not with the diſciples, was gone after them to Capernaum, his uſuall habitation, they having the advantage of veſſels for paſſage v. 23. took ſhip and went to Capernaum to look for him.

25. And when they had found him on the other ſide of the ſea, they ſaid unto him, Rabbi, when cameſt thou hither?

26. That which makes you thus follow me, is not the acknowledgment of my divine power evidenced by my miracles, or conſequent to that, a purpoſe to embrace my doctrine, or deſire to learn of me, but a groſſe carnall deſire of the like advantages, which you had of my multiplying loaves to feed you.

26. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [Ye ſeek me, not becauſe ye ſaw the miracles, but becauſe ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.]

27. Set not your hearts on theſe poor externall advantages, ſeek not, deſire not to acquire this corporall food, in order to your worldly ends, (ſee note a.) and that which will afford you but a ſhort fading benefit, v. 49. but look out, and get your part of that food which is it ſelf unperiſhable, & will make all that feed on it immortall alſo. This food ſhall the Meſſias (i.e. Chriſt) beſtow upon you, for him and his doctrine hath God the Father acknowledged to be his own (ſee note on Epheſ. 4. 8.) and by the coming of the Spirit on him, demonſtrated him to be ſent by him.

27. [b] Labour not for the meat which periſheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlaſting life, which the ſon of man ſhal give unto you, for him hath * God the Father ſealed.] *the Father ſealed, even God, τοῦτον γὰρ ὁ θεὸς ἐσφράγισε.

28. Hereupon they ſaid unto him, What is required of us, what courſe wilt thou preſcribe, that we may doe that which thou biddeſt us, v. 27. that we may be alwaies imployed in Gods taſks, ſo as will be acceptable to him?

28. Then ſaid they unto him, What ſhall we doe that we might [c] † work the works of God?] † labour in

29. Jeſus anſwered them, That which God requires of you, is,

29. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, This is the work of God, that ye beleive on him, whom he hath ſent.]
to beleive and doe all that I, who am ſent by him, doe command you.

30. They

30. They ſaid therefore unto him, What ſign ſheweſt thou then, that we may ſee and beleive in thee? what doſt thou work?] 30. To this they ſaid, What miracle do you ſhew? what work of wonder, ſuch as may be ſufficient to aſſure us, that thou art the Meſſias?

31. Our fathers did eat Manna in the deſert, as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat.] 31. We have great reaſon to adhere to Moſes, who wrought ſuch miracles, brought down bread ready prepared from heaven for us, and unleſſe thou wilt produce ſome atteſtation to thy ſelf, which may at leaſt equall this one, why may not we be allow'd to think it unreaſonable to forſake him, and follow thee?

32. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, Moſes gave you not that bread from heaven, but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.] 32. Jeſus ſaid unto them, I aſſure you, that Manna came not from heaven, but out of the airy region, and that the work of God, not Moſes, and now the ſame God gives you ſome more durable food then that was, gives you me who came really down from heaven, and am moſt eminently that which Manna was to your bodies, bread or food to your ſouls.

† that is 33. For the bread of God is † he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.] 33. That fed but your bodies, and putrefied preſently; but that which God now gives you, is for your ſouls, and will feed them to eternity, v. 27. and did really deſcend from the heaven of heavens, not as that Manna for a multitude only, but the feeding and enlivening the whole world.

34. Then ſaid they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.

35. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, I am [the bread of life, he that cometh to me ſhall never hunger, and he that beleiveth on me ſhall never thirſt.] 35. that durable viſicall bread of God, the excellency whereof is infinitely above that of Manna, as in other things, ſo in this, that the feeding thereon, yeilds a durable ſatisfaction, whereas in Manna and all corporeall food, there is ſtill a ſucceſſion of appetite.

* ye have both ſeen me, ὑμεῖς ἑωράκατε με 36. But I ſaid unto you, that * ye alſo have ſeen me, and beleive not. 36. But that which I told you v. 26. was, that though you have ſeen me and taſted of my miracles, yet you doe not beleive on me, feed not on this true bread, which came down from heaven.

37. All that the [d] Father giveth me ſhall come to me, and him that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out.] 37. This is an evidence of great obſtinacy and untowardneſſe, of improbity and pride in you, For had Gods preventing grace had any ſucceſſe on you, wrought probity, or humility in you, you would certainly come in to my call, And I will not reject any that thus comes, or caſt him forth afterwards, if he will abide with me. d.

38. For I came down from heaven, not to doe mine own will, but the will of him that ſent me. 38, 39. For this lies upon me, as the office for which my Father hath ſent me, the fulfilling of which is all my care, viz. that I

39. And this is the Fathers will which hath ſent me, that of all which he hath given me I ſhould loſe nothing, but ſhould raiſe it up again at the laſt day.] ſhould be carefull to preſerve every one, which with an honeſt heart ſhall thus come and beleive on me, and give every one that thus perſeveres (beſide many excellent priviledges here) eternall life of body and ſoul hereafter.

† that I ſhould — diſſolve 40. And this is the will of him that ſent me, that every one which ſeeth the ſon and beleiveth on him, may have everlaſting life, and † I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.] 40. That being alſo another part of his commiſſion to me, that whoſoever beleiveth in his ſon ſhould not periſh, but, whatever, by ſo doing, befall him here, inherit everlaſting life in that other world.

41. The Jewes then murmured at him, becauſe [he ſaid, I am the bread which came down from heaven.

42. And they ſaid, Is not this Jeſus the ſon of Joſeph, whoſe father and mother we know? How is it then that he ſaith, I came down from heaven?] 41, 42. by what he ſaid of himſelf, he pretended to come from heaven, whereas they knew his birth here on earth, and his parentage, which they conceived to be contrary to his coming down from heaven.

43. Jeſus therefore anſwered and ſaid unto them, Murmure not amongſt your ſelves.] 43. To this muttering of theirs, Jeſus replied, I have ſaid nothing which tis reaſonable for you to murmure at.

44. No man can come to me, except the Father, which hath ſent me, draw him, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.] 44. Tis true, there is ſome pretence for theſe vulgar prejudices againſt me, which would make it impoſſible for thoſe that look no farther, to become my followers, (and therefore this makes it ſo unfit and unſafe for you to fix your eyes ſo wholly on this.) And it is an effect of my Fathers preventing grace to fit mens hearts to be ready and willing to come to me, (ſee note d.) and without this work firſt wrought, and that probity and humility, which qualifies men to receive my doctrine, I doe not expect that any man ſhould beleive on me, and therefore I attribute it to that, (ſee v. 65.) when any one doth, (as, on the other ſide, to your obdurate hearts, that you doe not) come unto me. And for every one that doth thus come, and therein obey my call, and follow the duct of my Father, on him moſt certainly will I beſtow everlaſting life.

* the taught, διδακτοὶ, † heard fr̃ the Father, and learnt ἀκούσας παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ μαθών, or, learns the truth, for the Kgs MS. reads μαθὼν τὴν ἀλήθειαν. 45. It is written in the prophets, And they ſhall be all * taught of God. Every man therefore that hath † heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me.] 45 The ſumme of what I thus ſay, hath been obſcurely delivered to you by the prophets of old, For they, for example, Iſaiah, c. 54. 13. ſpeaking of theſe times, have foretold, that God will diſpoſe and prepare the hearts of many men to be fit, or ready to receive Chriſt, (ſee note d.) to embrace the Meſſias, And therefore it was that I ſaid that every humble honeſt heart, every diſciple of my Father that hath not reſiſted that guidance, and attraction of my Father, doth certainly come to me, and beleive on me.

46. Not that any man hath ſeen the Father, ſave he which is of God, he hath ſeen the Father.] 46 Where yet that of learning or being taught of God, doth not imply his ſeeing or talking with my Father, and being ſo taught by him, For this is proper and peculiar to me, who am therefore qualified to reveal his will to all that come unto me.

47. Verily,

47, 48. He that embraceth my doctrine and is ſincerely my diſciple, to beleive and practiſe what I command him, ſhall undoubtedly live for ever, as having fed on that enlivening bread, v. 33. receiving me his ſpirituall food, by his faith into his ſoul.

47. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that beleiveth in me, hath everlaſting life.

48. I am that bread of life.]

49, 50, 51. The Manna given in the deſert, did not make them immortall, which did eat it. But the bread which is now ſent you down from heaven, will give immortality to them that feed on it, i. e. to all that truly beleive in Chriſt, that receive his doctrine, and digeſt it into the food and nouriſhment of their ſouls. And this is offered and prepared for every man, not only, for you Jews. Manna was bread indeed, but firſt, dead, not living. Secondly, it came not down from heaven properly ſo called, v. 32. and Thirdly, they which did eat of it, afterwards dyed. Fourthly, their Manna was contradiſtinct from their quailes, that bread from that fleſh. Fifthly, That was given for the preſerving the life only of one nation. But contrariwiſe by theſe ſo many ways of excellency above that Manna, I am, firſt, living bread. Secondly, I came down from heaven properly ſo called, the higheſt heaven. Thirdly, whoſoever feedeth, i. e. beleiveth on me, embraceth my doctrine and practiſeth accordingly, ſhall not dye, the ſoul whoſe food I am ſhall become immortall in bliſſe. Fourthly, this bread which I ſpeak of is very fleſh, even my fleſh which I will give to be crucified for the life of the world, by that death of mine purchaſing grace and pardon for ſin, which are the foundation of immortality. Fifthly, this world, is the whole world, all mankind, not onely that one nation of the Jews, which received benefit by that.

49. Your fathers did eate Manna in the wilderneſſe, and are dead.

50. This is the bread which came down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not dye.

51. I am the living bread, which cometh down from heaven, If any man eat of this bread, he ſhall live for ever: and the bread that I ſhall give him is my fleſh, which I will give for the life of the world.]

52. Hereupon the Jews diſputed about this ſaying of his, how 'tis poſſible that men ſhould feed on his fleſh.

52. The Jews therefore ſtrove among themſelves ſaying, How can this man give us his fleſh to eat?]

53. you thus feed on this celeſtiall food, i. e. be ſincere diſciples of the crucified Saviour, that comes not to be a glorious King, but to dye for the ſins of the world, you have no part in this true, i. e. immortall life.

e. 53. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you except [ye eat e the fleſh of the ſon of man and drink his bloud, ye have no life in you.]

54. Who ſo eateth my fleſh and drinketh my bloud, hath eternall life, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.

55. For I that am thus ſent in the fleſh to dye for the world, am ſuch food, as will feed you to everlaſting life, and ſo am eminently that which food is ſaid to be.

f. 55. For my fleſh is * meat indeed f, and my bloud is drink indeed.]

* truly meat or true meat for in diverſs ancient copies 'tis ἀληθὴς in both places of this verſe.

56. He that thus feedeth or beleiveth on me, that reſignes himſelf up to be ruled by me, is ſo made a member of me, that by the life which is in me he ſhall alſo be enlivened by God, by whom I live, See note on c. 14. b.

56. He that eateth my fleſh and drinketh my bloud, dwelleth in me, and I in him.]

57. For as I that came down from the Father the fountain of life, his ſon by eternall generation, muſt needs derive life from him, ſo alſo he that beleiveth on me, and ſo hath digeſted my precepts as the nouriſhment of his ſoul, muſt needs derive life from me.

57. As the living father hath ſent me, and I live by the father, ſo he that eateth me, even he ſhall live by me.]

58. This bread from heaven is not like that Manna, which they that eat, did dye for all that.

58. This is that bread which came down from heaven, not as your fathers did eat Manna, and are dead:] he that eateth of this bread, ſhall live for ever.

59. Theſe things ſaid he in the Synagogue as he taught at Capernaum.

60. Many therefore of thoſe that had hitherto followed him, ſaid, this doctrine of his is very hard and unintelligible, how he ſhould be ſaid really to have come down from heaven, and how his fleſh ſhould feed men to life eternall.

60. Many therefore of his diſciples when they had heard this, ſaid, This is an hard ſaying, who can hear it?]

61. Doth this deterre you from my doctrine?

61. When Jeſus knew in himſelf that his diſciples murmured at it, [he ſaid unto them, Doth this † offend you?]

† ſcandaliſe σκανδαλίζει

62. And asked them, whether it were not as credible that he ſhould have come from heaven, as that he ſhould goe up thither; telling them that they ſhould ere long ſee him doe ſo, and that in reaſon would aſſure them that he came down from thence.

62. What and if yee ſhall ſee the ſon of man aſcend up where he was before?]

63. And for the other particular of eating his fleſh, he tells them they cannot but know, that it is the ſoul that enliveneth, and not the body, and agreeably that it is not the groſſe carnall eating of his body of fleſh, that he could ſpeak of, when he talkt of their eating, and his feeding them to life eternall, (ſee note on Lu. 9. d.) but certainly a more ſpirituall divine eating, or feeding on him, which ſhould bring them a durable eternall life; his words (ſee v. 68.) i. e. his doctrine being ſpiritually fed on by them, i. e. being received into their hearts, not only their ears, will quicken them to a ſpirituall life here, and that ſhall prove to them an eternall life hereafter (ſo S. Chryſtome expounds, [the fleſh] i. e. the fleſhly hearing, profits nothing.)

63. It is the ſpirit that quickneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing, the words that I ſpeak unto you, they are ſpirit, and they are life.]

64. But for this ſpirituall feeding, ſinking down this ſpirituall food into your hearts, there are ſome of you that are farre enough from doing ſo. For Jeſus knew at firſt before he received them as diſciples, whether they beleived ſincerely or no, and alſo which of them would prove falſe to him, and conſpire with the Jews to put him to death.

64. But there are ſome of you that beleive not. For Jeſus knew * from the beginning who they were that beleived not, and who † ſhould betray him.]

* from the firſt, or, preſently, ἐξ ἀρχῆς

† it was that would deliver him up, ἵνα ὁ παραδιδοὺς αὐτὸν δῶ

65. And

† have said, * be ‖ from, is

65. And he said, Therefore I * say unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it † were given unto him ‖ of my Father.

65. And indeed this was the reason that I told you v.44. that no man cometh to the faith of Christ sincerely, or continues stedfast in it, but he that by Gods preventing grace is qualified and disposed for it, (see note d.) because I saw that many that follow me, doe not truly beleive on me, i. e. doe not intend so live as I command them, but one keeps his love of money, and for that will betray me, and others retain their other interests, and their other sins.

66. From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.]

66. This speech of Christ's made many of his followers forsake him, seeing he was not such a Messias as they looked for, and would not be content with every kind of following him.

67. Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also goe away?

68. Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we goe? [Thou hast the words of eternall life.]

68. Thy words, as was said by thee, v.63. will to those that obey thee and keep close to them, be a means to bestow eternall life.

69. And we beleive, and are sure, that thou art that Christ, the son of the living God.]

69. And thou hast demonstrated to us, that thou art the Messias the eternall son of God, and therefore tis not possible there should be any other fit to draw us from thee to him.

70. Jesus answered them, [Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?]

70. I have, of all the followers that have beleived on me, chosen but twelve to be my constant attendants, and one of them proves a traitour, a false treacherous person that will joyn with my enemies against me, see note on Mat. 4. 2.

71. He spake of Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon, for he it was that should * betray him, being one of the twelve.]

* deliver him up, παραδίδωσι

71. He spake of Judas, for Christ foresaw, (that though perhaps yet he did no such thing, yet) he would deliver him to the Jewes, and to that end combine with them, which was the greatest falsenesse imaginable in one, whom Christ had assumed to be so neer to him, as to be one of the twelve Apostles, whom he sent out to preach his Gospel to all people.

Notes on Chap. VI.

2. ὁ προφήτης Barocia manu.

The Jewes expected a Messiah, whom they called ὁ προφήτης the prophet v.14. but this a glorious one, and a powerfull king, one that should work their deliverance, free them from, and revenge them on the nations, who had gotten the dominion over them; By this miracle of Christ's in feeding such a multitude with so small provision, they conjectured rightly, that he was able to sustain, and feed the greatest and most numerous army with very little charge, and hereupon were ready to come and take him by force to be their king, i. e. their judge, or leader, to fight their battails for them, like Gideon &c. and this afterwards they again referre to, when they put him in mind of Moses's giving them manna in the wildernesse, v. 31. which if he will doe, or any thing equall to it, they will beleive on him. This faith of theirs being unduly founded, and breaking out into a very inordinate expression, our Saviour wholly disliked, as to the present expression of it, meaning not to undertake any such employment, And for the faith it self, that, he justly suspected, would turn into malice, when they should see this their hope of temporall deliverance and revenge frustrated, and therefore he retired, departed out of their hands to a mountain alone.

b. Ἐργάζεσθε

The word ἐργάζεσθε to labour] here seems to answer the Hebrew עשה, having here an accusative case after it, and that signifies to acquire, parare, comparare, quærere, acquirere, colligere, possidere, lucrari, and is rendred by the Septuagint ἐκτήσατο Gen. 12. 5. and Gen. 31. 2. For עשה in Hebrew, and κτάομαι in Greek, the Targum read קנא acquisivit, and Deut. 8. 17. in stead of [My hand hath wrought me all this strength, עשה, ἐκτησάμην,] the Targum hath קנש עסקיא hath gathered, or acquired me these riches. So Ezech. 28. 4. ἐκτήσω, thou hast made the gold and silver in thy treasury, the Targum have וכנשת, and thou hast gathered, &c. and thus Lu. 19. 16. ἡ μνᾶ σου ἐποίησε πέντε μνᾶς, and v. 18. ἐποίησε πέντε μνᾶς, thy pound hath made, or wrought, i. e. hath gained, acquired ten, or five pounds. Thus in * Palæphatus Patinus ἑαυτῷ ἐποίησε βρῶμα, he got himself food, sibi victum comparavit. Another notion there is of the word, 1 Cor. 9. 13. οἱ τὰ ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι, they that work, or labour, or prepare holy things, according to another notion of עשה, when tis applied to a sacrifice, or feast, or office, and then it notes observare, celebrare, præparare, apparare, ordinare, dispenere, to prepare, or fit, or dispose, but that belongs not to this place. * p. 50. τὰ ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι

c. Ἔργα Θεοῦ

That ἔργα Θεοῦ] signifies here the tasks or commands of God, is not only evidenced by the context, but is the affirmation of Procopius in Gen. 2. Τὸν γὰρ ἐσόμενον ὁ Θεὸς ἔργον λέγει, τῶν δὲ τὸ ἔργον Θεοῦ, ἵνα πεισθῶσιν εἰς ὃν ἀπέστειλεν ἐκεῖνος, this is the work of God, the task which God prescribes us, that you beleive on him whom he hath sent, the very place that immediately followes here v. 29.

d. Δίδωσί μοι ὁ πατήρ

What is the meaning of ὃ δίδωσί μοι ὁ πατήρ, what my Father giveth me] may thus be discerned, Psal. 2. 8. there is a prediction or prophecy of Christ (of whom in the words immediately precedent it is said, Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee, v. 7. (that God will give him the heathen for his inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for his possession, where we discern what kind of giving is here meant, giving for an inheritance or possession, and that is for Christ to be Lord or owner of them, and they, as possessions, subjects to his power and dispose, And this is done in the conversion of them, (see note on Rev. 2. 6.) Of this possession of his we find mention, Tit. 2. 14. where the λαὸν περιούσιον peculiar people, are λαὸν ἐν ἐθνεσι περιούσιον, people for a possession, and those are to be purified by Christ, and his life given for them, that he might redeem them from all iniquity. But who they are that are thus ſaid to be given to Chriſt by God, will firſt appear negatively, 1. not any peculiar number of men, abſolutely (without all reſpect to any qualifications) choſen by God to eternall life, for it is apparent and expreſly affirmed of one of this number, that he was finally loſt, Thoſe whom thou gaveſt me, ſaith Chriſt, I have kept, and none of them is loſt ſave the ſon of perdition, Joh. 17. 12. where through his own wretched default one of thoſe who had by God been given to Chriſt, totally and finally departed, and was loſt from him. 2. Not thoſe that are already actually beleivers, or by God looked upon as ſuch, For of theſe that are here given to Chriſt, it is ſaid, πρὸς ἐμὲ ἥξει, they ſhall come unto me: Where coming to Chriſt] is beleiving on him, and is a conſequent of God's giving them to Chriſt, not antecedent to it, and therefore when they are given to Chriſt, they are not looked upon as beleivers already, but thoſe which will be ſuch; By theſe negative conſiderations, the poſitive, will, I ſuppoſe, be beſt collected, That they that are ſo qualified and diſpoſed, as that Chriſt being propoſed and revealed to them, they will follow him, come to him, become his diſciples, thoſe are they whom God gives to Chriſt. For there is a ſort and temper of mind, which is moſt agreeable and proportionable to the beleiving on or receiving of Chriſt, which they that have, are ſaid to be εὐσχήμονες εἰς βασιλείαν τῦ Θεῦ, fit or prepared, or diſpoſed for the kingdome of God, Lu. 9. 62. (ſuch as, in that place, are ready and willing to undergoe Chriſt's conditions, to part with all, and follow him, and contrary to theſe are they that are not worthy of eternall life, Act. 13. 46.) and of ſuch Chriſt ſaith that they are not farre from the kingdome of God, and that of ſuch is the kingdome of heaven, and S. Luke, that they are τεταγμένοι diſpoſed, in a readineſſe for eternal life, ſee note on Act. 13. 1. If it be demanded what temper this is, I anſwer, it is the honeſt heart deſcribed in the parable of the ſeed, deſiring ſincerely to know the truth, and to doe God's will c. 7. 17. probity of mind, and, an eminent branch of that, humility, the temper reſembled by the little children, whoſe innocence and humility is ſo remarkable, and of thoſe poor in ſpirit is the kingdome of God, (the Chriſtian ſtate) made up, Mat. 5. 3. and thoſe are Evangelized peculiarly, i.e. wrought on by the preaching of the Goſpel, and God gives grace to the humble, but reſiſts the proud, refractary, confident perſon, and accordingly it is ſet down as the character of the Goſpel, that God hath choſen the foliſh things of the world, the weak, the baſe, the deſpiſed, 1 Cor. 1. 27. And ſo of them that are thus qualified it is here truly ſaid, that as God gives them to Chriſt for his portion, the men that are to be his ſubjects (the Iſraelite indeed, in whom there is no guile, is the fitteſt to be a diſciple,) So when Chriſt calls all to come unto him, theſe ſhall actually come; as ſoon as ever Chriſt is revealed to them, they receive him; As Joſephus ſpeaking of Chriſt, Ant: l. 18. c. 4. ſaith he was διδάσκαλος ἀνθρώπων τῶν ἡδονῇ παθῶν δεχομένων, a teacher of thoſe men that did with pleaſure receive the truth; Or as the τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, as many as were (in this ſenſe) diſpoſed to eternal life, beleived, Act. 13. 18. and as Chriſt ſaith expreſly here c. 7. 17. that if any man will, θέλῃ ποιεῖν, i.e. deſire ſincerely to doe God's will, he ſhall know of the doctrine &c. i. e. acknowledge it as divine, and beleive on it, whereas on the otherſide, Envy keeps ſome, Act. 13. 45. Covetouſneſſe others, Lu. 16. 14. Love of the praiſe of men, Joh 12. 42. keeps others from beleiving. And generally the unbeleiving heart is an evil heart, Heb. 3. 12. and a reprobate mind, (ſee 2 Cor. 13. 5.) and a hard heart, and a fooliſh and ſlow heart in other places. (ſee ch. 16. 3.) Meanwhile the better diſpoſitions and preparations of the hearts of theſe here, are to be look'd on as effects wrought by the preventing graces of God, and in that reſpect they are here ſaid to be drawn by the Father, v. 44. This preventing grace of God, which thus qualifies and diſpoſes them to receive Chriſt, is by a Metonymie ſaid to draw them to Chriſt, And that [being drawn by God] there, is ſet parallel to [God's giving them] here, and is preparatory in both places to coming unto Chriſt, And then thoſe that thus come to him, Chriſt will in no wiſe caſt out, i.e. by no means reject, but receive them and admit them to him, Onely he may periſh after that, as Judas, which was given to Chriſt, did, if, as he did, he apoſtatize from him. By this appears alſo the meaning of διδακτοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ, the taught, or the diſciples of God v. 45. thoſe that have heartily applied themſelves to God's ſervice, that have received this effect or impreſſion of God's preventing grace, the honeſt humble hearts, which thereby are qualified to lay hold and adhere to Chriſt, when others that have not received theſe præcedaneous pious infuſions, or are not wrought on by them, reſiſt and ſtand out againſt him (ſee note on 1 Theſſ. 4. c.) And ſo again what is meant by δεδομένον ἐκ τοῦ πατρός ver. 5. given to him by or from the Father. He that by this preventing grace of God is thus qualified or diſpoſed, it is ſaid to be given him from the Father to come unto Chriſt i.e. his coming to Chriſt is conſequent to that probity of mind wrought by the grace of God in him (As Lu. 1. 74. δοῦναι λατρεύειν God's giving us to ſerve him, is his giving ſtrength or grace, or qualifying us for his ſervice) An effect of this grace it is, and of that probity produced by it, that any man laies hold on, or receives the faith of Chriſt. And therefore from hence will beſt be diſcerned what is the meaning of the ſheeps hearing the ſhepheard's voice, and all that is added in that parable ch. 10. 3. The ſheep there cannot be underſtood to be beleivers or diſciples of Chriſt, for theſe there are ſuppoſed to be ſheep, before Chriſt the ſhepheard comes to them, and in that to be denominated ſheep, that they hear the true ſhepheards voice when he comes, and ſo cannot be they, that have already received him, as beleivers muſt have done, and accordingly ver. 8. of the theives and robbers that came before Chriſt, tis ſaid, that the ſheep did not hear them (They were ſheep therefore before Chriſt's coming) and ſo appears by ver. 26. where their not being his ſheep is ſet as the reaſon of their not beleiving, which were not a proof, but a tautologie, if the ſheep were there beleivers. By all which it is evident that the ſheep are a ſort of men, not yet conſidered as Chriſtians, but ſuch as are apt to beleive in the true Meſſias, whenſoever he comes, and ſo to follow him, as knowing his voice, ver. 4. which laſt expreſſion is a key to open the meaning of the parable, rable, and reſolve who the ſheep are. God the Father is in the deſcription or mind, the chief ſhepheard, i. e. the owner or maſter of the ſheep (among the Jewes men kept their own ſheep) And the ſheep are thoſe that are beſt reſembled by that emblem, the honeſt and humble hearted men, that by the revelation of God's will, and ſome meaſure of grace afforded, before the coming of Chriſt, have been formed into all probity and humility of manners, living either as Zachary and divers others are ſaid to doe, walking in the waies of God blameleſſe, or elſe after an ill life recovered by repentance, and theſe are ſo well acquainted with the waies of God, that when any falſe Chriſt or impoſtor comes with infuſions of impiety or wickedneſs, they diſcern them to be contrary to Godlineſs, and ſo will not hearken to them, But when Chriſt the true ſhepheard (for his Father and he are one v.30.) cometh, and that, as with divine miracles to atteſt his miſſion, ſo with doctrines of piety, perfectly agreeable to that which they formerly practiſed, as the will of God, and onely more elevated, and of higher perfection, *Mat.*5. then theſe diſcerning the agreeableneſs of his doctrines with thoſe which they have already received from God, and the addition of all the heavenly promiſes, which agree with the notion which they had of God as a rewarder, they know him to be the Meſſias, the ſhepheard which God hath promiſed to ſend them, i.e. God himſelf (not any hired ſervant, whoſe own the ſheep are not v.12. but) the true ſhepheard, who is the owner of the ſheep, and that is the meaning of their knowing his voice, upon which it is that they follow him, whereas ſtrangers they flie from, and doe not know their voice v.5. By this explication of theſe ſo many phraſes all importing the ſame thing, will appear by way of reſultance, what is the method, that God is pleaſed to uſe to bring men to eternall life. He creates them rational, and ſo voluntary agents, and becauſe of the weight of the ſenſitive part of man, that preſſeth down the ſoule, doth by his precepts of good life, and propoſals of reward to it, and by his preventing graces, endevour and doe his part to draw them, and engage them to the performance of theſe duties, or, upon miſcarriages, recalls them to repentance, Thoſe that by the ſtrength of theſe graces (not deſtroying, but exciting and aſſiſting their free will) doe make uſe of them to that end, and as farre, as is yet revealed to them, live obediently, theſe are ready to receive and entertain Chriſt, his promiſes, and diviner, more elevated precepts, when they are revealed to them, and to thoſe God elſewhere promiſeth thoſe higher dignations, under the title of more grace, and giving, and giving abundantly to him that hath. And when they have thus received Chriſt, his doctrine, and his grace going along with it, is moſt proper to take them off from the remaining dregs of corruption, to raiſe them to thoſe pitches (which none but they are qualified to receive) of piety, and ſuffering any thing for God's ſake, of charity, exceſſes of that, even to enemies, &c. And they that doe not fall off becauſe of theſe heights and ſtrictneſſes, but adhere to Chriſt, and paſſe through all the trialls of this life, conſtant and perſevering, they are daily ſupplied with more grace here, and rewarded with higher proportionable degrees of glory. One thing only muſt be here farther added, that there are ſome, that are ſaid to be given to Chriſt in a more eminent, and peculiar degree, and manner, not only to be beleivers but conſtant, cloſe attendants of Chriſt, ſuch were the twelve, who are ſaid to be given him ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου out of the world, ch. 17. 6. Ἀδύνατε μὴ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου

For of them it is ſaid that no one is loſt but only the ſon of perdition, ver. 12. For them he prayes that they may be conſecrated to the preaching of the Goſpel, v. 17. Of them he ſaith that he hath ſent them, &c. v.18. given them the ſame Commiſſion, that he himſelf had. And his praying for them is diſtinguiſhed from his praying after, for beleivers, v. 20,21. which being there ſet down as in a parentheſis, he returns to his diſciples again, v.22. and the glory which God had given him he gives them, where the giving them the glory which God had given Chriſt, ſeems a diſtant thing from their beholding his glory, ver.24. the former is the fitting them with gifts to ſucceed him on earth, the latter, the beatifick viſion in heaven. And although it be ordinary for the ſame phraſe to be uſed in a more eminent, and reſtrained ſenſe ſometimes, then others, and ſo they who are given to Chriſt] may ſometimes be beleivers only, in other places (where the context enforceth it) diſciples peculiarly, (and accordingly in that 17th chap. v.9. & 12. it is only [they whom thou haſt given me,] where yet, as appeared, the diſciples only were meant,) yet this addition of the words [ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, out of the world,] may be reaſonably thought to denote this by a propriety, whereby [the world] ſometimes ſignifies thoſe that deale in the affaires of the world, ſacular perſons, Whereas the twelve forſook the world, their trades, and callings there, and followed Chriſt, and ſo were peculiarly given to him, ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, out of the world. Ἀδύνατε μὴ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. Δίδωμι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου.

What is meant here by [the fleſh and blood of the ſon of man] muſt briefly be explained, and that firſt by taking notice of a figure, or idiome, frequent in theſe Writers, whereby the parts ſet down ſeparately, doe ſignifie the whole, which conſiſts of thoſe parts. So is [the heaven, and the earth] ſet to ſignifie the whole compages of the (ſublunary) world (ſee note on 2 *Pet.*3. b) and many the like, And ſo *Chriſts body and fleſh and bones Eph.*5.30. and here, the fleſh and blood of the ſon of man, is the ſonne of man, or Chriſt himſelfe. 2*ly*, by obſerving the notion of fleſh, and blood frequently uſed not only to ſignifie our mortal condition, which this our fleſh and blood is ſubject to, (whereupon, when S. Paul ſaith, that fleſh and blood cannot inherit the kingdome of God, he addes, neither can corruption inherit incorruption, ſee note on *Mat.*16.c.) but alſo this mortal nature, as it is ſubject to much weakneſſe, and afflictions, &c. as Iſa. 31. 3. the Ægyptians are men and not God, and their horſes fleſh and not ſpirit, i. e. weak helpers, unfit to be truſted in, v. 1. So when S. Paul ſaith, that through the infirmity of the fleſh, i. e. in many afflictions, and perſecutions, he preached unto them, And ſo it notes Chriſt in his ſtate of humiliation, quite contrary to that which the Jewes expected their Meſſias ſhould come in, that Chriſt which was loooks on now ſo meanly, and was afterwards crucified by them. 3*ly*, by obſerving the occaſion of Chriſts diſcourſe here, (as it is ordinary with Chriſt to accommodate his ſpeeches to the occaſions, Σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. c. casions, so *Mat.*4.19. when he calls the fishermen, he tells them he will make them fishers of men, so *Joh.*4.10.14. & v.31. and here v.26,27. and many the like,) which was thus begun, They followed him for his loaves, v.26. He reprehendeth that in them and bids them seek and desire that food which endureth to everlasting life, v.27. i.e. that doctrine of his, which is food for their soules, and being received, and digested and turn'd into encrease of good life in them, would bring them to immortality, They ask him the way for them to doe this, He tells them plainly, by beleiving on him, ver.29. They thereupon call for a signe, a miracle to be wrought by him, or else they will not beleive, v.30. And they instance in Moses who brought them Manna from heaven, And they would have him doe some such thing, that they may beleive on him, v.31. Upon this occasion he begins, and compares himself with that Manna, and shewes how much he surpasses that, and so continues that comparison betwixt himself and bread, as that is a means to preserve this short life which deserves not to be call'd life; but he is the author and donour, and publisher of eternall life, v.33. Upon this speech of his, the Jewes murmure, v.41. that he should call himself the bread that came down from heaven; Christ resumes that speech, and speaks it with all confidence, I am that bread of life, v.48. i.e. that spiritual food, that will bring men to everlasting life v.50. and this bread, saith he, is his flesh, which he will give for the life of the world, v.51. i.e. he will die for this end to bring men to immortal life, and that is it which he means by his being the bread of life. Upon this, as if they understood nothing all this while (though he had first spoken to them in plain terms, and expresst all by beleiving on him, v.29. and 35. and only took up this more obscure figurative speech by way of answer to their proposalls) they ask in a sensless, perverse manner, How can this man give us his flesh to eat? v.52. To which this verse is a confident answer, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except you eat &c. still meaning, what all this while he had meant, in opposition to their Manna, that his doctrine, for the preaching of which he was sent down from heaven, and that grace, which should be purchased for them by his death, was the most excellent food for their soules, which would establish, or comfort, or sustain their hearts, i.e. maintain spiritual life in them, and that, which would become eternal, v.54. All which being put together, makes up this complete sense of the words, that Christ, this mortall, despised, crucified Christ, that took our flesh on him, came down from heaven, here lived and died, to reveal his Fathers will unto us, and work belief in us, is the food of our soules, the beleiving, and obeying of whom will, as food sustains corporal life, beget and maintain spiritual life in us, and bring us to eternity. By which also appears what Faith it is, which is lookt on by Christ as so highly necessary, even that which is here expresst by feeding on this spirituall food, not only eating, but digesting, and turning it into the nourishment of our soules, such a beleiving the doctrine of Christ as hath present influence on our lives, obeying, not only understanding his commands, embracing his promises upon the terms, on which they are made, undertaking the performance of the condition of them, and not only assenting to the truth of them, And so for the humility of his life, and the charity and zeale to the good of mens soules, and the constancy and courage of his death, and the charity so great as to lay down his life even for enemies, to transcribe, and practise that also. This is Ἔδεσθε τὴν σάρκα —— to eat the flesh of the Son of man, and to drink his blood, and without this we have no life in us. Ἔδεσθε σάρκα

One principall notion of ἀληθὴς hath been formerly explained (see note on Lu. 16. a.) to signifie truly valuable, or durable, or truly valuable, because it is durable, And so here ἀληθὴς or ἀληθῶς βρῶσις true meat, or truly meat] is explained to be the bread of life, v.48. that, on which he that feeds, shall live forever, so the βρῶσις μένουσα εἰς ζωὴν food that endures forever, v. 27. and opposite to Manna, on which they that feed, die, v.47. And this 1. as the word ἀληθῶς truly, noteth some speciall eminency, wherein any attribute belongs to the subject, and when it is applied to resemblances, it then signifies that, which is spoken of, to be more eminently that, by which 'tis resembled, then that it self is, As, I am the true vine, i.e. A vine by bearing grapes, (which yeild wine, which makes glad the heart of man) is not neer so able, and proper to refresh a thirsty person, as I am, as my commands and promises are. So S. John of Christ c.1.9. that he is the true light, i.e. the most excellent, So Heb. 8. 2. heaven is the true tabernacle, that of which the tabernacle was but a dark and poor resemblance, and so this is called ἀληθινὸς ἄρτος, true bread, v.32. and truly meat here, i. e. more nutritive, and strengthning, and comforting then meat and bread is. 2dly, in respect of the particular matter, to which 'tis here applied, viz: βρῶσις food, that which feeds one for an houre, or a day (and enlargeth his life, but so long) being not truly food, not worthy to be so called, at least not so, in comparison with that, which keeps him alive, so as life is adaquately opposite to death, i.e. forever. And so with us the word [false] signifies fading, transitory, that which will faile us when it were most of advantage for us to receive benefit by it. f. ἀληθὴς ἀληθινὸς ἄρτος

CHAP. VII.

1. went about preaching through the cities of Galilee, where he rather chose to doe it, then in Judæa, because the rulers of the Jewes, those of the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem, sought for some advantage, or occasion to put him to death.

1. After these things Jesus [walked in Galilee, for he would not walk in Jury, because the Jewes sought to kill him.]

2. Now the Jewes feast of tabernacles was at hand.

3. On this occasion his kindred (v.5.) said unto him, Goe into Judæa again, that the many, which were wont to follow thee there, may see the miracles which thou doest.

3. His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence and goe into Judæa, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou dost.]

40. For

4. For there is no man that doth any thing in ſecret, and he himſelf ſeeketh to [a] be * known openly. If thou doe theſe things, ſhew thy ſelf to the world.]

4. For whoſoever would gain an authority among the people, in any reaſon muſt not doe his miracles privately, therefore whatever thou doſt, doe it in Judæa, as publickly as thou canſt. a.

* in authority

5. For neither did his brethren beleive in him.]

5. This they ſaid, as not beleiving on him, but either ſuſpecting the truth of his miracles, or elſe deſiring that he would doe that, which might acquire him that authority, which they conceived him to pretend to.

† reaſon καιρὸς

6. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, My † time is not yet come, but your time is alwaies ready.

7. The world cannot hate you, but me it hateth, becauſe I teſtifie of it, that the works thereof are evil.]

6,7. Jeſus therefore to rectifie this miſtake of theirs, ſaith unto them, 'Tis not yet fit for me to be ſo publick, becauſe the doctrine that I teach is contrary and odious to the world, or the preſent prevailing power of the Jewes. You may appear whereſoever you will, being not under any ſuch hatred, by any thing that you doe or teach, as I am ſure to be among the Phariſees, and chief of the Jewes.

* reaſon is not yet fulfill'd καιρὸς ἔνω συμπλήρωται.

8. Goe ye up to this feaſt, I goe not yet up unto this feaſt, for my * time is not yet full come.]

8. You may go up to Jeruſalem, to the feaſt, as publickly as you pleaſe, but I ſhall not go yet, when you go, or with you, becauſe my time of going up, in ſuch a publick capacity v. 10. is not yet come.

9. When he had ſaid theſe words unto them, he abode ſtill in Galilee.]

9. And accordingly he ſtayed a while after the reſt of his kindred in the place where he now abode.

10. But when his brethren were gone up, then went he alſo up unto the feaſt, not openly, but as it were in ſecret.]

10. Soon after his kindred were gone, he alſo followed, but more privately, with ſmall company attending him, leſt he ſhould ſtirre up the jealouſie of the Sanhedrim.

11. Then the Jewes ſought him at the feaſt, and ſaid, Where is he?

12. And there was much [murmuring] among the people concerning him, for ſome ſaid, He is a good man. Others ſaid, Nay, but he deceiveth the people.]

12. diſputing, arguing, among them, ſome affirming him to be an upright man, and one that taught the truth; others denied, and ſaid that he was a falſe prophet, and ſeduced the people.

13. Howbeit, no man ſpake [openly of him, for fear of the Jewes.]

13. by way of oration to the people (ſee note a.) either for him, or againſt him, becauſe the people were ſo divided in their opinions about him, that either ſpeaking for him, or againſt him, would have been perilous.

14. Now about the midſt of the feaſt, Jeſus went up into the Temple, and taught.

15. How comes he to underſtand the books of the Law and Scriptures ſo well, having not been brought up in the ſchools of the prophets? ſee note on Mat. 5. a.

16. Jeſus anſwered them and ſaid, [My doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me.]

16. What I teach is not from my ſelf, but from God, that hath ſent me.

17. If any man will doe his will, he ſhall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I ſpeak of my ſelf.]

17. Any man that hath a willingneſſe to doe Gods will, how contrary ſoever it be to his own, that hath a readineſſe to ſerve God in Gods way, and is not wedded to his own (ſee c.6. note d.) that man and none but he, is likely to paſſe a right judgment on my doctrine, whether it be of God or no.

18. He that ſpeaketh of himſelf, ſeeketh his own glory, but he that ſeeketh his glory that ſent him, the ſame is true, and no unrighteouſneſſe is in him.

18. For that man will thus judge, He that pretends to be ſent by God, when he is not, alwaies ſeeks his own advantages, ſomewhat of glory or profit to himſelf, But he that labours only the bringing honour to God, and in purſuit of that, doth what is moſt contrary to his own intereſts, conceals nothing, though it coſt him never ſo dear, to declare it, He is worth beleiving (or deſerves to be beleived) having no falſe deſigne in what he doth, no deceit, or guile in him.

19. Did not Moſes give you the law? and yet none of you keepeth the law? why go ye about to kill me?]

19. But 'tis otherwiſe with you, You are not of that making v. 17. That law which your own beloved Moſes gave you, and for the maintaining of which you have ſo much zeal, and hate me, as a breaker of it, ye doe not your ſelves obſerve, ye doe not (the moſt of you) live according to the rules of it. If ye did, ye would not be ſo forward to embrue your hands in my blood, who have no way offended againſt you, or that; This concludes you not likely to judge what doctrine is of God. A man muſt have purged and regulated affections, to doe ſo (ſee c.6. note d.)

22. [c] Moſes therefore gave unto you circumciſion (not * becauſe it is of Moſes, but of the fathers] and ye on the ſabbath day circumciſe a man.]

22. I ſhall give you an account of this by remembring you of circumciſion given you by Moſes (not by Moſes originally, but in practiſe before his time in Abraham, to whom it was commanded by God) Now this law you obſerve ſo carefully, that if the eighth day fall upon a ſabbath day, you then circumciſe the child on that day for all that. c.

23. If a man on the ſabbath day receive circumciſion, that the law of Moſes ſhould not be broken, are ye angry at me, * becauſe I have made a man every whit whole on the ſabbath day?]

23. If then you doe a wounding, bloody work about a part of a man, in circumciſion, on the ſabbath day, and yet think, that you break not the law of the ſabbath by ſo doing, may not I, without being hated, and oppoſed by you, doe a work of charity and mercy to an entire whole man, in working a cure on him on the ſabbath day?

* that I cured a whole man, or made whole a whole man, ὑγιῆ ὅλον ἄνθρωπον ἐποίησα

26. And behold, he openly in the Temple, in the preſence of all, (ſee note a.) diſputeth and avowes his actions; and they have nothing to lay to his charge, which he doth not give a moſt ſatisfying account of. Are they of the Sanhedrim perſwaded and ſatisfied in mind, that he is indeed the Meſſias ſent from God?

Notes on Chap. VII.

a. Παῤῥησία

The word παῤῥησία] in the New Teſtament hath divers ſignifications. Firſt it ſignifies δέος, ſaith Heſychius, boldneſſe, confidence, fearleſneſſe of danger. So Job. 11. 54. παῤῥησίᾳ περιπατεῖν, to go about fearleſly, So Act. 28. 31. Phil. 1. 20. Heb. 3. 6. and 10. 35. and 1 Joh. 4. 17. boldneſs, or fearleſneſs, when they are called before ſecular tribunals; And ſo παῤῥησιάζομαι in two places of the Acts, ch. 13. 46. where in oppoſition to the ζῆλος, and ἀντιλογία, and βλασφημία of the Jewes, their virulency, contradiction, and railing againſt Paul and Barnabas, 'tis ſaid, that they παῤῥησιάζόμενοι ἔλεγον, ſpake boldly and confidently, that ſpeech of the greateſt danger, that brought all the hatred and perſecution of the Jewes upon them [we depart to the Gentiles.] So ch. 26. 26. I ſpeak παῤῥησιαζόμενος, with confidence, and courage to Agrippa, who knows of theſe things, though Feſtus doe not. So Eph. 6. 20. and 1 Theſſ. 2. 2. Secondly, it ſignifies freeneſs or liberty of ſpeaking, ſaying what a man will, ſo Act. 2. 29. Let me ſpeak παῤῥησίᾳ freely, without any reſtraint, of the Patriarch David (and diſtinctly elocution (ſuch as is promiſed them Mat. 10. 19.) Act. 4. 13. for there it is the gift that they prayed for, and which diſcriminated them from other illiterate men, and came upon them by the Spirit, as had been promiſed Mat. 10. 19.) So 2 Cor. 7. 4. Great is my παῤῥησία πρὸς ὑμᾶς, freeneſſe, in ſpeaking largely in their commendation, expreſt by the καύχησις, following, Great is my glorying of you, ſo Heb. 4. 16. Let us come to the throne of Grace μετὰ παῤῥησίας, with freeneſſe, to declare all our wants, and requeſts to God. So Philem. 8. having in, or, through Chriſt πολλὴν παῤῥησίαν, great liberty, or freeneſs of ſpeech, to ſay or to cõmand him what is fit. So 1 Joh. 2. 28. ἔχωμεν παῤῥησίαν, we may have freeneſs of acceſſe to him, καὶ μὴ αἰσχυνθῶμεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, and not be turn'd with ſhame from him, or as guilty perſons be aſhamed to meet him. So again c. 3. 21. If our heart condemn us not, we have παῤῥησίαν πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν, partly confidence toward God in the firſt notion of not fearing any danger from him, and partly in this latter of praying freely to him, aſking him what we will, as the next words explain it, Whatſoever we aske, we receive. And ſo again in this latter ſenſe, ch. 5. 14. From this there is alſo a third ſenſe of the word, but lightly changed from the ſecond, to ſignifie perſpicuity of ſpeech, as that is oppoſite to darkneſſe, or parabolicall expreſſions, when the matter is free and not involved, or obſcured by words. So Joh. 10. 24. εἰπὸν ἡμῖν παῤῥησίᾳ, tell us plainly, as that is oppoſed to ψυχολογεῖν, to hold them in ſuſpenſe. So Joh. 11. 14. having ſaid, Lazarus ſleepeth, which was a figurative, and withall equivocall ſpeech, he then ſpeaks παῤῥησίᾳ, in plain words, Lazarus is dead. So again c. 16. 25. & 29. in both places παῤῥησίᾳ plainly in oppoſition to ἐν παροιμίαις in parables. So 2 Cor. 3. 12. we uſe πολλῇ παῤῥησίᾳ great plainneſs, i.e. perſpicuity of ſpeech, in oppoſition to the veile over Moſes's face, the obſcurity of the Old Teſtament, v. 13. Fourthly it ſignifies ſpeaking in any aſſembly, in a declamatory way of oration, ſpeaking to the people. Thus doth Phavorinus define παῤῥησία, that it is ἡ εἰς τὸ μέσον τῆς ἐκκλησίας ὑπουργοῦσα δὶς δημηγορίαν πρὸς τὸν, a going into the midſt of the aſſembly to ſpeak unto the people on any occaſion. And this, ſaith he, according to the making of the word, from πᾶς and ῥῆμα, ῥέω and ſo παῤῥησιάζομαι (uſed Act. 9. 27, 28. and 14. 3. and 18. 26. and 19. 8.) will be paraphraſed literally, ſaith he, from that of Euripides, Καὶ πεσὼν ἔπειτα ἐς μέσους πόδα, or εἰς μέσον ἐλθὼν, to come and ſtand, or ſpeak in the midſt of of an aſſembly. Thus is it Mar. 8. 32. παῤῥησίᾳ ἐλάλει, he ſpake it in the hearing of the people. Thus in the 13. v. of this chapter no man ſpake παῤῥησίᾳ publickly, by way of harangue to the people. No man ſo interpoſed either for, or againſt him, and v. 26. behold he ſpeakes παῤῥησίᾳ publick- ly, and so c. 18. 20. I speak to the world παῤῥησίᾳ, in publick assemblies. Lastly, it signifies authority, so saith Hesychius παῤῥησία ἐξουσία also, power, authority, Thus I conceive it signifies in these books whensoever the preposition ἐν (with or in) is joyned with it. Thus Act. 4. 29. μετὰ παῤῥησίας λαλεῖν λόγον, to speak the word with authority, and v. 31. they spake it with authority, being backt with the power of miracles, v. 30. So Eph. 6. 19. that speech may be given me, to open my mouth ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ with authority (as when 'tis said of Christ that he taught ὡς ἐξουσίαν ἔχων, Mat. 7. 29. as one that had authority) so Col. 2. 15. where speaking of Christ, as a Conquerour, he saith ἐδειγμάτισεν ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ he made open shew of them (that is δειγματίζειν) with authority, as one that triumphed over them. And so sure 'tis here, when his kindred, not beleiving in him, v. 5. first finde fault with him for doing his miracles ἐν κρυπτῷ, in a more private place (δειλίαν ἐγκαλοῦντες ἅμα, καὶ ὑποπτεύοντες τὰ γινόμενα ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, ὡς οὐκ ἀληθῶς γινόμενα, saith S. Chrysostome, accusing his timidity and also suspecting the things that he had done, as not truly done, doubting whether they were true miracles or no) and thereupon advise him to goe up to Jerusalem to the feast, and doe them there; then adde, as looking on the authority, which they thought, he sought for among the people, (or wishing that he would look after it) οὐδεὶς ἐν κρυπτῷ τι ποιεῖ καὶ ζητεῖ αὐτὸς ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ εἶναι), where none of the four former notions will be agreeable to it, and therefore must be rendred in the fift, No man doth any thing in secret, and desires to be in authority. Of this S. Chrysost. τὸ δὲ ἐπαγαγεῖν, ὅτι ζητεῖ ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ εἶναι) φιλοδοξίας, the adding that phrase, signifies love of glory, either that they thought he desired to be followed and magnified among men, to be a great Rabbi among the people, or else that they desired it for him. Thus also (in the accusative case with ἔχω) it seems to signifie, Heb. 10. 19. where the Christian is said to have παῤῥησίαν, i. e. liberty, authority, ἐξουσίαν to enter into the Holies, as the Priest had typically under the law, so Eph. 3. 12. In whom we have παῤῥησίαν, καὶ πρόσαγωγὴν, i. e. liberty, and accesse, or liberty to come freely (not confidence, for that is after expreſt by the addition of ἐν πεποιθήσει, with confidence) so 1 Tim. 3. 13. when the Deacon ascends to the καλὸν βαθμὸν, good i. e. higher degree of Bishop, he is said to acquire πολλὴν παῤῥησίαν ἐν πίστει, great power in the faith, authority in the preaching of the Gospel, or in the Church of God, so Theophylact expounds it, εὐδοξοτέρᾳς γένεσθαι, to become more honourable, ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ λάμπειν to shine in the Church, ἐν πρεσβυτερικῷ βαθμῷ καὶ ἐπισκοπικῷ in the dignity or degree of Presbyter or Bishop.

b. δαιμόνιον ἔχειν.

All sort of diseases were in those days brought on men (sometimes) by the devil, and so generally they that are brought to Christ for cure, are said to be possest (see note on Mat. 17. b.) but especially those who were more strangely affected, without any visible cause of it, were generally thought to suffer this from the devils getting power to possesse them; and of this sort especially mad men (such the δαιμονιζόμενοι Mat. 8. 28. appear to be by their raving temper there) who being not discernibly sick, or ill affected, did yet behave themselves, as if they were in some strong distemper, which is oft an effect of disease or ἐνθουσιασμὸν, and therefore were by them thought to be possest by some evill spirit. So in Just. Mart. Apol. 2. οἱ δαιμονιολήπτους καὶ μαινομένους πάντες they that are possest are by all men called mad. So c. 10. 20. 'tis plainly said, He hath a devill and is mad, and Mat. 11. 18.

'Tis to be observed that as ὅ in other Gospels, so ὅτι in this is a particle of transition, otherwise insignificant, serving only for passage, not to import any causality. And the same is here to be said of διὰ τοῦτο the διὰ τοῦτο, in the beginning of this verse, which is only a form of proceeding in the present discourse, and might be rendred [To this purpose you may observe] that which followes being an account of the lawfulnesse of working cures on the Sabbath day, and not the concluding this from the former as διὰ τοῦτο for this cause, or therefore] literally would import. But 'tis possible that διὰ τοῦτο here might be the concluding of the former verse and the reading thus, θαυμάζετε διὰ τοῦτο, yee wonder or are angry with me for this. But this is a conjecture.

d. διασπορὰ Ἑλλήνων

The Jews were dispersed before this time in severall places among the Gentiles, some in Europe, others in Asia: those in Europe had their chief assembly at Alexandria, and there the Septuagints translation of the Bible into Greek was in use, and thence they are called διασπορὰ Ἑλλήνων, the dispersion of the Hellenists. And of these there were many also in Jerusalem, which used the Septuagints translation, being thus skilled in the Greek tongue, and these living not in Greece are yet called Ἑλληνισταὶ Acts 6. 1. Hellenists, because they used the Greek language, and the Septuagints translation, whereas others that used the Jerusalem Targum, are called ἑβραῖοι Hebrews (see note on Acts 6. a.) The Asian dispersion is mentioned 1 Pet. 1. 1. and had Babylon for their Metropolis, and used the Targum or Chalde paraphrase of Onkelos in their Synagogues, as the Hebrews Acts 6. 1. used the Jerusalem paraphrase. Of these two dispersions, see Rev. 12. 14.

Ἑλληνιστὰς

Ἑβραίους

e. Βοὴν

This feast was the feast of Tabernacles, and that is sometimes by the Hebrews called, without any more, חג, the feast, as in Cod. Middoth c. 2. שבו מכנסין צלוחיות של מים של ניסוך בחג they carry a vessell of water through them (i. e. through the water gates שער המים) to the Sacrifice of the feast, and Joma c. 2. §. 5. בחג בוד אחד צלוחית של מים at the feast there was in the hand of one a pot of water, (for so that Rabbinicall צלוחית is the Greek word σιλανὶς, which in Athenæus l. 2. signifies a sort of pots, so called, saith he, from the name of a King Zeleucus) now it was the custome in that feast of tabernacles, to offer up water unto God, to denote the blessing of rain, which they then prayed for, as of speciall use against the approaching seed time, as at the Passover they offered an Omer, to obtain from God his blessing on their harvest, and at Pentecost their first fruits, to obtain from God his blessing on the fruits of the Trees, see Rab. Levi ben Gersom on 2 Sam. 23. 16. These waters which they thus offered, they drew out of Siloah, and brought them into the Temple with the sound of the Trumpet, and offered them with singing of voyces and instruments, And in relation to these customes of the Jews at that feast Christ here is said to have cryed, κέκραξε, with a loud voyce, supplying the sound of the Ἔκραξε the Trumpet, a voice of proclaiming (as κεκραγεν and κηρυσσει are but ſeverall variations of the Hebrew קרן) ſaying, If any man thirſt, &c. taking occaſion from their cuſtome of drawing water out of Siloah, to excite the people to fetch and draw from him, as from a true fountain, all the gifts of the Spirit, which may tend to the fitting them for a divine heavenly plantation.

It was ordinary at fountains or ſprings of water to build receptacles, or veſſels of ſtone, or wells, and in the middle thereof (i. e. the κοιλια the belly here, and in the Hebrew בטן 1 King. 7. 20.) to have pipes or ciſterns, Prov. 5. 15. through which the water paſſes, and comes out by Cockes, &c. And thus ſhall it be with every beleiver, he ſhall be ſo filled with the Spirit of God as a ſpring of water, that it ſhall, out of his heart (καρδια and κοιλια being all one Mat. 12. 40. and both anſwerable to the Hebrew בטן) break forth continually into his actions.

g. Γραμματεις Γραμματα

Among the Jews there were 1. the Doctors of the law, the wiſemen, γραμματεις Scribes, or νομοδιδασκαλοι, teachers of the law, (γραμματα and νομος writings, and law, being all one, both equally the rendring of the Hebrew מספרה, which ſignifies the book of the law (by which the Syriack render γραμματα, writings v. 15.) ιερα γραμματα the holy writings 2 Tim. 3. 15.) the expounders of the Scripture, and 2^dly. ſtudioſi legis, thoſe that ſtudied the law, diſciples, or (as the Hebrews called them) תלמיד וחכם ſcholars of the wiſemen, and ſuch an one they ſtyle חבר a companion of wiſemen who is not yet a Rabbi or teacher, cannot be called Doctor noſter excellens, our excellent Doctor, but the next degree to one, one of the ſons of the Prophets, or as the Targum renders וחבריהון companions, Ezech. 37. אחיהון their brethren, i. e. ſuch as are of the ſame ſociety or fraternity with the excellentiſſimus Doctor noſter : and 3^dly. the people of the earth, the illiterate man, ὁ ὄχλος τῶν πολλῶν, one of the many, and theſe are noted by ὁ ὄχλος ὅτος, this rout, or multitude, ὁ μὴ γινώσκων τὸν νόμον, which knoweth not the law.

"Οχλος ὅτος λαῶν, one of the many, and theſe are noted by ὁ ὄχλος ὅτος, this rout, or multitude, ὁ μὴ γινώσκων τὸν νόμον, which knoweth not the law.

h. ἐκ Γαλιλαίας ἔκαι προφήτης

That Galilee was under a reproach among the Jews, appears c. 1. 46. And as there 'tis ſaid, that no good could come out of Nazareth, ſo here that never any Prophet came out of Galilee. But upon ſearch it ſeems to appear, that the Phariſees here were too large in their obſervation of reproach, for though it happened not often, yet of Jonah we finde that he was of Gath Hepher, 2 King. 14. 25. that was a town of the Tribe of Zebulun, Joſh. 19. 13. and conſequently in Galilee Iſa. 9. 1. and this Jonah prophecyed in the time of Joaſh (when he was oppreſt by the Syrians) that by his ſon Jeroboam the kingdome ſhould be delivered out of their hands, 2 King. 14. 25, 26. and was afterward ſent to Nineve, Jonah 1. 1.

This verſe and the eleven firſt verſes of c. 8. the whole ſtory of the woman taken in the act of adultery, are wholly omitted in many ancient copies. S. Chryſoſtome leaves it out, ſo doth Nonnus and Theophylact, and the Syriack interpreter, and Euthymius ſaith, that none of the ancients have taken notice of it in their expoſitions of the Goſpel. Maldonate, who ſtrives for it, to make good the Trent Canon, doth yet confeſſe, that of all the Manuſcript Greek copies none have it, but onely one with Leontius's Comment, and that in that alſo it is * daſht out with a pen, and omitted by the Commentator, that it is not in the moſt ancient copy of the Vaticane, that none of the 23 authors in the Catena mention it. And in the end of the third book of Euſebius Eccl. Hiſt. we have theſe words ſpeaking of Papias ἱστορεῖται ὁ αὐτὸς ἄλλην ἱστορίαν περὶ γυναικὸς ἐπὶ πολλαῖς ἁμαρτίαις διαβληθείσης ἐπὶ τῷ κυρίῳ, ἣν τὸ καθ' Ἑβραίους ἐυαγγέλιον περιέχει, He hath related another ſtory of a woman accuſed to Chriſt of many ſins, which the Goſpel according to the Hebrewes contains, implying it not to be in any of the four Goſpels; Other later Greek copies there are, which have this ſtory in this place, and ſo the Arabick, and moſt of the Latine, ſo the Author of the σύνοψις attributed, but ('tis thought, not truly) to Athanaſius. In this difficulty the reſolution which is given by the learned H. Grotius, ſeems to be moſt reaſonable, that this part of ſtory was by word of mouth delivered by the Apoſtles to them that heard them, that Papias and others had it (as is teſtified by Euſeb. l. 3. c. 39.) from the Scholars and hearers of S. John, that though others of Papias's pretended traditions were not, yet this was approved and received by the Church (as ſufficiently teſtified to have come from the Apoſtles, and as S. Jerom affirmes, put in into that which was called the Goſpel of the Nazarens) and ſo in later times after the Syriack, but before the Arabick and ancient Latine tranſlations, put into this place of this Goſpel, and accordingly read in the Church of God.

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphraſt.

1. JEſus went unto the mount of Olives.

2. And early in the morning he came again into the Temple, and all the people came unto him, and he ſate down and taught them.

3. And the Scribes, and Phariſees brought unto him a woman [taken in adultery: and when they had ſet her in the midſt,] 3. deprehended in theact of adultery, and brought her forth as to judgement. And

4. They ſay unto him, Maſter, this woman was taken in adultery in the very act.

5. Now Moſes in * the law commanded that [‡ ſuch ſhould be ſtoned] but what ſayeſt thou? 5. thoſe that were thus taken ſhould be ſubject to any the ſevereſt puniſhment, ſuch as ſtoning was. 2.

6. This they ſaid tempting him, that they might have to accuſe him, [But Jeſus ſtooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, † as though he heard them not.] 6. But Jeſus gave them no anſwer, but as if he heeded not, or underſtood not their queſtion, ſtooped down, &c.

* our law, ſo many copies read ἐμὸς Μωσῆς

† As ſome copies read μὴ προσποιούμενος making not ſhew, (as the word is uſed Lu. 24. 28.) viz. to hear or underſtand them, ſo moſt copies now uſed have not this.

7. ſupply the place of the proſecutors, and be the firſt that caſts ſtones at her, Deut. 17.7.

7. So when they continued asking, he lift up himſelf, and ſaid unto them, He that is without ſinne among you, let him [firſt caſt a ſtone at her.]

8. And again he ſtooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9. being every one of them convinced in conſcience that he was guilty of ſome as great commiſſion as this, went out one after another, none remaining but Jeſus and the woman, ſhe ſtanding before him in the poſture of an accuſed perſon before a Judge.

9. And they which heard it, [being convicted by their own conſcience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldeſt even unto the laſt: and Jeſus was left alone and the woman ſtanding in the midſt.]

10. adjudged thee worthy of death?

10. When Jeſus had lift up himſelf, and ſaw none but the woman, he ſaid unto her, Where are thoſe thine accuſers? Hath no man [condemned thee?]

11. neither do I adjudge thee to death, but rather call thee to repentance and reformation.

11. She ſaid, No man Lord. And Jeſus ſaid unto her, [Neither do I condemn thee, go and ſinne no more.]

12. Then ſoon after the delivering thoſe words, c. 7. 38. and in purſuance of the ſame matter, ſaid to them all publickly, I am come to enlighten the hearts of all men, he that will leave his former courſe, and follow me, I will give him that illumination which ſhall bring him to piety and bliſſe.

12. Then ſpake Jeſus again unto them, ſaying, I am the light of the world, he that followeth me ſhall not walk in darkneſſe, but ſhall have the light of life.]

13. teſtimony is not to be heeded or credited, is no valid teſtimony, or to be received by us.

13. The Phariſees therefore ſaid unto him, Thou beareſt record of thy ſelf, thy [record is not true.]

14. Jeſus anſwered, My teſtifying of my ſelfe doth not invalidate my teſtimony, my coming from heaven on an embaſſy to you, on anothers, not mine own errand, (and that teſtified by the Spirit to John Baptiſt, and by John Baptiſt to you, if yee would beleive, but however to my ſelf undoubtedly known) gives a validity to my teſtimony, and joynes God the Father himſelf in the teſtimony with me. And as the holy Ghoſt hath teſtified, that I am ſent by God, ſo my aſcenſion to heaven (which will ſufficiently prove my miſſion) being known to me before hand, though not to you, and being diſcoverable by the event to you alſo, eſpecially when ſo many eye-witneſſes ſhall have teſtified it to you, it will follow that my teſtimony of my ſelf, though a ſingle one, will be authenticke and valid, though perhaps, as the one is not already, ſo the other alſo will not be heeded by you.

14. Jeſus anſwered, My record is true, for I know whence I came, and whither I go, but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go.]

15. Yee that know not my divine originall, v. 14. judge of me only according to my humane extraction, and in proportion to that paſſe ſentence of me, I am unwilling to ſay or judge the worſt of you, otherwiſe I could ſay worſe of you.

15. Ye judge after the fleſh, I judge no man.]

16. And if I ſhould do ſo, my judgement were valid according to law, becauſe this is the judgment alſo and teſtimony of my father, who by his Spirit, and miracles, and the voyce from heaven, requiring all to beleive on me, muſt needs judge them as pertinacious unbeleivers, who ſtand out againſt all this.

16. And yet if I judge, my judgment is true, for I am not alone, but I and the Father that ſent me.]

17. And it is known in all laws, particularly in that of yours, Deut. 17. 6. that the teſtimony of two men is to be received as valid in any cauſe whatſoever.

17. It is alſo written in your law, that the teſtimony of two men is true.]

18. And I and my father are thoſe two, for as I now witneſſe of my ſelfe (which is not againſt law or reaſon for me to do, for 'tis not mine own cauſe, but concernes others, to whom I am ſent, and not my ſelf, but only as a witneſſe and declarer) ſo my father alſo by voyce from heaven, deſcent of his Spirit, miracles, prophecies, teſtifies my commiſſion from him.

18. I * am one that bear witneſſe of my ſelf, and the father that ſent me beareth witneſſe of me.]

* witneſſe of my ſelf αμαρτυρον

19. They ſay therefore unto him, Is not Joſeph your father, have you any other? Jeſus replyed, you will not receive any knowledge concerning me or my father. Your acknowledging of me is the only way to bring you to the knowledge of my father.

19. Then ſaid they unto him, Where is thy father? Jeſus anſwered, Ye neither know me nor my father, if ye had known me, ye would have known my father alſo.]

20. Theſe things Jeſus ſaid in that part of the Temple, where the cheſt ſtood, into which the offerings were put, where he publikely taught the people, and that without any man offering to lay hands on him, God ſo diſpoſing of it for a ſeaſon,

20. Theſe words ſpake Jeſus in the treaſury, as he taught in the Temple: and no man laid hands on him,] for his hour was not yet come.

21. I ſhall depart from hence, and then you ſhall ſeek me unprofitably, and by contemning (or as 'tis interpreted v. 24. not beleiving) me now, bring judgements upon your ſelves, as they that take no warning by the preaching of the Prophet Ezech. 2. 9. And then 'twill be too late to wiſh for this time again, for I ſhall be gone farre out of reach of your coming to me.

21. Then ſaid Jeſus again unto them, [I go my way, and ye ſhall ſeek me, and ſhall dye in your ſins, whither I go ye cannot come.]

22. The Jews not underſtanding to what his ſpeech drove, ſaid one to another, what will he kill himſelf, &c.

22. Then ſaid the Jews, Will he kill himſelf, becauſe he ſaith, whither I go ye cannot come?]

23, 24. You and I are from very contrary diſtant originals, your affections like your ſelves, are of

23. And he ſaid unto them, [Ye are from beneath, I am from above, ye are of this world, I am not of this world.

24. I ſaid therefore unto you, that ye ſhall dye in your ſins: for if you beleive not that * I am he, ye ſhall dye in your ſins.]

* I am. ἐγώ εἰμι

of an earthly temper and original, and therefore can phanſie ſuch blank interpretations of my ſpeeches as if I would kill my ſelf, when my meaning is that I ſhall aſcend to heaven, whence I came, and if ye beleive not that I am the Meſſias, ye ſhall loſe the benefit that I came to bring you, and dye without any remedy in your ſins.

25. Then ſaid they unto him, Who art thou? And Jeſus ſaith unto them, [ᵇ Even † the ſame that I ſaid unto you from the beginning.]

† the very ſame which I tell you

25. I have told you all this while, He that is ſent from the Father, the Meſſias, and if you aske me never ſo often, I can tell you no otherwiſe. b.

26. I have many things to ſay and to judge of you: but he that ſent me is true, and I ſpeak to the world thoſe things that I have heard of him.]

26. I could by many evidences charge and aggravate your infidelity, but I will uſe no other but the teſtimony of my father, which is alone ſufficient to convince you, and having my commiſſion from him, I ſpeak nothing but what that commiſſion extends to.

27. They underſtood not that he ſpake to them of the Father.]

27. This ſpeech of his they underſtood not, not yet conceiving that by him that ſent him, he meant the Father.

28. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, [When * ye have lift up the ſon of man, then ſhall ye know that I † am he, and that I do nothing of my ſelf: but as my father hath taught me I ſpeak theſe things.]

* ye ſhall have lift up Οταν ὑψώσητε † am, and ἐγώ εἰμι, ἐγώ

28. After the Romans crucifying of me, which I now foretell you, and that by your inſtance and urging them to it, there will be thoſe evidences yeilded you of my being truly, what now you will not beleive me to be, (viz. my reſurrection, aſcenſion &c.) that you ſhall have no excuſe to deny it, then ſhall ye be convinced (either to the working your repentance, or your deſtruction) that I am the Meſſias, and came from God, and do nothing but according to my Commiſſion from him.

29. And he that ſent me is with me, the Father hath not left me alone, for I doe always thoſe thing * that ᶜ pleaſe him.]

* which he hath appointed

29. And as I had at my coming commiſſion from him, ſo is he perpetually preſent with me in all I do, to advance and promote all the deſignes of my coming, i.e. to proſper all I ſet about, for I doe nothing but by his appointment and commiſſion. c.

30. As he ſpake theſe words many beleived on him.

31. Then ſaid Jeſus to thoſe Jews which beleived on him, If ye [continue in my word, then are ye my diſciples indeed.]

31. conſtantly practiſe my commands, you are truly and really my followers and diſciples.

32. And yee ſhall know the truth, and the truth ſhall make you free.

32. And thoſe truths which I ſhall reveal to you, ſhall beſtow upon you a moſt valuable freedome.

33. They anſwered him, We be Abrahams ſeed, and were never in bondage to any man, how ſayeſt thou, Ye ſhall be made free?

33. Then the other Jews there preſent (not the beleivers v. 31. but thoſe that were more bloudily diſpoſed v. 37.) replyed, ſaying, We are heires to the promiſes made to Abraham, and never yet ſubdued to be ſlaves to any, and beſides we are exerciſed in the ſtudy of the law, and of all ſuch we have a proverb, that ſuch a man is a ſervant to no man, what can the meaning of thoſe words be, that the truth ſhall make us free?

34. Jeſus anſwered them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, whoſoever committeth ſin, is the ſervant of ſin.]

34. Jeſus anſwered them, I aſſure you you are miſtaken in that opinion of your ſelves, in thinking your ſelves to be freemen, your being born of Abrahams ſeed will not prove it, for living and going on in groſſe courſes of ſinne, ye are to know, that there are no ſuch ſlaves as they that live indulgent in ſinne.

35. And the ſervant abideth not in the houſe forever, but the ſonne abideth forever.

35, 36. And being ſuch, you are far from having any right to be continued in Gods family, which belongs onely to ſons. In the common account of the world, a ſervant is ſo farre from being a ſon, and ſo from having any right to the inheritance of the family, that he is at the mercy of the ſon, when he comes to the fathers eſtate, to caſt him quite out of the family, and unleſſe the ſon make him free, he cannot be free (nor conſequently be ſo much as capable of being adopted) and this is the caſe of all ſuch as you, of every indulgent ſinner, Chriſt muſt looſe him from his ſpirituall bondage that of his ſinne, or elſe he is not capable of any benefit of ſon-ſhip, ſo much as by adoption.

36. If the ſon therefore ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed.]

37. I know that ye are Abrahams ſeed, but ye ſeek to kill me, becauſe my word hath no place in you.]

37. And as long as you are ingaged in any ſuch ſinfull courſe (as by your deſigning my death it ſeems you are) 'tis not your being Abrahams children that will make you, or demonſtrate you freemen.

38. I ſpeak that which I have ſeen with my father, and * ye do that which ye have ſeen with your father.

* ye therefore, or, accordingly ὁ, ἡ ὑμεῖς ὑμῶν

38. I doe after the example of my father and you of yours in proportion.

39. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, Abraham is our Father. Jeſus ſaith unto them, If ye were Abrahams children, ye would [doe the works of Abraham.]

39. in his obedience and virtues be like him, as children reſemble their naturall parents in their nature and feature.

40. But now yee ſeek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth which I have heard of God, this did not Abraham.]

40. But you are moſt contrary to that, Abraham was an hoſpitable perſon, and obeyed God in all his commands, would have been very farre from deſigning the death of any the meaneſt Prophet, for no other crime, but that of bringing Gods truth unto him, And yet this doye.

41. Ye doe the deeds of your father. Then ſaid they unto him, We be not born of fornication, we have one father, even God.]

41. Ye have another father not willingly owned by you, and him you are like in your actions, Hereupon they reply, none have dubious parents, but they that are unlawfully begotten, we are not ſuch, we are none of thoſe to whom the ſtyle of children of whoredomes is given, Hoſ. 2. 4. but owned and acknowledged by God as his only children.

42. Jeſus

42. Jeſus anſwers, your hating of me is a certain argument, that God is not your father, for I am ſent immediately from him, I came from heaven, and what I do is by commiſſion from God, not on mine own motion, or any buſineſſe or errand of mine, or as falſe prophets without miſſion.

42. Jeſus ſaid unto them, If God were your father, ye would love me, for I proceeded forth, and came from God, neither came I of my ſelf, but he ſent me.]

43. If God were your father, whoſe commands you received and obeyed as children, you would know my language, being indeed the very language of that father. But the reaſon is clear, The thing that makes you not beleive in me, is not want of means of conviction, that my doctrine cõmes from God, but becauſe my doctrine is not agreeable to your humour: You cannot abide to hear it, you have not affections capable of it.

43. Why doe yee not underſtand my ſpeech? even becauſe ye cannot hear my word.]

44. The practiſes which the devill offers to you or hath practiſed before you, you like much better, then thoſe which I commend to you, He was from the firſt that we hear of him, malicious, and proud, and bloudy, and ſoon apoſtatized from God and the right way, for he is an enemy of truth and goodneſſe, and therefore for him to lie, and confirme you in infidelity, is naturall, and proper to him.

44. Ye are of your father the devill, and the luſts of your father * ye will do; he was a murtherer from the beginning, and † abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him: when he ſpeaketh a lye, he ſpeaketh of his own: for he is a lyer, and the father of it.]

* ye delight to do, θέλετε ποιεῖν
† ſtood in truth, ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ

45. 'Tis neither the incvidence of my doctrine, nor the weakneſſe of your underſtandings that keeps you from beleiving me, and embracing my doctrine, the only thing that makes you reject me is my ſpeaking the truth, that heavenly pure perfect rule of practiſe, which, it ſeems, is not for your turne, is vehemently reſiſted by your paſſions and prejudices.

45. * And becauſe I tell you the truth, ye beleive me not.]

* But I becauſe I ſay the truth, ἐγὼ δὲ ὅτι

46. I am ſure you have no fault or impoſture to lay to my charge, nothing to produce or prove againſt me, And the tree will be known by the fruits, and yet you will not beleive truth, when I ſpeak it.

46. Which of you convinceth me of ſin? And if I ſay the truth, why do ye not beleive me?]

47. If you had true piety in you, then certainly my doctrine, being from God, would be acceptable to you, and you would embrace it.

47. He that is of God, heareth Gods words, ye therefore hear them not, becauſe ye are not of God.]

48. To this the Jews had no other reply, but to fall into reproachfull language againſt him, calling him Samaritan (a word of reproach) and madman, See c. 7. 20. b.

d. 48. Then anſwered the Jews and ſaid unto him, Say we not well that thou art a [d] Samaritane, and haſt a devill?]

49. That I do no vicious extravagant thing, appears by my ſeeking no honour to my ſelf, not coming in my own name, but referring all my embaſſie to the honour of God, and you doe all that your malice can invent, to defame me.

49. Jeſus anſwered, I have not a devill, but I honour my father, and ye doe diſhonour me.]

50. And this let me tell you, although I do not ſeek after my own glory, yet my father doth tenderly obſerve, whether I am honoured or diſhonoured, and paſſes ſentence on men ſeverely for it; ſee Deut. 18. 19. otherwiſe, as 'tis no glory of mine I look after, ſo your reproaches would not touch me.

50. And I ſeek not mine own glory, there is one that || ſeeketh, and judgeth.]

51. As it is, I cannot be ſo unkind to you as thus to leave you in this contempt, ſo dangerous to you, whereas on the other ſide, your receiving of the meſſage, which I bring you, were the way to bring you to eternall life, and reſcue you from eternall torments.

51. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, If * a man keep my ſaying, he ſhall never ſee death.]

* any one ſhal obſerve my word, he ſhall not ſee death forever τις τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμὸν τηρήσῃ, θάνατον οὐ μὴ θεωρήσῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.

52. art mad, ſee c. 7. 20. b.

52. Then ſaid the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou [haſt a devil,] Abraham is dead, and the Prophets, and thou ſayeſt, If a man keep my ſaying he ſhall never taſte of death.

53. Abraham and the Prophets were not freed from dying, and what manner of power doſt thou aſſume to thy ſelf, to beſtow priviledges, which God never gave to them whom he ſo much favoured?

53. Art thou greater then our father Abraham, which is dead? and the Prophets are dead, whom makeſt thou thy ſelf?]

54. Jeſus replyed, I ſhall ſay nothing of my ſelf, The power which I have, I have from him whom certainly you acknowledge to be greater then Abraham, own him as your God, he hath teſtified ſufficiently of me, by voice from heaven, &c.

54. Jeſus anſwered, If I* honour my ſelf, my honour is nothing, It is my father that honoureth me, of whom ye ſay, that he is your God.]

* glorifie δοξάζω

55. This father of mine whom you call your God, you know very imperfectly, you know not what kind of worſhip and obedience it is, that he requires, but place it in external legal performances, I come to tell you his will more perfectly, And to this end have my meſſage from him, and ſo cannot but know it diſtinctly, and if in compliance with you, or to avoid your reproaches I ſhould ſay otherwiſe, then what I have hitherto ſaid, or confeſſe that I came not from him, or knew him not, I ſhould be like you, a down right lyer, This I will not be guilty of, but do again profeſſe, that I am ſent with perfect knowledge of his will, and do exactly obſerve it.

55. Yet ye have not known him, but I know him, and if I ſhould ſay, I know him not, I ſhall be a lyer, like unto you, but I know him, and † keep his ſaying.]

† obſerve his word λόγον δὲ αὐτοῦ

56. And becauſe you talke ſo much of Abraham, I ſhall now ſay of him, that he having received the promiſe of the Meſſias, Gen. 22. 35. did thereupon vehemently and with great pleaſure and exiliency of mind deſire to look nearer into it, to ſee my coming into the world, and a revelation of it was made unto him, and in it of the ſtate of the Goſpel, and he was heartily joyed at it.

56. Your father Abraham * rejoyced to ſee my day, & he ſaw it, and was glad.]

* was exceeding glad that he might ſee my day, and he ſaw and rejoyced, ἠγαλλιάσατο ἵνα ἴδῃ

57. To this the Jews objected that he was not fifty years old, and therefore how could he ſay that Abraham lived ſince his birth, that Chriſt could ſee Abraham, or be ſeen by him?

57. Then ſaid the Jewes unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and haſt thou ſeen Abraham?]

58. Jeſus

58. Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, before Abraham * was born, * was, I am.]

58. Jeſus anſwer'd that objection of theirs, You are much miſtaken in reckoning my age, For 1. I have a being from all eternity, and ſo before Abraham was born, and therefore as young as you take me to be in reſpect of my age here, I may well have ſeen and known Abraham. But then 2. in reſpect of my preſent appearance here on earth, though that be but a little above thirty years duration, yet long before Abrahams time, it was decreed by my Father, and in kindneſſe to Abraham revealed to him, while he lived, in which reſpect 'tis true, that he knew me alſo.

59. Then took they up ſtones to caſt at him,] but Jeſus hid himſelf, and went out of the Temple, going through the midſt of them, and ſo paſſed by.

59. They therefore conceiving this ſpeech of his to be blaſphemous, after the manner of Zelots, were ready to ſtone him preſently.

Notes on Chap. VIII.

a. Ἀνδροκτόνος That all that are guilty of adultery, ſhould be ſtoned, we find not in the law of Moſes, but that they ſhould die the death, which phraſe, ſay the Talmudiſts generally ſignifies ſtrangling. This puniſhment of ſtoning, belongs particularly to thoſe that are taken in the fact, as here the woman was, v. 4. So ſaith * Philo of ſuch, πάντες ἄνδρων μυρίων ἐπάξιοι, All men have counted them worthy of many deaths, and ſo of ſtoning, which was a high degree of ſeverity, and ſo Solon in one of his laws, Ἐάν τις μοιχὸν λαβῇ, ὃν ἂν βούλῃ, χρᾶσθαι, If any man take an adulterer in the fact, he may uſe him how he pleaſe, and in the Twelve Tables, Mœchum in adulterio deprehenſum impunè necato, he that takes him, may kill him lawfully and ſecurely.

* Ad Joſeph.

b. Τὸν ἀρχὴν The phraſe [ἀρχὴν] is here without queſtion adverbially taken, ſo it is often in other authors, Hippocrates in the beginning of his book περὶ ἀρχῆς: Ἰητρὸς ἀρχὴν οὐκ ἂν γένοιτο τυχὼν ἐπιστήμης, ὅτ' ἂν ἐξ ἀρχῆς, and ſo ἀρχῶν in Herodotus in Thalia, cited by Budæus. But for the ſenſe or notation of the phraſe, Melanchthon Ep. p. 511. ſeems to have made a good conjecture, that it ſignifies [prorſus] a note of affirmation, Even ſo, or altogether, abſolutely. For ſo the Chaldee, when they would expreſſe any thing to be ſimply lawfull or unlawfull, they uſe the word לבתחלה, i.e. [ἀπ' ἀρχῆς] literally, from תחל incepit, and ſo it will ſignifie no more them ἀπαξαπλῶς, omnino, &c. ſee Jac. Cocb in Excerpta Gemaræ in Sanhedr. p. 280. And ſo the ſumme of Chriſt's ſpeech is, that though they made doubts and diſputes about him, what he was, yet he ſtill made no ſcruple to ſtand to his affirmations of himſelf, he ſtill affirms, that tis even as he tells them all this while, abſolutely ſo, and no otherwiſe, he hath not ſpoken any thing too high of himſelf.

c. Ἀρεῖον The word ἀρεῖον ſignifies in common uſe the decree or appointment of any court, or judge, or Prince (coming from ἀρέσκω, juſt as δόγμα the ordinary word for an ordinance, doth from δοκέω, Βέλτιον ὑμῖν agreeable to the form of ἔδοξεν ὑμῖν, Act. 15. 25.) ſo the Principum placita among the Romans, the Arreſts of the Parliament of Paris, &c. among the French, and the Common pleas in England (i. e. communia placita or ἀρεῖα) a phraſe to expreſſe a court of judicature among us, the word [pleas] denoting judgments in one court, as [the Kings bench] a tribunal in another. So here ἀρεῖον αὐτοῦ] may poſſibly be God's lawes, decrees, determinations, which he as the Judge or prince of all, of his good pleaſure, determines to be done, and becauſe Cõmiſſions are iſſued out of courts, and are a kind of decree of thoſe courts, that ſuch a man ſhould have ſuch a power, therefore ἀρεῖον] may be extended to thoſe. So Act. 6. 2. οὐκ ἀρεῖόν ἐστι is not thought fit, or appointed, or determined, &c. and ἤρεσεν ἐμοὶ καὶ τῷ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι, v. 5. the thing was reſolved on, and agreed on by all, The multitude there having to do in the choice of the men, as followes, and the Apoſtles conſecrating and impoſing hands on them, v. 6. So Act. 12. 3. when Herod ſaw ὅτι ἀρεῖόν ἐστι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις. I ſuppoſe the meaning is, that the Jewes had expreſt their judgment, paſt their votes in it, i. e. either the Sanhedrim of the Jewes, or poſſibly the people of the Jewes, for ſo, ſince the power of capital puniſhments was taken from the Jewes, and was now in the Romans hands, the proceeding was after the Roman faſhion, which was, ut injuſſu populi nihil fiat, that nothing ſhould be done without the command of the people, Thus 'twas before in the caſe of Chriſt, Mat. 27. 22. where Pilate asks the multitude, What ſhall we doe with Jeſus? and they all ſaid, Let him be crucified, this was their ἀρεῖον there, and v. 24. it ſeems the judge could not reſiſt this vote of theirs, and the whole matter is laid on this ſentence of theirs, Pilate diſclaiming, and waſhing his hands from having any thing to doe in it; and ſo in that of James, the Jewes, it ſeems, had given their votes (ἀρεῖον Ἰουδαίοις) and Herod ſeeing how forward they were in it, (for ſo Euſebius expreſſes it, ὡς ἥδιστα χαίρουσι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, they not only conſented, but joyed in it) to gratifie them farther, he proceeded to apprehend Peter alſo, and of him 'tis added (agreeably to what hath been now ſaid) that Herod meant after the Paſſeover to bring him forth to the people, i. e. to ask their ſentence, or ἀρεῖον, or pleaſure concerning him, and accordingly, if they ſo voted, to put him to death, and therefore v. 11. when he recounteth his deliverance, he calls it not only a reſcue from the hand of Herod, but from the people of the Jewes, and their expectation.

This title of [Samaritan] here, is by way of reproach affixt on Chriſt, not that they thought him ſo, but becauſe this was an odious name among the Jewes; So as Idolaters, Lev. 25. 47. are called Aramæi, or Syrians, becauſe the Syrians were antiently ſuch, and thus all cruel men we call Turks, and covetous, Jewes, not that we think they are ſuch naturally, but that they are like unto them. Or elſe, becauſe Chriſt had converſed with the Samaritane woman, which was againſt the Jewiſh rule, Joh. 4. 9. he is thought a deſertor of the Jewiſh law, and ſo to be one of them. d. CHAP. IX.

1. AND as Jeſus paſſed by, he ſaw a man which was blind from his birth.

2. 2. And ſome of his followers asked him, 2. And his diſciples asked him ſaying, Maſter, who did ſin, [a] this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?]
ſaying, Sir, was it any ſin of his own, when his ſoul was in another body, or was it ſome ſin of his parents at the time of his conception, which cauſed this blindneſſe in him?

3. Neither his own nor his parents ſins were the cauſe of this blindneſſe of his, but Gods ſecret wiſdome, who meant by this means to ſhew forth in me his miraculous power among you.
3. Jeſus anſwered, [Neither hath this man ſinned, nor his parents, but that the works of God ſhould be made manifeſt in him.]

4,5. And having received ſuch power frō him, I ought, while I am here, to exerciſe it, and ſhew the world that I am ſent to enlighten it, by this embleme of curing him, that is born blind.
4. I muſt work the works of him that ſent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.
5. As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.]

6. When he had thus ſpoken, he ſpat on the ground, and made * clay with the ſpittle, and anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay.

* dirt with the ſpittle, and ſpread the dirt upon the eyes of the blind, πηλὸν — ἐπέχρισεν τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς

7. which by the name of it, may put you in mind of the Meſſias (who is ſtyled, The ſent) by whom the cure is wrought.
7. And ſaid unto him, Goe waſh in the poole [of Siloam (which is by interpretation, ſent.)] He went his way therefore and waſhed and came ſeeing.

8. had oft ſeen him before, and ſo knew that he had been blind, now ſeeing this cure wrought, ſome of them asked if this were not that blind man, which was wont to ſit and beg at ſuch a place?
8. The neighbours therefore, and they that [before had ſeen him, that he was blind, ſaid, Is not this he that ſate and begged?]

9. Some ſaid, This is he: others ſaid, He is like him: but he ſaid, I am he.

10. Therefore ſaid they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11. beſmeared
11. He anſwered and ſaid, A man that is called Jeſus, made clay and [anointed] my eyes, and ſaid unto me, Goe to the poole of Siloam, and waſh: and I went and waſhed, and I received ſight.

12. Then ſaid they unto him, Where is he? He ſaid, I know not.

13. They brought to the Phariſees him that aforetime was blind.

14. that mixture of earth and ſpittle,
14. And it was the ſabbath day, when Jeſus had made [the clay,] and opened his eyes.

15. Then again the Phariſees alſo asked him how he had received his ſight: He ſaid unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I waſhed, and doe ſee.

16. Certainly ſuch miracles cannot be wrought but by the finger of God, and ſo cannot be the work of an impoſtor, a man of ſinne, a great ſinner.
16. Therefore ſaid ſome of the Phariſees, This man is not of God, becauſe he keepeth not the ſabbath day: Others ſaid, [How can a man that is a ſinner doe ſuch miracles?] and there was a diviſion among them.

17. What opinion of him hath this work of power and mercy to thee, wrought in thee?
17. They ſay unto the blind man again, What ſayeſt thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes?] He ſaid, He is a prophet.

18. The conſequent of this diſpute was, that the Jewes at length would not beleive the plain matter of fact, that the man that now ſaw had ever been blind, till the teſtimony of the parents made that clear.
18. But the Jewes did not beleive concerning him that he had been blind, and received his ſight, untill they called the parents of him that had received his ſight.]

19. And asked them theſe three queſtions, 1. whether this were their ſon? 2. whether they will affirm upon their knowledge that he was born blind? 3. whether they know how this cure was wrought, or by whom?
19. And they asked them, ſaying, Is this your ſon, who ye ſay was born blind? how then doth he now ſee?

20. For two of the queſtions we anſwer diſtinctly, We know &c.
20. His parents anſwered and ſaid, [We know that this is our ſon, and that he was born blind:]

21. He is of age and underſtanding to anſwer that third queſtion, and certainly is the fitteſt to give you an account for that matter which himſelf is ſo neerly concerned in.
21. But by what means he now ſeeth we know not, or who hath opened his eyes we know not; [He is of age, aske him, he † ſhall ſpeak for himſelf.]

† will tell you concerning himſelf, λαλήσει περὶ ἑαυτοῦ

22. he ſhould be ignominiouſly uſed, and put out of the court.
22. Theſe words ſpake his parents becauſe they feared the Jewes; for the Jewes had agreed already, that if any man did confeſſe that he was Chriſt [he b ſhould be put out of the ſynagogue.]

b.

23. To avoid which danger it was that his parents waved the anſwering of this queſtion, and put it off to their ſon, For this was a thing of ſuch a nature, that the affirming Jeſus to have done it, was in effect the affirming him to be the Meſſias.
23. Therefore ſaid his parents, He is of age, aske him.]

24. Then a ſecond time they ſent for, & examined the man that had this miraculous cure wrought on him, attempting to draw him from that opinion of Chriſt, which he ſeemed to have, by bidding him aſcribe the praiſe of his cure wholly to God, and not to look on Chriſt with any veneration, telling him that if he did it on the day, and in the manner forementiond, it was thereby
24. Then again called they the man that * was blind, and ſaid unto him, Give God the praiſe, we know that this man is a ſinner.]

* had been blind, ὃς ἦν τυφλός

by evident, that he was one that broke the ſabbath, and ſo not from God, but an impoſtor, (ſee v.16. and 2 Theſſ. 2.3.) who conſequently had no ſuch virtue, or piety, as could contribute any thing to this matter.

25. He anſwered and ſaid, Whether he be [a ſinner] or no, I know not; one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I ſee. 25. an impoſtor

26. Then ſaid they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

27. He anſwered them, [I have told you already, and ye* did not heare,] wherefore would you hear it again? will ye alſo be his diſciples? 27. I have told you, and you did not heed it, or elſe, I have told you plainly and diſtinctly enough already, * ſome copies omit de not, ſaith Rob: Stephanus.

28. Then reviled they him, ſaying, Thou art his diſciple, but we are Moſes diſciples.

29. We know that God ſpake unto Moſes, as for this fellow, we know not [from whence he is.] 29. of any commiſſion from God which he hath, nor can give any account of him.

30. The man anſwered and ſaid unto them, [Why herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes.] 30. Tis ſtrange that one ſhould doe ſuch miracles as theſe, and you learned men not know, whether he be ſent from God or no.

31. Now we know that God heareth not ſinners, but if any man be a worſhipper of God, and doth his will, him he heareth.] 31. It being reſolved on among all men, that an impoſtor or falſe teacher is not enabled by God to work ſuch miracles as theſe (or if he were, God muſt be thought to aſſiſt him in his impoſtures) but only pious and faithfull ſervants of God, that came to doe his will, not their own.

32. Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened] the eyes of one that was born blind. 32. Tis above all humane power to open

33. If this man were not of God, he could doe nothing.] 33. If he were not ſent and impowered by God, he could never doe ſuch things as theſe.

34. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, [Thou waſt altogether born in ſinnes, and doſt thou teach us? And they caſt him out.] 34. Thy being born blind is a mark and character of ſome extraordinary ill in thee, which makes thee very unfit to teach Doctors and Rabbi's, in matters of this moment. And they caſt him out of the court (ſee note b.) with diſgrace.

35. Jeſus heard that they had caſt him out, and when he had found him, he ſaid unto him, Doeſt thou beleive on the ſon of God?

36. He anſwered and ſaid, Who is he, Lord, that I might beleive on him?

37. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Thou haſt ſeen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

38. And he ſaid, Lord, I beleive. And he [worſhipped him.] 38. bowed down, and made a moſt lowly obeyſance to him as to the Meſſias.

39. And Jeſus ſaid, [For judgment I am come into this world, that they which ſee not, might ſee; and that they which ſee, might be made blind.] 39. This will be the effect of my coming into the world, not only that thoſe that are blind ſhall receive ſight, but alſo that the moſt ſeeing learned men, Phariſees &c. will not ſee the things before their eyes.

40. And ſome of the Phariſees which were with him heard theſe words, and ſaid unto him, [Are we blind alſo?] 40. Are we the men that he means by the latter part of his ſpeech? Are we then become blind in his opinion?

41. Jeſus ſaid unto them, If ye were blind, ye ſhould have no ſinne; but now ye ſay, We ſee, therefore your ſinne remaineth.] 41. Jeſus ſaid unto them, It were well for you, if it could be truly pronounced of you, that you are blind, If your ſinne were of impotence or unability to ſee, it would be more pardonable, but now by your acknowledging your ſelves not to be blind, and ſo that all that you doe you doe knowingly and deliberately, your ſinnes receive a very great aggravation.

Notes on Chap. IX.

2. Τις ἡμαρτεν.

The Jew that asked this queſtion, ſeems to have been of the Pythagoreans opinion (or, as they call it, de Sapientibus Mechar) who beleived the tranſmigration of ſouls from body to body, called μετεμψυχωσις, the removall from veſſel to veſſel, and ſo ſuppoſes by his queſtion that the ſoule of this man, having formerly offended, is now thus puniſhed by being put into a blind body. That this was the conceit of thoſe antient Philoſophers, that according to the degrees of proficiency either in virtue or ſinne, ſouls were put into more honourable or leſſe honourable bodies, upon demerit removed from the body of a male to a female, then from a perfect to an imperfect man, and after upon demerit again into a beaſt, may be ſeen in Alcinous, Νεμεσιος: and the reſt of the Pythagorean writers, which with other the like opinions certainly enough were infuſed before this time into ſome of the Jewes, and ſo theſe diſciples here might have imbibed this, and not ſo early or ſpeedily have laid it aſide, but might think it poſſible, and ſo ask a queſtion about it. The other part of the queſtion concerning the parent's ſin, ſeems to referre to ſome particular ſinne in the act of generation, which might have ſome influence on the child begotten, and make it imperfect in this or ſome other kind. This is by learned Jewes affirmed of that conjugall ſinne, which is forbidden by the law, *Lev.*20.18. and *Ezech.*18.6. which, they ſay, may reaſonably hinder, on the womans part, a juſt or compleat conception. Of Chriſt's anſwer to this queſtion, which followeth, ſee Maſius on Joſ: 1.6. p.115.

That συναγωγαι the Synagogues of the Jewes ſignifie all manner of aſſemblies hath been ſaid, b. Annotat. Mat. 10.17.

Mat.6.d. Agreeably the ἀποσυναγωγὰ removing or turning out of the Synagogues, is the ſeparating any offender from ſuch aſſemblies, ſetting a mark of reproach upon him, that he might not be familiarly converſt with by any, which is ἀφορίζειν Lu. 6.22. the nidui ſo known among the Jewes. This was alwaies done with circumſtances of contumely, and ſo hath ὀνειδίζειν added to it, contumelious uſage, Lu.6.22. And ſo v.35. of this chapter their caſting the man out of their ſynagogue, ſignifies that ceremony of reproach, the officers of the court taking him, that was condemned, and thruſting him out of the aſſembly. What thus belonged to excluding him out of the aſſembly, though it belonged to civil commerce, yet certainly excluded him out of the ſacred aſſembly alſo, For the loweſt degree of excommunication among the Jewes, being to the ſeparating for the ſpace of foure paces, this muſt needs belong to all kind of aſſemblies ſacred as well as civil. And therefore S. Chryſoſtome here affirmes ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, they caſt him out of the Temple, Hom. 59. and Nonnus ἀπήλασε ἴκλοδι νηῶ, and of the diſciples in Chriſt's name, ὑμέας ἐξελάσουσι συναγωγοῖο μαθητὰς, they ſhall drive you out of God's houſe. Where only it muſt be obſerved, that this ſeparation being only for foure paces, i.e. from familiar commerce, or cum diſcrimine, to ſet a mark upon them, the excommunication did not alwaies reach to totall excluſion out of the Temple, but confined them to a particular part and entrance into the Temple, called the gate of mourners, and excommunicate perſons, as others were admitted to that of bridegroems, as 'twas called. This word is, beſide this place, uſed twice more in this Goſpel, c. 16.2. it clearly ſignifies what here it doth, excluding them from familiar converſation of men, and thoſe liberties which all others enjoyed, But in the third place, c.12.42. it doth by accident come to ſignifie ſomewhat more, loſing the dignity of being one of the Sanhedrim, for being there ſpoken of the rulers or members of the Sanhedrim, the interdicting them the aſſemblies, caſting them out, muſt by conſequence deprive them of that dignity or office, as in the Chriſtian Church the excommunicating of a Prieſt, muſt neceſſarily be the degrading or ſuſpending him from his prieſthood. This puniſhment among the Jewes (referred to Revel. 22. 15.) being the making of any man infamous (ſhaming, in order to reforming him) is by Chriſt accommodated to Chriſtian, Eccleſiaſticall uſes, by removing men from the ſacrament, and prayers of the Church, to work the like reformation on them, when admonitions will not work upon them.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. X.

1. He that comes & pretends to be the Meſſias and comes not as he ought doe, with miracles and doctrine ſuch as may teſtifie him to be ſent by God, he is to be lookt on as an impoſtor, that means to ſeduce and ruine thoſe that follow him.

1. VErily, verily, I ſay unto you, [He that entreth not by the dore into the ſheepfold, but climbeth up ſome other way, the ſame is a thief, and a robber.]

2. But he that thus approves himſelf to be imploy'd and ſent by the owner, or Maſter of the ſheep, he comes on purpoſe to feed and preſerve his ſheep, and is to have power over them.

2. But he that entreth in by the dore, is the ſhepheard of the ſheep.]

3. To him all they, who are to guard the dore, and keep out theeves, are by the Maſter of the ſheep commanded to give admiſſion, and to that purpoſe have a token to diſcern him by, The Meſſias is ſo deſcribed in the prophets, and the doctrine truly divine ſo farre revealed there, that by accordance with that all the true watchmen of the Church acknowledge him, and all truly pious men obey and follow him, and he on the other ſide looks on theſe as the peculiar flock that he is to take charge of, and hath a particular care of every ſuch pious man, and as the ſhepheard careth for his ſheep, makes all neceſſary proviſion for them.

3. To him the Porter openeth, and the ſheep heare his voice, and he calleth [a] his own ſheep by name, and leadeth them out.]

4. And when he thus brings forth his ſheep (ſee note on Mat. 9. h.) to the water or paſture, it is not his manner to drive but only goe before, and call or lead them, tell them what they are to doe, and ſhew them the way by his example, and all truly pious men, qualified to be diſciples of his, (ſee note on ch. 6. d.) they will certainly follow him, diſtinguiſhing his voice, his doctrine from all others, from all impoſtors.

4. And when he [a] putteth forth his own ſheep, he goeth before them, and the ſheep follow him, for they know his voice.]

[a] brings out

5. An impoſtor or falſe Chriſt that teacheth doctrines contrary to piety, they will not follow, but flie from him as from a wolf, having ſuch certain tokens, by which to know the true doctrine of God, the true ſhepheards voice, that they can tell how to avoid all others that come to ſeduce them, by this very mark, becauſe tis a ſtrange voice, quite contrary to that piety and probity which they have been taught by God.

5. And a ſtranger will they not follow, but will flee from him, for they know not the voice of ſtrangers.]

6, 7. Thus much Chriſt ſpake thus parabolically and obſcurely to them, And becauſe they underſtood not his meaning in it, he added farther, As the Fathers miſſion and commiſſion v.1. is the dore by which the ſhepheard himſelf is to enter, (and whoſoever doth not ſo, being not ſent by God, betraies himſelf to be an impoſtor) and as his making known the will of God, not preaching any doctrine contrary to piety, but all to the advancing of it, is a certain evidence of his being ſent by God, ſo in another reſpect, I am the dore, i.e. the only way for the ſheep, the true ſervants of God, to enter by, into that fold, the Church, where all are to live regularly, and not to goe out, or depart from him.

6. This parable ſpake Jeſus unto them, but they underſtood not what things they were, which he ſpake unto them.

7. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them again, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, I am the dore of the ſheep.]

8. All

*All as many as have come, for many copies leave out, πρὸ ἐμοῦ, before me.

8. *All that ever came before me are theeves and robbers, but the sheep did not hear them.]

8. All others that have come of late pretending to be vindicators of the Jewes from the Roman yoke, (such as Theudas, Judas Gaulonites &c.) have been impostors, which no pious person would heed, as neither coming with commission from God, nor bringing Divine doctrine with them, but doctrines of rebellion, and bloudinesse, and the like.

9. I am the dore, by me if any man enter in, he shall be † saved, and shall goe in and out and find pasture.]

9. I am the dore, that all pious men must passe thorow, and whosoever doth so, he shall be (as in a fenced inclosure) in a safe, a rich, a plentifull condition, and wheresoever he turns, shall find pasture.

10. The theif cometh not, but for to steale, and to kill, and to destroy, I am come that they might have life, * and that they might have it more abundantly.]

10. Thus contrary am I to those that come without commission, ver. 1. All those impostors come to get advantage to themselves, to deceive and ruine you. But my only end of coming is to help my sheep to life in stead of butchering them, to help them to plenty, to provide abundantly for them, not to gain any thing to my self.

11. I am the good shepheard: the good shepheard † giveth his life for the sheep.]

11. Nay so farre am I from the theif that comes to kill the flock, that like the good shepheard (which keeps his own sheep, is not hired to keep anothers, see note a.) who ventures, when there is occasion (pawns, engages) his life for his sheep, rather then they shall come to hurt, grapples with wild beasts, that come to destroy his flock, so doe I.

12. But he that is an hireling, and not the shepheard, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep and flyeth, and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13. The hireling flyeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep.]

12,13. This is farre from the manner of impostors, nay it is peculiar to the good shepheard, whose flock is (not entrusted by another to his keeping, and he paid for that service, but) his own goods, and himself makes it his calling to look to them. He that keeps another man's sheep, and is paid for his labour, will never venture his life to preserve them, preferres his life before the advantage of his service, and thereupon when ever a wolf comes, that will endanger his life, if he defends his sheep, he runs away, and to save his life destitutes them, and this upon this very score, because he is not the owner, but only a servant hired to keep the fold. Whereas he whose own they are, will hazard his life, rather then leave his flock (his whole estate, as 'twas oft among the Jewes) to be torn, and worried by the devourer.

* I know mine own, and γινώσκω τὰ ἐμὰ, & † and I know the father, καθὼς γινώσκει

14. I am the good shepheard, and * know my sheep, and am known of mine.

15. As the Father knoweth me, † even so know I the Father, and I lay down my life for the sheep.]

14,15. Just such a shepheard am I, who, as I resemble the shepheard in other things; knowing my sheep particularly, and being known by them (see v. 3.) (in the same manner, as my Father knoweth me, and I him, my Father owning, and giving me perfect knowledge of his will, and I obeying and following my Father in all things,) So also I venture my life for my sheep, and will most willingly suffer death, in regard to the benefits that will come to my sheep, my disciples (all that receive and obey my voice) by that means.

16. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold, them also I must * bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one fold, and one shepheard.]

16. But for you Jewes, let me tell you, my flock is not all within this pale of Judæa, I have others that will beleive and obey me, receive the faith, beside and beyond the Jewish nation, and the care and rule of those I must undertake, and they will follow my call more obediently then the Jews, own and obey me, and all beleivers both of Jewes and Gentiles, shall unite very sociably together, and become one fold, under me, the one shepheard of them all, who lay down my life for them also, as well as for the Jews.

17. Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again.]

17. This carefull discharge of the office entrusted and committed to me by my Father, is that to which it is but proportionable, that my Father should love and value, and reward me, And therefore it is that as I venture my life for my flock, so when I shall have lost my life, by the care and power of my Father, I shall be able to rise again, and the lower I suffer here, the higher shall I be exalted, Phil. 2. 9.

18. No man taketh it away from me, but I lay it down of my self; I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again, This commandement have I received of my Father.]

18. 'Tis not in the power of man, to take my life away from me, if I did not thus voluntarily of my own accord lay it down; I can give my self up to be crucified, and then can rise to life again. And thus to doe my Father hath appointed me, This is a prime part of my commission.

19. There was a division therefore again among the Jewes, because of these sayings.

20. And many of them said, [He hath a devil and is mad, why hear ye him?]

20. He is mad (see note on ch. 7. b.) why doe you give any heed to what he saith?

21. Others said, [These are not the words of him that hath a devil. Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?]

21. These are neither the words nor actions of a mad man. Can the devil himself, or consequently his being mad, or possess'd with the devil, help him to doe the things that he doth? to cure one that was born blind?

22. And it was at Jerusalem the feast of Dedication, and it was winter.]

22. And it was the time of the feast of Dedication, a feast ordained by the Jewes 1 Mac. 4. 59. in commemoration of the new consecrating of the Temple, after it was profaned by Antiochus, which upon that institution was observed by them at this time, on November 14. and approved here by the presence of Christ, though it were not prescribed by God in the Law.

23. And according to the cuſtome of that ſeaſon he walked now in Solomon's porch under covert, as in the ſummer they uſed to walk in the open ayre in the courts without any roof over them.

23. And Jeſus walked in the Temple in Solomon's porch.]

24. By this means the people being all in a narrower compaſſe or leſſer room, they came about him cloſe, and ſaid unto him, How long doſt thou by obſcure expreſſions continue our doubts whether thou art the Meſſias or no? If thou art, tell us perſpicuouſly; ſee note on ch.7. 2.

24. Then came the Jewes round about him, and ſaid unto him, How long doſt thou * make us to doubt? If thou be the Chriſt, tell us plainly.]

* hold our ſoule in ſuſpence? ἕως πότε τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἴρεις;

25. Jeſus ſaid, I have told you in words ſignificant enough, if you would beleive, and the miracles that I have done (in my Fathers name whom I affirm to have ſent me) through his power, and by authority from him, have born teſtimony that I am ſent by him, and therefore that whatever I affirm of my ſelf, is true.

25. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, I told you, and ye beleived not: The works that I doe in my Fathers name, they bear witneſſe of me.]

26,27. But all this works no beleif in you, which is an evidence, and demonſtration from the effect, that you are not thoſe ſheep, that hear the good ſhepheards voice, v.3,4. (ſee note on ch.6. d.) and are known by him, v.14. (ſee note a.)

26. But ye beleive not, † becauſe ye are not of my ſheep, as I ſaid unto you.

27. My ſheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me.]

28. And I make that proviſion for them intimated v.10. and my care over them ſhall be ſuch, that while they keep cloſe to me, no devourer ſhall ever be able to annoy them, or pluck them from me.

28. And I give unto them eternall life, and they ſhall never periſh, neither ſhall any man pluck them out of my hand.]

29. Certainly my Father is ſtronger then any, that can oppoſe himſelf againſt them, and his ſpeciall work it is, that all the true ſheep of his fold, all truly pious perſons ſhould come to me, and that infinite power of his is engaged for it, that none ſuch ſhall by any violence be taken from him, deprived of that life, which here I promiſe to give them.

29. My Father who gave them me, is greater then all, and no man is able to pluck them out of my Fathers hand.]

30. And ſeeing my Father and I are one, it followes that I ſhall defend them alſo, and that none ſhall be able to pluck them out of my hand, ver. 28.

30. I and my Father are one.]

31. Upon this again the Jewes attempted to ſtone him.

31. Then the Jewes took up ſtones again to ſtone him.]

32. And Jeſus ſaid, Many miracles of mercy to you, miraculous cures &c. have I wrought, as teſtimonies of my miſſion from my Father, and never a deſtructive one, none that you have been the worſe for, For which of theſe my ſaving miracles doe you deſtroy me?

32. Jeſus anſwered them, Many good works have I ſhewed you from my Father, for which of thoſe works doe you ſtone me?]

33. The Jews ſaid, Tis not for any of thy miracles, (which are not denied to be all ſuch, and acts of mercy in thee) for which we think thee worthy of death, but becauſe thou haſt ſpoken blaſphemy, that is, becauſe thou, who art but a man, makeſt thy ſelf God by that ſpeech of thine, ver.30. (ſee Rom. 16. 25.) where though thou calledſt God thy Father, yet thou affirmedſt that he and thou were one.

33. The Jewes anſwered him, ſaying, For a good work we ſtone thee not, but for blaſphemy, and becauſe that thou being a man, makeſt thy ſelf God.]

34. Jeſus anſwer'd Theſe words in the Pſalmiſt you cannot but remember, Pſal.82.6. I have ſaid, ye are Gods, and that book is canonicall ſcripture with you.

34. Jeſus anſwered them, Is it not written in your law, I ſaid, ye are Gods?]

b. 35. If therefore they who are there ſpoken of by God, i.e. rulers or judges ordinarily ſo called, who received their Commiſſion from men, not from God immediately, (only perſons to whom the execution of God's law was entruſted among men) be by God himſelf called Gods, and whatſoever is ſaid in the books of ſcripture is true,

36. Is it reaſonable for you to affirm of him, whom God immediately, and in an extraordinary manner hath firſt conſecrated, then ſent into the world, then by the deſcent of the Spirit and voice from heaven teſtified his miſſion to ſo eminent, (and withall ſo peculiar) an office, that of the Meſſiah of the world, that he is guilty of blaſphemy, for affirming himſelf to be the ſon of God.

36. Say ye of him whom the Father hath ſanctified and ſent into the world, Thou blaſphemeſt, becauſe I ſaid, I am the ſon of God.]

37. If I performed not thoſe works among you, which might teſtifie me to come from God, you might with ſome reaſon doubt of me.

37. If I doe not the works of my Father, beleive me not.]

38. But if I doe, then, though you beleive nothing that I ſay, yet your faith is due to thoſe works of God my Father, wrought by me, by which 'tis evident that the Father acts in me, and I in him, wholly by his power, and ſo that he and I are one, which was the ſpeech you charged as blaſphemous in me.

38. But if I doe, though ye beleive not me, beleive the works, that ye may know and beleive that the Father is in me, and I in him.]

39. On this ſpeech again they attempt to lay hands on him, not now to ſtone him preſently, by the law of Zelots, as a blaſphemer, as v.31. but to bring him before the Sanhedrim, and charge ſome other crime againſt him. But he went out, and eſcaped their violence at that time alſo.

39. Therefore they ſought again to take him, but he eſcaped out of their hands.]

40. And went away again beyond Jordan, into the place where John † at firſt baptized, and there he abode.

† was, when he firſt baptized, ἐν τοῖς πρώτοις βαπτίζων,

41. And many reſorted unto him, and ſaid, John did no miracle, but all things that John ſpake of this man were true.

42. And in that place, being the place, where John had baptized and teſtified of Chriſt, they that had heard John, comparing what they remembred from him, with what they had by experience ſeen in Chriſt, by this means were inclined, many of them, to beleive in him.

42. And many beleived on him there.]

What

3. Πρόβατα

What the προβατα sheep here signifie in this parable, hath been largely set down, (note on c. 6. d.) viz: the obedient servants of God, considered before and without the revelation of Christ unto them, who being so qualified, are most ready to embrace the precepts of the Christian perfection, when they are offer'd to them. These also is Christ ready to receive, or any that having been engaged in sinne come with penitence, and resolution of mind to be such; And consequently, when these come to Christ, they are styled here, and looked on by him, as ἴδια προβατα, i.e. either peculiar sheep, those that by Gods prævenient graces are thus fitted, beyond all others, to come to Christ, or else, as the 12th verse imports, (where the shepheard is set opposite to the hireling, whose own the sheep are not) his own sheep, those to whom Christ hath a peculiar title beyond all others, who are therefore said to be given by God to Christ as his possession, see note on ch. 6. d.

Καλεῖ κατ' ὄνομα.

Now of these thus own'd, or acknowledg'd by Christ, it is here said, that he doth καλεῖν κατ' ὄνομα, call them by name, That referres to the custome of shepheards, that are so conversant among their sheep, that they know them severally (see v. 14. and 27. I know them) and have a severall name for every of them, by which they distinguish and call them, & each of them knows, and answers by obediential coming, or following, to that call. So v 3 they hear his voice and know it, v. 4. and he is known of thē, v. 14. Thus among us, hunts-men doe with their hounds, & plow-men wth their cattel, And it seems in Jewry, where the feeding of cattel was the great trade, and where other customes obtained, then those that are among us, the Shepheard did thus with his sheep, For want of their art, and usage of going before, and leading, and calling their sheep after them, which is known in the scripture to have been among them, Psal. 23 2, 3. and Ps. 80. 1. and Ps. 77. 20. our shepheards now goe after, and drive the sheep. But the change and diversity of customes in divers countries is very ordinary. And here it is evident that this custome of the Jewes is referr'd to, by v. 4. where answerable to th: shepheards calling, and leading, and going before, is the sheeps following, and knowing his voice, whereas v. 5. A stranger they will not follow, for they know not the voice of strangers. By which it is clear, that his calling his own sheep by name, and leading them, is the shepheards particular care, and providence for his sheep, and, in the morall, denotes Christs peculiar owning these honest, obedient, humble creatures, that come to him not in the clothing, but reall qualities of the sheep, and making provision for them.

b. ὡσὶ τὸ ἐλθεῖν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐγένετο.

The coming of the word of the Lord to any man signifies among the Hebrewes frequently in the Old Testament, God's sending a man, designing him, appointing him to any office, and so 'tis constantly used in the writings of the Prophets who begin their prophecies solemnly in this form: The word of the Lord came unto me, saying, which is but their shewing or vouching their Commission, and so when Rom. 10. 17. it is said ἀκοὴ, i.e. preaching of the word, (not their hearing, but their being heard,) is διὰ ῥήματος Θεοῦ, by the word of God, the meaning of it is, that no man must preach, except he be sent v. 15. where the word of God] signifies not the word, which they preach, but the Commission from which they are authorized to preach to others. And so for the office of judge &c. it is as proper, the word of the Lord signifying a Commission from God mediately, or immediately for any such; which when it comes to any man for the execution of power over others, it is the enstating of him in that office of power, and the same will be said of the sacerdotal also. But the truth is, the phrase here is not [Those to whom the word of the Lord came, upon which supposition this interpretation is built, but [πρὸς οὓς ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐγένετο, to whom the word of God was] or was spoken, and that may thus be interpreted, David Psal. 82. 1. hath these words, God standeth in the congregation of the mighty, he judgeth among the Gods, How long will yee judge unjustly? &c. In that place the Judges or rulers of the Sanhedrim are called Gods by the Psalmist, in the person of God, and again v. 6. I have said, ye are Gods, and ye are all children of the most high; Christ referring here to this, saith, Is it not written in your law, I have said, ye are Gods? from whence he concludeth, εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπε Θεοὺς, If he call'd them Gods, to whom the word of God was, i. e. to whom, or of, or concerning whom God spake in that place of the law, i. e. in the book of Psalms (comprehended sometimes under the word Law (see ch. 12. 34.) as the whole Old Testament is called the Law and the Prophets; though elsewhere there is a third mention of the division of those books, the ἁγιόγραφα, the book of Psalmes contained under that branch) if he called those Gods, and sons of God, who were but ordinary Judges of those times, chosen by men, and by imposition of hands of the Sanhedrim advanced to that office, after the common manner of all (nothing peculiar, or extraordinary, or of immediate mission from heaven in all this) then how much more may he, whom God the Father hath sent, with his immediate commission into the world (the Spirit descending on him, which is called the sanctifying of him, and the voice from heaven, This is my beloved son &c. being the very words of his commission) say without blasphemy, that he is the son of God? v. 36. And this seems the most obvious clear meaning of the place.

CHAP. XI.

Paraphrase.

1. NOW a certain man was sick, named Lazarus of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha.

2. (It was that Mary [which anointed the Lord with ointment,] and wiped his feet with her haire, whose brother Lazarus was sick,

2. which (as is ch. 12. 3. set down) anointed Christ &c. (see note on Lu. 7. 2.)

3. Therefore his sisters] sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold he whom thou loveſt is sick.

3. These two women being disciples of Christ, known so him, and knowing his kindnesse to Lazarus

4. of his is deſigned as a means to glorifie God, and for an opportunity for me to ſhew my power of doing miracles in reſtoring him to life, See ch. 9. 3.

4. When Jeſus heard that, he ſaid, This ſickneſſe [is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the ſon of God might be glorified thereby.]

5. Now Jeſus loved Martha, and her ſiſter, and Lazarus.

6. When he had heard therefore that he was ſick, he abode two daies ſtill in the ſame place where he was.

7. * Then after that ſaith he to his diſciples, Let us goe into Judæa again.

* At length after this, ἔπειτα

8. His diſciples ſay unto him, Maſter, the Jewes † of late ſought to ſtone thee, and goeſt thou thither again?

† but now, νῦν

9, 10. As he that goes in the day, having the light of the ſun to ſhine to him, is in no danger of ſtumbling, but only in the night, when that light is gone: So as long as my time of exerciſing my function here laſteth, there is that providence about me, which will ſecure me from all danger; and till that time be paſt, and ſo that providence withdrawn, I ſhall be ſafe, As long as I am about my buſineſſe, on which I was ſent I ſhall fear nothing, no not though I goe to Judæa, where I have by frequent experience found that they ſeek to kill me.

9. Jeſus anſwered, Are there not twelve houres in the day? If any man walk in the day, he ſtumbleth not, becauſe he ſeeth the light of this world.

10. But if a man walk in the night, he ſtumbleth, becauſe there is no light in him.]

11. Theſe things ſaid he, and after that he ſaith unto them, Our friend Lazarus ſleepeth, but [I goe] that I may awake him out of ſleep.

11. I will goe

12. his ſleeping is a very good, and known ſigne that he will recover.

12. Then ſaid his diſciples, Lord, [if he ſleep * he ſhall doe well.]

* he will eſcape, σωθήσεται

13. ſleeping in the ordinary acception of the word.

13. Howbeit Jeſus ſpake of his death, but they thought that he had ſpoken of [taking reſt in ſleep.]

15 in words without all obſcurity, note on ch. 7. 2.

14. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them [plainly,] Lazarus is dead.

15. that you may have the benefit of the miracle to confirm your faith.

15. And I am † glad for your ſakes that I was not there [to the intent ye may beleive,] nevertheleſſe let us goe to him.

† glad for you (that you may beleive) that I was not there, but χαίρω δι' ὑμᾶς (ἵνα πιστεύσητε) ὅτι οὐκ ἤμην ἐκεῖ· ἀλλ'.

16. Either, Let us goe along with our Maſter and run any hazard that he runneth, Or, if we goe, we may very probably be ſtoned, and die as well as Lazarus, referring to the danger mentioned by them v. 8. (the latter is the more probable interpretation)

16. Then ſaid Thomas, which is called Dydimus, unto his fellow diſciples, [Let us alſo goe that we may die with him.]

17. Then when Jeſus came, he found that he had lien in the grave foure daies already.

18. (Now Bethany was nigh unto Jeruſalem, about fifteen furlongs off.)

19. And Martha & Mary being in great ſadneſſe, and ſo keeping themſelves up in a cloſe retirement, many of the Jewes came to the houſe to thoſe that were neer them, to get acceſſe, to bewaile the loſſe and to reſcue them from this great ſadneſſe.

19. And many of the Jewes came * to Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother.]

* to thoſe that were about Martha & Mary, πρὸς τὰς περὶ Μάρθαν καὶ Μαρίαν.

20. Then Martha aſſoon as ſhe heard that Jeſus was coming, went and met him, but Mary ſat ſtill in the houſe.

21. Then ſaid Martha unto Jeſus, Lord, if thou hadſt been here, my brother had not died.

22. enable thee to doe it.

22. But I know that even now whatſoever thou wilt ask of God, God will [give it thee.]

23. I will raiſe thy brother again to life, ſee ver. 40.

23. Jeſus ſaith unto her, [Thy brother ſhall riſe again.]

24. Martha ſaid unto him, I know that he ſhall riſe again in the reſurrection of the laſt day.

25. I am able to raiſe the dead to life again, whenſoever I pleaſe, whether now, or hereafter, One that is a beleiver, and faithfull diſciple of mine, ſuch as thy brother Lazarus was, I can, though he be dead and buried, raiſe him preſently to life again.

25. Jeſus ſaid unto her, [I am the reſurrection and the life, he that beleiveth in me, though † he were dead, yet ſhall he live.]

† he have died, or, be dead, κἂν ἀποθάνῃ

26. And he that is now alive, and ſo not capable of ſuch a preſent miracle, ſhall, if he receiveth and obeyeth my doctrine, though he dies after the manner of other men, riſe again unto life immortall, The latter of theſe thou ſayeſt thou beleiveſt, v. 24. But doſt thou beleive the former alſo?

26. And whoſoever liveth and beleiveth in me, * ſhall never die, Beleiveſt thou this?]

* ſhall not die for ever, οὐ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.

27. Meſſias known by the title of [He that cometh] (ſee Mat. 11. 2.) the ſon of God, who conſequently haſt power of life and death, and ſo canſt raiſe him how and when thou pleaſeſt.

27. She ſaith unto him, Yea, Lord, I beleive that thou art the [Chriſt, the ſon of God, which † ſhould come into the world.]

† cometh, ὁ ἐρχόμενος

28. And when ſhe had ſo ſaid, ſhe went her way, and called Mary her ſiſter ſecretly, ſaying, The Maſter is come, and calleth for thee.

29. Aſſoon as ſhe heard that, ſhe aroſe quickly and came unto him.

30. continued

30. Now Jeſus was not yet come into the town, but [was] in that place where Martha met him.

31. The Jewes then which were with her in the houſe and comforted her, when they ſaw Mary, that ſhe roſe up haſtily, and went out, followed her, * ſaying, ſhe goeth unto the † grave to weep there.

32. Then

32. Then when Mary was come where Jeſus was, and ſaw him, ſhe fell down at his feet, ſaying unto him, Lord, if thou hadſt been here, my brother had not died.

33. When Jeſus therefore ſaw her * weeping, and the Jewes alſo which came with her, he [groaned in the ſpirit, and [a] was troubled.] 33. was very paſſionately affected w^th it, and appeared to be in a great perturbation of mind, which ſoon broke out into teares, ver. 35. a.

34. And ſaid, Where have ye laid him? They ſay unto him, Lord, come and ſee.

35. Jeſus wept.] 35. And although he had reſolved to raiſe him from the dead, v.23. and though at other times when he meant to doe ſo, he had ſuppreſſed the mourners teares, Lu.8.52. and Lu.7.13. yet now he indulgeth ſo much to the juſtice of their ſorrow, as himſelf to weep with them.

36. Then ſaid the Jewes, Behold how he loved him.

37. And ſome of them ſaid, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have cauſed that even this man ſhould not have died?

38. Jeſus therefore again groaning in himſelf, cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a ſtone lay upon it.

39. Jeſus ſaid, Take away the ſtone. Martha, the ſiſter of him that was dead, ſaith unto him, Lord, [† by this time he ſtinketh, for he hath been dead four daies.] 39. this is the fourth day ſince his death, and ſo according to experience of dead bodies which after a revolution of the humours (which is completed in ſeventy two houres) tend naturally to putrefaction, he muſt needs be putrefied, and ſo ſtink before this time.

40. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldeſt beleive, thou ſhouldſt ſee [the glory of God?] 40. a glorious miracle wrought on him, by raiſing him to life again, v.23, and 25.

41. Then they took away the ſtone from the place * where the dead was laid. And Jeſus [lift up his eyes] and ſaid, Father I thank thee that thou haſt heard mee. 41. faſtned his eyes on heaven, * in ſome copies, as alſo in the Syriack and old Latine, & Nonnus, theſe words, ὅπου ἦν ὁ τεθνηκὼς κείμενος, are left out.

42. And I knew that thou heareſt me alwaies: but becauſe of the people which ſtand by, I ſaid it, that [they may beleive that thou haſt ſent me.] 42. they hearing me acknowledge it to be done by thy power, in anſwer to my prayers, may by that be convinced that I came by commiſſion from thee.

43. And when he thus had ſpoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

44. And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with [grave-clothes,] and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Looſe him, and let him goe. 44. See note on ch. 19. f.

45. Then many of the Jewes, which came to Mary, and had ſeen the things which Jeſus did, beleived on him.

46. But ſome of them went their waies to the Phariſees, and told them what things Jeſus had done.

47. Then gathered the chief prieſts and the Phariſees a counceil, ſaying, [What doe we?] for this man doth many miracles. 47. It is not a ſeaſon for us to ſit ſtill and doe nothing, to permit this perſon to goe on without interruption.

48. If we let him thus alone, all men will beleive on him; and the [b] Romans ſhall come, and [take away both our place and nation.] 48. deſtroy both our Temple & Nation, our religion and government, and wholly enſlave us. b.

49. And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high prieſt that ſame year, ſaid unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50. Nor conſider that it is expedient for us, that one man ſhould die for the people, and that the whole nation periſh not.] 49,50. And Caiaphas put into the high prieſts office by the Procurator (ſee Lu. 3. b.) made a ſpeech, of which this was the ſumme, This is no time of conſulting or conſidering at large what is juſt to doe, in what way of juſtice to proceed with this man, We are to conſider what is our intereſt, and 'tis a Politick maxime that we may doe any thing (be it otherwiſe never ſo unlawfull) to keep the publick from deſtruction.

51. And this ſpake he not of himſelf, but being high prieſt that year, he prophecied that Jeſus ſhould die for that nation.] 51. This he ſpake in words that were a direct prophecie of what God had now deſigned ſhould come to paſſe, not that he meant it in that ſenſe, or thought at all of prophecying, but being in place of authority among the Jewes at that time, he was a fit perſon for God to make uſe of, as his miniſter, to foretell the purpoſe of God, that Chriſt ſhould die for the Jewes.

52. And not for that nation only, but that alſo he ſhould gather together in one the children of God that were ſcattered abroad.] 52. And not for the Jewes only, but that he might call all the Gentiles into the ſame fold, the ſame Church, all the ſervants of God, all that would receive the faith all the world over.

53. Then from that day forth they took counſell together for to put him to death.] 53. From that time they entred into a conſultation, which they gave not over, till they had contrived it to have him put to death.

54. Jeſus therefore walked no more openly among the Jewes,] but went thence into a countrey neer to the wilderneſſe, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his diſciples. 54. Hereupon Jeſus did not publickly (ſee note on ch.7. a.) doe any thing among the people of Judæa.

55. That they might be cleanſed from legall impurity, from which till they were cleanſed, they could not celebrate the Paſſeover, and that all that were under any vow of Nazaritiſme might timely perform it, ſee note on Act. 21. 23.

55. And the Jewes Paſſeover was nigh at hand, and many went out of the countrey up to Jeruſalem before the Paſſeover [to purifie themſelves.]

56. This being that feaſt unto which every one was to come to Jeruſalem, and no excuſe being ſufficient for not coming, but that of invincible neceſſity, what can be conceived the reaſon why he cometh not up?

56. Then ſought they for Jeſus, and ſpake among themſelves as they ſtood in the Temple, [What think ye, that * he will not come to the feaſt?]

* he comes not, Gr. is not.

57. Now both the chief prieſts and the Phariſees had given a commandement, that if any man knew where he were, he ſhould ſhew it, that they might take him.

Notes on Chap. XI.

a. Ταραχθῆναι

Ταραχὴ is to be troubled with any paſſion, but in this Goſpel peculiarly with grief, So ch. 12. 27. Now is my ſoule troubled, πεταρακται) in reſpect of death approaching, ſo ch. 13. 21. Jeſus having ſaid this ἐταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι, was troubled in ſpirit, to think of his being delivered up by Judas. So in his exhortation to the diſciples, when he tells them of his death ch. 14. 1. μὴ ταρασσέσθω, &c. Let not your heart be troubled, and ver. 27. 'tis ſet diſtinct from fear the other paſſion, Let not your heart be troubled nor cowardly, ſo here 'tis joyned with groaning in ſpirit as expreſſions of inward grief, as the tears that follow v. 35. are outward evidences of it, As for the form of ſpeech in the Greek ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν he troubled himſelf, that is but an idiome of the Hebrews, who oft uſe the reciprocal voice hithpael for a paſſive.

b. Ῥωμαῖοι ἐλεύσονται

The Jewes in Councel, ſeeing the miracles which Jeſus did, this eſpecially of raiſing Lazarus, did much fear that profeſſing himſelf to be the Meſſias he would ſoon attempt to make himſelf King, and by the admiration which he had gotten among the people, be quickly aſſiſted to it, if he were not timely hindred. If this were done, the conſequent ſeemed viſible to them, that the Romans, to whom they were ſubject, muſt look upon this as a Rebellion, and be by that temptation provoked to come with an army, and deſtroy them utterly. That this was their fear it it evident by their many groundleſſe objections made afterwards againſt him, that he forbad to give tribute to Caeſar, that he made himſelf a King, and ſo oppoſed himſelf againſt Caeſar; not that they deſired the continuance of Caeſars power over them, but that their fear of a yet farther conqueſt from the Romans made them unwilling to provoke them, And this the rather, becauſe of a tradition among them, that a little before the end of the world, there ſhould come one to deſtroy them, called אדמרלום, (which is by an eaſie change, Romulus.) This ſeems to be but the depravation of ſome prophecie from God, which foretold the coming of the Romans in the laſt daies, meaning the daies of Meſſias, to deſtroy them, and demonſtrates their expecting and beleiving, that the Romans were the people from whence the change of their religion, and overrunning their nation ſhould come. And therefore when they ſee the doctrine of Chriſt thrive ſo well, gather ſo many proſelytes, and that the miracles which he did were ſo great as might well ſet him up for a King, or Meſſias (which they through their unbeleif would not acknowledge him to be truly) it follows that they preſently apprehend the Romans coming in (the אדמרלום now mentioned) to deſtroy their religion, ſignified by the word place, and carry them out of their countrey (i.e. deſtroy their nation) or elſe wholly to change their lawes, rule them as conquer'd people. But in this, poor men, they were ſadly miſtaken, the prophecie of the Romans coming in to conquer them and deſtroy their Temple (which I ſuppoſe was ſcatter'd among them, and became the occaſion of their miſtake in expecting אדמרלום to deſtroy them) being thus perfectly fulfilled on them, not by their letting Chriſt alone, or beleiving on him, but by the contrary, by this their reſiſting, and bandying againſt (and at laſt crucifying) him; (ſee note on Mat. 24. m.)

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XII.

1. THen Jeſus, ſix daies before the Paſſeover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was, which had been dead, whom he raiſed from the dead.

2. There they made him a ſupper, and Martha ſerved, but Lazarus was one of them that * ſate at the table with him.

* lay at meat, Gr. ſate at table.

3. Then Mary took a pound of ointment of ſpikenard, very coſtly,] and anointed the feet of Jeſus, and wiped his feet with her haire, and the houſe was filled with the odour of the ointment.

3. Then Mary the ſiſter of Lazarus, not Mary Magdalen (ſee note on Lu. 7. a.) took a pound of the richeſt nard, a very coſtly ointment, (ſee Mar. 14. a.)

4. Then ſaith one of his diſciples, Judas Iſcarioth, Simon's ſon, [which ſhould betray him,]

4. who was the perſon that ſoon after this agreed to deliver him into the hands and power of the Jewes.

5. Why was not this ointment ſold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?

6. This he ſaid, not that he cared for the poor, but [becauſe he was a thief and had the † bagge, and bare what was put therein.]

† purſe. Γλωσσόκομον

6. becauſe he having the office of receiving all that was brought or preſented to Chriſt, and being a covetous perſon, who purloined much to his own uſes, conceived himſelf to be a loſer by what was thus beſtow'd on Chriſt.

7. Then

7. Then ſaid Jeſus, Let her alone, [* againſt the day of my burying hath ſhe kept this.]

7. ſhe hath performed this as a ſit ceremony to ſolemnize my approaching death, after which men uſe to be embalmed with perfumes and ſpices, &c.

* ſhe hath obſerved this for the day of my embalming. εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τοῦ ἐνταφιασμοῦ μου τετήρηκεν αὐτό.

8. For the poor alwaies ye have with you, but me ye have not alwaies.]

8. And therefore this was a very ſeaſonable charity in her, ye will have opportunities enough to ſhew your charity to the poor, but this was the laſt opportunity ſhe could have had of expreſſing it to me, who am ſuddenly to be gone from you.

9. Much people of the Jewes therefore knew that he was there; and they came, not for Jeſus ſake only, but that they might ſee Lazarus alſo, whom he had raiſed from the dead.

10. But the chief prieſts conſulted that they might put Lazarus alſo to death.]

10. And ſeeing of Lazarus was apprehended by the Sanhedrim to be ſo dangerous a means to bring men to beleive on Chriſt, that upon conſultation it was thought fit to put Lazarus to death.

11. Becauſe that [by reaſon of him, many of the Jewes went away,] and beleived on Jeſus.

11. many Jews forſook the Judaicall way of oppoſition againſt Chriſt, upon ſeeing that miracle of his in raiſing Lazarus,

12. On the next day much people that were come to the feaſt, when they heard that Jeſus was coming to Jeruſalem,

13. Took branches of palme trees and went forth to meet him, and cried, Hoſanna, † bleſſed is the King of Iſrael that cometh in the name of the Lord.

13. Took palme branches (ſee note on Mat. 21. 2.) and ſolemnized his entrance into the city with the ceremonies of a Kings inauguration, acknowledging him to be the Meſſias (ſee Mat. 11, 2.) and uſing the words of Pſal. 118. 29. and ſtyling him King of Iſrael.

† Bleſſed in the name of the Lord be he that cometh, the King of Iſrael. Εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου, ὁ Βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραήλ.

14. And Jeſus when he had found a young aſſe, ſate thereon, as it is written,]

14. At the ſame time alſo the diſciples of Jeſus fetching a young aſſe, and bringing it to him according to his appointment, he rode on it into Jeruſalem, And ſo that other prophecy of ſcripture, Zach. 9. 9. was fulfilled in him alſo,

15. Fear not, daughter of Sion, behold thy king cometh ſitting on an aſſes colt.]

15. Now, O Jeruſalem, there is matter of rejoicing to thee, for he that is now thy King, cometh in an equipage not of pomp and ſtate, but of humility, as one that is likely to be author of all good to thee.

16. Theſe things underſtood not his diſciples at the firſt, but when Jeſus was glorified, then remembred they that theſe things were written of him, and that they had done theſe things unto him.]

16. Theſe things at firſt his diſciples underſtood not to be a compleation of any ſuch propheciē, till the coming of the holy Ghoſt upon them, after Chriſts aſcenſion, then they conſidered and remembred that that was now done unto him, which had been ſo long agoe, ſo plainly propheciēd of him.

17. The people therefore that was with him, when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raiſed him from the dead, bare record.]

17. At this time before the peoples Hoſanna's, thoſe of the multitude that had been preſent at that mighty work of his, in raiſing Lazarus from the dead, freely made acknowledgment of it in Jeruſalem.

18. For this cauſe the people alſo met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.]

18. And that cauſed the peoples coming out to him v. 13. as to the Meſſias, whom alone they ſuppoſed able to doe ſuch a miracle, ver. 11.

19. The Phariſees therefore ſaid among themſelves, Perceive ye how ye prevaile nothing? Behold * the world is gone after him.]

19. Upon this the Phariſees ſaid one to another, We are ſo farre from having ſuppreſſed him by all our oppoſition made againſt him, that all men beleive on him in deſpight of us. And therefore ſome other ſuddain courſe muſt be taken with him.

* the whole world, for moſt antient copies read ὁ κόσμος.

20. And there were certain [a] Greeks among them that came up to worſhip at the feaſt.]

20. There were at this time ſome Gentile worſhippers, Proſelytes of the Gates, which being not permitted to celebrate the feaſts with the Jewes, were yet come up to pray in the outward court of the Temple. 2.

21. The ſame came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethſaida in Galilee, and deſired him ſaying, Sir, we would ſee Jeſus.]

21. Theſe living not farre from Bethſaida in Galilee, and ſo having ſome knowledge of Philip, who was of that city, came to him, and beſought him that he would help them to ſee Jeſus, and ſpeak with him.

22. Philip cometh and telleth Andrew, and again Andrew and Philip told Jeſus.]

22. Philip firſt conſulteth with Andrew, and both together mention it to Jeſus.

23. And Jeſus anſwered them, ſaying, The houre is come that the ſon of man † ſhould be glorified.]

23. Jeſus did not refuſe or reject theſe Gentiles from coming to him, but in generall words intimated that the preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles was now ſhortly at hand, And in order to that, Chriſt ſhould be rejected by the Jews, ſuffer, riſe, and aſcend to heaven, and then upon the Jewes obſtinate holding out, the Goſpel ſhould be preached to the Greeks, and all the reſt of the heathen world.

24. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.]

24. Aſſuredly my death, ſaith he, is a means of bringing more unto the faith, then my life could be, as it farres with corn put into the earth, which by that means dies, but ariſes with abundance of encreaſe.

25. He that loveth his life ſhall loſe it, and he that hateth his life in this world, ſhall keep it unto life eternall.]

25. And ſo in proportion it ſhall be with you, the venturing of your lives, and ſticking faſt to me is the thriftingſt ſureſt way of preſerving your ſelves.

26. If

26. If any man will be my diſciple, (ſee Lu. 8. 2) he muſt provide to ſuffer, as I ſhall. And if he thus keep cloſe to me, he ſhall fare as well as I doe, whatſoever he ſuffer here, be rewarded by my Father abundantly, (ſee note on 1 Tim. 5. b.)

26. If any man ſerve me, let him follow me, and where I am, there ſhall alſo my ſervant be, if any man ſerve me, him will my Father honour.]

27. I am not impaſſible or ſubject to no affection, ſuch as deſire of life, &c. but in all theſe, juſt as you are. The apprehenſion of that which is now approaching is a great perturbation to me, Which way ſhall I turn me? ſhall I pray to my Father to deliver me from the danger, to reſcue me from dying? But this was it, for which I came into the world, that I might ſuffer, And therefore I ſhall not abſolutely pray againſt that.

27. Now is my ſoule troubled, and what ſhall I ſay? Father, ſave me from this houre? but for this cauſe came I to this houre.]

b. 28. No, this ſhall be my prayer, that my Father will ſo diſpoſe of me, that I may doe whatſoever it is that may moſt tend to the glorifying of his name in me. Upon his ſaying thoſe words, there came a clap of thunder, and with it a voice from heaven audible, in theſe words, I have &c.

28. Father glorifie thy name. Then came there a [b] voice from heaven, ſaying, I have both glorified it, and will glorifie it again.]

29. And of the multitude there preſent ſome took notice of the thunder, with which that voice came, others of the voice it ſelf.

29. The people therefore that ſtood by and heard it, ſaid that it thundred. Others ſaid, An Angel ſpake to him.]

30, 31. Upon this Jeſus ſaid to them, This voice from heaven came not to anſwer or ſatisfie me, but to convince you, and bring you to the faith, or aſſure you that my death ſhall tend to the glory of God, and bringing down of ſinne and Satan, ch. 16. 11.

30. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, This voice came not becauſe of me, but for your ſakes.

31. Now is the judgment of this world, now ſhall the prince of this world be caſt out.]

32. And I by my being crucified (ſee note on Mat. 1. h.) will by that means bring a great part of the whole world to beleive on me, Gentiles as well as Jewes.

32. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.]

33. (This ſpeech Chriſt meant as an intimation not only that he ſhould be put to death, but alſo what kind of death this ſhould be, viz: crucifixion, which is an elevation, or lifting up to the croſſe, and an holding out the hands, as if it were to invite all to him, promiſing an hoſpitable reception, See Lu. 9. c.)

33. (This he ſaid, ſignifying, what death he ſhould die.)

34. To this diſcourſe about his death the people made an objection, that their Doctors had taught them out of ſcripture, Pſal. 110. (ſo the word Law ſignifies, ch. 10. 34. ſee note a.) and perhaps Iſa. 40. 8. that the Meſſias ſhall endure for ever, and never die, and therefore if it were true, what he ſaid, that the ſon of man muſt be put to death, they could not gueſſe what he meant by the ſon of man, ſure not the Meſſias.

34. The people anſwered him, We have heard out of the law, that † Chriſt abideth forever, and how ſayeſt thou, The ſon of man muſt be lift up? Who is this ſon of man?] * the Chriſt, ὁ Χριστὸς

35. To this he anſwered, I am not likely to ſtay long amongſt you, here on earth, make uſe of me, the light of the world, while I am with you, or elſe you are likely to be left in the dark, in a blind unhappy condition for ever; and doe not, upon your traditions, perſwade your ſelves, that I ſhall alway continue among you here, becauſe I am the Meſſias.

35. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you, walk while ye have the light, leſt darkneſſe † come upon you: for he that walketh in darkneſſe, knoweth not whither he goeth.] † ſurprize, καταλάβῃ

36. I ſhall continue with you but a while, and therefore be ſure ye make haſt to learn ſufficient for your whole lives to come, to get your directions complete, that you may live like Chriſtians. When Jeſus had ſaid this, he went away, and concealed himſelf from them (at Bethany probably) for a while.

36. While ye have the light, beleive in the light, that ye may be the children of light. Theſe things ſpake Jeſus, and departed, and did hide himſelf from them.]

37. All this did not effectually work on them, but though he had done all theſe miracles in their ſight, yet they did not beleive on him.

37. But though he had done ſo many miracles before them, yet they beleived not on him.]

38. And thereby the prophecy of Eſaias ch. 53. 1. was fulfilled, which was to this purpoſe, How few are there, that have been by all Chriſt's miracles convinced, that he is the Meſſias.

38. That the ſaying of Eſaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he ſpake, Lord, who hath beleived our report? and to whom hath the arme of the Lord been revealed?]

c. 39, 40. That other prophecie alſo had not been fulfilled, had they not thus disbeleived him, wherein the juſt judgment of God forſaking, and bringing the puniſhment of blindneſſe upon them, was pronounced by that prophet againſt the ſtubborn obdurate Jewes, who by this means are likely never to be converted or pardoned.

39. Therefore they [c] could not beleive, becauſe that Eſaias ſaid again,

40. He hath blinded their eyes, and hardned their heart, that * they ſhould not ſee with their eyes, nor underſtand with their heart, and be converted, that I ſhould heale them.] * they ſee not, and hear not,

41. Theſe things were ſpoken by that prophet in ſetting down a viſion of his, when Chriſt's being on the earth was revealed to him, ſee note on ch. 1. b.

41. Theſe things ſaid Eſaias, when he ſaw his glory and ſpake of him.]

42. Yet for all this, many of the rulers of the people, the members of the Sanhedrim, did beleive him to be the Meſſias, ſuch was Nicodemus ch. 3. 1. &c. But the ſect of the Phariſees was of ſuch authority and power in the Sanhedrim, and they were ſo violently bent againſt him, and all that

42. Nevertheleſſe among the chief rulers alſo many beleived on him, but becauſe of the Phariſees they did not confeſſe him, leſt they ſhould be put out of the ſynagogue.]

received him, that as Nicodemus ch. 7. 50. and 19. 39. durſt not come to him by day time, ſo the reſt durſt not make any publick acknowledgment of their beleiving on him, for fear they ſhould be reproachfully cenſured (ſee ch. 9. note b.) and being rulers, be turned out of their dignities in the Conſiſtory.

† glory of men, more then the glory of God, δόξαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων μᾶλλον ἤπερ τὴν δόξαν.

43. For they loved the † praiſe of men, more then the praiſe of God.] 43. For they valued their reputation with men, (eſpecially their places in the Sanhedrim) their reputation with the Phariſees, that they were good Patriots, conſtant to their old way, more then the teſtimony of, or reputation with God himſelf, ſee ch. 5. 41.

44. Jeſus cried and ſaid, He that beleiveth on me, beleiveth not on me, but on him that ſent me.] 44. The beleiving on me is nothing elſe but the beleiving on my Father, whoſe commiſſion I have, and whoſe doctrine I teach.

45. And he that ſeeth me, ſeeth him that ſent me.] 45. And he that ſeeth my miracles, in them ſeeth my Fathers power, the works of miracles which I doe, being wrought by my Father.

46. I am come a light into the world, that whoſoever beleiveth on me ſhould not abide in darkneſſe.] 46. I am ſent by my Father to enlighten the world, to lead them, that will receive my doctrine, into all that is neceſſary for them to know for the ordering of their lives, ſo as will be acceptable to God my Father.

47. And if any man hear my words, and ‖ beleive not, I d judge him not, for I came not to judge the world, but to ſave the world.] 47. They that hear my preaching, and reject it, I doe not mean to accuſe them to my Father to make any complaint againſt them, 'Twas not the deſigne of my coming, to accuſe any man, and ſo to bring any judgment on any, 'tis more agreeable to my deſigne to reſcue all out of their ſinnes and punishement due to them for ſinne. d:

48. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have ſpoken, the ſame ſhall judge him at the laſt day.] 48. That which will accuſe, and condemn ſuch an one, is, that what I teach and he deſpiſeth, is the thing, that my Father ſent me to preach, and that on purpoſe to bring them to eternall bliſſe, that receive and obey it. And the deſpiſing of that which was meant for his ſo great good, and came back't with authority and commiſſion from God the Father, is an accuſation, which will be heavily charged on him at the day of judgment.

49. For I have not ſpoken of my ſelf, but the Father which ſent me, [he gave me a commandment what I ſhould ſay, and what I ſhould ſpeak.] 49. Every word, or part of doctrine taught by me, is by expreſſe commiſſion of him.

50. And I know that his commandment is life everlaſting:] Whatſoever I ſpeak therefore, even as the Father hath ſaid unto me, ſo I ſpeak. 50. And of this I am ſure that obedience to his precepts, as they are now preached by me, is the only way to bring men to eternall life.

Notes on Chap. XII.

a. Ἕλληνες

The Gracians here are ſuppoſed to be proſelytes of the gates, who yet were not permitted among the Jewes to celebrate the feaſt with them, but onely either to behold their ſolemnities, or holy feſtivities and πανηγύρεις, or, as it is here peculiarly ſaid, ἵνα προσκυνήσωσιν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, that they might worſhip at that time of publick worſhip, which in atrio Gentilium, in the court of the Gentiles, they were permitted to doe, as appears by the Eunuch, Act. 8. 27. ὃς ἐληλύθει προσκυνήσων εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ, who came to worſhip at Jeruſalem, where that Temple was, which is ſtyled the houſe of prayer to all people, ſo the pious men, i.e. proſelytes, Act. 2. 5. which came up to Jeruſalem at the feaſt of Pentecoſt.

Προσκυνῆσαι ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ

b. Φωνὴ

The voice] here was an articulate ſound in the midſt of thunder. Φωνὴ and βροντὴ voice and thunder are all one among theſe writers, the Hebrew קולות voices ordinarily ſignifying thunder. Thus [bath col] the daughter of voice (the only way of oracle or revelation of Gods will among the Jewes after the Babyloniſh captivity) is among them, the will of God revealed in thunder from heaven, Ex. 19. 16, 19. Hence it is that in this place ver. 29. the by-ſtanders ſay, It thunders,] and others that an Angel ſpake, both together ſaying the truth, that there was a thunder joyned with a voice from heaven, which is the daughter of thunder. This is the meaning of βρονταὶ καὶ φωναὶ, thunders and voices, Apoc. 4. 5. and 8. 5. ſo Mat. 3. 17. φωνὴ λέγουσα a voice ſaying] is the thunder uttering ſuch a voice, and ſo ch. 17. 5. Lu. 9. 35. And by this will be explained a ſeeming difference in the Acts in the ſtory of Saul's converſion of hearing, and not hearing the voice, which ſhall be referred to that place, note on Act. 9. b.

Βρονταὶ ἢ φωναὶ

Φωνὴ λέγουσα

The ἐξ οὐρανοῦ] here may be rendred, by analogie with the ſame phraſe, uſed ch. 5. 19. ſo, as to ὁ υἱὸς signifie not any impotence in them, but that, as 'tis ſaid v. 39. they beleived not. So doth the Hebrew phraſe ſignifie, Gen. 19. 22. and ſo ſaith Iſidorus Peluſiota of that Joh. 5. 19. expounding τὸ δύναται by ἐνδέχεται, he cannot, i.e. he doth not. So the phraſe is uſed Mar. 6. 5. Lu. 16. 2. and ſo the context here imports, being no more then this, that this unbeleif of theirs was foretold by the prophets, which indeed was an argument to prove, what the effect would be, through their own contumacious wills, but no way a cauſe of their unbeleif, or that which laid an impoſſibility of beleiving on them. c. οὐκ ἠδύναντο

Δύναται

The word κρίνῃ judging here, ſeemeth to be taken in the ſenſe of accuſing, as a plaintiff, or witneſſe accuſeth, and not of condemning, which is the office of a Judge. For firſt it is here v. 48. ſpoken of the word or Goſpel of Chriſt, which had been preacht unto them, and not of Chriſt himſelf in that place. 2dly 'tis affirmed of Chriſt ch. 5. 22. that all judgment is committed to the ſon, and that he hath authority to execute judgment, and that his judgment is juſt &c. And therefore though it may be ſaid that that judgment of his belongs in thoſe places to the judgment, to which his reſurrection inſtates him, and the place here belongs to his condition here in this world, and ſo that that affirmative, and this negative are reconcileable, yet becauſe the judging v. 48. is alſo ſaid to be at the laſt d. Κρίνω day, it will be fit to assign such a notion of judging in both these verses. as that the saying [he judgeth not,] may be reconcileable with those other places, where judgment is committed to the Son, and that will be by interpreting the judging here, of accusing. And thus it will be agreeable with *Joh.*5.45. doe not think that I will accuse you to the Father; There is one that accuseth you, Moses,] whose writings producible against them, are there said to accuse them, as here Christs words are said to doe. Thus Lu.6.37. Judge not, and ye shall not be judged, is set as distinct, from Condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned, and set preparative to it, as accusing regularly is to giving of sentence in any judicature.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. XIII.

1. Now on the evening or first part of the Paschal day (see note on Mar. 14. c.) Christ knowing that he should not live till then, and consequently that what he had to say or doe to his Disciples before his departure, would most fitly be done presently, he thus expresses the constancy of his love, and kindnesse to them, a. 1. NOW before the feast of the Passeover, when Jesus knew that his houre was come, that he should [a] depart out of this world unto the Father, having [loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.] many houres before the time of dressing and eating the Lamb, which was the Paschal feast,

2. When he was at supper, or, In supper time, (see v. 12.)

2. And supper * being ended (the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to † betray him.) (Judas having taken up that diabolicall resolution of delivering up Christ to the Jewes.)

* being come, or in supper time, δείπνου γενομένου.

3,4,5. Jesus knowing sufficiently the dignity of his person, that he was the eternall son of God, that came from God, and was now neer his time of returning to God again, and of taking possession of all power in heaven and earth, yet thus farre humbled himself, He riseth from supper, and after the manner of a waiter, puts off his upper garment, and girt his other under garment to him, (see Lu.12. b.) and poured out water out of the water-pots or cisterns, (ch.2. b.) into a lesser vessel, usuall for washing, And then he set himself in all humility, as a servant of the meanest quality, to wash the feet of his own disciples, and then wipes them with the linen cloth about him.

3. Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he * was come from God, and went to God,

4. He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments, and took a towell and girded himself,

5. After that he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples feet, and to wipe them with the † towell, wherewith he was girded.]

* came forth from God, and departeth to, ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθε, καὶ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὑπάγει.

6. dost thou purpose to

6. Then cometh he to Simon Peter, and Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, [dost thou] wash my feet?

7. Thou dost not yet understand what this action of mine meaneth, but hereafter, when thou shalt discharge the office of Apostle in the Church, and consider wherein that dignity especially consists, viz: in serving those who are placed under thee, and in washing from them the sinnes and sullages of their earthly affections, which still are apt to remain, after they are Christians, and must be daily washt off by the work of thy ministery, then thou wilt consider and discern, to what this action of mine emblematically tends.

7. Jesus answered and said unto him, [What I doe thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.]

8. But Peter would by no means let him wash his feet. Jesus therefore saith to him, That which is meant by my washing thy feet, is so necessary to thee, viz: the purifying thy affections, that without it, thou canst receive no benefit from me.

8. Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in me.]

9. Upon that saying of Christ he replies,

9. Simon Peter saith unto him,] Lord not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

b 10,11. He that is washed all over already, needs no more washing, save only for his feet, which by the daily treading, i. e. conversing on this earth, will be apt continually to gather sullage, which will need continuall cleansing, And in like manner 'tis now among my disciples, The body of them is clean, but yet the feet are foule, viz: one base unworthy person among them, meaning Judas, the person that had now undertaken to deliver him up.

10. Jesus saith to him, [He that * is [b] washed, needeth not, save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit; and ye are clean, but not all.

11. For he knew who should betray him, Therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.]

* hath been washed, hath no need but that his feet be washed, but is all clean, ὁ λελουμένος οὐκ χρείαν ἔχει εἰ μὴ τοὺς πόδας νίψασθαι, ἀλλ' ἔστι καθαρὸς ὅλος.

12. So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his † garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?

13. Ye call me Master and Lord, and ye say well, for so I am.

14. to minister and serve, and doe all offices of charity to one another, and to all that shall be under you, as you are under me, i.e. to all beleivers in the Church, and labour to cleanse them from all their sullages, see v.7.

14. If I then your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought [to wash one anothers feet.]

† own garments, and was lain down, ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, ἀνέπεσεν

15. For what I have now done, is on purpose to shew you, how you ought to behave your selves in that authority in the Church wherein ye shall succeed me.

15. For I have given you an example, that ye should doe as I have done unto you.]

16. nor you my Apostles, that I mean to settle Governours of the Church, greater then I, from whom you have your commission, and by whom you are constituted.

16. Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater then his Lord, [neither * he that is sent, greater then he that sent him.]

* the Apostle greater, ὁ ἀπόστολος μείζων

17. And woe be to you if you doe not practise after this example.

17. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye doe them.]

18. I

18. I ſpeak not of you all, I know whom I have choſen, but that the ſcripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me, hath lift up his heel againſt me.]

18. But I expect not this obedience from you all, I know;

I have choſe twelve Apoſtles, and the ſcripture is fulfilled of one of them, that though he be ſo neer to me, as to be entertained daily at my table with me, yet he will doe me all the miſchief he can.

19. Now I tell you before it come, that when it is come to paſſe, ye may beleive that I am he.]

19. This I tell you now (ſee note on Mat. 23. k.) by way of prediction, that when my ſuffering comes, and may be apt to make you waver in your beleif of me, your knowing that I foretold you it, may aſſure you that I know things to come, and the ſecret purpoſes of mens hearts before they ſhew themſelves in act, and from thence conclude that I am the ſearcher of all hearts, and withall that I am the Meſſias, to whom thoſe prophecies belong.

20. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that receiveth whomſoever I ſend, receiveth me, and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me.]

20. As for the offices of duty and task and humility which I aſſigne you v. 14. and now exemplifie them to you in my ſelf, you ſhall not want the comfort and reward of them; For you ſhall be conſidered by me (and ſo ſhall the reception and entertainment that men ſhall give to you) as I my ſelf am by my Father.

21. When Jeſus had thus ſaid, he was troubled in ſpirit, and teſtified and ſaid, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, that one of you ſhall betray me.]

21. At this time, as he ſpake theſe words Jeſus was much troubled, not only in apprehenſion of the approaching danger, but eſpecially he was grieved to think of it, that any diſciple of his ſhould be ſo wicked and ſo unhappy, and told them openly and plainly that one of the twelve ſhould be hired and undertake to deliver him up to the Jewes to be put to death by them.

22. Then the diſciples looked one on another, [doubting of whom he ſpake.]

22. much perplexed to think that one of them ſhould be guilty of ſuch a villany, and not being able to gueſſe who it ſhould be.

* lying in Jeſus boſome ἀναπεσὼν

23. Now there was * leaning on Jeſus boſome, one of his diſciples whom Jeſus loved.]

23. And John, to whom Chriſt was very kind, the writer of this Goſpel, was placed next to him at the ſupper.

24. Simon Peter therefore beckned to him, that he ſhould ask who it ſhould be of whom he ſpake.

26. He it is to whom I ſhall give the next piece of bread, which I ſhall take out of the diſh, or platter, and having given him that mark to know him by, he preſently puts his hand into the diſh, and takes out a piece of bread, and gives it to Judas Iſcariot. c.

27. And after the † ſop Satan entred into him. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, That thou doeſt doe quickly.]

27. And upon his receiving that piece of bread, (together with Chriſts telling him diſtinctly of it, and of the horribleneſſe of the ſin and danger, Mar. 14. 21.) and his not yet relenting, the devil entred into him more forcibly then before, v. 2. and Lu. 22. 3. hurrying him to a ſpeedy execution of his deſignes, (ſee the paraphraſe on Lu. 22. 3, 4.) which Jeſus knowing, ſaid to him accordingly, What thou doſt, doe quickly, intimating that he was now haſtning to doe it.

30. He then having received the † ſop, went immediately out, and it was night:

31. Therefore when he was gone out, Jeſus ſaid, [Now is the ſon of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.]

31. Now is the time come for Chriſt to ſuffer, and riſe and return back to heaven, by which means God ſhall receive glory in him, and conſequently ſhall glorifie him immediately.

32. If God be glorified in him, God ſhall alſo [glorifie him in himſelf, and ſhall ſtraightway glorifie him.]

32. Raiſe him from the dead, and exalt him to more power and dignity by reaſon of this his humiliation, And this ſhall be done preſently.

33. Little children, yet a little while I am with you, Ye ſhall ſeek me, and, as I ſaid unto the Jewes, Whither I goe ye cannot come, ſo now I ſay to you.]

33. My beloved friends whom I look on as children ſuddenly to be deprived of their parent, I am now within a very little time to part from you.

34. A new commandement I give unto you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you, that ye alſo love one another.]

34. And being now to take my laſt leave, I give you this ſpeciall new command that from the manner and degree of my love to you expreſt in venturing, nay loſing my life for you, ye alſo learn and practiſe the ſame degree of loving one another, i. e. that all Chriſtians abound one toward another in all charity, and venture their lives for the good of others, eſpecially for the propagating the Goſpel, doing good to the ſouls of other men.

35. By this ſhall all men know that ye are my diſciples, if ye have love one to another.]

35. This is the badge by which I deſire you ſhould be known from all other men of other profeſſions, and religions, your living together in the ſtricteſt bands of love.

36. Simon Peter ſaid unto him, Lord, whither goeſt thou? Jeſus anſwered him, Whither I goe thou canſt not follow me now; but thou ſhalt follow me afterwards.]

36. Peter not yet knowing what he meane ver. 33. asketh him him whither he meant to goe that they ſhould not be able to follow him: Jeſus anſwers him, that though he could not yet, he ſhould ere long follow him, that the very death which Chriſt ſhould now ſuffer, ſhould be his lot hereafter.

37. venture, hazard. 37. Peter ſaid unto him, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? I will [lay down my] life for thy ſake.

38. As valiantly and reſolutely as now thou promiſeſt me, * ſhalt have denyed

38. Jeſus anſwered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my ſake? [Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, the cock ſhall not crow, till thou * haſt denied me thrice.]

this I foreſee of thee, that before the morning watch (or ſecond cockcrowing, ſee note on Mar. 13. a.) i.e. before three of the clock in the morning, thou wilt deny me three ſeverall times.

Notes on Chap. XIII.

a. Μεγάλῃ

This word μεγάλῃ paſſe] referres to the Paſſe-over mention'd in the beginning of the verſe, to ſignifie that that legal Paſſeover, or, the occaſion of it, God's paſſing over the houſe of Iſrael, and the Iſraelites paſſing or going out of Ægypt, did note the paſſing of Chriſt out of this world, (where he was a ſervant) into the land of liberty, i. e. heaven, See note on Lu.9.b.

b. Λούειν Νίπτειν

The Hebrewes had their βαπτισμὸς, or λόυσις, and their νίψεις, the former, waſhing of the whole body, which they call טבילה, the other, of the hands or feet, which they call קדוש, ſanctifying. So in Joma c. 3. §. 3. חמש טבילות ועשרה קדושין וטובל כהן גדול ביום הכפורים, the high prieſt on the day of expiation waſhes five waſhings, and ten ſanctifications, i.e. waſhes his whole body five times, at every changing of his veſtments once, and his hands and feet ten times, i. e. at every waſhing of his whole body twice. The former were uſed by the Prieſt (after the building of the Temple) before the entring into the Temple, (no man, ſaith Joma c.3. §. 3. enters into the court of the Temple to miniſter, though he be clean, i. e. though he be not under any legal pollution, untill he have waſhed all over) and ſo alſo by the Proſelytes at their initiation. See note on *Mat.*3. a. the latter was of every daies uſe: And to theſe our Saviour ſeems here to ὁ λελουμένος

referre, and by the ὁ λελουμένος] he means him that hath been totally waſht, i.e. that hath been initiated, and entred into Chriſt, hath undertaken his diſcipleſhip, and ſo renounced ſincerely all the profaneneſſe of his former life; and he that had done ſo, is ſaid to be καθαρὸς ὅλος

ſo, in the words following, whole clean, and he hath no need to be ſo waſhed again, i. e. all over. For that ceremony of initiation was never repeated, ſay the Jewiſh writers. All that is needfull to him is the νίψις or rinſing of the hands and feet, the daily miniſtery of the word and grace of Chriſt (thereby ſignified) to cleanſe and waſh off, and purifie (more and more daily) the frailties and imperfections, and lapſes of our weak nature, thoſe feet of the ſoule, τὰ ζητικὰ διαβήματα, ſaith Eulogius, even after he is converted.

c. ψωμίον

What ψωμίον ſignifies, is clear by Heſychius, ψωμίον (ψωδίον is a falſe print) τὸ ὑποκάτω τοῦ ἄρτου, the lower ſide of the bread, and ψωμία (not ψωδία again) τὰ τοῦ ἄρτου ἀποθραύσματα, broken pieces of the loaf, cruſts of bread. Such was it, that was wont to be given about to each of the gueſts in the poſtcœnium (the breaking of bread after ſupper) among the Jewes, to ſignifie that charity that ſhould be among them, and ſo the cup of grace, or charity alſo, μετὰ τὸ δειπνῆσαι after ſupper, ſaith S. Luke, ch.22. 20. And ſuch was this here, that Chriſt on purpoſe did to expreſſe his love to his diſciples now at parting with them, ver. 1. and to engage them to the like among one another. That this was the poſtcœnium there can be no doubt, if δειπνήσαντος] ver. 2. be rendred [ſupper being ended,] for then there could be nothing after that, but the poſtcœnium. But although δειπνήσαντος] being the Aoriſt: Med: importeth no more, but [it being come] or when ſupper was come, in ſupper time] yet 'tis apparent that after this he roſe from ſupper, to waſh their feet, and accordingly 'tis ſaid expreſly v. 12. ἀναπεσὼν πάλιν lying down again, which ſignifies that he was before layn down to meat, And therefore in reaſon this waſhing their feet, coming between the ſupper, and the poſtcœnium, that which here followes the waſhing, and his ſecond lying down, is the poſtcœnium, wherein, as it is evident by the other Evangeliſts, he inſtituted the Lords ſupper. See Mat. 26. 26. where it is the laſt thing, that is done, but the ſinging of the hymn, before their going to the mount of Olives ver. 30. and ſo Mar. 14. 28. And Luke ſaith expreſly, ch. 22. 20. that he took the cup after ſupper. Which being ſuppoſed, and the mention being here expreſſe of Chriſts giving the ψωμίον, or cruſt to Judas, As it is neceſſarily conſequent, that Judas was preſent at the Inſtitution of the ſacrament, and not only at the firſt part of the ſupper, which that concluded, ſo it is not probable, that the cruſt now mention'd to be given him, ſhould be dipt or moyſten'd in the juice of the herbs, as it might be thought, if it had been at the former part of the ſupper. For the cuſtome of giving about bread in the poſtcœnium, was, ſurely, to give a cruſt of drie bread, broken off from the loaf, or a loaf cut in a diſh, to that purpoſe, to give every one a piece, And the cup of wine following it, there was no uſe, or occaſion of moyſtening it; and beſides, the firſt courſe, and the diſhes of that ſervice were in all reaſon taken away, to give place to this concluding courſe, As we know it is, where ever the cuſtome of the Grace-cup is ſtill retained, And if ſo, there was then no moyſt thing on the table but the wine to dip, or wet it in, and that being in a cup, or pot, and not in a diſh (which is mention'd in Matthew and Mark at his pointing at the traditor,) there is no preſence of beleiving, that the bread was dipt in that. Upon theſe grounds it ſeems not unreaſonable to interpoſe a conjecture, that the word βάψας, βάψαι or ἐμβάψας may here be miſtaken, and miſapplied ἐμβάψαι to ψωμίον, the piece of bread (which from thence is uſually rendred a ſop, ſuppoſing it to be ψωμίδιον, dipt in wet, and ſo moyſten'd) when it may ſignifie no more then his putting, or dipping his hand into the diſh. For the putting ones hand into any hollow veſſel,] which is made hollow, that it may contain liquids in it, may fitly be thus expreſt, although there there be not any liquid thing in it at that time. So ἐμβάπτειν χεῖρα, to dip, or put in the hand Mat. 26.23. ſignifies to take meat, and eat bread (Pſal. 41.9. and here v.18.) without any notion of wetting it, and ſo ἐμβάπτειν, Mar. 14. 20. which may as well conclude that Judas was made wet in the diſh there, as that the bread was ſopt here. It is ordinary for words to loſe their native ſignifications, and to be uſed in a greater latitude, then originally belongs to them, and ſo we know βαπτίζειν, to be dipt, or waſht, is uſed not only of water, but of the holy Ghoſt, and fire. And then, why may not the words be thus rendred, ᾧ ἐγὼ βάψας τὸ ψωμὸν δώσω, to whom having dipt, I ſhall give the piece of bread, by dipping, meaning [putting the hand into the diſh] and then ἐμβάψας τὸ ψωμὸν δίδωσιν, having dipt, i.e. put in his hand, he gives the cruſt or piece of bread to Judas, telling John at the ſame time, that he, that he ſhould next give it to, was he that ſhould deliver him up.

4. And whither I goe ye know, and the way ye know.] 4. I ſuppoſe you know the place to which I goe, and the way which will bring you thither alſo.

5. Thomas ſaith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goeſt; and how can we know the way?

6. Jeſus ſaith unto him, [I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me.] 6. I am the true and living way, ſent by my Father to direct all men to that way, wherein he expects and requires to be ſerved, and there is no other way to come to the knowledge of his will, or the enjoyment of life with him, but by me, and the ſame way that I goe before you.

7. If ye had known me, ye ſhould have known my Father alſo, and from henceforth ye know him, and have ſeen him.] 7. If you had throughly known me, who come only in my Fathers name, and to reveale his will to you, ye had alſo known my Father, who being inviſible is no otherwaies to be known, but as he is revealed in me, and now (ſee Mat. 23. note k.) although ye never ſaw my Father, yet having ſeen and known me, who am his image, ye have both ſeen and known him.

9. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Have I been ſo long time with you, and yet haſt thou not known me, [Philip? He that hath ſeen me, hath ſeen the Father, and how ſayeſt thou then, Shew us the Father?] 9. I tell thee again, Philip, I am the image of my Father, and ſo he that hath ſeen me, and heard my doctrine, hath ſeen my Father, and knowes his will alſo. And after this, this of thine, is an impertinent unneceſſary demand.

Let me ask you, doe you not beleive cõfidently, that whatſoever I doe or teach I doe by the Fathers appointment, and that it is the power of him that acts in me? whatſoever I ſay or doe, doctrine, or miracles, is of him; ſee note c.

Thoſe that have now been my diſciples ſhall be able to doe the ſame miracles that I doe, Mar. 16.17. nay greater, upon my ſending down the holy Ghoſt upon you, ſhall ſpeak with tongues &c.

13. And whatſoever ye ſhall ask in my name, that will I doe, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.] 13. And whatever miracle you ſhall in my name pray for power to doe, that I will enable you to doe, and ſo by the ſhewing forth my power in you after my departure, glorifie him who hath ſent me.

14. If ye ſhall ask any thing in my name, I will doe it.] 14. And of this be confident, whatſoever miracle you pray for power to doe, and pray for it in my name, grounding your requeſts on this promiſe of mine unto you, and doing it in order to my ſervice for the propagating of the Goſpel, it ſhall be granted you.

15. If ye * love me, keep my commandements.] 15. Doe but ye expreſſe the ſincerity of your love to me by obedience to my precepts.

b. 16. And I will ask my Father, and when I am gone he ſhall ſend you the holy Ghoſt, who for the ſeveral parts of his office 1. to intercede as an advocate, 2. to exhort, 3. to comfort, is beſt expreſt by the word [Paraclete,] which in Greek ſignifies all theſe three, and he, when he cometh, ſhall abide with you forever, not departing, as I now doe, but continuing with you as long as you adhere and continue obedient to my precepts, v. 15.

16. And I will pray the Father, and he ſhall give you another * Comforter, that he may abide with you forever.] * Paraclete

17. Even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him, † for he dwelleth with you, and ſhall be in you.] 17. This Paraclete is the Spirit of my Father, that ſhall lead you into all truth, Him carnall and worldly men (that value nothing but the viſible pomps and powers of the world, they that have looked for a temporall glorious Meſſias,) ſhall make nothing of, becauſe he is farre from any part of that, he is not ſo much as viſible to outward eyes, but only by inward effects, and ſo neither known nor valued by them. But by you, I ſuppoſe, and all true diſciples of mine he is highly valued, therefore (ſee note on Lu. 7. d.) he ſhall abide with (not only come to) you, he ſhall forever continue among you, v. 16.

18. I will not leave you * comfortleſſe, I will come to you.] 18. Ye are my little children ch. 13. 33. and therefore when I leave you, I will have more care of you, then to leave you deſtitute, I will haſten to come unto you, as to ſo many young children deprived of their parent, though I am ſlain, and ſo depart from you, yet I will riſe again, and give you the comfort of ſeeing me after my reſurrection, ſee v. 28.

19. Yet a little while and the world ſeeth me no more, but ye ſee me: † becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo.] 19. After a little ſpace I ſhall be taken from this earth, where now I move, and ſo taken, that the impenitent unbeleiving Jewes ſhall never ſee more of my miracles, which have hitherto been ſo uneffectuall among them, never ſee me again, (ſo as to take comfort or reap benefit by ſeeing me) but it is not my death it ſelf that ſhall ſeparate me from you, I ſhall riſe from death, and appeare to you after my reſurrection, and from thence aſcend to heaven there to live eternally; and as that ſhall be matter of great rejoicing to you (ſee note on 1 Theſſ. 3. a.) like the joy of one that hath a friend returned to life again, or like the womans joy after child-birth ch. 16. 21, 22. a wonderfull reviving after your ſorrow for my departure, ſo ſhall it be attended with all vitall advantages to you, juſtification Rom. 5. 10. and eternall life hereafter.

c. 20. At that day ye ſhall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me c, and I in you.] 20. And when I ſhall after my death thus appear unto you, and make good what I now promiſe, then ſhall ye be convinced (more perfectly then yet ye have been) 1. that I have taught nothing but what is the will of my Father, 2. that by your keeping cloſe to that faith which I have taught you, my power and commiſſion which I have received from my Father, ſhall be communicated to you, Lu. 22. 28.

21. He that hath my commandements, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me, ſhall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifeſt my ſelf to him.] 21. And this I ſay to all obedient ſervants of mine, whoſoever they are, not only to you Apoſtles; Every faithfull lover of me v. 15. ſhall be loved of my Father, and from me receive that evidence of my love, I will effectually make my ſelf known to him after my reſurrection, either by appearing to him my ſelf, or by the teſtimony of thoſe, to whom I will appear.

22. Judas ſaith unto him, (not Iſcariot,) Lord, * how is it, that thou wilt manifeſt thy ſelf unto us, and not unto the world?] 22. Upon this Judas, one of his diſciples, ſtill looking after a preſent ſhewing himſelf as a temporall Meſſias, asked him (ſee c. 7. 4.) what was the reaſon that he would not manifeſt himſelf to the world, as well as to them?

* what is the matter, τί γέγονεν

23. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, If any man love me, he will * keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.] 23. Jeſus anſwered, The reaſon is, becauſe the world doth not practiſe my precepts, which they that doe, by that expreſſe their love to me, and have this reward from my Father, that he loves them again; and he and I reveale our ſelves to ſuch, and delight to dwell with ſuch.

† obſerve my word, τὸν λόγον μου τηρήσῃ

27. Peace I leave * with you, my peace I give unto you, not as the world † giveth, give I unto you; let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.] 27. I take my leave of you, and doe it again heartily and affectionately; and that in a ſpeciall peculiar way from that by which the world uſes to doe it, They in civility, when they ſalute you, or take their leave of you, uſe the like formes, Peace be to you &c. but either doe it formally and heartleſly, or elſe are not able to doe any more then with it; but I who cordially love and am able to expreſſe my love, will effectually give it to you. Be not either troubled with grief (ſee c. 11. 2.) that I muſt be taken from you, nor feare what ſhall befall your ſelves.

* unto you, ὑμῖν † giveth it, give I it to you, δίδωσιν, ἐγὼ δίδωμι ὑμῖν

28. Ye have heard how I ſaid unto you, I goe away, and come again unto you, If ye loved me, ye would rejoice becauſe I ſaid, I goe unto the Father, for my Father is greater then I.] 28. I told you v. 19. that I am to go away, and after a few daies return to you again (ſee note on Act. 15. c.) and then return to my Father from whom I came. If ye were kind to me, ye would have looked upon it with joy, as on a means of dignifying me, for he that ſent, is, as ſuch, greater then I who am ſent by him, And ſo my returning to my Father muſt needs be the advancing me to an higher condition, then that which now I am in.

29. And

29. And now I have told you, before it comes to paſſe, that when it is come to paſſe, you might beleive.]

29. I have not told you all this to afflict you, but to arm you for the expectation of it, by foretelling it, and withall that your ſeeing my prediction fulfilled, may convince you, that all which I have ſaid to you is true, and ſo make you beleive on me.

30. Hereafter I will not talk much with you, for the prince of* this world cometh, and hath nothing in me,

31. But that the world may know that I love the Father, and as the Father gave me commandment even ſo I doe. Ariſe, let us goe hence.]

30, 31. I ſhall not now ſtay long or ſay much to you, for the Imperiall power (of the Romans, whoſe Procurator Pilate was) and Satan himſelf ſhall joyne together with the Jewes to deſtroy me, and when they doe ſo, ſhall find nothing to lay to my charge, nor indeed have they power to doe me any hurt, Satan, whoſe office it is to be Gods executioner on ſinners, finds no ſinne in me, ſo to puniſh, and ſo could not put me to death, but that in obedience to my Fathers will, I mean voluntarily to lay down my life. Ariſe from table, let us be gone, meet whatever comes, and, to ſhew you how willing I am to lay down my life, let us goe to the place, where Judas waits to betray me, ch. 18. 3.

* or, the world, (for the King's MS. and antient Greek and Latine, and moſt others leave out τούτου,) cometh, and can find nothing in me, for the antient Greek and Latine MS. reads τὰ τῆς ἁμαρτίας.

2. Ἀμονὰς

The notion of loving God in ſcripture, but eſpecially in the New Teſtament, ſeems moſt fitly to be taken from one moſt eminent act, and expreſſion of love amongſt all men, viz: that of doing thoſe things which are eſteemed moſt gratefull and acceptable to the beloved, either as tending moſt to his good, or any other way moſt deſirable to him. For this indeed is the one expreſſion of loving one another, all other being effects of love to our ſelves. But becauſe God wants no contributions of ours to the advancing of his good, or (indeed) of his glory, and our onely way of doing gratefull things to him is our performing what he commands, therefore it is conſequent, that our obedience to the will, or commands of God in the higheſt and moſt perfect manner, is ſtyled the loving of him, being indeed the prime, if not only way of demonſtrating our love to him. So here, If ye love me, keep my commandements, if ye are ſo affected to me, as to deſire to gratifie me, obedience to all my precepts is the way of doing it. So v. 21. He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, &c. and I will love him, and (as the moſt gratefull thing to him, that can be done from one lover to another) I will ſhew my ſelf to him. So v. 23. If any man love me, he will keep my word, & my father ſhal love him, and we will (as the moſt grateful, obliging thing again) come to him, and make our abode with him, and ſo v. 24. & 1 Joh. 2. 5. He that keeps my word, in him is the love of God made perfect, and ch. 5. 3. this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments. And ſo ſaith Chriſt, ye are my friends if ye doe whatſoever I command you. From whence it is, that, as in ſome places compared together, love is equivalent or parallel, to keeping the commandments of God, as Exod. 20. 5. Deut. 5. 9. & Gal. 5. 6. compared with 1 Cor. 7. 19. (and diſobedience to enmity Rom. 8. 7. Jam. 4. 4.) ſo the whole condition available to our acceptation with God, and ſalvation, is oft expreſt by this ſtyle of Love. And becauſe thoſe duties that are to be perform'd to God immediatly, are moſt acceptable, and gratefull to him, but eſpecially that of confeſſing him, and, in deſpight of dangers, and death it ſelf, keeping cloſe to him, therefore that is many times expreſt by loving of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 8. 3. & 16. 22. Epheſ. 6. 24. Ja. 1. 12. Revel. 2. 4. Another notion there is of the love of God, a deſire of union, and neer conjunction with him, but this but ſeldome lookt on, in the ſcriptures.

b. Παράκλητος

The word Paraclete] in the Greek comes from a word of a large, and ſo ambiguous ſignification; and conſequently may be rendred advocate, exhorter, or comforter, and every one of theſe doe fitly accord to the offices of the Holy Ghoſt among the Apoſtles (on whom he was to deſcend) and ever ſince in the Church, and therefore ought not to be ſo rendred by any one of theſe, as to exclude the others, but to be left in the latitude of the ſignification, which belongs to the Greek word: Yet the truth is, one notion there is of the word, which ſeems to be eſpecially referr'd to, both here, when he is called Paraclete, and c. 16. 8. as ſhall there appear, and that is the firſt notion, that of an advocate or interlocutor, an advocate of the Chriſtian's cauſe with God, Rom. 8. 26. and ſo alſo with men, teaching the Apoſtles what they ſhall ſay, when they are brought before Kings, &c. Mat. 10. 20. and an advocate, or actor of Chriſt's cauſe againſt the world of unbeleivers, and crucifiers, Joh. 15. 26. and efficaciouſly convincing the adverſaries, Joh. 16. 8. and this is the notion of the word retained among the Talmudiſts, who continue the Greek word without the termination, and ſet it in oppoſition to קטיגור קלוגר an accuſer. And proportionably to what is here ſaid of παράκλητος, muſt, I ſuppoſe, be reſolved of παράκλησις τῆς ἁγίας πνεύματος, Act 9. 31. not that it be reſtrained to note comfort particularly, but be taken in the latitude, for the whole work of the miniſtery, to which the Apoſtles were ſet apart, and conſecrated, and enabled by the Holy Ghoſt's coming down upon them, and ſo indeed the word is generally uſed in the Acts, to denote the preaching of the word, ſpeaking to the people, as the Apoſtles did in the ſynagogues, or elſwhere, to tell them their duty of all kinds, So Act. 11. 23. παρεκάλει πάντας, the ſumme of his ſpeech or ſermon to them all was, that they ſhould cleave unto the Lord. So Act. 14. 22. προσμένειν τῇ πίστει, preaching to or interceding with them to abide in the faith, and 15. 32. διὰ λόγου πολλοῦ παρεκάλεσε, and λόγῳ πολλῷ c. 22. with much ſpeech they exhorted, or taught, or preacht to the brethren. So ch. 16. 40. παρεκάλεσαν they preacht to, or exhorted them. So λόγος παρακλήσεως Act. 13. 15. a word of exhortation, according to their cuſtome of ſaying ſomething ſeaſonably to the people at their publick aſſemblies, after their reading of the law &c. So Act. 15. 31. the whole meſſage of the Synod at Jeruſalem, and their deciſion of the controverſie, is called παράκλησις exhortation.

c. κἀγὼ The word κἀγὼ in this writer especially, hath oft a peculiar elegancy in it, and is not fully understood, but by adding the word So in the rendring of it, so also I, and then it hath an influence on the former part of the period, and makes that the first part of a similitude or comparison, as it is it self the ἀπλαπόδοσις or second. Thus it is oft in other places, see c. 6. 56. ὁ ἐμοὶ μένει κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ, as he remaineth in me, so also I in him. So ὁ μένων ἐν τῷ Θεῷ, 1 Joh. 4. 15. ὁ Θεὸς ἐν αὐτῷ μένει, κὰι μένει ἐν τῷ Θεῷ, as God abides in him, so he also in God, and again v. 16. and here in this verse, where two parts (not three) of conviction seem to be set down, as the effects of Christ's resurrection &c. 1. They shall know that Christ is in his Father, i. e. that he came truly with Commission from him, and hath kept close to the discharge of it, varied not from it in the least, That that is the meaning of being in his Father] may appear by the use of it again c. 17. 21. that they all may be one as thou Father art in me and I in thee, i. e. that they may agree in the same doctrine, as my Father and I agree perfectly in the same, I teaching what is his will should be taught, and nothing else. But more evidently here v. 10. Dost thou not believe that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? i. e. whatsoever I doe or teach is the power of God, and the doctrine of God in me, as it follows, the words which I speak are not from my self, but the Father that abideth in me he doth the works, v. 10. & v. 11. to the same purpose, that the miracles, which he doth, he doth from God, and that is a proof that his doctrine is the doctrine of God. This the Fathers raising him from the dead, and taking him up to heaven will convince them of, see c. 16. 10. where his going to the Father is mentioned as a means to convince them of righteousnesse, i. e. both that he was a righteous person, and that he taught them the true way of righteousnesse. 2ly, They shall know that Christ continues in them, communicates and derives his power to them, that he hath not forsaken them, v. 18. as by his death they were apt to suspect he did, but are convinced of the contrary by his resurrection, 1. by his appearing to them, 2ly, by his going to heaven, only (as he saith) to prepare a place for them, and then to come meet and conduct them thither v. 3. and 3ly, by his sending his Spirit to them to fit them to be his successors on earth, which is the principall thing in this chapter. Now their obedience, and the sincerity thereof to him, is not any third principal thing, that they were thus to be convinced of by this miracle of Christ's resurrection, being a thing which if it were in them, they might possibly know without Gods working miracles to testifie it, and again their knowing of this would be an effect, or consequent of those former convictions, and not a principal branch antecedent (as in the order of the words it lies) to the latter of them. That therefore which the mention of [ὑμεῖς ἐν ἐμοὶ ye in me] seems to point at in this place, is only this, that whereas the world should never see Christ again, so they that remained in him, his faithfull and obedient disciples, (upon which the whole promise of the Paraclete is built in this chapter v. 15.) should partake of the blessing and fruits of his appearance, & of the Paraclete, and that as they had continued faithfull to him, he in like manner would be sure to perform his promise to them, make them his successors in his power in the Church, & preachers of the same doctrine which he had taught from his Father. And so that is the plain meaning of these words, ὑμεῖς ἐν ἐμοὶ κἀγὼ ἐν ὑμῖν, as you are in me, so I in you, which was the only second thing they needed to be convinced of. Though by the way, I say, as this was the rewarding of their obedience and fidelity to him, so also would it be a testimony from God of the sincerity of it, which he was pleased thus to accept and reward. That this is the right interpretation of this verse appears by the next ver. 21. where he that loves Christ and keeps his commandments, i. e. that is in Christ here, is the subject, to whom the promise is made of Christ's manifesting himself unto him, which hath appeared to be the importance of κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ, and I in him. By which it appears that the fidelity to Christ is the qualification or condition required in the subject to make a man capable of the manifestation of Christ to him, which would not be afforded to any others. And the same is the importance of v. 23.

CHAP. XV.

1. And as he was going on the way, he

1. I Am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman,] said to those that were neer him, John &c. I am the true (see ch. 6. f.) generous fruit-bearing vine Jer. 2. 21. my blood as the blood of the grape shall rejoice the heart of God and man, Jud. 9. 12. And my Father who hath thus planted me in this world here below, hath the whole ordering of all that belongs to me, and every branch, every believer, every member of my mystical body.

2. Every barren member of my body,

2. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh away, and every branch that beareth fruit, he * purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.]

(every unprofitable disciple or Christian) he proceeds to excision of it, Every one that is fruitfull, he diligently pruneth, and useth all other probable means to render it more fruitfull.

* will purge, the ancient Gr. & Lat. MS. reads καθαιρεῖ.

3. You are already

3. † Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.]

sanctified by the operation of my doctrine and spirit upon you, though you may need farther pruning, in order to that greater degree of fruitfulnesse, v. 2.

† you are already pure because of the word. Ὑμεῖς ἤδη καθαροί ἐστε διὰ τὸν λόγον

4. Doe ye therefore take care by your obedience and constancy, that I may be so fastned in your hearts, that I may never be out of them, or be provoked to withdraw my self from you, For this presence of mine is absolutely necessary to you, to make you fruitfull; As a branch cut off from the vine withers presently, is farre from bringing forth any fruit, so he that falls off, or is, by my Fathers just judgment on him, broken off from me, deprived of that grace, which, as juice, is distributed to all the branches, as long as they are in the body, can never bring forth any good.

5. I

5. I am the vine, ye are the brinches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the ſame bringeth forth much fruit, for without me ye can doe nothing.] 5. He that adheres and keeps faſt to me, and conſequently I to him, he by the grace communicated from me to him, will be enabled to bring forth much fruit, he and none but he.

6. If a man abide not in me, he is caſt forth as a branch, and is withered, and men gather them, and caſt them into the fire, and they are burned.] 6. If ye break off from me, and are by your ſelves as branches ſeparated from me, into whom you are ingraffed by faith and obedience, ye ſtraight wither away, and are fit for nothing but the fire.

7. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye ſhall aske what ye will, and it ſhall be done unto you.] 7. As long as you continue obedient to me and my doctrine, all your prayers ſhall be heard.

* and ye ſhall ſo 8. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, * ſo ſhall ye be my diſciples.] 8. Your fruitfulneſſe is that which alone brings in glory to my Father, and which denominates you truly my diſciples.

9. As the Father hath loved me, ſo have I loved you, continue ye in my love.] 9. My love to you is like that of my Father to me, and that muſt oblige you to take care to doe thoſe things which are gratefull to me, that I may continue to love you.

10. If ye keep my commandments, ye ſhall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Fathers commandments, and abide in his love.] 10. And that will be ſecured by your conſtant obedience to my commands, as my obedience to my Fathers commandements hath ſecured me of the continuance of his love.

11. Theſe things have I ſpoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full.] 11. Theſe things have I largely ſaid to you, that the comfort you have taken in my preſence, may in my abſence continue to you, and by the addition of that comfort of the Spirit, which ſhall come when I am gone, your joy may abound.

12. This is my commandement, that ye love one another, as I have loved you.

13. Greater love hath no man then this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.] 13. No man can expreſſe greater love to his deareſt friends then to adventure to die for them.

14. Ye are my friends, if ye doe whatſoever I command you.] 14. And that I mean to doe for you, and the benefit of that greateſt kindneſſe ſhall accrue to you, as to my choiſeſt friends, if ye continue obedient to my doctrine and commands.

15. Henceforth I call you not ſervants, for the ſervant knoweth not what his Lord doth, but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you.] 15. And certainly I have long dealt with you as friends, farre above the condition of ſervants, who uſe not to know their maſters intentions, or counſels, or purpoſes, but onely to doe his commands, but I have received you as friends, and confidents into my boſome, to make known all my Fathers will unto you.

16. Ye have not choſen me, but I have choſen you and ordained you, that ye ſhould goe and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit ſhould remain: that whatſoever ye ſhall aske of the Father in my name, he may give it you.] 16. And this I have done toward you by way of prevention, out of free undeſerved kindneſſe to you, and of my own accord, put you in this bleſſed courſe, enabled you to fructifie, and bring forth abundance of fruit, to the honour and praiſe of God, appointed you to goe abroad into all the world, and bring in an harveſt of converts to heaven, which is a reall and a durable fruit, and that which ſhall be advantageous to you alſo, devolve on you the benefit of having all yous prayers heard by God, all your wants ſupplied by him, which you ſhall preſent to him in my name.

17. Theſe things I command you, that ye love one another.] 17. All this concerning my love to you I inculcate and repeat on purpoſe, as an obligation to you, that (as the moſt eminent way of return which I expect from you to all this) you live in charity one toward another.

18. If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you.] 18. And if ye find by experience, that impious, and hypocriticall worldlings doe inſtead of beleiving, reſiſt and perſecute you, there is no reaſon that this ſhould give you any diſcouragement, you are to expect that, and arm your ſelves againſt it by this conſideration, that ſuch as theſe perſecuted me before you, and ſo as I began in love to you, ſo I have had the firſt taſte of the enmity, and hatred of the wicked men of this world.

19. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own, but becauſe ye are not of the world, but I have choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.] 19. Theſe mens oppoſing and hating you will be a comfortable ſymptome to you, that you are a peculiar people of mine, dignified above, and ſeparated from the reſt of men.

20. Remember the word that I ſaid unto you, The ſervant is not greater then the Lord: If they have perſecuted me, they will alſo perſecute you; If they † obſerved have † * kept my ſaying, they will keep yours alſo.] 20. And that you are likely to meet with ſuch entertainment need not be ſtrange to you, when you remember how oft I have foretold you of it, that you could not in reaſon expect any better treating, then I have met with before you: If they have perſecuted me, in all probability they will perſecute you alſo, and on the other ſide, you have no more reaſon to expect of the world, that it ſhould receive your preaching, then that it ſhould receive mine.

21. But all theſe things will they doe unto you for my names ſake, becauſe they know not him that ſent me.] 21. All the perſecutions that ſhall fall on you being upon the ſcore of their not beleiving that God hath ſent me.

* pretenſe, excuſe 22. If I had not come, and ſpoken unto them, they had not had ſinne: but now they have no * cloke for their ſinne.] 22. If I had not done what I have among them, they might have had the excuſe of ignorance, but now they are utterly without excuſe.

23. I have done ſo much to evidence my being ſent from God, that now the oppoſing me is a malitious reſiſting of my Father himſelf.

23. He that hateth me, hateth my Father alſo.]

See v. 22, 23.

24. If I had not done among them the works which none other man * did, they had not had ſinne: but now have they both ſeen and hated both me and my Father.

* hath done, they ſhould have no ſin, ποιηκεν, ἁμαρτιαν ουκ ειχον

25. By this is fulfilled that of the Pſalmiſt Pſal. 35. 19. they have oppoſed me, when they had all reaſon to have received and loved me.

25. † But this cometh to paſs, that the word might be fulfilled, which is written in their law, They hated me [b] without a cauſe.]

† But that the word written in their law might be fulfilled, they have ἀλλ' ἵνα πληρωθῇ ὁ λογος ὁ γεγραμμενος

26, 27. But at the coming of the Holy Ghoſt that pleader or advocate of my cauſe (ſee note on c. 14. a.) whom I will ſend fro the Father, that Spirit, which proceedeth from the Father, and who by his coming will open mens eyes, and give them a right underſtanding of me, he ſhall maintain my cauſe againſt all oppoſers, by coming down on you ſhall give you aſſurance of my being ſent from God, and by the gift of tongues ſhall enable you to convince all others, and ſhall conſtitute you witneſſes of it to all, as being the fitteſt to doe ſo by your having been eye-witneſſes of all that I have done, having been with me at the firſt, and never departed from me ſince.

26. But when the * Comforter is come, whom I will ſend unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he ſhall teſtifie of me.

27. And ye alſo ſhall bear witneſſe, becauſe ye have been with me from the beginning.]

a. ἐτηρησαν

The joyning of [εἰ ἐτήρησαν] here with [εἰ ἐδίωξαν] makes it ſeem a little probable, that τηρεῖν ſhould be here taken in an ill ſenſe, for an inſidious obſerving or treacherous watching of Chriſt's words, as τηρεῖν and παρατηρεῖν are ſometimes uſed (ſee Lu. 20. 20.) and ſo alſo the Hebrew שמר (Pſal. 56. 7. they obſerve, i. e. watch my ſteps, when they lay wait for my ſoul,) and Job. 7. 20. נצר, when God is ſaid to be the obſerver of men. But the uſe of this phraſe [τηρεῖν λόγους] in the New Teſtament, eſpecially in the writings of S. John, ch. 8. 55. ch. 14. 23, 24. ch. 17. 6. 1 Joh. 2. 5. Rev. 3. 8. and 10. c. 22. 7, 9. and that with [ἐντολὰς, commands] in ſtead of λόγους words] very often (and particularly in this Chapter v. 10. twice,) will be ſufficient reaſon to reject this rendring, and to read it literally, If they have kept my word, they will alſo keep your word, i. e. obey and obſerve it, making their not obſerving the word of Chriſt an argument that they will not obſerve the Apoſtles neither; or, that by this experiment of their dealing with Chriſt they may learn what kind of dealing or entertainment is to be looked for from the world for the diſciples of Chriſt, agreeable perfectly to what was before ſaid of the world's perſecuting them alſo.

b. δωρεὰν

The Greek [δωρεὰν] which properly ſignifies gratis, without any hire, freely, without intuition of wages, and is ſo taken Mat. 10. 8. Rom. 3. 24. 2 Cor. 11. 7. Apoc. 21. 6. 22. 17. is here and Gal. 2. 21. taken for [without a cauſe] whether impellent (as here, they hated me without any motive, or impulſive to hatred on my part offered to them) or final, as in the Galat: Then did Chriſt die in vain, or to no purpoſe. The reaſon of theſe various acceptions of the word beyond its native extent, is to be fetcht from the like uſe of the Hebrew חנם, wch ſignifies both theſe, and proportionably the Greek, though naturally it doe not extend to theſe, is, according to the cuſtome of theſe writers, uſed in the ſame largeneſſe, as the Hebrew is.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XVI.

1. All this have I ſaid to fortifie you, that you ſhould not be deterred from my ſervice by the hazards which attend it.

1. THeſe things have I ſpoken unto you, that ye ſhould not be * offended.]

* ſcandalized. Σκανδαλισθῆτε

2. They ſhall remove you from their aſſemblies (c. 9. b.) and when they have done ſo, within a while, they ſhall think it not only lawfull, but acceptable to God (and of the nature of a ſacrifice, which propitiates for other offences) to put you to death.

2. They ſhall put you out of the ſynagogues, yea, the time cometh, that whoſoever killeth you † will think that he * doth God ſervice.]

† ſhall ſeem to. δόξῃ

* offer God an oblation, or worſhip, λατρειαν προσφερειν τῷ Θεῷ

3. And the ground of their doing ſo, is the great impiety of their hearts (ſee c. 6. note d.) their not liking either the old commands of my Father, or thoſe which I now bring from him.

3. And theſe things will they doe unto you, becauſe they have not known the Father, or me.]

4. Till this time that I am ready to depart from you, I did not think fit to ſay this to you, becauſe whilſt I was here, all the malice of men bent it ſelf wholly againſt me, letting you alone.

4. But theſe things have I told you, that when the time ſhall come, you may remember that I told you of them. [And ‖ theſe things I ſaid not unto you at the beginning, becauſe I was with you.]

5, 6. But now as you come to be uppermoſt in this employment of revealing my Fathers will, the oppoſition will light on you. This departure of mine fills you with ſadneſſe, and you are ſo intent upon the ſad thought of it, that you doe not ask one queſtion about the end of my journey, or about the benefit that may redound to you by it, and ſhall certainly doe ſo.

5. But now I goe my way to him that ſent me, and none of you asketh me, Whither goeſt thou?

6. But becauſe I have ſaid theſe things to you, ſorrow hath filled your heart.]

7. Nevertheleſſe

7. Nevertheleſſe I tell you the truth, It is expedient for you that I goe away: for if I goe not away the * Comforter will not come unto you, but if I depart, I will ſend him unto you.]

* Paraclete, παράκλητος

7. For let me tell you, the holy Ghoſt is not to come till after my departing, and his coming ſhall be of more advantage to you, then my ſtaying would be.

† And he, when he comes, ſhall convince the world concerning ſinne, and concerning righteouſneſſe, and concerning judgment.

8. † And when he is come, he will [a] reprove the world of ſinne, and of righteouſneſſe, and of judgment.

9. Of ſinne, becauſe they beleive not on me.

10. Of righteouſneſſe, becauſe I goe to my Father, and ye ſee me no more.

11. Of judgment, becauſe the Prince of this world is judged.]

8, 9, 10, 11. And when he comes, he will plead my cauſe againſt the world, and lay againſt it all the three ſorts of actions that are amongſt the Jewes uſuall in their courts, 1. He ſhall charge it with the crime of not beleiving in me, by the gift of tongues, &c. evidencing, that I, that am to be preached by that means, am indeed the true Meſſias, and ſo likewiſe by the fulfilling thoſe predictions which now I give you. 2dly, He ſhall vindicate and juſtifie my miſſion, and innocence, by my aſcenſion to heaven, taking me away out of the reach of humane malice, and rewarding my patience with his conſolations. 3dly, He ſhall urge and work revenge upon Satan and his inſtruments who crucified me, and retaliate deſtruction back upon them.

12. I have yet many things to ſay unto you, but you cannot bear them now.]

12. Beſide all that I have yet ſaid, I have many things concerning the Chriſtian law to reveal to you, which being ſo diſtant from the law of the Jewes, wherein ye have been brought up, and for which you are ſo zealous, ye cannot yet receive or be patient of them, (ſee Orig: cont: Celſ: l. 2.)

* But &c.

13. * Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he ſhall not ſpeak of himſelf, but whatſoever he ſhall hear, that ſhall he ſpeak, and he will ſhew you things to come.]

13. But when the Holy Ghoſt comes, whoſe title it is to be the Spirit of truth, he ſhall inſtruct you what is to be done, teach you the full of my Fathers will for the laying aſide of the ceremoniall externall law of the Jewes, freeing all Chriſtians from that yoke, &c. For it ſhall be no private doctrine of his own, which he ſhall reveal to you, but either that which I have already taught, but you have either not obſerved or forgotten, or that, which you are not yet, but afterwards to doe (how you are to behave your ſelves in the buſineſſe of the Jewes and Gentiles, when the Jewes finally reject the Goſpel, &c.) and which I have not yet revealed to you, as being not yet ſeaſonable.

14. He ſhall glorifie me, for he † ſhall receive of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you.]

14. What he doth ſhall tend to the illuſtrating of me. For he being ſent from my Father by me, ſhall in all things accord with me, and thereby appear to have his meſſage from me, and to declare nothing to you, but what he hath from me.

15. All things that the Father hath are mine, therefore ſaid I, that he ſhall take of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you.]

15. And when I ſay this, I mean not ſo to appropriate to my ſelf, as to exclude my Father, but becauſe all things are common to me and my Father, and becauſe all my will depends on the Father, and becauſe 'tis my work wholly to attend the will of my Father, therefore whatſoever of this nature he ſhall reveal to you, I call that mine, and the revealing of this, his taking of mine and declaring to you.

* ye ſee me not, ὄψεσθέ με

16. A little while and * ye ſhall not ſee me, and again a little while and ye ſhall ſee me, becauſe I goe to the Father.]

16. Within a while I ſhall for a time be taken from you, then again within a little while after that I ſhall be with you again before my aſcenſion, for it is not poſſible for me to be held by death, I muſt ariſe and goe to my Father.

17. Then ſaid ſome of his diſciples among themſelves, What is this that he ſaith unto us, A little while, and ye ſhall not ſee me, and again a little while and ye ſhall ſee me, and † becauſe I goe to my Father?

† I go to the Father.

18. They ſaid therefore, What is it that he ſaith, A little while? we cannot tell what he ſaith.

19. Now Jeſus knew that they were deſirous to aſk him, and ſaid unto them, Doe ye [enquire] among your ſelves of that I ſaid, A little while and ye ſhall not ſee me, and again a little while, and ye ſhall ſee me?

See v. 23, and 30.

21. A woman when ſhe is in travaile hath ſorrow, becauſe her hour is come, but as ſoon as ſhe is delivered of her child, ſhe remembreth no more the anguiſh, for joy that a man is born into the world.

21, 22. Your ſorrow at my death ſhall be like the womans pangs of travaile, but when it ſhall appear to you that my death

23. And in that day ye ſhall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, whatſoever ye ſhall aſk the Father in my name, he will give it you.

23. When that Spirit is come, he ſhall have taught you all things, ſatisfied all your doubts & ignorances, that you ſhall not need aſk me any more queſtions. After my departing you ſhall uſe a new form in your prayers to God which as yet you have not uſed, make your requeſts to him in my name, upon that ſcore of your being my diſciples, and my giving you this authority, and whatever tends to the fulfilling of your joy, to your reall good, ſhall be granted to you.

31. Jeſus anſwered them, [Doe ye now beleive?]

32. But the time is now at hand, that ye ſhall flie from me to your homes every one of you, and ſo though ye beleive on me, ye will not yet confeſſe me, but forſake me, and, as much as in you is, leave me alone: But although ye forſake me, my Father will not, he will continue cloſe to me, and acknowledge me even in death it ſelf, yea and raiſe me up from death.

Notes on Chap. XVI.

a. Παράκλητος.

What is meant by the word [Paraclete] here attributed to the Holy Ghoſt, hath been mention'd, note on c.14.16. and will more fully be diſcernible by this place. For of the Paraclete, taken in the notion of an advocate, or actor, this is the office, to convince the κόσμος or accuſer, or, as it is Tit. 1. 9. ἐλέγχειν ἀντιλέγοντας, to juſtifie the cauſe againſt all gain-ſayers, to convince them, or to convince others that they have complain'd or acted unjuſtly. So that all that here follows, muſt in any reaſon ſo be interpreted, as ſhall agree with the cuſtomes of pleading cauſes among the Jewes; Now there were 3 ſorts of cauſes or actions among the Jews, 1. publick judgments, περὶ ἁμαρτίας, לחטא i.e. concerning criminal matters, and thoſe conſiſted in the condemnation and puniſhing of offenders againſt God, falſe prophets, &c. 2dly, in the defending of the juſt or upright, againſt all oppreſſion, or invaſion, or falſe teſtimony, and that is called לצדקה, concerning juſtice, or equity, or righteouſneſſe, περὶ δικαιοσύνης; the 3d in pleading againſt any for treſpaſſe againſt his neighbour, as in robbery &c. and urging the law of retaliation, to ſuffer as he hath done, and this is called למשפט, περὶ κρίσεως, concerning judgment. In every one of theſe was the Holy Ghoſt at his coming to be the advocate for Chriſt againſt the world, who had rejected and crucified him; One action he ſhould put in againſt the world of the firſt kind, לחטא, περὶ ἁμαρτίας, concerning that queſtion whether Chriſt were guilty of being a falſe prophet, or they of not beleiving a true prophet, the Meſſias of the world, and ſhould demonſtrate or prove them guilty of a great crime, viz: of not beleiving the Meſſias, and that ſhould be managed thus, There are rules ſet down, Deut. 18. 22. to diſcern and diſtinguiſh a falſe prophet from a true, and particularly to diſcern the Chriſt or Meſſias, v. 18. viz: if undertaking to be the Meſſias, and to prove that by foretelling things, which were not in the power of the devil to work, or to foretell, all the things which he foretold came to paſſe. Now one of the things foretold by Chriſt, was, that the Spirit or Paraclete ſhould come, Which being fulfilled by his coming, and his coming from God, and not from the devil, but deſtructive to his kingdome, this would be a convincing argument, that he was a true prophet, and ſo the Meſſias, which he affirmed himſelf to be, and ſo that they were guilty of a great ſinne, in not beleiving on him, of a greater in crucifying him, and therefore that they ought to expect that puniſhment of exciſion, Deut. 18.19. which after, within a while, did accordingly befall that nation. A ſecond action which the holy Ghoſt did put in for Chriſt againſt the world, was to vindicate his innocence, though he had ſuffered among them as a malefactor, and his way of managing that, was, by giving them aſſurance, and convincing them, that he which was thus condemned and crucified by them, was by God taken up into heaven, (as a clear teſtimony of his innocence) to partake of his own glory there. The third action was that of judgment (or of puniſhing injurious perſons by way of retaliation) againſt Satan, the cauſe, and author of the death of Chriſt, who put it into Judas's heart, and the chief prieſts and Phariſees, the former to deliver up, the latter to put him to death: And by the coming of the Holy Ghost, and preaching of the word through the world, and so the spreading of Christianity among the Gentiles (which was an effect of this coming, and office of the Holy Ghost) this work of retaliation was wrought most discernibly on Satan, or the Prince of this world; he put Christ to death, and he himself is slain, (as it were) his kingdome destroyed, his idols, Oracles, abominable sins, (whereby he reigned every where among the Gentiles in the heathen world) were remarkeably destroyed by this coming of the Holy Ghost, and so the world, and the Prince thereof judged, sentenced, and condemned judicio talionis, to suffer from Christ, as he had dealt with him, and that was the convincing the world περὶ κρίσεως, concerning judgment. This seems to be the meaning of this very difficult place, to the understanding of which I acknowledge to have received light from the learned Hugo Grotius in his Annotations on the Gospels, and from Val: Schindler in his Pentaglott: in the word, שקרי p. 1521. C.

b. Ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, In that day] here, may possibly be mistaken, by assigning too restrained a sense to it. For if it be applied to that part only of the precedent verse, [But I will see you again] which notes the space immediately following his resurrection (see c. 14. 19.) and antecedent to his ascension, it will not then be proper to affirm of [illegible] space, that they should ask him nothing, for it is evident that at that time of seeing him, they asked him many things (see Act. 1. 6.) But as this resurrection of Christ was attended with his ascension to heaven, and sending the Paraclete, so it is most exactly true, which here follows, In that day ye shall ask me nothing, i. e. shall have no need of asking more questions, The Paraclete shall teach you all things. That this is the meaning of ἐρωτήσετε here, which is rendred asking, and not that other notion of asking for praying, in the following words, may appear first by v. 19. where they being dubious, and uncertain what he meant by [yet a little while, and ye shall not see me &c.] it is said, Jesus knew that they would ἐρωτᾶν αὐτὸν, ask him, i.e. ask him the meaning of that speech, and to that he here referres in the same word, In that day, when that course shall be taken for the instructing you so perfectly, ἵνα μὴ ἐρωτήσητε αὐτὸν, ye shall ask me nothing. 2dly, By the changing of the word in the other part of this verse, where it is ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσητε, whatsoever ye shall ask, or begge of the Father &c. and not, as it is here, ἐρωτήσετε. In the same sense must the phrase [ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, in that day] be taken again ver. 26. that which is there said, belonging not peculiarly to that time betwixt his resurrection and ascension, but to the state of them, all Christians after Christs departure from them to the right hand of his Father.

CHAP. XVII.

Paraphrase.

1. THese words spake Jesus, and lift up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, [the hour is come, glorifie thy son, that thy son also may glorifie thee.] 1. the time of my suffering is come, enable me to go through all that is now before me, ready to come upon me, and receive me up into thy glory, v. 5. that in the strength of my resurrection, the Gospel may be received, and beleived in, over the whole world.

2. As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternall life to as many as thou hast given him.] 2. According as thou hast given me power of sentencing all men, condemning or absolving them, which power is to be instated on me at my resurrection, that I may give eternall life to all, whom thou hast so given me, so inclined their hearts that they cordially and sincerely come unto me; see note on c. 6. d.

3. And this is life eternall, that * they might know thee the only true God, and † Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.] 3. And all that is requied to make men partakers of this eternall life, is beside the knowledge of the Father, the only true God, (together with obedience to his commands formerly revealed by him) the embracing Christ, and acknowledging his commission from the Father, (and him as the only true God also, 1 Joh. 5, 20.) and so receiving and observing all that is said and commanded by him.

† whom thou hast sent, Jesus Christ, ὃν ἀπέστειλας Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν.

4. I have glorified thee on the earth, I have finished the work which thou gavest me * to doe.] 4. I have testified and proclaimed thy will here in this world, and so glorified thee here, and have done all, which thou hast appointed me to doe by way of office or ministery here.

* that I should doe it, ἵνα ποιήσω.

5. And now, O Father, glorifie me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.] 5. And doe thou now, O Father, deal with me proportionably, assume this passible, mortall, humane nature of mine, wherein I have served thee, unto a participation of that honour and dignity and glory, which, before I took this nature on me, I enjoyed with thee before the foundation of the world, even from all eternity, see Phil. 2. 6, 9.

6. I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me, and they have kept thy word.] 6. I have made known thy will to those peculiar disciples, v. 19. whom thou wert pleased by thy grace to fit, and so to bring to me, to undertake my discipleship, and attend me in the neareſt relation, who being servants of thine, have received my word, and obeyed it as thine, (see note on c. 6. d.) and served me in the publishing of it.

7. Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me, are of thee.] 7. These have cordially acknowledged that all that message v. 4. on which I was sent, was committed to me by thee.

8. For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me, and they have received them, and have known surely, that I came out from thee, and they have beleived that thou didst send me.] 8. For that message by thee committed to me, I have commited to them, and they have received it, as that which in my name they will communicate from thee to the world, being sufficiently assured that my coming and preaching was all by commission from thee.

9. I

9, 10. I now offer up a prayer peculiarly for them, which I know are moſt pretious in thy ſight

9. I pray for them, I pray not for the world, but for them which thou haſt given me, for they are thine.

10. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine, and * I am glorified in them.]

* I have been glorified, δεδόξασμαι

(praying for all beleivers v. 20. and at other times though not now, for his very Crucifyers) and that prayer for that, which for others I cannot pray, a prayer for their conſtancy (in perſecutions, v. 15.) and continuance in the faith, and union with me, v. 12. this I can ask only for beleivers, (for they only are capable of it) not for the world of impenitent unbeleivers, (who will be ſure to deſpiſe and trample on, and perſecute them, v. 14.) for beleivers I ſay, and peculiarly for my diſciples, whom thou, by having given them to me in an eminent manner, muſt look on as thine own, and alſo reward them, for having received, and confeſt, and performed ſervice to me.

11. And this, becauſe now I am likely to leave them to hazards and perſecutions, and whilſt I am a leaving the world they tarry in it,

11. And now I am no more in the world, but theſe are in the world, and I come to thee, holy Father, ‖ keep through thine own name thoſe whom thou haſt given me, that they may be one, as we are.]

‖ keep them through thy name which thou haſt given to me, for the Kgs MS. and many antient copies read δίδωκάς μοι, and ſo the Syriack, Euthymius, Theophylact, Cyril.

Therefore, holy Father, I beſeech thee, take them into thy tuition, and protect them in the diſcharge of their Apoſtleſhip, which after my departure lies wholly on them, keep all my diſciples by thy power, (and by that declaration of thy will, which thou haſt afforded me, by the Goſpel, thy power unto ſalvation of all beleivers) from peril and defection, that they may live to teach and preach uniformly (all agreeing in the ſame) what I have taught them, in like manner as I have taught, (without any alteration) what I had from thee.

12. All this while of my continuing among them, I have laboured, by revealing thy will to them, to confirm them, and alſo to preſerve them from danger, and it hath ſucceeded well, of all thoſe whoſe hearts were by thy preventing grace ſo prepared, as that they came to me and undertook my ſervice (ſee note on c. 6. d.) none hath miſcarried or fallen off (ſee c. 18. 9. and here v. 15) but only that wicked traytor prophecied of, Pſal. 109.

12. While I was with them in the world, I have kept them in thy name, thoſe that thou gaveſt me I have kept, and none of them is loſt, but the ſon of perdition, that the ſcripture might be fulfilled.]

13. But now that I am to depart from them, I beſeech thee, and expreſſe this requeſt of mine publickly, while I am here, that that courage which I exhort them to, and that cheerfulneſſe, in paſſing through all hazards, may, by their knowing that I thus pray for them, be confirmed in them, and that the joy, which my preſence among them now maintains, and holds up in them, may be continued to them completely, when I am gone, by remembring what I have now done for them.

13. * And now come I to thee, and theſe things I ſpeak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themſelves.]

* But now I come to thee, Νῦν δὲ.

14, 15. By receiving that doctrine which I have taught them from thee, they are ſure to be perſecuted by the men of this world, and all I beſeech for them, is, not that they ſhould be taken hence from preaching it to the world, but preſerved conſtant in all affliction, that they fall not off from thee, nor miſcarry in the approaching danger, (ſee v. 12. c. 18. 9.) but live to teſtifie thy truth to the world.

14. I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them, becauſe they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

15. I pray thee not that thou ſhouldſt take them out of the world, but that thou ſhouldſt keep them from the evil.]

16. They will not be for the world to like or entertain, any more then I have been.

16. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.]

17. Be thou pleaſed therefore to ſet them apart, to fit them, and conſecrate them for the preaching of thy truth, the Goſpel. See v. 19. and S. Chryſoſtome.

17. Sanctifie them † through thy truth, Thy word is truth.]

† for, or in ἐν

18, 19. For to this office, and undertaking they are ſent by me, as I was by thee, (ſee c. 20. 21.) therefore I intercede, and withall I offer my ſelf up a ſacrifice, for the conſecrating of them, that they may doe as I doe, venture their lives in the preaching thy will, and by this offering of mine, as the ceremony of their conſecration, be conſecrated, or ſet apart for that function.

18. As thou haſt ſent me into the world, even ſo have I alſo ſent them into the world.

19. And for their ſakes I ſanctifie my ſelf, that they alſo might be ſanctified * through the truth.]

* for, or in ἐν

20, 21. And what I beg for them I beg alſo for all ſucceeding beleivers which ſhall by them hereafter be brought to the faith (and ſucceed them in the government of the Church) that they alſo may accord and continue uniformly in one faith and doctrine, that which I from thee have taught, and this by obeying our example, following the copie, which we have ſet them, by agreeing one with the other in all things, that ſo this agreement of all (thee, and me, and them) may be a powerfull means of convincing the world that I am ſent by thee, which the diviſions (and diſſenſions) of my diſciples may bring into ſuſpicion.

20. † Neither pray I for theſe alone, but for them alſo which ſhall beleive on me through their word,

21. That they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they alſo may be one in us: that the world may beleive that thou haſt ſent me.]

† Yet doe I not pray for them onely, οὐ περὶ τούτων δὲ μόνων

22. As for my diſciples (to whom he returns again, the 20th and 21th verſes being included in a parentheſis, ſee c. 6. note d.) To this end I have furniſhed them with the power of working miracles (called the glory of God c. 11. 40. and the glorious things done by him Lu. 13. 13.) that they may preach this doctrine. Doe thou therefore ſanctifie them alſo, that as I have been able to doe whatſoever works of power thou art able to work, ſo they may be able to doe alſo, through the preſence of our power working in them.

22. And the glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them: that they may be one, even as we are one.

23. I working in, and enabling them, as thou doſt me, that they may be thus fitted, and conſecrated to their office, in being partakers of the ſame miraculous power, and through through zeal to thy truth, conferre all their endevours to the propagating thereof. And this as it may appear to be an effect of thy favour toward them, in like manner as it was to me, will be a means of convincing the world, that thou haſt ſent me, and in like manner them alſo, becauſe ſuch power can be had from none but thee.

24. Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou * haſt given me; for thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the world.] 24. And for all that thus ſincerely come from thee to me, which from being thy ſervants come, and receive, and beleive in me, (ſee c. 6. note d.) obey my meſſage alſo, for them I pray, that they may follow me to heaven, that they may manifeſtly ſee the honour wherewith thou haſt magnified me, (an effect of thine infinite love toward me) before all eternity, and not look on me any longer as a mortall paſſible man, ſuch as now I am, ſee v. 5.

25. O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee, but I have known thee, and theſe have known that thou haſt ſent me.] 25. And yet for all this, righteous Father, the rulers and great men of the world doe not acknowledge thee after all thy goodneſſe to them, as appears by their not receiving of me, who am ſent by thee: But as I have received the Revelation of thy will, known thy ſecret counſels, ſo, though the world have not, yet theſe diſciples of mine, for whom I now pray, have been convinced, and acknowledge that I come from thee.

26. And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it, that the love wherewith thou haſt loved me, may be in them, and I in them.] 26. And therefore I have revealed thee, and thy attributes, and purpoſes to them, and will doe ſo ſtill; that as thou haſt expreſt thy love to me, ſo I may expreſſe mine to them, and enable them to work the ſame works, that I am able to work.

CHAP. XVIII. Paraphraſe.

1. WHen Jeſus had ſpoken theſe words, he went forth with his diſciples over the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entred and his diſciples.

3. Judas then having received a band of men and officers from the chief prieſts and Phariſees, cometh thither † with [a] lanthorns and torches and weapons.] 3. Judas therefore furniſhing himſelfe with a band of ſouldiers, and ſome of the miniſters of the Sanhedrim, cometh to that place with candles and lamps many of both ſorts (which, though it were full moon, might yet be needfull, by reaſon of clouds) and with all weapons, to apprehend, when they had found him. 2.

11. Then ſaid Jeſus unto Peter, [Put up thy ſword into the ſheath, the cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it?] 11. This ought not to have been done by thee: ſhall I not ſuffer patiently, without reſiſting, what my heavenly Father hath determined I ſhall ſuffer?

21. Why askeſt thou me? Aske them which heard me, what I have ſaid unto them: behold, they know what I ſaid.

22. One of the Apparitors or Serjeants that were there, thinking himſelf authorized to doe it by the judgment of Zelots, ſtruck Jeſus, as one that had violated the ſanctity of the high prieſt.

22. And when he had thus ſpoken, [one of the officers which ſtood by, ‖ ſtruck Jeſus with the palme of his hand, ſaying, Anſwereſt thou the high prieſt ſo?]

‖ gave Jeſus a blow with a rod or wand, ἔδωκε ῥάπισμα τῷ see note on Mat.26.m.

23. Jeſus anſwered him, If there were any ill in my ſpeech, accuſe me and prove it; but if there were no crime in me, why doſt thou ſtrike me?

23. Jeſus anſwered him, If I have ſpoken evil, bear witneſſe of the evil, but if well, why ſmiteſt thou me?

24. Now Annas had ſent him bound unto Caiaphas the high prieſt.

25. And in Caiaphas's hall, Simon

25. And Simon] Peter ſtood and warmed himſelf, they ſaid therefore unto him, Art not thou alſo one of his diſciples? He denied it, and ſaid, I am not.

26. One of the ſervants of the high prieſt (being his kinſman, whoſe eare Peter cut off) ſaith, Did not I ſee thee in the garden with him?

27. Peter then denied again, and immediately the cock crew.

29. Pilate then went out unto them and ſaid, What accuſation bring you againſt this man?

30. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

31. Doe ye take him, & proceed with him according to your own laws. But they replied, You know that we cannot proceed in a capitall matter, according as our lawes require, the power of punishing capitally being taken away from us by the Romans.

c.

31. Then ſaid Pilate unto them, [Take ye him and judge him according to your law. The Jewes therefore ſaid unto him, * ᶜ It is not lawfull for us, to put any man to death.]

* we have no authority

32. Jeſus had foretold that he ſhould be lifted up or crucified, which was a Roman punishment, This prediction of his was now to be fulfilled, and to that tends the Jewes ſaying, that the power of putting men to death was taken from them, and was only in the power of the Roman Procurator.

32. That the ſaying of Jeſus might be fulfilled, which he ſpake, ſignifying what death he ſhould die.]

33. Then Pilate entred into the judgment hall again, and called Jeſus, and ſaid unto him, Art thou the King of the Jewes?

34. Doſt thou ask this queſtion for thine own ſatisfaction, or as a crime laid to my charge by the Jewes?

34. Jeſus anſwered him, [Sayeſt thou this thing of thy ſelf, or did others tell it thee of me?]

35. Can I know what the Jewes out of their books and prophecies expect and promiſe themſelves? The Jewes have laid this to your charge, that you pretend to be their King, What have you done to give occaſion to this charge?

35. Pilate anſwered, [Am I a Jew? Thine own nation and the chief prieſts have delivered thee unto me, what haſt thou done?]

36. In anſwer to Pilat's queſtion v.33. Jeſus ſaid, I pretend not to, nor aime at any earthly kingdome, If I did, I ſhould engage my followers in a military manner to aſſiſt me as their King, and defend me from being delivered into the Jewes power; but now by the contrary (as appears by the reproof of Peter ver.11.) it appears that I doe not pretend to any ſuch earthly kingdome.

36. Jeſus anſwered, My kingdome is not of this world, if my kingdome were of this world, then would my ſervants fight, that I ſhould not be delivered to the Jewes. but now is my kingdome not from hence.]

37. It is as thou ſayeſt, I am a King, I was born in humane fleſh to this end, namely to be a King, Lu.1.32. and for this cauſe came I into the world, (ſee note on c.1.2.) that I ſhould teſtifie the truth of God, therefore I teſtifie this, and every ſervant of God is convinced of it, and accordingly receives and obeyes me.

37. Pilate therefore ſaid unto him, Art thou a King then? Jeſus anſwered, [Thou ſayeſt that I am a King. To this end was I born, and for this cauſe came I into the world, that I ſhould bear witneſſe unto the truth: Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.]

38. What meaneſt thou by the truth?

38. Pilate ſaith unto him, [What is truth?] And when he had ſaid this, he went out again unto the Jewes, and ſaith unto them, I find in him no fault at all.

39. But

39. But ye have a cuſtome that I ſhould [releaſe unto you one] at the Paſſe-over, will ye therefore that I releaſe unto you the King of the Jewes?

39. ſet one priſoner at liberty at your intreaty

40. Then cried they all again, ſaying, [Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

40. No by no means, but releaſe to us Barabbas. This Barabbas was one that in an inſurrection had been guilty of murther, Act. 3. 14. and was a robber alſo.

a. φανὸς

The word φανὸς from φαίνω is uſed, ſaith Phavorinus, ὅτι ἡ λαμπὰς & for a lamp or light, but that, ſaith he, expreſly μὴ ὅτι ἡ λαμπάς, not for a lanthorn, but, as he goes on, (ἔστι δὲ λυχνοῦχον λέγω) any thing that hath a light on it, which being, as 'tis there, contradiſtinct to the lanthorn, is a candle on a candleſtick, or ſomewhat proportionable to that among the Jewes, which we uſually expreſſe by the word Lights, that is candles &c. ſet out for uſe and ſervice.

b. Πραιτώριον

ἵνα μὴ μιανθῶσιν

The Prætors hall was full of Pilate's Roman ſouldiers; now theſe being Gentiles are in that condition, of which Maimonides ſaith, that they are to be accounted for ſuch, as have a perpetuall iſſue of blood upon them, whenſoever any thing is to be done wherein the queſtion of cleanneſs or uncleanneſs is conſiderable, As here in the eating the Paſſeover, of which no unclean perſon was to partake. So that by preſence among the Gentiles this legal uncleanneſs is contracted, as much as by any thing. Hence is that of Act. 10.28. Ἀθέμιτόν ἐστιν ἀνδρὶ Ἰουδαίῳ κολλᾶσθαι ἢ προσέρχεσθαι ἀλλοφύλῳ, It is unlawful for a Jew to be joyned to, or converſe with an heathen, ſo Act. 11.3. Why didſt thou go in to thoſe that were uncircumciſed, and didſt eat with them? And Juſtin out of Trogus ſpeaking of the Jewes, and affirming falſly, that they were baniſht out of Ægypt, for fear of infecting the Ægyptians with ſome diſeaſe, Leſt, ſaith he, they ſhould be avoided, and hated by all other nations for the ſame cauſe, Caverunt ne cum Peregrinis communicarent, quod ex cauſâ factum, paulatim in diſciplinam, religionémque convertit, they took care never to communicate with ſtrangers, which being firſt done on this cauſe (ſo this heathen had reſolved to defame them) by degrees turned into diſcipline and religion, i.e. became a ſetled law among them. So Apollonius Molo in Joſeph: l. 2. cont: Appion: μηδὲ κοινωνεῖν τοῖς παρ' ἄλλοις ζωὴν ἑλομένοις, They might not converſe with them, which choſe to live after other cuſtomes of life.

The Jewiſh Rabbines were wont to ſay, that Fourty years before the deſtruction of the ſecond Temple, the power of Judicature in capital crimes was taken from them, becauſe, ſay they, murtherers prevailed and diſſipated capital puniſhments from Iſrael. And accordingly it appears that Chriſt here was crucified by the Romans, the Jewiſh form of hanging being by ſtoning firſt, and then ſetting up a ſtake and a piece of wood acroſſe it, and hanging the dead perſon up (his hands being joyned and nailed together) toward the weſt, and then taking him down, and burying the wood with him, But for crucifying men alive, as the Romans did Chriſt, there is nothing to be found among the Jewes, who, if they had had the execution of him, would firſt have ſtoned him, which they often attempted to doe. See Paul: Fagius on the Chald: Paraph: Deut. 21.22. c. ἐν ἔξεσιν Ἀπολλῶνιος

CHAP. XIX.

Paraphraſe.

1. THen Pilate therefore took Jeſus and ſcourged him.]

1. Then Pilate thinking to ſatiſfie the Jewes importunity by inflicting this lighter puniſhment on him, appointed Jeſus to be ſcourged, meaning, when he had done, ſo to releaſe him, ſee Lu.23.16.

2. And the ſouldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe.

* ſtruck him with rods or cudgels, ἐδέροντο δοτικῶς μετὰ ῥάβδων, ſee Mat. 26. note m.

3. And ſaid, Haile King] of the Jewes: and they * ſmote him with their hands.

3. And ſaluted him as a mock-king

4. Pilate therefore went forth again, and ſaith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, [that ye may know that I find no fault in him.]

4. and profeſſe to you, that having ſcourged him I found nothing capital in him, or which may deſerve farther puniſhment, or indeed any at all.

5. Then came Jeſus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe, and Pilate ſaith unto them, [Behold the man.]

5. See him that ye accuſe for taking upon him to be King of the Jewes, theſe are all the enſignes of his dignity, You ſee he hath been ſcourged and reproachfully uſed, This may ſuffice for any fact by him committed, Lu.23.16.

6. When the chief prieſts therefore and officers ſaw him, they cried out, ſaying, Crucifie him, crucifie him. Pilate ſaith unto them, Take ye him and crucifie him, for I find no fault in him.

6. When therefore thoſe of the Sanhedrim, and the officers that attended them, ſaw him, they called to have him crucified; But Pilate profeſt he could find nothing for which to doe it, and therefore they muſt doe it themſelves, if they would have it done, for he could not.

7. The Jewes anſwered him, We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, becauſe he [made himſelf] the ſon of God.

7. took upon him to be

8. When Pilate therefore heard that ſaying, he was the more [afraid.]

8. afraid of paſſing any ſentence againſt him.

9. And went again into the judgment hall, and ſaith unto Jeſus, [Whence art thou?] But Jeſus gave him no anſwer.

9. What is thy ſtock or extraction?

10. Wilt thou behave thy ſelf thus obſtinately toward me, who have it in my power either to put thee to death, or to free thee from it?

10. Then ſaith Pilate unto him, [Speakeſt thou not unto me? knoweſt thou not that I have power to crucifie thee, and have power to releaſe thee?]

11. All power of the lawful magiſtrate is from God originally, and ſuch I acknowledge thine to be, and this the greater aggravation of the ſinne of the Jewiſh Sanhedrim to make that magiſtracy which is from God the inſtrument to ſerve their malice, and to crucifie the ſon of God, from whom he derives his power.

11. Jeſus anſwered, [Thou couldſt have no power at all againſt me, except it were given thee from above, therefore he that delivered me unto thee, hath the greater ſinne.]

12. thou doſt not perform the part of a Procurator of the Roman Empire:

12. And * from thenceforth Pilate ſought to releaſe him: but the Jewes cried out, ſaying, If thou let this man goe, [thou art not Cæſars friend:] Whoſoever maketh himſelf a king, † ſpeaketh againſt Cæſar.

13. When Pilate therefore heard that ſaying, he brought Jeſus forth, and ſat down in the judgment ſeat, in a place that is called the pavement, but in the [a Hebrew] Gabbatha.

15. But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucifie him. Pilate ſaith unto them, Shall I crucifie your King? The chief prieſts anſwered, We have no King but Cæſar.

16. Thereupon he paſſed ſentence againſt him, according to the votes of the Jewes, that he ſhould be crucified, and the ſouldiers, v. 23. led him away to execution.

16. Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified: and they took Jeſus and led him away.]

c. 17. And a croſſe being laid on his ſhoulder, he was led toward a place called in Syriack, Golgotha, i.e. the place of a ſcull (but by the way they met Simon of Cyrene and made him carry the croſſe part of the way.)

17. And he c bearing his croſſe went forth † into a place, called, The place of a ſcull, called in the Hebrew, Golgotha.]

20. This title then read many of the Jewes, for the place, where Jeſus was crucified, was nigh to the city: and it was written in [Hebrew, and Greek, and Latine.]

21. Then they of the Jewiſh Sanhedrim ſaid

21. Then ſaid the chief prieſts of the Jewes] to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jewes, but that he ſaid, I am King of the Jewes.

22. The inſcription ſhall not be altered.

23. Then the ſouldiers when they had crucified Jeſus, took his garments (and made four parts, to every ſouldier a part) and alſo his [coat, now the coat was without ſeam, woven from the top throughout.]

24. This therefore was exactly, according to that prediction, done by the ſouldiers.

24. They ſaid therefore among themſelves, Let us not rent it, but caſt lots for it, whoſe it ſhall be; that the ſcripture might be fulfilled, which ſaith, They parted my rayment among them, and † upon my veſture they did caſt lots. [Theſe things therefore the ſouldiers did.]

25. Now there ſtood by the croſſe of Jeſus his mother, and his mothers ſiſter, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

26. John, he ſaid unto his mother, John ſhall ſupply the place of a ſon to thee, to ſuſtain thee, (ſee note on 1 Tim. 5. b.)

26. When Jeſus therefore ſaw his mother, and [the diſciple ſtanding by, whom he loved, he ſaith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy ſon.]

27. And to John, Deale thou with her, as with thine own mother; whereupon John took her home to his own houſe with him.

27. Then ſaith he to the diſciple, Behold thy mother. And from that houre that diſciple took her unto his own home.]

28, 29. After this, Jeſus conſidering that all this while, or thus farre all the prophecies concerning him had punctually been fulfilled, to give farther occaſion to the fulfilling that of Pſal. 69. 22. he ſaith, I thirſt. Or, ſeeing that now all was completed, ſave only that one particular prediction, he calls for ſomewhat to drink, knowing that, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, they would give him vineger, And accordingly ſo they did.

28. After this Jeſus knowing that all things * were now accompliſhed, that the ſcripture might be fulfilled, ſaith, I thirſt.

29. Now there was ſet a veſſel full of vineger, and they filled a ſponge with vineger, and put it upon hyſſope, and put it to his mouth.]

30. And aſſoon as he had drunk of that, he ſaid aloud, All prophecies are now fulfilled, as farre as belongs to my life, and bowing his head, as in a geſture of adoration and prayer, he ſaid, Father, into thine hands I commend my ſpirit, and ſo expired.

30. When Jeſus therefore had received the vineger, he ſaid, It is finiſhed, and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghoſt.]

31. Then the Jews, that the bodies of the dead might be quickly taken from the croſſe, and not hang there on the day following, which was the firſt day of unleavened bread (to which this day of the Paſch was the eve or preparation) and alſo Saturday, and ſo a feaſt and a ſabbath together. d.

Notes on Chap. XIX.

a. Ἑβραϊστὶ

The word is Syriack or Chaldee, and ſo called Hebrew here, according to the cuſtome of the New Teſtament, which calls the Syriack language (being at that time the vulgar of the Jewes) the Hebrew, and therefore Nonnus in his paraphraſe reads Γαβαθὰ παλάζοντι Σύρῳ κελεύσθῳ μυθῳ. and v. 17. Γολγοθὰ ἡ κληίσιος Σύρων γλώσσα, —— and of the inſcription on the Croſſe Ἀνεγνῶ γλώσσῃ τε Σύρῃ, ᾗ Ἀχαλίδι φωνῇ the Syrian ſtill, where the Evangeliſts read Hebrew.

b. ὡσεὶ ἕκτη ἦν

Here is a ſeeming difference between the Evangeliſt, and S. Mark, in the ſpecifying the time of day, wherein Chriſt was condemned and led immediately to crucifixion. It is here ὡσεὶ ἕκτη ἦν, about the ſixt houre, but there Mar. 15. 25. ὥρα τρίτη καὶ ἐσταύρωσαν. It was the third houre and they crucified him. If the reading of the antient Greek and Latine MS. were here to be heeded, this controverſie were ſoon at an end, for that reads here τῇ ὡσεὶ τρίτῃ it was about the third houre. But the Kings MS. accords in the main with the printed copies τῇ ὡς ἕκτῃ it was as it were the ſixt. And it is more probable that the reading [τρίτη the third] in Mark ſhould move ſome tranſcribers here, to read τρίτη too, (to take away this ſeeming difference, and to accord the Evangeliſts which they conceived to differ, if it were read ἕκτη the ſixt,) then for any to turn τρίτη to ἕκτη, contrary to what was before in S. Mark, if they had found it otherwiſe. This other way then will be more proper to ſalve the difficulty. That the whole νυχθήμερον, night and day, or four and twenty hours, was divided into eight parts among the Jewes, is ordinarily known, each of them containing three houres, the third, the ſixt, the ninth, and the twelfth houre, and then the like again for the ſeverall watches of the night; Theſe alſo were houres of prayer, and of going up to the Temple in the day time, and at each of them the trumpet ſounded to congregate, or call pious perſons thither. This ſound of the trumpet was it that gave denomination to the houre; when the trumpet had ſounded to the ſixt-houre-prayers, it was then ſaid to be the ſixt houre, and not till then. Only when that time approached, and was nigh at hand, it was ſaid to be ὡς, or ὡσεὶ, about, or as 'twere the ſixt houre. Now not only that time, when that houre came, was call'd by that name, but alſo from that, all the ſpace of the three houres, till the next came, was called by the name of the former; all the ſpace from nine of clock till twelve was called the third houre, All from twelve till three after noon, the ſixt houre. So that, the time of Chriſts crucifixion being ſuppoſed to be ſomewhat before, but yet neer our twelve of clock, or midday, as it may truly be here ſaid that it was ὡσεὶ ἕκτη about or as 'twere the ſixt houre, (and ſo S. Luke hath it, chap. 23. 44.) ſo it is as truly and fitly ſaid by S. Mark, that it was ὥρα τρίτη the third hour, that ſpace which is call'd by the name of the third hour, being not yet paſt, though it drew toward an end.

c. Βαστάζειν σταυρόν

Chriſt's carrying his croſſe] was a part of the Roman cuſtome of crucifying, ſo ſaith Plutarch, de ſer: Num: Vin: τῷ σώματι τὸ κολαζόμενον ἔχειν καὶ τὸ κακοῦργον ἐυρίσκει τὸ αὑτῷ σταυρὸν, Every one of the malefactors, that are to be put to death, carries out his own croſſe. So Artemidorus, ὁ μέλλων σταυροῦσθαι πρότερον σταυρὸν βαστάζει, he that is to be nailed to the croſſe firſt carries it upon his ſhoulders, and ſo Plautus diſtinctly, Patibulum ferat per urbem, deinde affigatur cruci, Let him carry it through the city, and then be faſtned to it. And whereas in the other Goſpels, there is no mention of this, but only of their preſſing Simon of Cyrene to carry it for him (which is not mentioned here) the way of reconciling that difficulty is very eaſie, by affirming, that he firſt bare it himſelf according to the Roman cuſtome (which S. John, according to his wont, mentions, becauſe it was omitted by the reſt) but after, meeting Simon by the way, they made him bear it for him.

d. Μεγάλη ἡμέρα τοῦ σαββάτου

That day was the firſt of unleavened bread, and the ſabbath too, and therefore a ſabbath, and a great day. For that which is among the Hebrews חג a feaſt, מקרא, convocatio cœtus, the day of ſolemn aſſembly in any feaſt, (ſuch were the firſt day, and the laſt of the feaſt of tabernacles, the firſt, and ſeventh of the feaſt of unleavened bread, and the day of Pentecoſt) is by the Jewes, writing in Greek, called μεγάλη ἡμέρα, a great day. So it is rendred by the Greek Iſa. 1. 13. μεγάλην ἡμέραν, where we read calling of aſſemblies. Hence is that of Tertull: cont: Marci: l. 5. Dies obſervatis, &c. Yee obſerve daies, and among them he names jejunia & dies magnos, faſts and great daies, ſo Joh. 7. 37. the laſt day of the feaſt of tabernacles, which was a day of calling aſſemblies, is there call'd μεγάλη ἡμέρα τῆς ἑορτῆς, the great day of the feaſt, See Scal: proleg: de Emend: Temp: p. 7. & 26.

e. Ὁ ἑωρακὼς μεμαρτύρηκε

Ἅιμα καὶ ὕδωρ

This ſpeech of this Evangeliſt, and his ſo much care in the teſtifying of this fact from his own ſight of it, is an argument that he looked on it as a very weighty and conſiderable paſſage. And ſo 1 Joh. 5. 6. he makes uſe of it as ſuch; This is he that came with water and blood, not by water only, but by water and blood, and ver. 8. There be three, that bear witneſſe on earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood, and theſe three agree in one. What the particular is, wherein the weight of this paſſage lies, will be worth conſidering. And firſt it is ordinarily affirmed that there is a capſula on the left ſide of the heart, called the pericardium, which hath water in it, of continuall uſe for the cooling of the heart, and that the coming out of water with the blood here, was a teſtimony of the wounding his very heart, the entring of that iron, the ſpear, into his ſoul. Againſt this others have framed an objection, that it was not the left, but the right ſide of Chriſt, which was at this time wounded by the ſouldier, and that the Arabick texts generally expreſſe it ſo (ſee Kirſtenius Arab: Gram: p. 5.) and conſequently that the αἱματυδατίρυσις, the waters flowing out together with the blood, could not be any naturall effect of that wound. But that objection is of little force, for 1. ſuch is the poſture of the heart in the body, rather in the middle then enclining to the left ſide; and 2dly. ſo great is that pericardium, as anatomiſts find, eſpecially after death when the water much encreaſeth, that if the right ſide were pierced ſo deep as to the heart, it would ſend out water. And therefore this may firſt be reſolved, that this being an evidence of the wounding of the heart, and the Phyſicians maxime being certain, τραυματισθεὶς καρδίαν ἀποθανεῖται he that is wounded in the heart muſt certainly die, and Sanantur nullâ vulnera cordis ope, wounds in the heart are abſolutely incurable, this flowing of water with the blood was an evidence and demonſtration of his being truly dead (this one wound being ſufficient to ſecure that, if he had not been dead before, v. 33.) and ſo the confutation of moſt hereticks of the firſt ages, which affirmed him to have ſuffered death only in appearance. But beſide this, another concluſion S. John in his Epiſtle is willing to draw from it, viz: that beleiving Jeſus to be the ſon of God, is an effectuall means of overcoming the world, 1 Joh. 5. 5. for to the proving of that it is, that this obſervation is made uſe of by him, This is he that came with water and blood, v. 6. And that argument lies thus, The baits, or temptations, which the world uſeth, are of two ſorts, allurements of carnal pleaſures, and terrors from apprehenſion of perſecutions; the Gnoſticks at the time of his writing that Epiſtle made uſe of both theſe to ſeduce the Orthodox Chriſtians, the all kind of carnal pleaſures which they profeſt, was one bait, and the perſecutions from the Jewes upon the Orthodox Chriſtians, which the Gnoſticks, by complying with them, avoided. was the other temptation. Againſt theſe two S. John ſets up purity, and patience, as the two prime doctrines, and commands of Chriſt (which every true beleiver is ſtrictly concerned in) exemplified by himſelf, (who was 1. pure and ſinleſſe, and yet 2dly ſuffered death, the death of the croſſe) and moſt lively adumbrated by the water and blood, which he had obſerved to come from Chriſt's ſide in this place. The water that was the embleme of all ſpotleſſe purity, and the blood was the evidence of his fortitude and conſtant patience, laying down his life for the truth of God, and theſe two μαρτυροῦσι teſtifie, and declare the neceſſity of theſe two (and ſo of overcoming the world) in every one that beleives aright in Chriſt. And whereas 'tis there added, that the Spirit teſtifies alſo, and that the Spirit (i. e. the Spirit, as a witneſſe, i. e. the teſtimony of the Spirit) agrees in one with theſe two, i. e. with the teſtimonies of the water and blood, that is thus to be interpreted, not only that the Spirit coming down on Chriſt, who was after crucified by the Jewes, did teſtifie that he was the beloved ſon of God in whom he was well pleaſed, i. e. perfectly innocent, though he ſuffered for ſinne, but alſo that the Spirit after the reſurrection of Chriſt, coming on the Apoſtles, came as Chriſts advocate to defend him, and convince the world, both in that action concerning righteouſneſſe, proving that Chriſt was a moſt innocent and righteous perſon, and in that other concerning judgment, in puniſhing and retaliating his crucifiers, the Jewes, and Satan himſelf, deſtroying their kingdome for their deſtroying of him, (ſee note on c. 16. a.) Beſide this importance of the water and blood, the ancients have obſerved another alſo, that that by a ſpeciall act of Gods providence there flowed at this time from Chriſt's ſide the two ſacraments of his Church, baptiſme, and the ſupper of the Lord.

f. Ὅ ἑωρακε μεμ. This is one of the places in which (as alſo Rev. 1.7.) the Evangeliſt quotes the teſtimony of the Old Teſtament, not from the Septuagint, but from the Hebrew text. For in the place of Zach. 12.10. the Septuagint or Greek tranſlators read καὶ βλέψονται πρὸς μὲ ἀνθ' ὧν κατωρχήσαντο, reading, it ſeems, דקרו for דקרו by the miſtake of the two letters which are ſo like, ר and ד.

g. Ὀθόνιον as ὀθόνη in Heſychius ſignifies ἀνδὼν, ζώνη, πλαμὼν, and πλαμὼν is by him rendred δεσμὸς, φακελος, a band or ſwath, ſo ch. 20.7. and ſo the κειρία in the ſtory of Lazarus c. 11.44. which word is by Grammarians derived from κὴρ mors, and ſo ſignifies peculiarly thoſe ſwathes that belong to dead men, wherein their whole body was wound, πανταχόθεν ὅλον δεσμὸς ἔχει κειρίας, ſaith Nonnus. In relation to which it is that Act. 5.6. they are ſaid to wind up Ananias, when he is dead.

CHAP. XX.

Paraphraſe.

* in the morning, πρωΐ

1. THE firſt day of the week [cometh Mary Magdalene] * early when it was yet dark, unto the ſepulchre, and ſeeth the ſtone taken away from the ſepulchre,

1. Came Mary Magdalene (and divers other women, that had followed Jeſus in his life-time Lu. 24. 10.)

2. Then ſhe runneth away and cometh to Simon Peter, and to [the other diſciple, whom Jeſus loved, and ſaith unto them, They have taken away the Lord] out of the ſepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

2. John, the writer of this Goſpel, and told them, The body of the Lord is taken-

3. Peter therefore went forth, and that other diſciple, and came to the ſepulchre.

4. So they ran both together, and that other diſciple did outrun Peter, and came firſt to the ſepulchre.

† And ſtooping down to look, he ſees the ſwaths, οθονια κειμενα βλεπει.

5. † And he ſtooping down and looking in, ſaw the linen clothes lying, yet went he not in.

6. Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the ſepulchre, and ſeeth the linen clothes lie,

7. And the napkin that was about his head not lying with the linen clothes, but * wrapped together in a place by it ſelf.

* folded up, ἐντετυλιγμενον

† Then therfore, τοτε ουν

8. † Then went in alſo that other diſciple, which came firſt to the ſepulchre, and he ſaw and beleived.]

8. And then upon his report John alſo, that other diſciple which came before Peter (ſee ch. 1. c.) to the ſepulchre, went in, and ſaw how the ſwathes and napkin were laid, and beleived what Mary and Peter had told him, and was thereby convinced that he was riſen.

* ought to riſe, δει αναστηναι

9. For as yet they knew not the ſcripture, that he * muſt riſe again from the dead.]

9. For as yet they were not aſſured by the propheciet of ſcripture that it was to be ſo, neither did they beleive the teſtimonies of thoſe, that ſaw him riſen, Mar. 16.11,12,13,14.

† to themſelves, προς ἑαυτους, ſee note a.

10. Then the diſciples went away again † unto their own home.

11. But Mary ſtood without at the ſepulchre weeping, and as ſhe wept, ſhe ſtooped down, and looked into the ſepulchre [a],

a.

12. And ſeeth two Angels in white, ſitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, [where the body of Jeſus had layen.]

12. of the tomb.

13. And they ſay unto her, Woman, why weepeſt thou? She ſaith unto them, becauſe they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14. And when ſhe had thus ſaid, ſhe turned her ſelf back and ſaw Jeſus ſtanding, and knew not that it was Jeſus.]

14. And having ſaid ſo, and received anſwer from the Angels that he was riſen from the dead, and that ſhe ſhould go and tell his diſciples &c. Mat. 28. 5,6. Mar. 16.6,7. Lu. 24.6. ſhe went from the ſepulchre toward the place where the diſciples were, Mat. 28.8. and as ſhe goes, (ſee note a.) ſhe ſees a perſon ſtanding, which indeed was Jeſus, though ſhe knew him not.

15. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Woman, why weepeſt thou? whom ſeekeſt thou? She ſuppoſing him to be the Gardner, ſaith unto him, Sir, if thou have born him hence, tell me where thou haſt laid him, [and I will take him away.]

15. and I will carry him to his grave again, or provide ſome other burying place for him.

16. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Mary. She turned her ſelf and ſaith unto him, Rabboni, which is to ſay, Maſter.

17. Jeſus ſaith unto her, [Touch me not, for I am not yet aſcended to my Father; but goe to my brethren, and ſay unto them, I aſcend unto my Father, and your Father, and to my God, and your God.]

17. This is not a time for me to company with you, as I was wont, but I go to prepare a place for you in heaven, where you ſhall hereafter enjoy me.

18. Mary Magdalen came, and told the diſciples that ſhe had ſeen the Lord, and that he had ſpoken theſe things unto her.

* And when it was evening, that day being the firſt day of the week, & the dores being ſhut, ουσης ουν ὀψιας τῇ ἡμερᾳ ἐκείνῃ τῇ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων, καὶ τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων

19. * Then the ſame day at evening, being the firſt day of the week, when the dores [were ſhut, where the diſciples were aſſembled for fear of the Jews,] came Jeſus and ſtood in the midſt, and ſaith unto them, Peace be unto you.

19. dores of the roome where they were together were ſhut, for the more ſecrecy to avoid danger from the Jewes,

20. And when he had ſo ſaid, he ſhewed unto them his hands and his ſide. Then were the diſciples glad, when they ſaw the Lord.

21. I take my leave of you (ſee c. 14. 27.)

21. Then ſaid Jeſus to them again, [Peace be unto you, As my Father hath ſent me, even ſo [b] ſend I you.]

b. And doe now give you the ſame commiſſion to execute in the Church when I am gone, which my Father gave me at my coming.

22. And by that embleme ſignified to them the holy Ghoſt which ſhould ſhortly come down upon them, (and thereby all thoſe gifts of the Spirit of God, which ſhould be neceſſary to fit them for the diſcharge of their office) Act. 2. 1. till which time they were to wait at Jeruſalem, Lu. 24. 49.

22. And when he had ſaid this, he breathed on them, [and ſaith unto them,

c. [c] Receive ye the holy Ghoſt.]

d. 23. See Mat. 16. note h. and Tract, Of the Power of the Keyes.

23. Whoſeſoever ſins ye remit [d], they are remitted unto them; and whoſeſoever ſins ye retain, they are retained.

24. otherwiſe called Didymus, which by interpretation ſignifies the Twin.

24. But Thomas one of the twelve, [called * Didymus] was not with them, when Jeſus came.

* the Twin, διδυμος

25. I ſhall not be perſwaded that it is he.

25. The other diſciples therefore ſaid unto him, We have ſeen the Lord. But he ſaid unto them, Except I ſhall ſee in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thruſt my hand into his ſide, [I will not beleive.]

e. 26. the week after, the next week, that day ſeven nights, the diſciples were again met at the ſervice of God, and Thomas was with them, and when the dores had been faſt ſhut for the more ſecrecie and ſecurity, Jeſus again as v. 19. came in upon them.

26. And [after [e] eight daies again his diſciples were within, and Thomas with them, then came Jeſus, the dores being ſhut,] and ſtood in the midſt, and ſaid, Peace be unto you.

27. Then ſaith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thruſt it into my ſide, and be not faithleſſe, but beleiving.

28. I acknowledge that thou art my very Lord, and Maſter, and that is an evidence to me that thou art the omnipotent God of heaven.

28. And Thomas anſwered, and ſaid unto him, [My Lord and my God.]

29. Thy faith would have been more excellent, and more eminently rewardable, if without ſuch demonſtrative evidence thou hadſt beleived, and ſo is their faith, who have beleived without it.

29. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Thomas, becauſe thou haſt ſeen me, thou haſt beleived, [bleſſed are they that have not ſeen, and yet have beleived.]

30. And many other ſignes truly did Jeſus in the preſence of his diſciples, which are not written in this book.

31. Meſſias.

31. But theſe are written that ye might beleive that Jeſus is the [Chriſt,] the ſon of God, and that beleiving, ye might have life through his name.

Notes on Chap. XX.

2. Θυμὶ δύο ἀγγέλοις

Some difference there ſeemeth to be betwixt theſe narrations in this, and in S. Lukes Goſpel, As 1. Maries going to Peter, and his coming to the ſepulchre are here ſet down before the appearance of the Angels, but in Luke the viſion of the Angels is firſt mentioned c. 24. 4. and her going v. 9. and Peter's running to the ſepulchre v. 12. And in the other Goſpels there is no mention of her going, till ſhe had ſeen the viſion. This ſeeming difference will be reconciled only by obſerving this one thing (which hath been formerly obſerved note b. on the Title of the Goſpel, and Lu. 6. note d.) that Luke writing from notes, which he had collected from eye-witneſſes, and not from his own knowledge, obſerves not ſo exactly the order of time, where things were done or ſpoken, but oft-times in another method, puts together things of affinity to one another, though not done or ſaid at the ſame time, and ſo here ſets down all that concerns the women together, and then after, that which concerns Peter, though part of that which concern'd the women were done after that, which is mentioned of Peter. The punctuall obſervation of the order being not neceſſary, when the things themſelves are truly recited. The true order of the ſtory ſeems to ſtand thus, Mary and the women came to the ſepulchre, Mat. 28. 1. Mar. 16. 2. Lu. 24. 1. Joh. 20. 1. and coming they find, that before they came, an Angel with an earthquake had rolled away the ſtone, Mat. 28. 2. where the Σεισμὸς ἐγένετο, there was an earthquake, muſt be taken in the time perfectly paſt, there had been an earthquake, and an Angel had rolled away the ſtone, for in all the other Goſpels it is ſaid at their coming, Mat. 16. 3. that it was rolled away, and they found, Mat. 28. 2. and here, ſhe ſeeth the ſtone rolled away, and then, going in, they found not the body of Jeſus, Lu. 24. 2. Upon this Mary runs to Peter and John, which paſſage is only mentioned here, Then Peter, Lu. 24. 12. and Peter and John here, run to the ſepulchre, and ſatisfie themſelves of the truth of her report, and having done ſo, Peter in Luke, and both of them here, ver. 10. return to their own abodes. Where by the way the phraſe here uſed for their returning home, being ἀπῆλθον πάλιν εἰς ἑαυτούς, they went away again, or back to themſelves, gives us reaſon to think that Lu. 24. 12. the words ſhould not be read ἐν ἀπῆλθε, πρὸς ἑαυτὸν θαυμάζων τὸ γεγονὸς, and he departed, wondring in himſelf &c. but, he departed to himſelf, i.e. to his place of abode, wondring &c. While they returned, the women, it ſeems, ſtay at the ſepulchre, Mary here v. 11. and the women Lu. 24. 4. doubting what it ſhould be; and then follows the appearance of the

ἀπῆλθον δὲ πάλιν εἰς ἑαυτούς

the Angels one or more, two here v. 12. and Lu. 24. 4. one in Matthew and Mark, ſitting on the ſtone, Mat. 28. 2. on the right ſide of the monument, Mar. 16. 5. which being ſuppoſed to be one and the ſame Angel, doth not yet exclude a ſecond mentioned by theſe other two Evangeliſts. The Angels ſpeake to the women, in all the Goſpels, and aſſure them of the reſurrection of Chriſt, and upon that the women depart to tell the news, This is here ſaid in theſe words. Ταῦτα εἰποῦσα ἐστράφη εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, having ſaid this ſhe turned backward, not that ſhe did ſo, before ſhe received any anſwer to her ſpeech, but the anſwer being at large ſet down in all the Goſpels, that Chriſt was riſen, that he had before told them he ſhould riſe Lu. 24. 7. that they ſhould carry the diſciples word of it, and that they ſhould ſee him in Galilee, Mat. 28. 7. Mar. 16. 7. there was no need for John that wrote thoſe things eſpecially, that were omitted by the other, to mention this. And therefore ſuppoſing that anſwer to intervene after her ſpeech to the Angel, it follows agreeably to the other Goſpels, that ſhe departed from the ſepulchre, now the ſecond time, to report his reſurrection to all his diſciples, according to the Angels appointment. And in that paſſage all the Evangeliſts concurre, Lu. 24. 9. the women returned, which is all one with, ſhe turned backward here, And in Matthew, and Mark, they went out with haſt to tell the diſciples.

b. Κελεύει πέμπειν ὑμᾶς

The Jews have a ſaying that A mans Apoſtle is as himſelf, i. e. is his vicarius or proxy. For the Jews had Apoſtles, whom they ſent on their affairs into the countries, and are not to be looked on, as bare meſſengers, but as their proxies or deputies to receive their dues, and to act for them. So Ἀπόστολος Saul was an Apoſtle of the Conſiſtory to Damascus Act. 9. with letters of Commiſſion from the Rulers. Thus the twelve, after Chriſts departure, had others, whom they ſent on ſome parts of their charge, and then they were called their Apoſtles, So Paul and Barnabas had John, Act. 13. 5. Paul had Timothy and Eraſtus, Acts 19. 22. and Marke, 2 Tim. 4. 11. Theſe when they were employed in preaching the Goſpel to them, that had not yet received it, the Scripture calls Evangeliſts, i. e. diſciples of the Apoſtles, ſent with commiſſion by them to publiſh the Goſpel, where the Apoſtles could not go, and therefore are by S. Paul placed next the Apoſtles, 1 Cor. 12. 28. Epheſ. 4. 11. Thus Philip the Deacon, being employed by the twelve to Preach at Samaria, is called Philip the Evangeliſt, Act. 8. 5. 12. and c. 21. 8. ſo was Steven to the Jews, Act. 6. 9. and ſo Timothy 2 Tim. 4, 5. Phil. 2. 19. and ſo Luke and others are called Apoſtles of the Churches 2 Cor. 8. 18, 19. 23. and, as ſuch, δόξα Χριστοῦ, the glory of Chriſt, the word which is uſed to denote the preſence of God in any place, and ſo there intimates the preſence of Chriſt in them his ſubſtitutes or proxies. Thus S. Peter preached at Rome by himſelf, at Alexandria by S. Mark, his Apoſtle; S. Paul at Rome by his Apoſtles, of whom Andronicus and Junias were the moſt eminent, Rom. 16. 7. which ſeems to be the reaſon of the difference among the Eccleſiaſticall writers about the next ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles in ſome Seas. By all this appears the meaning of this ſpeech of Chriſt, that as he was Gods Apoſtle or meſſenger, and ſo his proxy or vicarius on the earth, ſo the diſciples were now made his, μαθηταὶ diſciples, attendants of his, before, v. 20. but now by this ſending, ἀπόστολοι Apoſtles for ever after; ſent as Commiſſioners to ſupply his place, to performe thoſe offices over the world (to plant a Church) which he being now about to return to his father, could not corporally do, and ſo to ſucceed him in his office, and they again to ſend or conſtitute others in the like manner, ſee note on Lu. 6. d.

c. Λάβετε πνεῦμα

Λάβετε πνεῦμα ἅγιον, receive the holy Ghoſt,] ſignifies here not the actual giving of the holy Ghoſt, (for that came not on them till Act. 2. and they are appointed to ſtay at Jeruſalem Lu. 24. 49. till they were endued with power from above, which therefore, now before his aſcenſion they had not received, and when the Spirit came it would lead them into all truth, and as yet it appears by their queſtion Act. 1. 6. that they were not thus led into all truth) but only the confirming to them his former promiſe, (and, by the ceremony of breathing on them, to expreſſe the τὸ πνεῦμα, the eternall breath, and Spirit of God, ſealing it, as it were ſolemnly unto them) and preparing and fitting them for the receiving of it. So ſaith Theophylact, τὸ δὲ [λάβετε πνεῦμα] ἀντὶ τοῦ γένεσθε δεκτικοὶ τοῦ λαβεῖν πνεῦμα, The words [receive the holy Ghoſt] ſignifie, be yet ready to receive him. And again, ἐμφυσᾷ, ὡς τὴν τελείαν δωρεὰν τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος οὐκ ἀντῆς νῦν, &c. He breathed on them, not now diſtributing the perfect gift of the holy Ghoſt, for that was to be done at Pentecoſt, but fitting them for the receiving of it. For though in the next words [whoſe ſignes, &c.] the power of the Keys, or ſtewardſhip in the Church were actually inſtated on them, yet was not this to be exerciſed by them, till the holy Ghoſt came down upon them, as Epheſ. 4. 8. It is firſt, he gave gifts unto men, (at the deſcent of the Spirit) and then, gave ſome Apoſtles, &c. v. 11. This interpretation of this place, will direct to the full importance of thoſe words Lu. 24. 49. I ſend the promiſe of my father upon you] ſo as to render them directly parallel to this. The promiſe of the Father was the holy Ghoſt Joh. 15. 26. and the [I ſend upon you] all one with [λάβετε receive him.] And then the power from on high in the end of the verſe, clearly ſignifies that viſible miſſion of the holy Ghoſt. And all this moſt aptly delivered for the proof of the words here immediately precedent, As my father ſent me, ſo ſend I you,] intimating that as at his miſſion from his father to his office, he was anointed, or conſecrated with, or by the holy Ghoſt Act. 10. 38. by deſcent of the holy Ghoſt on him at his baptiſme Lu. 3. 23. ſo the Apoſtles at their miſſion or entrance on their power ſhould be conſecrated alſo.

Ἐπαγγελία τοῦ πατρός

d. That the power of binding and looſing in Saint Matthew, firſt promiſed c. 16. then farther deſcribed for the manner of it c. 18. the power of the Keyes, of admitting and excluding out of the Church and ſo the power of excommunication put into the hands of the Apoſtles firſt, and from them communicated to the ſucceeding Governours of the Church, is it which is here given by Chriſt, may appear by the words ἀφίητε remit, and κρατῆτε retain, which are perfectly all one with λύω and Nio looſing looſing and binding in S. Matthew. If there be any difference, it is only this, that δέω ſignifies to bind, κρατέω ſignifies to keep bound as well as to bind, in which reſpect κρατέω is here more proper in this place, then the other, becauſe the order is here inverted, and κρατῶν retaining] put after ἀφῶν remitting, and ſo the word which ſignifies to keep bound, is more critically adapted to this place, then δέω to bind] would have been, and yet when binding is mentioned firſt, δῆσαι (as in the other places) is as exact as κρατῆσαι. This ſlight difference being granted, the words are otherwiſe to all uſes perfectly Synonymous, Ἀφῶν remit [and λύσητε looſe] eſpecially as applyed to ſin, both ſignifie forgiving of it, the firſt referring to ſin in the notion of a debt or thraldom (to both which it is applied in the new Teſtament, to ἀφειλήματα debts Mat. 6. 12. ἀχμαλωσία captivity Lu. 4. 18.) the ſecond to ſin in the notion of a band, ſo Gen. 4. 12. μείζων ἡ ἀνομία, or ἁμαρτία μου τοῦ ἀφεθῆναι, my ſin is greater then can be forgiven. So Exod. 32. 21. εἰ μὲν ἀφεῖς αὐτοῖς ἁμαρτίαν, O that thou wouldeſt forgive them that ſin, And ſo λύσει Job 42. 9. ἔλυσε τὴν ἁμαρτίαν αὐτοῖς διὰ Ἰὼβ, he forgave them their ſin by Job, i.e. by his mediation, where the Hebrew read נשא פני God accepted the perſon of Job. So alſo for δέω and κρατέω, the ſame Hebrew word עצר is by the Septuagint rendred by both of them, δέω Jer. 33. 1. κρατέω Dan. 10. 8. & 11 6. and ſo Act. 2. 24. [κρατεῖσθαι being holden] is ſet oppoſite to [λύσας looſing] and ſo muſt ſignifie being kept bound, and ſo almoſt in all other places it ſignifies to hold faſt, or take hold of, and is ſometimes joyned with ἔδησαν, (as holding faſt is preparative to binding) Mat. 14. 3. κρατήσας ἔδησε laying hold on him bound him, and Rev. 20. 2. ἐκράτησε καὶ ἔδησε he held faſt and bound. So in S. Baſil ſpeaking of the freedome of Chriſtians in their hands, he ſaith they are κεκρατημένοι ἀκράτητοι, bound but not capable of binding. And accordingly it is affirmed by Theophylact on Mat. 13. that Chriſts promiſe of the power of binding and looſing was fulfilled in theſe words, Whoſe ſins you do remit they are remitted &c. And therefore whatſoever is brought by * ſome to avoid the force of thoſe places in S. Matthew. and to caſt off the cenſures of the Church, (by affirming that to bind there, is to declare forbidden, and to looſe, to declare lawfull) being utterly unappliable to this place, where it is not whatſoever, as there, (which is more lyable to that miſinterpretation) but whoſe ſins &c. (which is no way capable of it, for it cannot be imagined that Chriſt ſhould mean whoſe ſinnes ye ſhall declare lawfull, or unlawfull) by this one method of ſearching the meaning of theſe two words in this place, is proved utterly uneffectuall. Of this ſee more at large in the Tract of the power of binding and looſing.

* M. Selden de Cal. Heb. & de Syned.

The phraſe μεθ' ἡμέρας ὀκτώ] ſignifies after another week (i. e. as it ſeems, on the firſt day of the week, as before ver. 19. For ſo the Jews expreſſe a week by eight days, So Joſephus Ant. lib. 7. cap. 9. having ſaid ὅτε ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ, preſently he explains it by ἀπὸ Σαββάτου ἐπὶ Σάββατον from week to week. Thus when S. Luke ſaith cap. 9. 28. [ὡσεὶ ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ, about eight days, S. Matthew c. 17. 1. hath μεθ' ἡμέρας ἕξ, after ſix days, the truth being that it was that day ſeven-night, which including the firſt and the laſt day is called eight days, and excluding them, and referring onely to the intervall betwixt, is called ſix days. Thus do we in the diſtinction of agues, which we call the quartan and the tertian, in each including the two days which are the extremes, and not onely the intervall between the fits. c. CHAP. XXI.

1. lake of Genneſareth (ſee note on Lu. 8. c.)

1. AFter theſe things, Jeſus ſhewed himſelf again to the diſciples at the [ſea of Tiberias,] and on this wiſe ſhewed he himſelf.

2. Bartholomew perhaps (ſee note on c. 1. c.) and James and John,

2. There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called * Didymus, and [Nathaniel of Cana in Galilee, and the ſons of Zebedee,] and two other of his diſciples. * the Twinne

3. And Simon returning to his trade again, called the reſt to go to fiſhing, and they agreed to do ſo, And

3. Simon Peter ſaith unto them, I go a fiſhing. They ſay unto him, We alſo go with thee.] They went forth and entred into a ſhip immediately, and that night they caught nothing.

4. But either he was ſo diſguiſed, or their eyes ſo held by Gods power and pleaſure, that though they ſaw a man, they knew not who it was.

4. But when the morning was now come, Jeſus ſtood on the ſhore, [but the diſciples knew not that it was Jeſus.]

5. Then Jeſus calling to them in a familiar manner, asked them, ſaying,

5. Then Jeſus ſaith unto them, Children,] have ye any meat? They anſwred him, No.

6. He ſaid unto them, Caſt the net on the right ſide of the ſhip, and ye ſhall find: They caſt therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fiſhes.

7. Hereupon John told Peter, Aſſuredly it is Jeſus; Now when Peter heard it was Jeſus, he would not ſtay, but only put on his upper garment (having nothing before but his inner garment upon him,) and went into the lake to goe to him.

7. Therefore that diſciple whom Jeſus loved ſaith unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his * fiſhers coat unto him (for he was naked,) and did caſt himſelf into the ſea.] * upper garment about him, τὸν ἐπενδύτην

8. And

8. And the other diſciples came in a little ſhip, (for they were not farre from land, but as it were two hundred cubits) dragging the net with fiſhes.]

8. And the reſt of them did not ſo, but being not farre from land, where Jeſus was, went to him by boat, dragging the net, full of fiſhes, along with them.

9. As ſoon as they were come to land, [they ſaw a fire of coals there, and fiſh laid thereon and bread.]

9. they diſcern a greater miracle then the former, a fire of coals, and a fiſh laid on it, and bread, all created or produced out of nothing, by the power of Chriſt.

10. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Bring of the fiſh, which ye have now caught.

11. Simon Peter went up] and drew the net to land, full of great fiſhes, an hundred and fifty and three, and for all there were ſo many, yet was not their net broken.

11. Simon went into the ſhip, or boat,

12. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the diſciples durſt ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13. Jeſus then cometh and taketh bread and giveth them, and fiſh likewiſe.]

13. took bread and fiſh, and eat himſelf, and gave them to eat, to ſignifie to them the reality of his reſurrection, See note on Mat.26. f.

14. This is now the third time that Jeſus ſhewed himſelf to his diſciples, after that he was riſen from the dead.]

14. This was the third day of Chriſt's appearing to his diſciples after his reſurrection, though the firſt time of his appearance, and the fourth that he appeared to the diſciples, yet the third time alſo that he appeared to all, or more of them together.

15. So when they had dined, Jeſus ſaith to Simon Peter, [Simon, ſon of † Jonas [a], loveſt thou me more then theſe? He ſaith unto him, Yea Lord, thou knoweſt that I love thee. He ſaith unto him, Feed my lambs.]

14. Peter, Is thy love to me ſo great as thou didſt ſeem to affirm it, when Mat.26.33. thou ſaidſt though all men ſhould forſake me, thou wouldſt not? Is thy love ſurpaſſing the love of all other my diſciples? Or is thy love agreeable to this thy expreſſion of it, in caſting thy ſelf into the ſea to come to me? v.7. And he anſwered, Lord, thou knoweſt that I love thee ſincerely, though now being taught by my former fall, I ſhall not make compariſon with all others. He ſaith unto him, Let thy love be expreſt to me, in thy care of that flock committed to thee.

16. He ſaith unto him again the ſecond time, Simon ſon of Jonas, loveſt thou me? He ſaith unto him, Yea Lord, thou knoweſt that I love thee. He ſaith unto him, Feed my ſheep.

17. He ſaith unto him the third time, Simon ſon of Jonas, loveſt thou me?] Peter was grieved becauſe he ſaid unto him the third time, Loveſt thou me? And he ſaid unto him, Lord, thou knoweſt all things, thou knoweſt that I love thee. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Feed my ſheep.

17. Jeſus to exemplifie to him, how he was to uſe the power of the keyes promiſed to him, Mat.16. calls him here three times (proportionably to his threefold denial) to confeſſe Chriſt, and his love to him, and ſo to clear himſelf, 2 Cor.1.11.

18. Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, [when thou waſt young, thou girdedſt thy ſelf, and walkedſt whither thou wouldeſt; but when thou ſhalt be old, thou ſhalt ſtretch forth thy hands, and another ſhall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldeſt not.]

18. In the former part of thine age thou haſt been free to doe what even now thou didſt, ver.7. to live at thine own pleaſure, but age ſhall bring preſſures and afflictions on thee, within 40 years thou ſhalt be taken, and doe as captives doe, when they yeild to the greater force, and be bound (ſee Lu.12.b.) and carried to the croſſe, the place of execution.

19. This ſpake he ſignifying by what death he ſhould glorifie God. And when he had ſpoken this, he ſaith unto him, Follow me.]

19. This ſpeech of Chriſt was a figurative expreſſion that crucifixion was the kind of death, by which he ſhould confeſſe Chriſt. And to this he added theſe words, Follow me, i. e. thou ſhalt follow me in ſuffering, as before thou didſt in diſcipleſhip.

20. Then Peter turning about, ſeeth [the diſciple, whom Jeſus loved, following, which alſo leaned on his breaſt at ſupper, and ſaid,] Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

20. John, Chriſt's beloved diſciple, who at his laſt ſupper was next unto him, c.13.23. and asked him that queſtion,

21. Peter ſeeing him, ſaith to Jeſus, Lord, [* and what ſhall this man doe?]

21. But what ſhall this mans fate be?

* But what ſhall this man? Τί δὲ οὗτος;

22. Jeſus ſaith unto him, [If I will that he tarry [b] till I come, what is that to thee, Follow thou me.]

22. I told you of ſome that ſhould eſcape the fury of the evil times approaching, and continue to the time, that I ſhall come in judgment againſt Jeruſalem, and deſtroy it by the Romans: And what harm is it to thee? and how art thou concerned to know, if John be one of theſe? thou art likely to follow me to the croſſe, and the cheerfull doing of that, becomes thee better then this curioſity.

b) 5

† Hereupon or therefore Τοῦτο οὖν, * dyeth not, οὐκ ἀποθνήσκει

23. † Then went this ſaying abroad among the brethren, that that diſciple * ſhould not die: yet Jeſus ſaid not unto him, he ſhall not die, but if I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?

24. This is the diſciple which teſtifieth theſe things and wrote of theſe things, and we know that his teſtimony is true.]

24. This is he that is the author of this Goſpel, which he preacht in Aſia, and about two and thirty years after Chriſts aſcenſion, by the entreaty of the Aſian Biſhops wrote and publiſh't it, And the Chriſtians of Aſia, eſpecially of the Church of Epheſus know ſo much of his good life, miracles and veracity, and withall of the agreeableneſſe of his time of death with what is here affirmed to be foretold by Chriſt, that we cannot but approve his teſtimony, and affix our ſeal to all that is in this Goſpel affirmed by him.

25. And

c. 25. Thus much was written by S. John, but much more was done by Jeſus, many miracles &c. all which if they were diſtinctly ſet down in writing, they would even fill the world, the volumes would be ſo many.

25. And there are alſo many other things which Jeſus did, the which if they ſhould be written every one, [c] I ſuppoſe that even the world it ſelf could not contain the books which ſhould be written.] Amen.

Notes on Chap. XXI.

2. Νοσφισ μαι; To love Chriſt is ſo to love, as to hold out in confeſſing of him in the time of the greateſt danger, ſee note on Rev. 2. 4. that love that caſteth out fear, 1 Joh. 4. 18. So here it is oppoſed to renouncing, or denying of Chriſt in the time of triall. Peter had reſolved he would never thus renounce Chriſt, though all others ſhould, which was in effect that he loved Chriſt more then any other diſciple did, But having failed foully in that particular, at the time of Chriſt's arraignment, and denied him three times, when no other diſciple, ſave Judas, did once, Chriſt now calls to his mind that former ſpeech, and contrary performance of his, and by thrice repeating this queſtion [Peter loveſt thou me?] in reſpect of his three denials, and the firſt time adding the words [more then theſe?] in reſpect of his magnifying his love beyond all others, he now engageth him by the ſenſe of his fall, to a better diſcharge, and more conſtant expreſſion of his love in converting men to the faith of Chriſt, and labouring in the Goſpel, and to raiſe him up with ſome comfort after ſo ſharp an admonition, he foretells him, that now indeed he ſhould ſuffer death for the teſtimony of this truth.

b. Ἐως ἔρχομαι What is oft meant in the Goſpels by the coming of Chriſt (viz: that famous execution upon the Jews) hath been oft mention'd, (ſee note on Mat. 16. 0. & 24. b.) This John did ſurvive; Peter, of whom Chriſt prophecies here v 18. being put to death in Nero's time, but John continuing not only till Titus's time, but through Domitian's and Cocceius Nerva's to Trajan's reign, above an hundred years after Chriſt's birth, and ſo 30. years after this coming of Chriſt was paſt. So ſaith Iren: l. 2. p. 192. A. and by what he adds of the Seniores qui non ſolum Joannem viderint, ſed & alios Apoſtolos, the Elders which ſaw not John only, but the other Apoſtles alſo, 'tis probable, that ſome others of the Apoſtles lived to that time of Trajane alſo.

That S. John wrote this Goſpel at the entreaty of the Biſhops of Aſia, conſtituted by him, is affirmed by Euſebius, To which it is agreeable that they ſhould ſet their ſignall, or Teſtimony to it, to recommend it to other Churches reception, And accordingly, the atteſtation is given in the plural number, ver. 24. οἴδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθὴς, we know that his teſtimony is true.] And then this laſt verſe, though it may be a concluſion of S. Johns, (the former atteſtation being included as in a parentheſis,) yet may it alſo well be a part of that atteſtation, cauſed by the conſideration of the fabrick of this Goſpel, on purpoſe deſigned not to ſet down all the paſſages of Chriſt's ſtory, but ſome eminent ones, paſt by by the other Evangeliſts, The reaſon of which is here rendred becauſe it would be too long to ſet down all; One only obiection there is againſt the Biſhops of Aſia being authors of this laſt verſe, becauſe the word οἶμαι I ſuppoſe] is here in the ſingular number; but that is anſwered by obſerving that that word is a form uſual in hyperbole's, which as it keeps this, and the like ſpeeches from being falſe, as they would be, were they by way of poſitive affirmation, ſo is it uſed indifferently, whether it be one, or more that ſpeak it.

THE ACTS OF THE HOLY APOSTLES.

Πρόξεις Ἀποστόλων.

THat which is usefull to be premised concerning this book of the Acts of the Apostles, may be reduced to these few heads: a.

1. That Saint Luke the Physitian, which wrote the Gospel from the advertisements, which he had received from the followers and disciples of Christ which were present and eye-witnesses of the relations, wrote this history partly from other mens, partly from his own knowledge, being a companion of S. Paul's travails, for some time.

2. That this story is confined to the passages of two (not enlarged to the travails of all the) Apostles, viz: of S. Peter and S. Paul, and so doth no way pretend to give us any full relation of the plantation of Christianity in all parts, (whither all the rest of the Apostles must be presumed to have gone out, as to their severall μερίδας or κλήρους, or τόπους, c. 1. 25. their lots or places, or provinces,) but only affords us an essay, or tast first of what was done in Judea and Samaria among the Jewes remaining there, and in other cities of Syria, Asia, Macedonia &c. even to Rome, among the Jewes in their dispersions, and secondly of the revealing the Gospel to the Gentiles, first to some single families, as that of Cornelius, and, after the Jewes had given evidences of their obstinate resolutions of opposing them (upon that account especially, that they preacht to the Gentiles) then to whole cities and regions, professly departing to the Gentiles, as those among whom they were assured of better successes, then they had found among the Jewes. According to which pattern it is reasonable to beleive (what we learn not from holy scriptures more particularly, but from other stories) that the rest of the Apostles proceeded and acted in their severall journyings, and so likewise other Apostolical persons imployed by the Primary Apostles, whither they were not at leasure to go themselves. All which as it concludes the usefulnesse, and necessity of other histories to give us a perfect knowledge of those first Apostolical times, so it is farre from prejudging the authority and credit of those other Records and relations, which having no sacred character upon them, are yet written by those, whom we have no reason to suspect, as deceivers, though we acknowledge them fallible.

3. That of S. Peters actions, or travails, the relations here given us are very few, not to be compared with the many other, which are not mention'd, And they proceed no farther, then to his deliverance from Herods imprisonment, and the death of that persecutor, which happen'd in the year of Christ 44. After which he is known to have lived four and twenty years, and certainly was not an unprofitable steward of Gods talent entrusted to him all that time.

4. That the passages of S. Pauls travails are also but summarily, and shortly set down, save only for some part of that small space, wherein S. Luke, the writer of this story, was present with him; and accordingly as from the conversion of S. Paul Anno Ch. 34. there is very little said of him, till his coming to Iconium, which was twelve years after, so the story proceeds no farther then his first coming to Rome An. Ch. 58. After which he lived ten years, and having preached the Gospel in Spain and other parts of the West, at last came to Rome again and suffered martyrdome there, after Cestius's siege of Jerusalem, and the Christians departure to Pella, which consequently both he and S. Peter lived to see, and died both of them (before the taking of it by Titus) An. Ch. 68.

CHAP. I.

Paraphrase.

1. THE former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to doe and to teach,]

1. The Gospel which I wrote was designed by me to set down for the use of all Christians (see Lu. 1. note c.) a relation of all things, which Jesus both did, and taught, see note on Mar. 2. 2.

2. Untill the day in which he was taken up, after that he, through the Holy Ghost, had given commandments unto the Apostles whom he had chosen.]

2. From the time of his birth to his assumption to heaven, before which, on that very day that he rose from the dead, Joh. 20. 19. he breathed on his chosen Apostles, and said, Receive the holy Ghost, v. 22. and so by virtue of the power committed to him by his Father, who formerly had sent him, v. 21. he gave them commission in like manner, and delegated the government of his Church to them, and commanded them to preach, and by testifying his resurrection from the dead to confirm his doctrine to all the world.

3. To whom also he shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them fourty daies, and * speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdome of God.]

* telling them the things, λέγων τὰ

3. To which end he appeared to them after his resurrection, and gave them many sure evidences that it was truly he, and talked with them of the Church which should be planted and ruled by them, and of many other things concerning the Gospel, (and his dealing with the enemies thereof, See v. 7. Mat. 3. note g.)

4. And

4, 5. And as he converſed with them, he gave them order after this manner, Go not from Jeruſalem ſuddenly, but there

4. And * being aſſembled together with them, commanded them that they ſhould not depart from Jeruſalem, but wait for the promiſe of the Father, which, ſaith he, ye have heard of me.

* converſing συναλιζόμενος

6. And as the diſciples met Jeſus after his reſurrection, they asked him, ſaying,

6. * When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, ſaying, Lord wilt thou at this time reſtore again the kingdome to Iſrael?]

* They therefore, when they met him, asked him, οἱ μὲν οὖν συνελθόντες ἐπηρώτων αὐτὸν

12. This was done on the mount Olivet, which is ſeven furlongs (ſaith the Syriack interpreter) diſtant from Jeruſalem. Thither therefore they immediately returned from thence.

That he was of our ſociety, a fellow diſciple, one of the twelve ſent out and impower'd by Chriſt, Mat. 10. 1, 5. and being one of thoſe to whom the keyes Mat. 16. and the power of binding Mat. 18. and of judicature Mat. 19. 28. were promiſed by Chriſt, he was in deſignation an Apoſtle of Chriſt as truly as any of us.

22. Beginning from the baptisme of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witnesse with us of his resurrection.]

21,22. It is therefore our duty according to this prophecie to make choice of some one of these persons that are now here with us v.15. and who have continued with us ever since Jesus undertook to teach us, and to rule us, as a Master disciples, even from the time that John baptized him, (presently after which Jesus began to call and gather disciples, Joh.1.43. & Mat.4.12.17.18. & Mar.1.17.) till his assumption to heaven: that so he may be taken into the Apostleship (see v.8.) to perform that which Judas should have done, i.e. goe, and preach the Gospel (now much more confirmed by the miracle of Christ's rising from the dead) in those cities, and parts, which were (or had been, if he had not thus dealt) assigned Judas.

23. And they appointed two,] Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

23. And the eleven, to whom this speech was addrest v.15,16. pitcht upon, and proposed two, leaving it to the lots to decide, which of them it should be.

24. And they prayed and said, Thou Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, * shew whether of these two thou hast chosen.]

* point out of these two, one whom, ἀνάδειξον ἐκ τούτων τὸν ἕνα, &c.

24. And the Apostles prayed and said, O Lord that knowest the secrets of all hearts, be thou pleased to direct the lot to him, whom of these two thou hast chosen.

25. That he may take part of this ministery and Apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, † that he might goe to his own place.]

† to goe ὁδοιπορῆσαι

25. That he may take that part of the charge (which did, or should have belonged to Judas, but was deserted and forsaken by him) and so betake himself to the discharge of it.

26. And they gave forth their lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbred with the eleven Apostles.]

26. And they put i.

in two lots, one for

Joseph, another for Matthias, and Matthias being chosen by the lots, was received in to make up the number of the twelve Apostles, and to perform that office which belonged to him as such (see v. 22.) viz: to preach Christ, and testifie that he was risen from the dead, and was by that declared to be the Messias, or son of God in power.

Notes on Chap. I.

2. Βαπτισθῆτε ἐν ἁγίῳ πνεύματι, ye shall be baptized with the holy Ghost] in this place, is determined by the circumstance of the time, then future, and yet not many daies after Christ's speaking of it; And it is clearly meant of the holy Ghost's visible descending upon the disciples, c.2.2. by which he should doe two things especially, 1. He should give them testimony of the truth of all that Christ had said unto them, *Joh.*15.26. as by his descending on Christ at his baptisme he testified (and thereby God the Father himself) that Christ was the beloved son of God, in whom he was well pleased, i.e. who declared nothing but the truth and good pleasure of God to them. 2ly. He should testifie to others, that whatsoever they should teach, was also the will of God, and so authorize them for the solemn testifying of Christ's resurrection, &c. give them power, and commission, and graces to discharge their whole ministery, as witnesses now designed, and pointed out by him to declare and testifie to all Israel, what Christ had done, and said in their presence, v.8. and that he was risen from the dead, v.22. This may the more appear by taking notice of the opposition here set betwixt John's baptizing with water, and the baptizing of the Apostles with the Spirit, here spoken of. To baptize is to wash or purifie, belonging to all the kinds of purifications among the Jewes, (see note on Mar: 7. c.) and from thence more especially to the receiving of proselytes, admitting disciples: This John did, after the manner of the Jewes, by water onely, or by the ceremony of immersion in water, which among them was the way of sanctifying any thing (i.e. fitting or setting apart for holy uses) and therefore the Priests washings of himself, before his officiating, are called in the Talmud קדושין (Joma c.3. §.3.) sanctifications. Beside this, John did nothing else to his disciples, or those that came in to him upon his preaching; But Christ's disciples, that were to be consecrated to an office, in a more eminent manner then John's, being to have the whole power of disseminating the Gospel, and governing the Church of Christ after him, were not only to be received in, as proselytes, with that ceremony of washing, but God from heaven was visibly to instate this power upon them, and withall to testifie the truth of that doctrine, which they were to preach; And this was to be done by the holy Ghost's descending in a visible manner, i.e. revealing himself gloriously by the appearance of Angels (whose appearance signifies God's peculiar presence.) And thus we see it fulfilled *Act.*2.2. &c. And what befell the Apostles there, as the first fruits of the Church of the Jewes, converted to Christianity, the same was, in the effects of it, vouchsafed by God to Cornelius, and his family, as the first fruits of the Gentile-converts, Act. 10.44. which, saith S. Peter, put him in mind of this speech of Christ's, that John baptized with water, but yee shall be baptized with the holy Ghost, c.11.16. i.e. was a demonstration to him, that God had accepted these Gentiles, and so that they were fit to be baptized, Act. 10.47. By this will appear the meaning of those places in the Gospels, *Mat.*3.11. I baptize you, i.e. John baptizeth you, with, or by water (that was the ceremony of his receiving men to repentance, or absolution, and pardon of sin upon repentance, and that was all that John did, but he that comes after me, he ſhall baptize you with the holy Ghoſt and with fire, i. e. Chriſt ſhall ſend the Holy Ghoſt, in a glorious appearance, in flames of fire, to come down viſibly upon you, and ſo to aſſure you of the truth of the doctrine, which I teach you, or elſe (as fire was uſed for conſecration, fire upon the altar, to devour the ſacrifice, and that fire firſt coming down from God to doe it, Levit. 9. 24. and fire from the altar, a coal from thence, to touch Iſaiah's lips, and ſet him apart for his prophetick office) to ſeparate, and conſecrate you for your Apoſtleſhip, and after that, upon all unreformed impenitents, he ſhall come with fearfull judgements, ſee Mat. 3. 11. Act. 2. 17, 19. &c. So 'tis alſo Lu. 3. 16. mentioning both the holy Ghoſt, and the fire too, though Mark 1. 8. and John 1. 33. mention not the fire, but only the holy Ghoſt. Beſides theſe two ſpeciall uſes of the holy Ghoſt's deſcending on them, One common conſtant uſe there was alſo, which belonged to all Chriſtians, not onely Apoſtles (as appears by Joh. 7. 39. where Chriſt mentions the Spirit, which not only the Apoſtles, but beleivers in common, i. e. all Chriſtians ſhould receive after his aſcenſion) the giving them ſtrength to perform what God now required of them, and therefore all that came into the Chriſtian Church as proſelytes of Chriſt (not only thoſe that were ſet apart for the miniſtery) are ſaid to be born anew, i. e. received as Chriſtian proſelytes, and baptized with water, and the holy Ghoſt, Joh. 3. 5. not only made partakers of the ceremony of John's baptiſme, water, which ſignifies purging from ſinne, but, over and above that, made partakers of the holy Ghoſt, being received into the Chriſtian Church by thoſe, on whom the holy Ghoſt came down, Act. 2. (and that not onely for themſelves, to confirm the truth of Chriſt's preaching, and to give them their commiſſion, but alſo) to reſt upon them, as the founders of the Chriſtian Church, ſo that they might communicate the benefit, and influences of it to others, to the end of the world, ſo farre as was uſefull to the condition of every one; And that is to fit every one, and enable him to diſcharge that calling, whereunto he is admitted; As if he be admitted barely into the Church, to be a Chriſtian, then beſide water, wherein he is baptized, after the manner of all other proſelytes, he hath alſo from God, by the Apoſtles bleſſing of him, the holy Ghoſt beſtowed on him, i. e. thoſe benefits of it, which belong, and are neceſſary for every Chriſtian, viz: pardon of ſinne, and grace to lead a new life; and this ſtyled being born anew of water, and of the holy Ghoſt, Joh. 3. 5. and is intimated to be an effect, or conſequent of Chriſt's aſcenſion, v. 13, 14. (after which it was that the holy Ghoſt came down upon the Apoſtles here) and to be a ſuperior thing (and that which more effectually tended to the ſalvation of beleivers, i. e. Chriſtians, Joh. 3. 15.) then either the Jewiſh or John's baptiſme, which, being the baptiſme of water alone, was not able to beſtow this, and therefore it is, that they that had been baptized onely with John's baptiſme, Act. 19. were by the Apoſtles, when they knew it, baptized farther in the name of the Lord Jeſus, (ſee c. 2. note d.) In like manner, they that were admitted into the Church, to any ſpeciall function, as to that of Biſhops, (which conſiſted in the exerciſe of Cenſures, and in the power of ordaining others) or c. 6. to that of Deacons, (and of Presbyters afterwards) who had ſome parts of ſacred functions communicated to them, that of preaching the Goſpel Act. 8. 8. and of baptizing, were thus admitted alſo by the Apoſtles (and after them by the Biſhops their ſucceſſors) by laying their hands on them, and bleſſing, or conſecrating them, i. e. giving them the holy Ghoſt alſo, i. e. that externall commiſſion, which here they had, by the holy Ghoſt's deſcent upon them, and alſo (for ſome time) extraordinary gifts of tongues, and miracles, and prophecying, uſefull for the diſcharge of thoſe functions.

The appearance of Angels is ordinarily deſcribed by a cloud, as hath been formerly ſaid, and ſo here the clouds receiving him, ſignifies the Angels receiving him. Thus when Exod. 25. 22. it is ſaid of the covering of the arke, There will I meet thee, and commune with thee from betwixt the two Cherubims, &c. It is Lev. 16. 2. I will appear in the cloud upon that propitiatory, or covering of the ark. b. Νεφέλη

It is ſaid by the writer of this book Lu. 24. 53. that the Apoſtles after Chriſt's aſſumption returned to Jeruſalem, and were διαπαντὸς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, continually in the temple, praiſing, and bleſſing God (which clearly ſignifies that the Temple at Jeruſalem was the place (not of their continuall abode, but) of their conſtant daily performance of their devotions, ſee Lu. 2. 37.) and ſo he concludes that Goſpel. And here where he begins another book, and, in that, the ſtory after the aſcenſion of Chriſt, and ſo repeats that again v. 9. &c. he adds v. 12. as he had ſaid in the Goſpel, that they returned to Jeruſalem, and when they came thither, ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ ὑπερῷον, they went up into an upper room, and there, i. e. in that upper room, ſaith he, (the ſame S. Luke, that before had ſaid, they were continually, or at the times of devotion, conſtantly in the Temple) all the eleven diſciples ἦσαν προσκαρτεροῦντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ καὶ τῇ δεήσει, continued unanimouſly in prayer and ſupplication, i. e. did there daily perform their devotions, and religious offices, manifeſtly referring to the ὑπερῷον, or upper room, where they daily did ſo; And ſo ch. 2. 1. where they are ſaid to be all unanimouſly ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ together (a phraſe to denote their ſacred aſſemblies, or συναγωγαὶ) this ſure denotes the ὑπερῷον, the upper room, as the conſtant place of their daily devotions. From the compariug of theſe two places, and the phraſes uſed in the ſeverall places, [ἦσαν διαπαντὸς, they were continually,] and ἦσαν διαμένοντες, they were continuing] being perfectly aquivalent, ſome difficulty would ariſe, how the Temple ſhould by the ſame hiſtorian be ſet down as the daily conſtant place of their devotions, in one place, and the upper room in the ſame manner and phraſe, to be it, in the other, Were not this way of reconciling that difficulty neer at hand, (taken notice of by ſome late Criticks, but not favoured by others) viz: that the Temple had many chambers, and upper rooms in its circuit, (which ſerved not only for the uſes of the Prieſt's, and for the keeping of the holy things, but ſtood open ſome of them for religious meetings alſo.) So 1 Chron. 28. 11. in the pattern that David gave to Solomon, we have expreſſe mention of the porch, and the houſes thereof, and of the treaſuries there- c. Τοῦτων of, and of the upper chambers thereof, &c. So again in Solomon's building 1 Kin. 6. 5, 6. chambers round about, of the firſt, 2d, and 3d ſtory, and 2 Chron. 3. 9. he overlaid the upper chambers with gold, and ſo, I ſuppoſe, Jer. 35. 4. the chamber of Gemariah in the higher court, might be one of theſe. And ſo in the ſecond Temple there will be little reaſon to doubt, the ſtructure being the ſame, though not ſo ſumptuous, as the former, and the names of the ſeverall parts continuing in the New Teſtament, which had belonged to the firſt building, as Solomon's Porch &c. And ſo often in the Talmud, Joma, c. 1. the chief prieſt ſeven daies before the day of expiation is fetcht from his owne houſe, ללשכה פלהודרין to the chamber of the paredrin, and ſo in the Gemara, he that offered the red cow, was brought ללשכת בית האבן to the chamber of the houſe of the ſtone, and many the like, as to the chamber of the houſe Abtines, and that peculiarly called עליות בית אבטינס the high, or upper room of the houſe Abtines, and ſo in like manner, the chamber, where the Prieſt waſhs himſelf, is deſcribed to be over the הפרוה and ſo to be an upper room. And ſo theſe upper rooms being parts of the Temple, whoſoever were aſſembled in any of them (as it is ſaid the Apoſtles were) are truly ſaid to be in the Temple. If this be granted, as it will be hard to give any other tolerable ſenſe of it, then in all probability the [κατ' οἶκον] c. 2. 46. the houſe where they brake bread, or received the ſacrament, will be this place alſo, where they did that more privately, which could not, we may preſume, be done in the Temple in any more publick place. For that the phraſe κατ' οἶκον] ſignifies no more, then ἐν οἴκῳ in the houſe] may appear by comparing Rom. 16. 4. with 1 Cor. 16. 19. where the Church in their houſe] in one place, is κατ' οἶκον αὐτῶν] in the other, ſee note on 1 Cor. 16. c. And for the word [Houſe] that that is uſed for the Temple, or any part of it, even for theſe upper rooms, which we now ſpeak of, is clear both by comparing the Goſpels, Mat. 23. 35. with Lu. 11. 51. (where that which is [οἶκος, houſe] in one, is vaõs temple in the other) and alſo by the Talmud, where the Temple it ſelf is frequently called בית houſe, and ſo alſo the ſeverall rooms or chambers in it, בית האבן before mentioned, the houſe of the ſtone, בית המוכלה, the houſe of waſhing, Joma c. 3. §. 2. (and that called קדש, an holy place, in oppoſition to common, or profane) על בית הפרוה over the houſe of Happarvah; Which houſe of Happarvah, being explained what it is, in Middoth c. 5. (to wit, the place where the ſkins of the ſacrifices were ſalted) is there called שכת הפרוה, Conclave Happarva, the chamber of Happarvah, Houſe, and Chamber, being there uſed in the ſame notion, and noting the ſeverall chambers in the Temple, to be called οἶκοι houſes, and thoſe, holy places, fit for ſacred uſes, and ſo here uſed by the Chriſtians for their meetings, to eat the Lord's ſupper together, which they could not hope to be permitted to doe more openly in the Temple, the Chriſtian religion being not much favoured by the Jewes. Of theſe rooms or houſes in the Temple we find mention in Epiphanius de ponderi ch. 14. where of Adrian he ſaith, that viſiting Jeruſalem, he found the Temple demoliſhed πλὴν ὀλίγων οἰκημάτων, except a few houſes, ἃ ἦν τῷ Θεῷ ἐκκλησίας μικρὰς ὄντας &c. and the little Church of God, where the diſciples returning from the mount Olivet went up to the upper room, ἐκεῖ γὰρ ἀνεβίβαζον, τυγχάνει δὲ τοῦ μέρους Σιών, &c. for there it was built, i. e. in part of mount Sion, which clearly affirms this upper room to have been a part of Sion, and ſo of the Temple, as was ſaid, and afterwards to have been by the Chriſtians built into a Church.

That the word ὄνομα name is here taken for a perſon, not literally a name, will eaſily appear by the like uſe of שם in the Hebrew, for though that primarily ſignifie a name, yet 'tis ordinarily uſed in the Hebr: writers in this other ſenſe, for perſon, and with an Emphatical adjunct (השם, the name) it is commonly ſet to ſignifie God, who is κατ' ἐξοχὴν, ὁ ὤν he that is; And from thence, in Ignatius's Epiſtle to the Epheſians, τὸ ὄνομα φερφόρον, to carry the name, is to carry God, i. e. Chriſt about with him (the importance of that Martyrs title Θεοφόρος) and is therefore rendred by the vulgar tranſlator, Nomen Chriſti circumportare, to bear about the name of Chriſt. And ſo S. Cyprian uſes the word nomen, name. So Phil. 2. 10. ὄνομα Ἰησοῦ the name of Jeſus, ſeems to be no more then Jeſus, who was at his reſurrection to have dominion over all creatures, and to be acknowledged to have ſo. d. Ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ] is the Greek expreſſion in the Old Teſtament to interpret the Hebrew word, יחד together, ſo Pſal. 2. 2. נוסדו יחד, συνήχθησαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, they aſſembled together, as in a councell, all about the ſame buſineſſe, and deſigne, all as one man, and ſo here, and c. 2. 1. and 1 Cor. 11. 20. the phraſe ſignifies, and notes theſe aſſemblies for the ſervice of God, to be deſigned for the uniting of the prayers and ſervice of all into one, every action being to be accounted not the action of private men, but of the whole body, and therefore 1 Cor. 11. the eating there ἴδιον δεῖπνον, v. 21. a man's own meal, a man's eating that there, which himſelf had brought, is ſet contrary to the κυριακὸν δεῖπνον, the Lord's ſupper, or the Church meal, which is eaten συερχομένων ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, when they are come together to one, or the ſame, i. e. all to be as one, not as ſeverall. e. Ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ — Ἴδιον δεῖπνον

That Judas's death was cauſed by grief (but yet was not grief it ſelf) was ſhewed, note on Mat. 27. a. The death is here clearly defined to be the throwing himſelf down a precipice, which among humane authors is frequently mention'd of thoſe, who through exceſſe of melancholy, or oppreſſion of conſcience, eſpecially upon guilt of blood, are weary of their lives, and have this ready way to deliver themſelves from that burthen. 'Twere impertinent to multiply teſtimonies to that purpoſe; The authors of the Ἰατρικὰ mention it of other creatures, that on occaſion of great ſadneſſe have done the like. f. Πρηνὴς

The word ἐλάκησεν is the Greek by which the old Gloſſary renders diſſiluit, not as that ſignifies to leap down, but to break aſunder, and μέσος added to it ſignifies no more then in Latine, medius diſcerpitur or diſrumpitur, or ἐχύθη μέσον Lu. 23. 45. i. e. that he was broken in pieces, a naturall conſequent of which it is, which here follows, that his bowels guſhed out at the wound, or rupture. g. Ἐλάκησε — Μέσος

The word ὄπτομαι and ὄπτανομαι, is frequently uſed in the old, and new Teſtament. In the Old Teſtament there be two Hebrew words rendred by the Greek ὄπτομαι, 1. אל which as it is oft ren- h. Ἔπτυσεν dred θεὸς, κύριος, ἄγγελος, God, Lord, Angel, So once ἐπίσκοπος. So among profane authors 'tis all one with ἄρχων ruler, (as in * Aristides where after the mention of Kings are added οἱ κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἐπίσκοποι ἀποκαθιστάμενοι, they that come annually as Episcopi, overseers, of which he had said before, ἡγεμόνες ἢ ἡμῖν ἐκ νόμου φοιτῶσι κατ' ἔτος ἕκαστον, there come rulers by law every year, by which it appears that ἡγεμόνες and ἐπίσκοποι rulers, and Bishops are all one, and so Justinian calls those which Aristides speaks of, ἄρχοντες ὑπαρχιῶν and μητροπόλεων, the rulers of provinces and Metropoles, and accordingly Hesychius explains ἐπίσκοπον by βασιλέα king or governour.) The 2d Hebrew word which is rendred by it, is פקדה, and other the derivatives of פקד visitavit, פקיד פקד, all which note a prefect or governour, or any impower'd by commission to exercise any authority entrusted to him, And as 'tis sometimes rendred ἐπίσκοπος, so elsewhere ἐπόπτης, φρούραρχος, ἄρχων, τοπάρχης, κωμάρχης, all words of government, or prafecture, and once θυρωρὸς, dore-keeper, to whom the keyes of the house of the Lord were committed, *Ezech.*44.2. when 'tis rendred ἐπίσκοπος, 'tis taken in five senses, 1. in an army, ἐπίσκοπος ἡ δυνάμεως, *Num.*31.14. Judg. 9.28. 2 *Kin.*11.15. the captain of the host, 2dly, among workmen, the principal that were set over all others in the building of the Temple, 2 Chron. 34.12, 17. 3dly, in the city, the ruler or prince, *Neh.*11.9.14. and especially of the priests, v.10. and of the Levites, v.15. 4thly, in the ministery of the Temple, Eleazar the son of Aaron, (who Num. 3.32. is ἀρχόντων τῶν Λευιτῶν ἄρχων, the ruler of the rulers of the Levites) *Num.*4.16. is called ἐπίσκοπος Ἐλεάζαρ, bishop Eleazar. 5thly, in the house of the Lord, over which he that was set is ἐπίσκοπος ἐπὶ τὸν οἶκον κυρίου, 2 *Kin.*11.18. the bishop over the house of the Lord. By all which it appears that agreeable to the notion of the word in the Old Testament, ἐπισκοπὴ here (and ἐπίσκοπος elsewhere) in the New, denotes prafecture, or ruling power in the Church, viz: that Apostolick power, which at the coming of the Holy Ghost was to be instated upon him that should now be chosen into Judas's place, to be an Apostle: See note on Phil. 1.b.

* Or. de concord: ad Asiat: Civ:

The word συγκαταψηφίσθη] is acknowledged to come from ψῆφος calculus, a stone, or the like, of which there were two uses, one in choises, or judgments, wherein they gave their votes by this means, *Rev.*2.17. the other in accounting or numbring, Hence ψῆφος is expresst in Hesychius by λόγος, as that signifies counting, and by κρίσις, judgment. Now for the use of it in this place, first it is evident that Matthias being here chosen by lot was not chosen by the suffrages or votes of men, 2dly that καταψηφίζω proportionably to ψῆφος, signifying originally two things, numbring, as well as choosing, it may most probably in this place signifie being numbred, and so συγκαταψηφίσθη μετὰ τῶν ἕνδεκα, he was numbred together with the eleven Apostles, will be all one with κατεσφραγίσθη ἦν σὺν ἡμῖν, he was numbred with us, v.17. (or with σὺν ἡμῖν γένηται to be with us, v.22.) and that is explained by λαχὼν κλῆρον, he obtained his portion of this ministery, i.e. office Apostolical, Or if it should possibly referre to the notion of election, it must then denote Gods choice of him v.24. by the disposing of the lot, and not any votes, or suffrages of others, which had nothing to doe in this matter, for though Joseph, and Matthias were by the eleven nominated, or chosen, to prepare for the lot, yet that Matthias was pickt on and added to the eleven, it was meerly the decision of the lot, and so the disposition of the Lord. So vain is the prætension of those, that will have this rendred, Communibus calculis annumerabatur, he was by common votes, or suffrages added to that number, and then make their own deductions from thence.

CHAP. II.

Paraphrase.

1. On the approach of the Lords day following the sabbath, on which the Jewish Pentecost was celebrated, they were (all the Apostles together) assembled at the service of God, in their accustomed place, see c.1.13. & note c.

1. AND when the day of Pentecost * was [a fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.]

* was come

2. And whilst they were so imploy'd, suddenly they heard a great noise come down from heaven, like that of a mighty boisterous wind (to note the efficacy of this Spirit of God now descending) and it came into the upper room where they were assembled, and filled all the room.

2. And suddainly there came a sound from heaven, as of a † rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.]

† violent winde brought or coming, φερομένης πνοῆς βιαίας,

3. And there was an appearance of somewhat, like flaming fire, lighting on every one of them, which divided asunder, and so became the resemblance of tongues, with that part of them, which was next their heads, divided, or cloven, (see note on Mar.3.k.)

3. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.]

4. And they were endued every one with gifts of the holy Ghost, That of speaking with tongues, which they never had learnt, and other miraculous powers this coming of the holy Ghost bestowed on them.

4. And they were all filled with the holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them * utterance.]

* to speak, λαλεῖν,

5. abiding at Jerusalem many Jewes that came up to that feast of Pentecost, and likewise proselytes (see v.10.) which had come from severall nations of all quarters of the world to worship the true God at Jerusalem. (see note on Mat.23.d. and Joh.12.a.)

5. And there † were [dwelling at Jerusalem, Jewes, devout men out of every nation under heaven.]

† were abiding, κατῴκουν,

6. and were astonished, because they being of severall nations, every of them heard the Apostles speak the language of his nation.

6. Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, [and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.]

7. And

7. And they were all amazed, and marvailed, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these, which speak, [Galileans?] 7. men born in Galilee, and that have lived there all their time?

8. And how hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were born?] 8. And how doth every of us hear them speak every of those languages which are native to us?

9. Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judæa, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia,

10. Phrygia, and Pamphilia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Lybia, about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, * Jewes, and Proselytes,

11. Cretes, and Arabians, we doe hear them [speak in our tongues, the wonderfull works of God.] 11. preaching the doctrine of Christ, and the great things which God hath wrought by him and on him, every of us in our own language.

12. And they were all amazed and were in doubt, saying one to another, 12. This certainly abodes some great matter.
† What will this be? τί θέλει τοῦτο εἶναι;
[† What meaneth this?]

13. Others mocking, said, These men are [full of * new wine.] 13. drunk, and that infuses this faculty into them.
* sweet wine

14. But Peter standing up with the eleven, lift up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judæa, and all ye † that dwell at Jerusalem, [be this known unto you, and hearken to my words,] 14. I make it known, or proclaim it to you, † that abide

15. For these men are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.] 15. That these men are not drunk, as ye say, for it is but nine in the morning, the time of morning prayers, to which the Jewes generally came fasting (see note on Mat. 12, 2.)

16. But this is that which is spoken by the prophet Joel.] 16. But the truth is, that which is now done is the completion of a famous prophecy, Joel 2. 28.

17. And it shall come to passe [b] in the last daies (saith God) I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophecy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: 17,18. In the daies of the Messias, saith God, there shall be a most remarkable effusion of the Spirit of God upon men of all ranks, and qualities, enabling them which were never brought up in the schools of the prophets to goe and preach the Gospel of Christ in every city (and this was fulfilled in the descent of the holy Ghost upon the disciples, sending them to preach and fitting them with the gift of prophecy, and of tongues, both as a miracle to beget faith, and as a means, to speak intelligibly to men of all languages.) b.

18. And on my servants, and on my handmaidens, I will pour out in those daies of my Spirit, and they shall prophecy.]

19. And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signes in the earth beneath, blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke. 19,20,21. And after that there shall be many fearfull stupendious sights and prodigies, and many great slaughters in Judæa, as forerunners and præsignifications of the great famous destruction (see Mat. 3. 11,12.) which shall befall this people (foretold by Christ, Mat. 24. see Heb. 10. 2.) for their crucifying of Christ, and from which the only way to rescue any, is to repent and acknowledge Christ, which to gain men to, was the design of the coming of the holy Ghost, Joh. 16. 8.

20. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come.

21. And it shall come to passe that whosoever shall call upon the name of the
* shall escape, Σωθήσεται
Lord * shall be saved.]

22. Ye men of Israel hear these words, [Jesus of Nazareth, a man † approved of God among you by miracles, wonders and signes, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye your selves also know,] 22. This Jesus of Nazareth being demonstrated to be sent from God by the mighty works which by him God hath done among you, all which you know to be true, and of which ye your selves are witnesses.
† markt out by God, Ἀνὴρ ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀποδεδειγμένος

23. Him being delivered by the determinate counsell and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain.] 23. Him, being permitted by God to fall into your hands, God withdrawing that protection, which was necessary to have preserved him from them, (and this by his decree, that he should lay down his life for his sheep, in order to that great designe of mans salvation, toward which he did by his foreknowledge discern this the fittest expedient) ye apprehended and crucified most wickedly.

24. Whom God raised up, having loosed * the [c] pains of death, because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.] 24. But God hath raised him again, delivering him from the power of death, not suffering him to continue dead, the goodnesse of God being ingaged in this, not to suffer an innocent person (so unjustly and unthankfully handled by the Jewes) to lie under death, and, besides many other things, the prophecies of him necessarily requiring that he should not. c.

25. For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord alwaies before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved.] 25. For of him saith David, Ps. 16 8. I waited and looked with all affiance and confidence on God, for he is my defender, so as to keep me from miscarrying.

26. Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad: moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope.] 26. For this, my glory, i. e. my tongue (because that is the member the instrument of glorifying God) shall rejoice, and my flesh shall rest confident.

† hades, ᾅδης 27. Because thou wilt not leave my soul in † hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine holy one to see corruption.] 27. For though I die, yet shalt thou not leave me so long dead, as that my body should be putrefied, i.e. thou shalt raise me from death before the third day be past.

28. Thou haſt chered me, & abundantly refreſhed me with thy favour.

28. Thou haſt made known to me the waies of life, thou ſhalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.]

29. Let me therefore ſpeak to you freely and without any reſervedneſſe (ſee note on Joh. 7. 13.) concerning that David that thus ſpake, that he died like other men, and had a ſolemn interment, and we ſtill have his monument to ſhew, from whence he never roſe.

29. Men and brethren, let me freely ſpeak unto you of the Patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his ſepulchre is with us untill this day.]

30. And therefore not ſpeaking of himſelf but by way of prædiction of the Meſſias,

30. Being therefore a prophet, and knowing that God had ſworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loynes according to the fleſh, he would raiſe up Chriſt to ſit on his throne,] knowing that he ſhould infallibly ſpring from his loynes, that was to be prince and ruler of his Church,

31. This ſpeech of his was prophetick, referring to this reſurrection of Chriſt, whereupon 'tis ſaid, that his ſoul ſhould not continue in ſtate of ſeparation from the body, In which ſtate though it were for a while, yet it continued not ſo long, till the body was corrupted, i.e. not the ſpace of 72 houres, or three daies.

31. He ſeeing this before ſpake of the reſurrection of Chriſt, that his ſoul was not left in hell, neither his fleſh did ſee corruption.]

32. And accordingly hath God raiſed up Chriſt within that ſpace of time, within three daies, and all we Apoſtles are eye-witneſſes of it.

32. This Jeſus hath God raiſed up, whereof we all are witneſſes.]

33. Being therefore aſſumed to his regall ſtate, and office in heaven, and God having performed to him, (as all his other, ſo peculiarly) this promiſe made to him, of giving him power to ſend the holy Ghoſt, he hath accordingly now ſent him, and this prodigie, which ye now ſee, and hear, is an effect of that, viz: the ſpeaking with tongues, which the hour before they underſtood not.

33. Therefore being * by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promiſe of the Holy Ghoſt, he hath ſhed forth this which we now ſee and hear.

* exalted to the right, τῇ δεξιᾷ ὑψωθείς

34, 35. For this cannot be interpreted of David himſelf, though he ſpake it in his own perſon, for he never went to heaven bodily, and ſo cannot be ſaid to be exalted to God's right hand, while his enemies are made his footſtool, But he ſpeaks of him, of whom this was to be verified, as of his Lord, The Lord, ſaith he, ſaid to my Lord, Pſal. 110. 1.

34. For David † is not aſcended into the heavens, but he ſaith himſelf, The Lord ſaid unto my Lord, ſit thou on my right hand,

35. Untill I make thy foes thy footſtool.]

† went not up, οὐκ ἀνέβη

36. This great important truth therefore I now proclaim unto you, that that Chriſt whom ye Jewes have crucified, God the Father hath raiſed up, and by aſſuming him to his right hand, ſetled him there, as a head of his Church, inſtated him in the true kingly office of the Meſſias.

36. Therefore let all the houſe of Iſrael know aſſuredly, that God hath made that ſame Jeſus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Chriſt.]

37. Upon theſe words of Peter, they had great compunction, and as men that were willing to doe any thing to reſcue themſelves from the guilt of ſo horrible a ſinne, as crucifying the Meſſias, they cried out moſt paſſionately to Peter, and the reſt of the Apoſtles, that were preſent, beſeeching their directions what to doe in this caſe.

37. Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and ſaid unto Peter, and to the reſt of the Apoſtles, Men and brethren, what ſhall we doe?]

38. And Peter anſwered them, that there was now but one poſſible way left, and that was with true contrition, and acknowledgment of their ſinne, to haſten out of this infidelity, and with a ſincere and thorough change to come as proſelytes to Chriſt, and enter upon Chriſtian profeſſion with a vow of never falling off from it, and ſo to receive baptiſme from the Apoſtles, that ſacrament, wherein Chriſt enabled them to beſtow, or convey from him, remiſſion of ſinnes to all true penitents, farther promiſing them that they ſhould be made partakers of the holy Ghoſt alſo, and of thoſe gifts which by the deſcent of the Spirit were powr'd out on the Church, and ſome among them of thoſe miraculous powers which they now ſaw and admired in the Apoſtles (ſee c. 4. 31. and note on c. 6. b.)

d. 38. Then Peter ſaid unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jeſus Chriſt, for the remiſſion of ſinnes, and ye ſhall receive the d gift of the holy Ghoſt.]

39. For to you, ſaith he, the benefit of that promiſe appertains, if you will lay hold on it, and indeed primarily to you Jewes this promiſe of the holy Ghoſt was made, on purpoſe for this, that by our preaching to you, ye might be converted and convinced of the vileneſſe of what you have done, and upon repentance be received into mercy, and receive abſolution from us, as the deputies and proxies of Chriſt, which is gone. And as the advantage hereof belongs primarily to you, to whom our firſt addreſſe was to be made, ſo in the next place, upon your rejecting it, it muſt be extended to the reſt of the world, to all the Gentiles which ſhall obey and come in to Chriſt at his call, or upon our preaching to them.

39. For the promiſe is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afarre off, even as many as the Lord our God ſhall call.]

40. And many other diſcourſes he made to them, all to this effect, conjuring and haſtening them with all ſpeed to get out (as the Angel did Lot out of Sodome, Gen. 19. 17.) out of this ſtate of high provoking infidelity, wherein the multitude of Jewes were engaged.

40. And with many other words did he teſtifie and exhort, ſaying, * Save your ſelves from this untoward generation.]

* Eſcape out of, σώθητε ἀπὸ

41. And all that were really affected by what he ſaid came and renounced their former courſes, and approved the ſincerity of their change, and received baptiſme, and that day about 3000 men were converted to Chriſtianity.

41. Then they that gladly received his word were baptized, and the ſame day there were added unto them about three thouſand ſoules.]

e. 42. And all that were ſo, continued aſſiduous in hearing the Apoſtles teach, and in bringing their goods liberally for the uſe of them that wanted, v. 45. and in eating the Lord's Supper, and praying together.

42. And they continued † ſtedfaſtly in the Apoſtles doctrine, and e fellowſhip, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.]

43. And fear came upon every ſoul: and many wonders and ſignes were done by the Apoſtles.]

43. And a generall aſtoniſhment ſurprized men to ſee firſt thoſe ſtrange operations of the holy Ghoſt v. 4. (a conſequent of which was this wonderfull acceſſion of converts v.41.) And withall the Apoſtles did many miracles of very different ſorts, ſome of cures, and ſome of exemplary ſeverities, and thereby came to have a very great authority among all that heard it, ch.5.5.

44. And all that beleived were together, and had all things common,

45. And ſold their poſſeſſions, and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.]

44,45 And all that receiv'd the faith, aſſembled together for the ſervice of God, obſerved conſtant times of publick prayers, and receiving the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, (ſee note on ch.1.c.) the richer communicated their goods to the poorer as freely, as if they had been theirs.

Notes on Chap. II.

a. Συμπληροῦς] The word συμπληροῦς here is all one with the ſimple πληροῦς in other places. And that is taken in a peculiar notion, when 'tis applied to times, ſignifying that ſuch a time is come, So *Gen.*25.24. when her daies to be delivered were fulfilled, i.e. when her time of child-birth was come. For which the Evangeliſt reads ἐπλήσθη ὁ χρόνος τοῦ τεκεῖν αὐτήν, The time of her bringing forth was filled, Lu. 1.57. So *Gen.*29.21. My daies are fulfilled, i.e. the time agreed upon for my taking her to marriage is now come. So *Mar.*1.15. πεπλήρωται ὁ καιρός, the time is fulfilled, i. e. now is that due ſeaſon come, the criticall point, wherein, if they repent not, they ſhall periſh. So *Lu.*21.24. Jeruſalem ſhall be trodden down by the Gentiles, untill the times of the Gentiles πληρωθῶσι be fulfilled, i.e. till the peculiar ſeaſon concerning the Gentiles (ſee the place) doe come. And this very συμπληροῦς is ſo uſed *Lu.*9.51. ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ἀναλήψεως αὐτοῦ, when the daies were fulfilled, i.e. were cause of his being taken up. Accordingly ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι ἡμέρας τῆς πεντηκοστῆς] here, is no more then, when the day of Pentecoſt was come, or upon that day.

Ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, the laſt daies] doe in that place of Joel literally ſignifie the laſt daies of the Jewes, immediately præceding their deſtruction, called there, the great and terrible day of the Lord; And accordingly the laſt daies] have among the Jewes proverbially ſignified the daies of the Meſſias, which they call אחרית הימים the laſt daies; and both theſe notions are very reconcilable; For as the coming of the Meſſias ſignifies, beſide the coming of him in the fleſh, his entring on his kingdome, and as a branch of that, his coming to be avenged on his crucifiers, Mat. 24. 1. ſo the laſt daies] here ſignifie peculiarly the time beginning after the reſurrection, and aſcenſion of Chriſt, as here appears by the powring of the Spirit, and the prodigies, v.19. (before the great and terrible day of the Lord, v.26. i.e. this deſtruction of Jeruſalem) So 2 *Tim.*3. 1. ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, in the laſt daies. i.e. not long after the reſurrection of Chriſt, ſhould come thoſe hard times, to wit, before the deſtruction of the Jewes, and ſo in the latter times, 1 Tim. 4.1. So Hebr. 1. 2. ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τῶν ἡμερῶν τούτων, the daies of the Meſſias, and 1 Cor. 10. 11. we, i.e. Chriſtians, on whom τὰ τέλη τῶν αἰώνων κατήντηκεν, the end of the ages are come. So Jam. 5. 3. ſpeaking of the wealthy Jewes, he ſaith, that they have treaſured up their wealth as fire, ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, in or againſt the laſt daies, i.e. againſt thoſe times of deſtruction, when their wealth ſhould but doe them miſchief, mark them out for prizes, and preyes before other men. So 1 Pet. 1. 5. ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ in the laſt time, noting, no queſtion, that time then at hand, wherein the incredulous Jewes ſhould be deſtroyed, and the beleivers reſcued out of their perſecutions and dangers, which is there denoted by σωτηρίαν ἑτοίμην ἀποκαλυφθῆναι, deliverance ready to be revealed, according to the notion of σωτηρία formerly mentioned Lu. 13. 23. a. and again by ὀλίγον ἄρτι (οὐ πολύ) v.6. after a little time yet of temptations or ſufferings. So again for the time of Chriſt in generall 1 *Pet.*1.20. ἐπ' ἐσχάτου τῶν χρόνων, and 2 Pet. 3. 3. and Jude 18. ἐπ' ἐσχάτου χρόνου, in the more ſpeciall ſenſe, that there ſhould be Antichriſticall ſcoffers, that ſhould accuſe Chriſt of breaking his promiſe in coming to avenge himſelf on the crucifiers, and to reſcue the Chriſtians from their perſecutors. So 1 *Joh.*2 18. ἐσχάτη ὥρα ἐστίν, It is the laſt hour, to the ſame ſenſe of that approaching judgment, which was then yet neerer at hand. And all this taken from that prophecy of Moſes, Deut. 31. 29. Evil will befall you in the latter daies.

b. Ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις

The Hebrew חבל ſignifies two things, a cord or band, and a pang, eſpecially of women in travail. Hence the Septuagint meeting with the word *Pſal.*18.2. (where it certainly ſignifies σχοινία cords or bands) have yet rendred it ὠδῖνας pangs, and ſo again 1 *Kin.*20.31. and in other places; and from their example here S. Luke hath uſed τὰς ὠδῖνας θανάτου, the pains, or pangs of death, when both the addition of the word λύσας looſing, and κρατεῖσθαι being holden faſt, doe ſhew that the ſenſe is bands or cords.

c. Ὠδῖνας

What Δωρεὰν πνεύματος ἁγίου, the gift of the holy Ghoſt] ſignifies, in relation to the perſons, that here are ſpoken to, as many as ſhould now repent, and beleive on Chriſt, is apparent by the proceſſe of the ſtory. There were that day three thouſand, which received the faith of Chriſt v.41. and theſe aſſociated,

d. Δωρεὰν πνεύματος ἁγίου

ted, and joyned themſelves with the Apoſtles, v.42. and that in a wonderfull, charitable manner, had all things common, &c. v.44. In the third chapter, the Apoſtles work that cure on the impotent man, and on that occaſion preach Chriſt to the Jewes again, and chap: 4. the Sanhedrim &c. apprehend them, and upon conſultation diſmiſſe them again, and they return to their auditors, the beleivers foremention'd, ver.23,24. And they bleſſing and praiſing God, and applying the Pſalmiſts prædictions to their preſent condition, and praying to God for his powerfull aſſiſtance to propagate the Goſpel, it follows v.31. that as they prayed, the place was ſhaken, (in like manner as ch. 2. 2. when the holy Ghoſt deſcended on the Apoſtles,) and they were all filled with the holy Ghoſt, i. e. certainly all the beleivers foremention'd, (not the Apoſtles, who were thus filled before.) And ſo this promiſe of S. Peter's was punctually fulfill'd upon them. What the effect of this gift was among them is no farther there ſet down, then that they ſpake the word of God with boldneſſe, i. e. they were wonderfully confirmed by this means in their aſſurance of the truth of the Goſpel, and ſo making no queſtion of the truth of what they had learnt from the Apoſtles, they ſpake of it among themſelves, and to others with all cheerfulneſſe and confidence, deſpiſing the terrors of the Jewes, as they did their worldly poſſeſſions, v.32. and continuing that high pitch of charity, which had before been obſerved to be among them c.2.44. And ſo thus farre this gift of the holy Ghoſt ſignifies no more then a miraculous Confirmation of theſe beleivers (formerly baptized) in the faith, and Chriſtian practiſes, which they had received, But this no doubt then attended with other extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, in reſpect of which they are there ſaid to be fill'd (ἐπλήσθησ) with the holy Ghoſt; And then the only difficulty will be, what kind of gifts theſe were, whether inward or outward, For both theſe are promiſed indefinitely to beleivers. To the inward that ſpeech of Chriſt Joh. 7. 38. ſeems to pertain, He that beleiveth on me, out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living waters, where the belly denoting the heart, or inward part of the man, the flowing of the living water from thence, denotes ſome effects of the holy Spirits deſcent upon, and in the hearts of beleivers, the Evangeliſt there diſtinctly referring thoſe words to the then-future deſcent of the holy Ghoſt, ver. 39. This he ſpake of the Spirit which they which beleive on him ſhould receive, οὔπω γὰρ ἦν πνεῦμα, for as yet the holy Ghoſt was not (among, or upon them) becauſe Jeſus was not yet glorified. Where it is evident that that ſpeech of Chriſt belonged to ſome inward gifts in the hearts of men, w^ch upon the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt upon the Apoſtles, ſhould be powred upon the Chriſtian world, convey'd by the preaching, baptizing, confirming, and other miniſtry of the Apoſtles, their farther inſtructing them in the Goſpel, which is therefore elſwhere call'd διακονία πνεύματος, the miniſtration of the Spirit, or means of communicating it to beleivers. What this inward gift is appears in ſeverall places, wiſdome, ch.6. 3. knowledge, 1 Cor. 12. 8. and ſo likewiſe the aſſiſtances of Gods Spirit, joyned with his word, enabling humble, ſincere Chriſtians for the duties of Chriſtian life, which are required of them, called the renewing of the holy Spirit, and joyned, as here, to the Laver of regeneration, *Tit.*3.5. and ſo the earneſt of the Spirit in our hearts, 2 Cor. 1. 22. See note on Act. 1. b. The outward gifts are thoſe χαρίσματα, gifts of tongues, of healing &c. And thoſe are evidently called the δωρεὰ πνεύματος ἁγίου the gift of the holy Ghoſt, *Act.*10.45. and that was there powred upon the Gentiles of Cornelius's family, immediately on their receiving the faith, even before baptiſme. And to theſe belongs another promiſe of Chriſt, *Mar.*16, 17. Theſe ſignes ſhall follow thoſe that beleive, They ſhall take up ſerpents &c. Now for the reſolving of the Quære, what ſort of gift it is, which is here meant, the ſureſt way will be, not ſo to define of either, as to exclude the other, but to comprehend both under this phraſe, not that both, and every branch of each ſhould be powred on each beleiver, but that they all ſhould be ſcatter'd among them, the inward by baptiſme or confirmation ſigned on all, and the outward beſtow'd on ſome of them, to teſtifie to all the truth and excellency of the Goſpel, and to fit, and prepare ſome perſons for ſacred imployments, not all the outward again, upon each, on whom the outward were beſtow'd, but ſome on one, ſome on another, the gift of tongues to one, of healing to a ſecond, of prophecying to a third, and they that had moſt, or the higheſt degrees of theſe, are call'd πλήρεις full of the Spirit, ſee ch.6. note b. and note on Eph. 1. c. Πλήρης πνεύματος

The word κοινωνία is to be rendred (as from the verb κοινωνέω) not communion but communication, by that, meaning diſtribution, liberality, effuſion, or participation, by which any are made partakers of ſome gift, ſpirituall or temporall, ſuch as here beneficence to the poor &c. Thus in Simplicius on Ariſtot: Phyſ: l.1. deſcribing magnanimous men, ὀλίγοις ἀρκούντες, καὶ ἕτοιμοι κοινωνῆσαι ἑτέροις, they are, ſaith he, content with a little, and diſtribute or communicate readily of that which they have. And in Lucian Tim: Κελεύει κοινωνοῦντας ὧν ἔχουσι τοῖς πένησι, communicating to the poorer ſort of what they have, and again, εἰ φθονήσει κοινωνῆσαι καὶ διδόναι; will he envy him that communicates and gives? Where it ſignifies liberality, or giving to the poor. Thus is almes-giving defined by the Arabians communicatio in miſeriis, Abul Faraii de Mor: Arab: p. 29. And thus Caſſander out of Chryſoſtome renders μυστήριον κοινωνίας, Myſteriorum communicationem, Liturg: p.14. As excommunication is defined by Tertullian excluſion from communication (not from communion as that is now uſed for the ſacrament) à communicatione orationis, & conventus, & omnis ſancti commercii relegatio, a baniſhing from participation of all prayer, aſſembly, and ſacred commerce (and not only of the ſacrament) ſo as the word be compounded, like exlex, without any change of the termination. In this notion is the word generally uſed in ſcripture for liberality, or ſome kind of diſtributing, or diſpenſing to others. So here προσκαρτεροῦντες τῇ κοινωνίᾳ καὶ τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἄρτου καὶ προσευχαῖς, continuing in liberality, & breaking of bread, and prayers; where, as προσευχαὶ ſignifies publick prayers, and κλάσις ἄρτου the breaking of bread in the adminiſtration of the ſacrament, ſo κοινωνία is the people's bringing and preſenting of the bread, and wine, and the fruits of the earth, for the acknowledging ledging God the Creator of all, part of it to be eaten in commemoration of Christ's ſacrifice, and the reſt to be diſtributed among the poor, ver. 44. Whereupon κοινωνῆσαι in Heſychius and Phavorinus (for which the copies read corruptly κοινῶσαι) is προσενεγκεῖν to offer or preſent. From which Gloſſaries theſe explications alſo of the word are to be had, κοινωνῶν, μεταδιδόντα, to diſtribute, or diſpenſe, κοινωνία μεταληψις ἢ μυστηίων ἁγίων, participation of the holy myſteries, κοινωνῶ σοι δόξης, συμμετέχω, to partake, κοινωνοῦντες οἱ μεταδιδόντες ἀλλήλοις, καὶ μεταλαμβάνοντες παρ' ἀλλήλων φιλίας ἢ γνώσεως &c. They are ſaid to communicate who diſtribute to one another, and they that partake and receive from one another, whether friendſhip or knowledge. Whence it appears 1. that the word ſignifies both to diſtribute, and to receive, to make others partake, and to be partaker; 2dly, that it is appliable to friendſhip or ſociety, no otherwiſe then to knowledge, or any thing elſe. Thus Rom. 15.26. κοινωνίαν ποιήσασθαι, is to make a contribution, So 2 Cor. 8. 4. τὴν χάριν καὶ τὴν κοινωνίαν τὴν διακονίας τὴν εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους, charity and communication of adminiſtration, i.e. liberality toward the ſaints. So ἀπλότης τῆς κοινωνίας, 2 Cor. 9. 13. liberality of diſtribution, ſo κοινωνία εἰς τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, Phil. 1. 5. liberality toward the preaching or propagating the Goſpel. So Heb. 13. 16. where 'tis joyned with εὐποιΐα, beneficence, as 1 Tim. 1. 18. εὐμεταδότους and κοινωνικοὺς, diſtributive, and communicative, are all one, ſo Philem. 6. κοινωνία τῆς πίστεώς σου, is his liberality to the poor, (by which the bowels of the ſaints are refreſht, v. 7.) flowing from his faith; From this notion of the word κοινωνία, as it ſtrictly ſignifies liberality toward the poor, may be fetcht the ſenſe of that Article in the Creed κοινωνία τῶν ἁγίων, the communication, or liberality of the ſaints, to note this great liberality here mentioned of the firſt converts to Chriſtianity in the Apoſtles time, (ſee Philo of the ἀσκηταὶ) in Ægypt, in Euſeb: Hiſt: l. 2. c. ult.) eſpecially in their meetings for the commemorating of Chriſt in the ſacrament, as appears in this chapter ver. 44, 45, 47. and here v. 42. And this is thought fit to be recorded by the Apoſtles among the very few things, fit to be preacht and proclaim'd by thoſe that declared the Goſpel to all the world, that, when the height of the Pythagorean philoſophy was to have all things common, and Epicurus went yet higher (not by bringing all together into ſome common magazine, (which, ſaid he, was an argument of diffidence, and ſo unreconcileable with friendſhip) but) by cheerfull communicating to every one that had need, out of that which every man hath, the Chriſtian religion might appear to have arrived to the higheſt pitch, Every man ſelling that which he had immoveable, that ſo he might have ready to diſtribute to any, nay, that he might not truſt himſelf in the diſtribution, bringing and laying it at the Apoſtles feet, that they might diſtribute it moſt impartially, and ſo approving themſelves to be עם נדבות a people of free-will offerings in the day of Chriſts power, Pſal. 110. now when he was inſtall'd in his kingdome. So in a ſpirituall ſenſe, κοινωνία τοῦ 1 Cor. 1. 9. is the participation of the ſon, or communication, liberality, all one with his ἀνεξιχνίαστος πλοῦτος Eph. 3. 8. his unſearchable riches, as they are powred out on us. So Eph. 3. 9. κοινωνία μυστηρίου the communication of the myſterie, or that myſterie, kept hid ſo long, is now communicated or made known, ſo Phil. 3. 10. κοινωνία παθημάτων, is the communicating his ſufferings to us, i. e. our partaking and ſo ſuffering with or after him, in a ſpirituall ſenſe, dying to ſinne, as he dyed to the world, which is there called being conformed to his death. So 1 Cor. 10. 16. κοινωνία σώματος and αἵματος, the participating of the body and blood of Chriſt. So κοινωνία πνεύματος, communication of the Spirit, Phil. 2. 1. that liberal effuſion of graces from the Spirit of God, And ſo when in the ſolemn cloſe of the Epiſtles, κοινωνία τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, the communication of the holy Spirit, is joyned with χάρις Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ, the grace of Chriſt, and love of God, 2 Cor. 13. 14. it muſt ſignifie proportionably to theſe many other places, the liberall effuſion of that holy Spirit, and ſo 1 Joh. 1. 3. ἵνα κοινωνίαν ἔχητε μεθ' ἡμῶν, that you may have partnerſhip with us, καὶ ἡ κοινωνία δὲ ἡμετέρα μετὰ τοῦ πατρὸς, and our partnerſhip is indeed with the Father, &c. the gifts, and life, that God, and Chriſt hath, are communicated to us, and ver. 6. ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι κοινωνίαν ἔχομεν μετ' αὐτοῦ, if we ſay that we are partakers with him of that grace and life, &c. CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. NOW Peter and John went up together into the Temple [at the hour of prayer being the ninth houre.]

1. at three in the afternoon, which was one of the times of day generally ſet apart for prayer.

2. And

2. And there was an impotent man, who was ſo from his birth,

2. And a certain man, lame from his mothers womb, was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the Temple, which is called Beautifull, to ask almes of them that entred into the Temple.]

who was therefore daily carried by others and laid at the gate of the Temple toward the Eaſt, in Solomon's porch, v. 11. which was called the beautifull gate, that there he might beg and receive the almes of thoſe that went up daily to pray there, by which means this man was known to all the pious men of the city that uſed to go that way, v. 10.

3. Who ſeeing Peter and John about to goe into the Temple, asked * an almes.

and to whom the covenant belongs, which was made to Abraham, in which was promiſed, that the poſterity of him, i.e. the Jews, ſhould be ſo bleſſed by God, in having Chriſt given to them, (beſide many other ſpeciall prerogatives beſtowed on them) that all the families and people of the world alſo, that would bleſſe themſelves or others, ſhould uſe this form, God bleſſe them, as he bleſſed Abrahams ſeed, (ſee note on Gal.3.c.)

For God having raiſed this Chriſt again, hath by our preaching his reſurrection firſt to you over all your cities, ſent him again in a moſt gracious manner to bleſſe his enemies to doe all the good to them imaginable, to work upon the moſt obdurate crucifyers, and turn every one of you, from your unbeleif and impenitence, and ſo to make you capable of his pardon and mercy.

a. Ἀναψύξεως daies of refreſhment or comfort, are proverbially taken among the Hebrewes, for the time of any ſpeciall deliverance, whether temporall here, or eternall in the reſurrection, ſo Gen.21. Jonathan's Chaldee Paraphraſe ſaith, that Leviathan is prepared לְיוֹם נִחְמְתָא for the day of conſolation, i.e. the day of deliverance, and feſtivity in commemoration thereof, wherein, ſaid the Jewes, God was wont to make merry, and to ſport with Leviathan. So the name of Noach, from that ſame Hebrew word, which is rendred conſolation, ſignifies deliverance, and was impoſed as a prophecy, that mankind, which otherwiſe had been univerſally deſtroyed, ſhould in him be reſcued from that utter ruine. To this belongs the reviving, Ezr.9.9. which ſignifies their reſtoring from captivity. So for the other deliverance, when Hoſ.6.3. wee read [after three daies he ſhall quicken] Jonathan reads again לְיוֹמֵי נִחְמְתָא in the daies of conſolation, which ſhall come בְּיוֹם אֲתָוֵית מֵיתַיָּא in the day of the reſurrection of the dead. And ſo when Job.11.24. we read he ſhall riſe in the reſurrection] the Syriack reads בְּנֻחְמָא in the conſolation. Now the connexion of this with the exhortation to repentance lies thus, Should Chriſt come again in judgment upon the Jewes, foretold Mat.24. while you lie impenitent in your ſins, his coming muſt be the greateſt judgment in the world (and ſo it will be to the impenitent Jewes, utter deſtruction and vaſtation,) That therefore that coming of his (which as it is a terrible time to the impenitent, ſo is a time of deliverance to all penitent beleivers) may in that notion of conſolation and deliverance befall you, that God may thus ſend his ſon to you, Doe you now timely repent, ſo as to have your ſins blotted out, ſee 2 Pet.3.9. Ἀπολύτρωσις The ſame thing is called ἀπολύτρωσις deliverance, Lu.21.28. and Σωτηρία ſalvation or deliverance again, Rom.13.11. ſee note c. a. b. Beſide the ordinary rendring of ὃν δεῖ οὐρανὸν δέξασθαι ἄχρι, [whom heaven muſt receive,] another there is, of which the words are capable literally, and to which the context more enclines them, that Chriſt muſt, or that God hath decreed he ſhould receive heaven, in the ſenſe that Camillus is ſaid δέξασθαι τὴν πόλιν to receive the city, i.e. to undertake the government of the city, parallel to that of Pſal.75.2. ſpeaking of Chriſt's exaltation [when I ſhall receive the congregation] and ſo this place will be all one with 1 Cor.15.25. he muſt reign &c. and that peculiarly in the ſubduing and conquering all his enemies, converting ſome, and rooting out (v.23.) all others, who ſtand out in hoſtility againſt him. b. Δέξασθαι ἀ. μὲν

c. The account of the prophets is here begun from Samuel, becauſe the ſchools of the prophets were firſt inſtituted, and erected by him, and not that there was no prophet before him. Thus we read 1 Sam.19.20. the college, or company of the prophets at Ramah, and Samuel ſtanding as appointed over them, making him the Preſident of that college, as after, Elias was, and therefore before his aſcenſion he goes about from one college to another 2 Kin.2.3. &c. and after him, Eliſha, to whom therefore the ſons of the prophets ſay, The place in which we dwell before thee, (i.e. under thee, under thy government) is too narrow for us, and ſo they build a larger. Theſe ſons of the prophets ſpent their time in ſtudying the Law, and praiſing, and ſerving of God (ſee note on Lu.1.m.) and of them, becauſe (though ſome were, yet) all were not call'd by God to the prophetick office, ſent of meſſages to the people, therefore 'tis here added, ὅσοι ἐλάλησε, as many as ſpake, i.e. as many as out of the ſchools of the prophets were by God call'd to that publick office. προκατήγγειλαν, foretold what was now to come to paſſe. c. And cauſing the diſciples to be brought before them, they examined them on theſe interrogatories, 1. how they came to be able to doe that miracle, ch.3.7. and whoſe name they called upon that infirm man (ſee ver.10.) in the working of the cure, (ſee ch.3.6.) and conſequently from whom they pretended to have commiſſion to doe what they did, thus to preach unto the people?

* had nothing to ſay againſt it, οὐδὲν ἔχοντες ἀντειπεῖν

15. But when they had commanded them to goe aſide out of the counſell, they conferred among themſelves,

16. Saying, What ſhall we doe to theſe men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them, is manifeſt to all them that dwell in Jeruſalem, and we cannot deny it.

17. And being not able to conceal what was already known, they had nothing to doe but to keep others from knowing it, and thereupon their decree in councel was to ſend for them, and to forbid them upon ſevere penalties to preach Chriſt and his reſurrection and Goſpel any more.

17. But that it ſpread no farther among the people, let us ſtraightly threaten them that they ſpeak henceforth to no man in this name.]

18. And

18. And they called them, and commanded them not to [speak at all, nor teach in the name of Jesus.] 18. talk privately, or teach publickly any thing concerning the faith of Christ.

19. But Peter and John answered, and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God, to hearken unto you, more then unto God, judge ye. 19. But Peter and John made light of this interdict, or terrors, and told them plainly they were commanded by God to preach, and that in all reason God must be obeyed before them, or the greatest magistrate on earth, and that they themselves could not but confesse so much.

20. For we cannot [but speak the things, which we have seen and heard.] 20. choose but testifie of Christ those truths of so high importance, made known to us peculiarly to that end, that we should proclaim them to others from our certain knowledge, being our selves the eye, and ear-witnesses of them.

21. So when they had farther threatned them, they let them goe, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people, for all men glorified God for that which was done.] 21. And so not knowing what else to say to them, being not able to deny the force of their argument, they added more threatnings, if possibly that might terrifie them; and so dismist them, having nothing to lay to their charge, but the curing of the lame man in the name of Jesus, and for this all the people looked on them with admiration, and counted it an act of God's immediate infinite mercy, for which, they, that were instruments of it, ought to be blessed, not punished by them, and therefore they durst not punish or censure them for this.

22. For the man was about forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was shewed.] 22. For it was an inveterate lameness, from his very birth, ch. 3. 2. and had been now above forty years upon him, when this cure was wrought by Peter.

23. And being let goe, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and Elders had said unto them.

24. And when they heard that, [they] lift up their voice to God with one accord and said, Lord thou art God which hast made heaven and earth, and the sea and all that in them is, 24. the rest of the Apostles that were then at Jerusalem and the beleivers that consorted with them v. 23.

Who foretold by his prophet David, Psal. 2. 1. what was now come to passe, viz: that the Jewes should oppose Christ, and say false things of him, deny and crucifie him first, and then when God raised him from the dead, oppose the preaching of him.

27. For of a truth * [against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate with the † Gentiles and the people of Israel were gathered together.] 27. both the Roman governours, Pilate, and Herod, and the Jewish Sanhedrim have conspired, and joyned their malitious counsels against thy holy Son, and servant Jesus, whom thou hast sent to be the Messias of the world, (see note on ch. 10. c.)

28. For to doe whatsoever thy ᵇ hand and thy counsell determined before to be done.] 28. To act in the crucifying of Christ, and so, (though little meaning it) to be the instruments of God's gracious providence, and disposall, who determined to give his only Son to die for us. b.

29. And now, Lord, behold their threatnings, and [grant unto thy servants, that with all boldnesse they may speak thy word, 29, 30. and enable us to preach the Gospel powerfully, fearlessly and with authority (see note on Joh. 7. 2.) and give power also to us thy servants, the disciples of Christ, to work miraculous cures on all those, on whom we shall call the name of Jesus.

30. By stretching forth thine hand to heal, and that signes and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.]

31. And when they had prayed, the place was shaken, where they were assembled together, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldnesse.] 31. And upon this prayer of theirs, there came the like wind, as is mentioned, c. 2. 2. and shook the place where they were, and speciall eminent gifts of God's Spirit fell upon those that were there present, (see ch. 2. note d.) and this was such a confirmation to them all, that without all doubt, or fear, they published the Gospel of Christ, see v. 29.

32. And the multitude of them that beleived were of one heart and of one soul *,] neither said any of them that ought of the things, which he possessed, was his † own, but they had all things common. 32. And the beleivers, although there were many of them, agreed all in the same Christian designes,

And the Apostles confirmed with many miracles their preaching of Christs resurrection, and there was great instances of liberality and frankness among them that received the faith, all the beleivers bringing in plentifull contributions to the Apostles hands, who received it of them for the publick use of the beleivers.

Notes on Chap. IV.

2. γένους Ἀρχιερατικοῦ

What is meant by [ὅσοι ἦσαν ἐκ γένους ἀρχιερατικοῦ, as many as were of the kindred of the high prieſt] will be reſolved by the context, where an aſſembling or meeting of the Sanhedrim is deſcribed, v.5. which conſiſting of three ſorts of men, Prieſts, Elders and Doctors of the law (ſee note on Mar. 5.b) is oftimes expreſt by the enumeration of thoſe parts, Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ γραμματεῖς καὶ πρεσβύτεροι, High prieſts, Scribes, and Elders, *Mat.*26.3. and very often in the Goſpels. In this place there is another way of enumeration then is uſuall, The Rulers and Elders and Scribes, and Annas the chief prieſt and Caiaphas and John and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high prieſt. Where yet ἄρχοντες Rulers] ſeems to be a generall word, denoting, as elſwhere, men in authority. Then Annas was the Naſi or chief perſon among them, (ſee Lu. 3. note b.) and Caiaphas the perſon, that by the Procurator was put into the Pontificate in ſtead of the Aaronicall line. And ſo there remains onely the Elders and Scribes, and ὅσοι ἦσαν, not indefinitely, as many as were, but, in a more limited notion of ὅσοι, thoſe, that were in the Sanhedrim of this ſort, of the kindred of the high prieſt, (and of that number John and Alexander by name) which therefore appear to be the ſame with ἀρχιερεῖς high prieſts] joyned with the Elders and Scribes in other places, i. e. that third ſort of the Sanhedrim, conſiſting of Prieſts. Now the reaſon of this title's being applied to them is evident. For as of Aaron's poſterity the lineal deſcendent onely ſucceeded him in the high prieſts office, ſo of his two ſons, Eleazar and Ithamar, ſprang 24 families (betwixt whom the Prieſt's office was divided by David, 1 Chron. 24.) which ſhould by weekly turns perform the ſervice of the Sanctuary (ſee *Lu.*1.5.) ſixteen of the ſons of Eleazar, and eight of Ithamar, Of every one of theſe families, and courſes there was a chief, the head of the family, and theſe are conſequently called ἀρχιερεῖς chief prieſts, and ἐκ γένους ἀρχιερατικοῦ of the kindred of the high prieſt, viz: as ſpringing from Aaron, and ſtill allied to the one high prieſts family, as inferiour branches of it; And many, if not all theſe, were members of the Sanhedrim (for here they ſit in Judicature with Annas and Caiaphas as with Moſes and Aaron, and the Elders, and the Scribes, ver.7.) and being four and twenty in number, would make up a third part of the whole number of 72, leaving the other two portions to be divided between the Elders and the Scribes, if there were, as it is not certain there was, this equall diviſion.

Ἄρχοντες Ἄννας

Καϊάφας

Ὅσοι

What is meant by the latter part of this ſpeech [whatſoever thy counſell hath determined before to be done] hath little difficulty in it. The truth is clear, that God decreed that thoſe things ſhould γενέσθαι, be done, although he decreed not that the Jewes ſhould doe them, but only permitted them to doe, what he foreſaw they would doe, if they were thus permitted. The only difficulty is, what is meant by ἡ χείρ σου, thy hand, and that will beſt be explained by looking on the Law of Moſes, *Levit.*16.8. where Aaron caſts lots on the goats, One lot on which was written לַיהוָה for the Lord, another on which לַעֲזָאזֵל for the Azazel, or ſcape-goate; For the manner was thus, The two goates were ſet one at his right hand, t'other at his left, and two lots were caſt into the Kalphi or veſſel (that is the word uſed by the Rabbines from the Greek κάλπις urna or pitcher, of which ſaith Lucian in Hermot: κάλπις ἀργυρᾶ, εἰς ταύτην ἐμβάλλουσι κλῆροι μικροί, ὅσον δὲ κυαμιαῖοι τὸ μέγεθος, ἐπιγεγραμμένοι, little lots are thrown into the ſilver pitcher about the bigneſſe of a beane, with inſcriptions on them) and the Prieſt drawes out one in one hand, and the other in the other, Then by the command of the כֹּהֵן (i. e. vicarius ſacerdos, the firſt of the ordinary prieſts, that miniſtred to the high prieſt) he lifts up the hand, in which was the lot for the Lord, and if it were the right hand, he puts it upon the head of the goat at his right hand (if the left, on that at the left) and that goat was holy to the Lord, and was preſently ſlain before him (the other being ἀποπεμπαῖος ſent into the wilderneſs) ſee Cod: Joma c.4. §.1. And certainly this diſtribution of the lots was from the Lord, according to that of Solomon, Prov. 16. 23. Now by this ceremony of the goat, is Chriſt's paſſion typified, and ſo that phraſe here, ἡ χείρ σου, thy hand, referres to that elevation of the hand, wherein was the lot for the Lord, and ſo notes this whole action thus to have been diſpoſed of by God, who decreed that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer, and that juſt as the goat did under the law, which was offered up to God for the ſinnes of the people.

CHAP. V.

1. And one of thoſe that came in to the faith of Chriſt, named Ananias, and Sapphira his wife, with joynt conſent devoted their eſtate, all that they had, to the uſe of the Church, and to that purpoſe made ſale of it.

1. BUT a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, ſold a poſſeſſion,]

2. And when they had done ſo, conſented alſo, or combined together to keep ſome part of the money, for which 'twas ſold, for themſelves, and accordingly they did, and came with the other part only, and preſented it to the Apoſtles.

2. And kept back part of the price, his wife alſo being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the Apoſtles feet.]

3. But

* that thou shouldst deceive the holy Ghost

3. But Peter said, Ananias, [why hath Satan * filled thine heart * to † lie to the holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?] 3. How hath Satan emboldened thee, that a. b.
thou shouldst dare thus to deceive, and rob the holy Ghost, as thou hast clearly done, in keeping back, and purloining part, when thou hadst consecrated all to Gods service, for the use of the Church?

† Was not the possession or demean thine own? and being sold

4. † Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and when it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lyed unto men, but unto God.] 4. Before it was sold, was it not wholly thine, no other c.
man having right to any part of it? (so the Syriack reads it) and when it was sold, didst not thou receive the whole summe or price, for which 'twas sold? was it not all in thine hand and power, so as thou might'st have fully performed thy vow? what motive hadst thou to doe such a thing as this? The falsity which was committed, in telling us that thou hadst sold thy possessions, and brought the whole price of it for the use of the Church, (when thou didst keep a part of it for thy self) was an injury not only to the Church, nor so much to us the Apostles, as to God himself, to the holy Ghost, who came lately down to plant this Church, and hath such a peculiar relation to it, that what is done to that, is by interpretation done to the holy Ghost, who had the privity of thy vow, and knew that 'twas the consecrating of all, and not of this part onely, which thou hast brought to us.

5. And Ananias hearing these words, fell down, and gave up the ghost, and great fear came on all them that heard these things.] 5. And as Peter spake these words, Ananias fell down dead in the place immediately, to the great astonishment, and terrifying of all those that were there present.

6. And the young men arose, woond him up, and] carried him out and buried him. 6. And the men of inferior rank, the officers, to whom it belonged to bury the dead, (see note on Phil. 1. c.) took him, and stript and swath'd him, as they used to doe the dead (see note on Joh. 19. f.) and taking him up

7. And it was about the space of three houres after, when] his wife, not knowing what was done, came in. 7. And about three houres after this judgment fell on Ananias, Sapphira,

8. And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether you sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.] 8. And Peter examined, and asked her, saying, Was that summe which ye brought, the full summe for which the field was sold? And she answered, It was.

9. Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together [to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? Behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the dore, and shall carry thee out.] 9. to provoke and dare God, (see note on Mat. 4. c.) to try whether he will punish your fraud or no. Behold (that thou mayst see, what a provocation this hath been to God) the men are coming in which have buried thy dead husband, and now they shall doe as much for thee.

10. Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yeilded up the ghost, and the young men came in, and found her dead, and carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11. And great fear came upon all the Church, and upon as many as heard these things.] 11. And all the beleivers were stricken with a great reverence, and so were all others to whom it was related.

12. And by the hands of the Apostles were many signes and wonders wrought among the people. [(And they were all with one accord in Solomons porch.] 12. (And they solemnly met together to preach and doe miracles in the entrance to the Temple, called Solomon's porch.

13. And of the rest durst no man joyne himself to them, but the people magnified them.] 13. And no other of the beleivers, or Christians (called the Church v. 11.) durst consort with the twelve Apostles, through the reverence v. 11. which these late acts had wrought in them, but the people that saw and heard what was done, magnified them.

14. And beleivers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)] 14. And these miracles that wrought such a reverence in the beleivers, were a means also to work faith in all the common sort of the people.)

15. Insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by, might overshadow some of them.] 15. And the people v. 12. had such confidence in their power of working miraculous cures, that they beleived that the very shadow of Peter, walking by a diseased man, would work a cure on him, and thereupon they brought forth their sick, and impotent friends, those that were not able to goe or stand, and laid them upon beds, &c. in the passage, that as Peter came by, his shadow might come over some of them.

16. There came also a multitude out of the cities about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits, and they were healed every one. 16. And the fame of their miracles spread into the country, and region, and other cities about Jerusalem, and from thence they brought

* being the sect αἵρεσις

† anger, zeal, ζῆλος

17. Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him (* which is the sect of the Sadducees) and were filled with † indignation,] 17. And the Sanhedrim (most of them being of the sect of the Sadducees) set themselves very zealously against them,

18. And laid their hands on the Apostles, and put them in the common prison.] 18. And apprehended the Apostles, and imprisoned them in the common gaole.

19. But the Angel of the Lord by night opened the prison dores, and brought them forth, and said,

20. Goe, stand, and speak in the Temple to the people [all the words of this life.] 20. all the doctrine of Christianity. d.

21. And in obedience to that direction, they betook themſelves early in the morning to the Temple, and there expounded the ſcripture and taught the doctrine of Chriſt out of it. But they of the Sanhedrim thinking they had ſtill been in hold, went into the court, and ſent ſerjeants to the priſon to have them brought before them.

21. And when they heard that, they entred into the Temple early in the morning, and taught, but the high prieſt came, and they that were with him, and called the councell together, and all the ſenate of the children of Iſrael, and ſent to the priſon to have them brought.]

22. But when the officers came, and found them not in the priſon, they returned, and told,

23. and a guard of ſouldiers without, watching the dores of the priſon, but when we entred, none of theſe priſoners were within.

23. Saying, The priſon truly found we ſhut with all ſafety, [and the keepers ſtanding without before the dores, but when we had opened, we found no man within.]

24. And when the Sanhedrim of the Jewes, as alſo the captain of that band of ſouldiers, who had ſet the guard upon the priſon, v. 23. (ſee ch. 4. 1. and Lu. 22. f.) had this word brought to them, they were much perplext, and wondred, how it could come to paſſe, that the priſon being ſhut, and the watch at the dores, yet none of the priſoners ſhould be within, and conceived that this did abode ſome ſtrange matter.

24. Now when the high prieſt, and the captain of the Temple, and the chief prieſts heard theſe things, they doubted * of them, whereunto this would grow.]

25. Then came one, and told them, ſaying, Behold the men whom ye put in priſon, [are ſtanding in the Temple, and teaching the people.]

26. And the captain that guarded the Temple (ſee note on Lu. 22. f.) together with his ſouldiers went to the Temple, and apprehended them

26. Then went the captain with the officers and brought them] without violence, (For they feared the people, leſt they ſhould have been ſtoned.)

27. brought them before the court, and the high prieſt examined them,

27. And when they had brought them, they [ſet them before the councell, and the high prieſt asked them,]

28. not to publiſh this doctrine of Chriſt, and ye contrariwiſe have publiſhed it in the Temple to all the city, and done your beſt, by laying his blood to our charge, to raiſe up the people againſt us, as againſt murtherers.

28. Saying, Did not we ſtraightly command you, [that you ſhould not teach in this name? And behold, ye have filled Jeruſalem with your doctrine, and † intend to bring that mans blood upon us.]

† you would bring, θέλετε ἐπαγαγεῖν

29. And the Apoſtles anſwered, as before they had done, ch. 4. 19. We were commanded by God to publiſh it, and then your interdict was not to have any force. Though magiſtrates are to be obeyed in all their lawfull commands, and their puniſhments to be endured without reſiſtance (as they were by us, v. 18, & 26.) yet when God fetches us out of priſon, and commands us to goe into the Temple and preach the faith of Chriſt (as he did by his Angel v. 20.) we are to render obedience to him, and not to your contrary interdicts.

29. Then Peter and the other Apoſtles anſwered and ſaid, We ought to obey God, rather then men.]

30, 31. The God of Iſrael, acknowledged by us all, hath ſent the Meſſias into the world furniſhed with his ſpeciall Commiſſion, and when ye crucified him as a malefactor, raiſed him from death, took him into heaven, and inſtated him in his regall power, (that he might be a ſpirituall prince, reigning in mens hearts) at his father's right hand, from thence to ſend the Spirit of his Father (who was not to deſcend, till he was aſcended) and by that means to give you Jewes place of repentance, that if ye yet come in, and repent, and beleive on him, ye may have pardon of ſinne.

30. The God of our fathers raiſed up Jeſus, whom ye ſlew and hanged on a tree,

* to his right hand, τῇ δεξιᾷ αὐτοῦ

32. The truth of this we teſtifie, and ſo doth the holy Ghoſt, that came down upon us, and upon the reſt, that have come in, and conſorted with us, ch. 4. 31. and by us is communicated to all that come in, and beleive, and yeild obedience to him.

32. And we are his witneſſes of theſe things, and ſo is alſo the holy Ghoſt, whom God hath given to them that obey him.]

f. 33. And upon this anſwer of theirs, they fell into great fierceneſſe againſt them, and entred into conſultation of putting them to death.

33. When they heard that, they † were ᶠ cut to the heart, and took counſell to ſlay them.]

† were mad againſt them

34. Then ſtood there up one in the councell, a Phariſee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the the law, had in great reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the Apoſtles forth a little ſpace.

35. And ſaid unto them, Ye men of Iſrael, take heed to your ſelves * what ye intend to doe as touching theſe men.

* touching theſe men, what you go about to do, ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τούτοις, τί μέλλετε πράσσειν

For we have examples of men, that have gathered followers, and raiſed ſeditions among the people, and come to nothing; as for inſtance, Theudas, that undertook to be a Generall, boaſting that he was ſent by God to that purpoſe, and ſo got 400 men to follow him, but ſoon miſcarried, and was himſelf killed, and all put to flight that adhered to him, and ſo his deſigne was utterly fruſtrated.

36. For before theſe daies roſe up ᵍ Theudas, boaſting himſelf to be ſomebody, to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joyned themſelves, who was ſlain, and all, as many as obeyed him, were ſcattered, and brought to nought.]

38. dismisse these men, and make not such hast to proceed against them (For the doctrine which they preach is either from God, or no, If it be not from God, then our experience tells us, that false prophets though they thrive a while, yet without our opposition they generally come to nought.

39. But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, [i] lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.]

40. And to him they agreed: And when they had called the Apostles and beaten them, they commanded them that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them goe.]

40. And they took his advice, and sending for the Apostles in again into the court, they appointed them to be scourg'd (a punishment of a reproachfull contumelious nature v.41.) and giving them charge not to preach the faith of Christ any more, they released them.

41. And this was matter of comfort & rejoicing to the Apostles, (according to that of Mat.5.12.) that they were advanced to that degree of honour, and blessednesse, as to be scourged for preaching of Christ. k.

42. And daily in the Temple, and * in every house, they ceased not to teach, and preach Jesus Christ.]

42. And they divided their time betwixt the Temple more openly, and the upper room more privately, and continued constantly in one of those places, either instructing those that had already received the faith, or preaching it new to those that had not received it.

Notes on Chap. V.

a. Πλησαι καρδίαν

The phrase πληρῶν καρδίαν, to fill the heart] is used by the Hebrews in the Old Testament for [to make one bold,] so Heft. 7. 5. Who hath filled his heart to doe this? the Greek, τίς ἔπλησε τὴν καρδίαν αὐτοῦ τοῦ ποιῆσαι; who is it that hath dared &c. So Eccl. 8.11. The heart of the sons of men is filled to doe evil, i. e. is emboldened, where the Greek read, ἐπληρώθη, is filled.

b. Ψεύδομαι

The verb ψεύδομαι hath among authors these three distinct uses, and agreeably three notions and interpretations proportioned to them, 1. 'tis used with a genitive case, and then it signifies passively, to be deceived, frustrated, cheated of any thing, ψεύδεσθαι ἐλπίδος, to be frustrated, defeated of his hope, and in Plato Apol: τότε ἂν ἐψευδόμην, In this I was not deceived or mistaken, But this clearly belongs not to this place. 2dly, 'tis used with a dative case of the person, or (which is all one) with a preposition [εἰς] or [πρός] joyned to the person, and then 'tis absolutely to lie. So 'tis here v.4. οὐκ ἐψεύσω ἀνθρώποις ἀλλὰ τῷ Θεῷ, Thou hast not lied to men, but to God, the lie which thou hast told, was not told to men only, or was not injurious to men only, but to God also. So *Jam.*3.14. ψεύδεσθε κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας, ye lie against the truth, your lying is contrary to the Gospel-doctrine and temper, and destructive to it. So *Col.*3.9. μὴ ψεύδεσθε εἰς ἀλλήλους, lie not against one another. 3dly, 'tis used with an accusative case of the person again, and then it signifies actively, to deceive, rob, deprive, τοὺς στρατιώτας ψευσάμενος καὶ ἀπατήσας, in Herodian. l. 2. having deceived and cheated the souldiers, and in Aristoph: πρᾶξιν: Μὰ τὸν Δί' οὐ ψεύσει γε μὲ, certainly thou shalt not deceive or cheat me, and that is the very notion of it here in this place, ψεύσασθαι τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, to deceive the holy Ghost, Deum in pollicitatione fallere, to deceive God in that which was promised to him, saith S. Augustine, and again, detrahere de pecuniâ quam Deo voverat, to keep back some of the money which he had devoted to God, and accordingly by Asterius, Ananias and his wife are called τῶν οἰκείων ἀναθημάτων ἱεροσύλοι, guilty of sacriledge in their own offerings. And although if the matter spoken of, extended no farther then speaking a false thing (without any reall purloining, or stealing, or withholding what was consecrated to the Church or to God) it would then proportionably signifie no more then to deceive, or tell a lie to the Holy Ghost, yet when the matter extends it thus much farther, not to bare words, but to the ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, v. 2. purloyning part of that price, which was all given to the Church, and by their own act put out of their own power v.5. (according to that rule of the law, data, eo ipso quòd dantur, fiunt accipientis, whatsoever is given, by that very act becomes the proper goods of the receiver) this ψεύσασθαι ἅγιον πνεῦμα, deceiving the holy Ghost] must needs referre to the not-keeping, not-observing, not-doing what was by them vowed, or to those contrary actions, the purloyning or withholding part of that price, which was wholly given to the Church, and being not actually brought in and bestowed on it, is said to be the deceiving of the Holy Ghost, that is, robbing, depriving him of that which was bestowed on him. This very same being expresst also by νοσφισμὸς ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, that follows, i. e. purloyning, as 'tis rendred Tit. 2. 20. and as the word is used of sacriledge by the Septuagint, *Josh.*7.1. ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τῆς ἀναθέματος, he purloined of the accursed thing, or that which was consecrated, c.6.19. So 2 Mac. 4. v.32. Menelaus χρυσώματά τινα νοσφισάμενος, stole, purloined some golden vessels of the Temple. And so both phrases joyne to make up the very thing, which is called ἱεροσυλία or sacriledge ordinarily in sacred, or heathen writers; which therefore by this place appears to be a sinne against God, not against men, v. 4. (and so *Mal.*3.8.) and particularly the robbing of the Holy Ghost, which came down on purpose to perfect what Christ had begun, to formalize the society of beleivers into that which we now call a Church, and so to fit it for continuance and perpetuity; And by what we see done in these first chapters of the Acts, immediately after the descent of the Holy Ghost, we have great reason to beleive these two things, 1. that it was an effect of his inclining the hearts of the beleivers, that wealth was so liberally brought in unto the

Νοσφισμὸς ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς

Ψεύδεσθαι κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας

Apoſtles, layd at their feet: And 2dly, that what was thus given, was really accepted of by the Holy Ghoſt, as given to him, and not to men only; For as among the Jewes, what was given to God, was brought unto the Temple, and preſented to the Prieſt (κελεύει τὰς ἀπαρχὰς εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν κομίζεσθαι καὶ παρεῖναι, ἵνʼ ἔνθενδε τοῦ ἱερέως λαμβάνοντος, he commanded that the firſt fruits ſhould be carried to the Temple, and received there by the Prieſts, ſaith Philo, de ſacerdot: honoribs:) ſo here 'tis brought to the Apoſtles as Chriſt's receivers, for the uſe of all the poor Chriſtians, that ſhould want, to be by the direction of the Apoſtles diſpenſed to them, and that what is thus by the liberality of Chriſtians (κοινωνία ἁγίων in the Creed) inſtated on the Church, cannot afterwards by the very doners (much leſſe by any elſe) be purloined or taken back again, without the guilt of that great ſinne of deceiving and robbing God himſelf.

c. τὸ μένον — There is ſome difficulty in this verſe, and the beſt way of clearing it, is, by ſetting the firſt word right, τὸ μένον, (which is commonly rendred, whilſt it remained) That ſure ſignifies a poſſeſſion immoveable, an eſtate in land, which is called a demeane in this very notion of μένειν remaining, becauſe when the fruit is taken off, the land remains, and ſo is applied here to κτῆμα a poſſeſſion v. 1. Upon the ſame account again 'tis called an eſtate, as being a ſtanding, remaining, continuing poſſeſſion. Proportionable to this, τὸ ἀργύριον is wealth in money, or land ſold, or put into money. And then the meaning of the whole is clear, οὐχὶ μένον σοὶ ἦν; was not the land, eſtate, demeanes, thy own land, eſtate, demeanes? καὶ πραθὲν ἐν τῇ σῇ ἐξουσίᾳ ὑπῆρχε; and was not the price, for which it was ſold, wholly in thy power? i.e. in thy hand, as ב׳ in the hand, ſignifies in the power, not as of an owner, but as a receiver, As Gen. 24. 10. 'tis ſaid of Abraham's ſervant, that all the goods of his maſter were in his hand, as in the ſteward's hand, to receive and look to. So that in both reſpects, the poſſeſſion being wholly thine, and the money coming wholly to thy hands, paid wholly to thee, (the contrary of either of which would have allowed him ſome pretence and excuſe) there was no excuſe for thy not bringing, according to thy vow, the whole value of it.

Κτῆμα — Πραθὲν — Ἐν τῇ σῇ Ἐξουσίᾳ

d. Τοῦς ῥήματος τούτου — What 'Ῥήματα ζωῆς ταύτης the words of this life] here ſignifies, will ſoon be diſcerned by the uſe of ζωὴ life in the Goſpel, for that doctrine which is the ſetting down of the way, which will bring him, that walks in it, to eternall life. Thus Joh. 12. 50. I know (ſaith Chriſt of the meſſage which he brought from his Father) that his commandment is eternal life, where eternal life muſt ſignifie that way which leads to it; ſo Joh. 17. 3. This is eternal life, that they may know thee the only true God, i.e. their knowing (and performing faithful, ſincere, obedience to) the only true God, is the ſure way to eternal life. And accordingly [the words of this life] are the ſumme of this Chriſtian doctrine, which being obeyed will bring any man to life eternal, and ſo 'tis all one with S. Peter's expreſſion to Chriſt. Lord to whom ſhall we goe? thou haſt the words of eternal life, the word [τούτου this] being here emphatical, and denoting that more valuable, ſpiritual, and eternal life.

Ταύτης

e. Ἀρχηγὸν Σωτῆρα — These two words ἀρχηγὸν captain, and σωτῆρα Saviour in the ſtyle of the Old Teſtament ſignifie ſuch an one as Joſhua and the Judges were (ſee note on Rom. 13. c.) expreſt here c. 7. 27. by ἄρχοντα καὶ δικαστὴν a Ruler and a Judge, by λύτρωσιν ſalvation v. 25. giving deliverance, bringing them out of their ſlavery in Ægypt, and therefore ver. 35. (in ſetting down the Iſraelites miſtake, when they ask't Moſes, who appointed him ἄρχοντα καὶ δικαστὴν a Ruler and a Judge?) S. Stephen tells them, God had by the hand of an Angel ſent Moſes ἄρχοντα καὶ λυτρωτὴν, a captain, and deliverer, by λυτρωτὴν [deliverer] meaning the ſame that by σωτηρία deliverance, v. 25. and by σωτὴρ Saviour here, one that leads, and rules them, manages their military affaires, to the avenging them of their enemies, and preſerving them ſafe and quiet. Such an one was Chriſt to be unto the people of God, and was ſent to be ſuch particularly to the Jewes, but this not in that manner that they expected, but (as his kingdome was not of this world) in a ſpiritual manner, to goe in and out before them againſt their ſpiritual enemies, Satan and ſinne; To which end it was, that after his exaltation and inſtalment to his regal office, the firſt thing was, his ſending of his Spirit, thereby giving them (as here it follows) place of repentance, if upon the preaching of the Apoſtles, they will come in, and beleive on him; In this ſenſe is it, that Heb. 2. 10. Chriſt is called ἀρχηγὸν σωτηρίας, the captain of ſalvation or deliverance, i.e. a captain deſigned on purpoſe to ſave or deliver them, to lead them, as 'tis there, through ſufferings to bliſs, through the wilderneſs, and the land of the Anakims to Canaan, as Moſes and Joſhua the captains and ſaviours of the Jewes did, ἀρχηγὸν and σωτὴρ, captain and ſaviour, being an ἐνδιάδυοιν, two words together, to expreſſe one thing, and ſo directly the ſame with this other expreſſion of ἀρχηγὸν σωτηρίας, captain of ſalvation.

Ἀρχηγὸν Σωτῆρα — Ἀρχηγὸν Σωτηρίας

What διαπρίονται here ſignifies, will be beſt reſolved from Heſychius's rendring of the word, The ordinary copie hath it διαπρίεται, διαπρεάζει, μαίνεται. But that is a miſtake, It ſhould certainly be read [ἀχθάζει, or διαχθάζει] grows wild, or angry, for that is all one with μαίνεται, is mad] which followes, But διαπρεάζει is quite another matter, and would rather belong to διαπρίεται (which might be the cauſe of this miſtake by the neerneſſe of the words) as σπάδων, and ἀγρεύσας are all one. By this then the word appears to ſignifie rage or vehement diſpleaſure (as ἀχθάζει is ὀργίζεται) ſuch as is in bears and other wild beaſts, when it makes them tear in pieces thoſe that are next to them, or againſt whom it is conceived; As here it follows, they conſulted to put them to death.

f. διαπρίονται

A ſtory there is of one Theudas which Joſephus mentions Ant: l. 20. c. 5. and Euſebius Hiſt: l. 2 c. ult. who undertook to be a prophet, and promiſed that he would divide Jordan, &c. But that was in Claudius's time, in the time of Fadus's praefecture, who deſtroyed him and his followers. And ſo that cannot be the perſon here mention'd, for this here was before Judas Galileus v. 37. and he was in the time of Cyrenius's being Governour of Syria (ſee note h.) This Theudas here then, muſt needs be ſome other perſon, whom they had recorded in their writings, and from thence Gamaliel here recites the ſtory, though we have not other record of it.

Of

h. Ἰούδας Γαλιλαῖος * See Euseb: Hist: Eccl: l.1.c.9.

Of this Judas of Galilee, and of this enrolling, Josephus's testimony is most clear, * Antiq. l.18. c.1. Cyrenius, saith he, came to Syria sent from Cesar (or under him) διαγνωσόμενος τὰ ὄντα, καὶ πωλήσων τὰ τῶν ἀνδρῶν χρήματα, as judge of the nation and to take the valuation of their estates. Upon this, Judas Gaulonita ἐπαίρει τοὺς ἀποστῆσαι, rebell'd, or made defection, and Saddochus with him, ἀναπείσαντες ὡς δουλείαν ἐπάγοντα τὴν ἀπογραφὴν λέγοντες, saying that this valuation of their estates (the enrolling here) brought in direct servitude upon them, καὶ παρακαλέσαντες ἐπ' ἐλευθερίᾳ συστρατεύειν τὸ ἔθνος, and therefore called the whole nation to follow them, and vindicate their liberties. So again de Bell: Jud: l.2. c.12. Τὸν ἀπὸ Γαλιλαίας Ἰούδαν εἰς ἀποστασίαν ἐπῆγε πρὸ ὀλίγου πείθων, ἠλίζων, οἱ φόρον τε Ῥωμαίοις τελεῖν ὑπέμενον, καὶ μετὰ θεὸν ἄλλον δεσπότας, Judas led them to make a defection, reproaching them, or, making it a great crime in them, if they should endure to pay tribute to the Romans, and acknowledg mortal rulers, after God had been their King. This doctrine of the unlawfulnesse to pay tribute to men, upon pretense that they must acknowledge no other power but that of God over them, was it, for which this Judas is by Josephus set down as the leader or head of a fourth heresie among the Jewes (Τῇ δὲ τετάρτῃ ὁ Γαλιλαῖος Ἰούδας ἡγεμὼν ἐφέστηκε) And the texts of Scripture, on which he grounded it, may be thought by the words of Josephus even now cited [φόρον τελεῖν, to pay tribute] and [μετὰ θεὸν ἄλλον δεσπότας, mortal Lords after God,] to be that of *Deut.*23.18. in the Septuagints reading of it [οὐκ ἔσται πλειστηριὸς ἀπὸ θυγατέρων Ἰσραὴλ (which * Tertullian renders, non erit vectigal pendens ex filiis Israel, none of the children of Israel shall pay tribute,) καὶ οὐκ ἔσται πλειστηριάζων ἐκ τοῦ ἐγκλῶ ἀπὸ υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ] and that of *Deut.*6.13. thou shalt fear the Lord thy God and serve him, (by way of exclusion of all others) the falsnesse of which conclusion from these premises will appear not only from the Hebrew text, *Deut.*23. (where the matter is very distant from that of paying tribute, There shall be no whore of the daughters of Israel, nor a Sodomite of the sons of Israel) but the right understanding of the Greek it self, where, say the * Fathers, the words [πλειστηριὸς and πλειστηριάζων] referre to the mysteries of the heathens the unclean rites in their diabolical worships, and the first signifies ὁ μυσταγωγῶν, him that thus initiates or enters any in those debaucheries, the latter ὁ μυσταγωγούμενον, him that is thus initiated.

These words μήποτε, &c. lest ye be found fighters against God, are in the sense to be connected with ἐασατε αὐτούς, Let them alone, v.37. So that all, that is betwixt, must be read as in parenthesis.

k. Ἀτιμάζειν

Ἀτιμάζειν ὁ ὑβριζόμενος ἐν τοῖς ἀγῶσι, saith Ammonius, it signifies reproachful, contumelious usage, such was this of scourging, that was a servile, and dishonourable, infamous punishment.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphrase.

1. AND in those daies [when the number of disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of * the a Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.]

* the Hellenists

1. the number of Christians increasing, the Jewes that understood Greek, and used the Greek bible in their congregations, complained of unequall dealing, viz: that there was little care of their widowes (see note on 1 Tim.5. a.) in proportion, or comparison with the Hebrewes, in the daily distribution or provision that was made for the poor, (see note on Lu. 8. a.)

a.

2. Then the twelve called the b multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not † reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.]

† thought fit, ἀρεστὸν

2. And the twelve Apostles calling the Church together, said unto them, We have resolved or decreed (see note on Joh:8. c.) that it is no way fit or reasonable, that we should neglect the preaching of the Gospel, and undertake the care of looking to the poor.

b.

3. Wherefore brethren, Look you out * among you seven men of honest report, c full of the holy Ghost, and wisdome, whom we may appoint † over this businesse.]

* seven men of you, that are approved, ἄνδρας ἐξ ὑμῶν μαρτυρουμένους ἑπτὰ

† for this use, ἐπὶ τῆς χρείας ταύτης, see Tit.3. note f.

3. Therefore doe you nominate to us seven men, who have approved themselves to be faithfull trusty persons, the most eminent of the beleivers among you, that we may consecrate or ordain them to this office of Deacons in the Church, and intrust them with the task of distributing, to them that want, out of the stock of the Church; And in the choise of them let it also be observed, that they be persons of eminent gifts, and knowledge in divine matters, see v.10. (who consequently may be fit to be employed by us in preaching the word, and receiving proselytes to the faith by baptisme, ch.8.5. 12.)

c.

4. But we will * give our selves continually to prayer, and to the ministery of the word.]

* continue in προσκαρτερήσομεν

4. And by that means we shal be lesse disturbed or interrupted in our daily employment of praying and preaching the Gospel.

5. And the saying pleased the whole multitude, and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith, and of the holy Ghost,] and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicholas a proselyte of Antioch.

5. And the thing was thus agreed on by those other that associated with the Apostles. And they pitched upon Stephen first, a very worthy person, that was richly instructed in the doctrine of Christ, and was by the holy Ghosts coming upon him fitted with elocution and all other abilities to preach the Gospel.

6. Whom they set before the Apostles, and ‖ when they had prayed they laid their hands on them.]

‖ they prayed, and laid προσευξάμενοι ἐπέθηκαν

6. These seven the whole number of disciples that associated with them, presented to the twelve Apostles, and they, i.e. the Apostles, by prayer and imposition of hands (see note on 1 Tim.5. f.) consecrated or ordained them to this office of Deacons.

7. And the word of God increased, and the number of the Disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly, and a great company of the Priests were obedient to the faith.]

7. And the faith of Christ was propagated, and a very great number of men in Jerusalem associated with the Apostles, every day more and more, and many of the Jewish priests received the Gospel thus preached by the Apostles.

8. And

8. And Stephen the deacon, being endued with great abundance of Chriſtian knowledge, and alſo with the power of working miracles

8. And Stephen full of faith and power] did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9. And as he preached the faith of Chriſt, ſome men of that ſynagogue which was called by the name (becauſe perhaps built at the charges) of the Libertines (i. e. thoſe which were the ſons of them, which being Jewes had been made free deniſons by the Romans, or were born of Jewiſh parents in cities which had thoſe priviledges under the Romans, ſuch as Tarſus, (ſee note on c. 22. c.) where Paul was born, who was an active perſon in this buſineſſe ch. 7. 58. ſome, I ſay, of thoſe Jewes) and of thoſe that dwelt in Cyrene and Alexandria, and in Cilicia, and Aſia, oppoſed Stephen, and contradicted him.

9. Then there aroſe certain of the ſynagogue, which is called the ſynagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia, and of Aſia, diſputing with Stephen.]

10. And they were not able to reſiſt the wiſdome, and the Spirit by which he ſpake.]

10. And he ſpake with ſo much knowledge and conviction of argument, and with ſo great excellence of elocution, that they were no way able to deal with him.

11. And being overcome by his reaſons and power of ſpeaking, they betook themſelves to other viler arts, and hired ſome men to accuſe him falſly, and to make complaint to the Sanhedrim, that they had heard him ſpeak diſhonourably of the Jewiſh religion.

11. Then they ſuborned men, which ſaid, We have heard him ſpeak blaſphemous words againſt Moſes, and againſt God.]

12. And having incenſed the Sanhedrim againſt him, and alſo the people at Jeruſalem, they apprehended and carried him before the Sanhedrim.

12. And they ſtirred up the people, and the Elders, and the Scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the councell.]

13. And brought thoſe witneſſes, which they had hired or ſuborned, v. 11. to give in their teſtimony, Which was thus, This Stephen is continually a foretelling deſtruction to the Temple, and threatning the change of all the Moſaicall rites.

13. And ſet up falſe witneſſes, which ſaid, This man ceaſeth not to ſpeak blaſphemous words againſt this holy place and the Law.]

14. rites, ceremonies

14. For we have heard him ſay, that this Jeſus of Nazareth ſhall deſtroy this place, and ſhall change the [cuſtomes] which Moſes delivered us.

15. And all the Judges that were preſent in the Sanhedrim, as they looked on him, ſaw a great ſplendour about him, juſt as it is when an Angel appeareth.

15. And all that ſat in the councell looking ſtedfaſtly on him, ſaw his face, as it had been the face of an Angel.]

Notes on Chap. VI.

a. Ἑλληνιστὴ

The word Ἑλληνιστὴ is by the Syriack rendred Jewes that underſtand Greek; and ſo ſaith Phavorinus, Ἑλληνίζω, Ἑλληνικῶς φθέγγομαι, καὶ τὰ Ἑλλήνων φρονῶ, to Hellenize, is to ſpeak Greek, and to have skill in the Greek learning. So ſaith Scaliger. Ἑλληνίζειν non eſt habitare in Græciâ, ſed linguâ Græcâ uti, It is not to dwell in Greece, but to uſe the Greek language. And ſo thoſe here that uſed the Septuagints tranſlation of the Bible, are called Ἑλληνιστὴ Helleniſts. And ſo are differenced here from the Ἑβραῖοι Hebrews, which uſed the Jeruſalem-paraphraſe, which is now extant. Thus are Ἑλληνιστὴ Act. 11. 20. differenced from the Jewes in generall v. 19. not that thoſe Helleniſts were not Jewes, (for there v. 20. 'tis ſaid that they preached to them, whereas v. 19. 'tis clear, that they preached to none but Jewes) but that theſe Jewes underſtood Greek, and uſed the Greek Bible, and therefore are called Helleniſts. See note on Joh. 7. d.

b. Τὸ πλῆθος τῶν μαθητῶν, multitude of diſciples] here, are the community or ſociety of Chriſtians, called ſometimes πάντες the All, 1 Tim. 5. 20. πλείονες the many, 2 Cor. 2. 6. anſwerable to the multitude here, and ſometimes Χριστιανοὶ Chriſtians, or followers of Chriſt, in reſpect of whom as their Doctor, or Maſter, they are here called μαθηταὶ diſciples; and both ordinarily united together in the word ἐκκλησία Church, and ἀδελφοὶ the brethren, ſee c. 15. 3. & 4. & 23. & Mat. 18. 17. Now what power the Church, or brethren, conſidered in this notion, the ſociety of Chriſtians doe here appear to have, may be conſiderable, The choice of the perſons of the Deacons is here committed to them, But that firſt by the appointment of the Apoſtles, declared to them, The twelve called to them the multitude, and ſaid, Look out, &c. v. 2, 3. Secondly, they had by the Apoſtles theſe bounds ſet them, 1. to take ſeven, the number ſpecified by the Apoſtles, not left arbitrary to them, 2ly, to pitch on ἄνδρας μαρτυρουμένους, men generally known and well reputed of, 3dly, with theſe qualifications, 1. faith, ſuppoſed in the ἐξ ὑμῶν ſome of you, i. e. beleivers, Chriſtians, 2dly, fulneſſe of the holy Ghoſt, extraordinary gifts, 3dly, fulneſſe of wiſdome, fitted by all theſe for this employment; And when by the Apoſtles appointment, together with the obſervation of theſe preſcribed rules, the multitude have ſought out the perſons, then ſtill the Apoſtles reſerve the χειροθεσία, the Ordination, or Conſtitution of them to themſelves, v. 3. In the nomination of Biſhops, and Deacons in other Churches, the like may be concluded from the Epiſtles to Timothy, and Titus, viz: that ſomewhat was referred to the Church, particularly their Teſtimony concerning the qualifications of the Perſons. For the Biſhop that was to ordain, is by S. Pauls direction firſt to enquire, as it were upon Articles, (εἴ τις ἐστὶν ἀνέγκλητος, if or whether he be blameleſſe, &c.) which concerning a Biſhop are fifteen, Tit. 1. 6. ſeventeen, 1 Tim. 3. 1. fewer concerning a Deacon, And all of them being matters of fact and manners. Timothy, which was newly entred upon his province, and Titus lately left in Crete, could not poſſibly be inſtructed ſufficiently from their own experience, and therefore muſt be ſuppoſed to have it by enquiry of the Church. So in the Cenſures of the Church, The offender muſt be rebuked before the many, 2 Cor. 2. 6. ἔπιμία ὑπὸ τῶν πλειόνων, before the Church, Mat. 18. 17. ἐνώπιον πάντων, before all, 1 Tim. 5. 20. Biſhop, that muſt ἐλέγχειν rebuke the offenders, onely in the preſence, and with the notice of the Church, to make the rebuke more conſiderable, to produce ſhame, and reformation. Laſtly, in the Councel at Jeruſalem, with the Apoſtles and Elders, or Biſhops of Judea, is joyned ὅλη ἐκκλησία the whole Church, ch. 15. 22. in the chooſing, and ſending meſſengers to Antioch; But that with a moſt diſcernible diſtinction. The Apoſtles and Elders, as they, whoſe decree, or appointment it was, ἔδοξε τοῖς ἀποστόλοις καὶ πρεσβυτέροις, it pleaſed or ſeemed good to the Apoſtles and Elders to ſend choſen men, the choice and miſſion belonging to them, and the perſons ſent, ἄνδρας ἐξ ἀυτῶν, men of them, Biſhops of the Councel, but this with the knowledge, and approbation of the whole Church (σὺν ὅλῃ τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ) joyned with them, as of thoſe that were acceſſories, not principalls in the ſending. So in the Inſcription of the Epiſtle of the Councel v. 23. The Apoſtles and Elders and brethren ſend greeting, Not that any but the Apoſtles, and Elders, i.e. Biſhops of Judea, were members of the Councel, or had voices in it, (for that is cleared v. 6. at the firſt mention of their Convening, The Apoſtles and Elders came together to conſider of this matter, the debate of the queſtion, and the deciſion, belonging only to them) but that the whole Church, joyned with the Apoſtles and Biſhops, ſhewing their conſent, and approbation, and ſubmiſſion to the decree of the Councel. And thus in following times have Lay-men ſubſcribed the Acts of Councels, in this form, Conſentiens ſubſcripſi, I have ſubſcribed conſenting, or teſtified my conſent under my hand, As for the decree of the Councel, though that be in the ſtyle of [ἡμῶν, us,] v. 28. which may be conceived to referre to all thoſe, that are named in the front, and ſo to the [ἀδελφοὶ, brethren] yet 'tis apparent by v. 25. [ἔδοξεν ἡμῖν γενομένοις ὁμοθυμαδὸν, it ſeemed good to us being aſſembled together] that that belongs onely to thoſe that were aſſembled or ſat in the Councel, i. e. the Apoſtles, and Elders, v. 6. and ſo it is expreſly ſet, c. 16. 4. δόγματα τὰ κεκριμένα ὑπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων, the decrees ordained by the Apoſtles and Elders.

What is meant by πλήρης πνεύματος ἁγίου, full of the holy Ghoſt] in this place, may perhaps be beſt collected, by a farther conſideration of the words of Chriſt, Mar. 16. 17, 18. But ſignes ſhall attend them which beleive theſe things (ſo Σημεῖα δὲ τοῖς πιστεύσασι ταῦτα παρακολουθήσει may be rendred) or theſe ſignes ſhall attend, or follow them that beleive. Theſe words ſeem to contain a promiſe of extraordinary gifts (of caſting out Devils, ſpeaking ſtrange languages, healing, &c. v. 17, 18.) to others (beſide the Apoſtles,) under the name of beleivers. For the beleivers there [πιστεύσαντες] are all one with the [he that beleiveth [ὁ πιστεύσας] and is baptized v. 16. and that is thoſe that upon the Apoſtles preaching ſhall beleive, and enter into the Church, or be added to it. But this not ſo unlimitedly, on one ſide, as that all that did beleive, ſhould have thoſe gifts beſtow'd upon them, (ſee note on ch. 2. d. for then here would have been no choice, All being full of the holy Ghoſt, they could not look out men that were full; Nor yet with ſuch reſtrictions on the other ſide, as that none had theſe gifts, but thoſe that were ordained to ſacred functions, for then theſe, who were not yet ſo ordained, could not thus be full. But I ſuppoſe the truth is in the middle, At the Apoſtles preaching and mens receiving the Goſpel, many of them that beleived had extraordinary gifts, miraculous powers beſtowed upon them, for the teſtifying to themſelves and others the truth of the Goſpel in thoſe firſt times, and to qualifie them for the ſervices of the Church, when they ſhould be called to it, And agreeably thoſe that were thus endowed, were generally choſen to ſuch imployments, (before others who had them not,) as there was need of them; And ſuch I ſuppoſe are here meant under the phraſe of Full of the holy Ghoſt, and that phraſe mention'd by the Apoſtles, as a qualification required in thoſe, whom they would appoint Deacons here, and, beſide the care of the poor, communicate the power of preaching and baptizing to them, which 'tis evident Philip had. This may moſt probably be it, which is affirmed of Cornelius's family Act. 10. 44. The holy Ghoſt fell on all them, which heard the words, and the gift of the holy Ghoſt was powr'd upon them 45. for they ſpake with tongues, &c. 46. So again ch. 19. 6. the Epheſian diſciples being newly baptized in the name of Jeſus, v. 5. by the Apoſtles benediction, and impoſition of hands, the holy Ghoſt came upon them, and they ſpake with tongues, and prophecied. And ſo ch. 2. 38. when Peter tells them, that upon their repentance, and baptiſme, they ſhould receive δωρεὰν the gift of the holy Ghoſt, (the very phraſe which is uſed of Cornelius's family) it follows accordingly ch. 4. 31. the place was ſhaken, and they were filled with the holy Ghoſt, and ſo, beſide the inward gifts, and graces of the Spirit, they were, many of them, endowed with thoſe extraordinary gifts, which c. 2. 1. had fall'n upon the Apoſtles, and were uſefull for the confirming them in the faith, and to teſtifie to them and others the truth of what was preacht to them. And of them that were at that time converted, they are now to chooſe ſome here, for the office of Deacons, men full of the Spirit &c.

CHAP. VII.

Paraphraſe.

1. Then ſaid the high Prieſt, Are theſe things ſo?]

1. And the chief prieſt asked him, Whether this, whereof he was accuſed, ch. 6. 14. of foretelling the deſtruction of this people, and religion of the Jewes, were true or no.

2. And he ſaid, Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken, The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Meſopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran,]

2. And fitting his ſpeech to the point in hand (i.e. to prove the approaching deſtruction of the Temple, by ſhewing the little merit, and great provocations of that people, and the no reaſon why they ſhould be preferred before other nations, the free choice, and thereupon free promiſe of God being the only ground of all the mercy that befell them) he ſaid, I beſeech you to give audience, The one eternall God of heaven and earth, appeared, and ſpake to our father Abraham, whilſt he was in Meſopotamia (as that (ſee Judith Judith 5.3.) in a wider notion contains that whole region on the other ſide of Euphrates from Canaan, v.2. Syria, Chaldæa, Meſopotamia, and Babylonia) i.e. whilſt he was in the place of his birth, Ur of the Chaldees, Gen.15.7. & 11.31. before the time that his father Terah and he dwelt in Haran, Gen.11.31. (where, in the way from Ur to Canaan, they ſtayed ſome yeares, till Terah's death, v.32.)

3. And when he appeared, he commanded him ſaying, The countrey where thou art, is overrun with all villany, and therefore that thou mayſt keep thy ſelf free from their idolatries, and other vices accompanying them, I command thee to forſake that place, and thy fathers houſe, Gen.12.1. and remove into another land which I ſhall appoint, and direct thee to, viz: the land of Canaan, which though now poſſeſt by others, yet I will give unto thee, and to thy ſeed entirely, Gen.13.14. and by thy readineſſe to take this journey on this command I ſhall diſcern thy obedience to me.

3. And ſaid unto him, Get thee out of thy countrey and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I ſhall ſhew thee.]

4. Then in obedience to that command, he went out of that countrey of his, (and his father Terah with him, as farre as Haran, Gen.11.31.) and after he had dwelt in Haran ſome years, according to God's command, he removed into Canaan, Gen.12.5.

4. Then came he out of the land of the Chaldæans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land wherein ye now dwell.]

5. And there he pitched his tent, and built an altar, v.7,8. (but was ſoon fain to remove into Ægypt ver.10. and there to ſojourn) having received a promiſe of God, that he would give him this whole land of Canaan, ch.12.7. for him and his ſeed to poſſeſſe, when as yet he had no child, nor likelyhood to have any, nor any kind of eſtate in the land, but was a ſtranger, or ſojourner there, Gen.17.18. & 20.1. & 21.34. & 23.4.

5. And he gave him none inheritance in it, no not ſo much as to ſet his foot on, yet he promiſed that he would give it to him for a poſſeſſion, and to his ſeed after him, when as yet he had no child.]

a. 6. And Gen.15.13. God ſpake to him again concerning this matter, that before this promiſe ſhould be performed to him, his poſterity ſhould firſt ſojourn in Canaan, and then go down to ſojourn in Ægypt, and there ſhould ſuffer, and be for ſome time oppreſſed, like ſlaves, till the end of 400 years from the time of the birth of Iſaac (not from the time of the going into Ægypt) untill the time that the iniquity of the ſeven nations, all concluded there (as Am.2.9,10.) under the generall name of the Amorites, which inhabited this promiſed land, ſhould be filled up, and ſo they fit for God in juſtice to deſtroy them, and give away their land from them, Gen.15.16.

6. And God ſpake on this wiſe, that his ſeed ſhould ſojourn in a ſtrange land, and that they ſhould bring them into bondage, and intreat them evil [a] four hundred years.]

7. And then in the 4th generation (Gen. 15.16.) after Jacob, (Moſes and Aaron, which brought them out, being the ſons of Amram, the ſon of Cohath, the ſon of Levi, one of Jacob's ſons that went down with him into Ægypt) when the time comes of bringing them out of their Ægyptian ſlavery, and giving them this land, I will, ſaith God, Gen.15.14. lay heavy puniſhments on the Ægyptians, and by that means make them releaſe thy poſterity, and ſo they ſhall come and poſſeſſe this land and ſerve me in it.

7. And the nation to whom they ſhall be in bondage, will I judge, ſaid God: and after that ſhall they come forth, and ſerve me in this place.]

8. And God made a covenant with him, & appointed circumciſion, as a ſeal of it, and accordingly Abraham, when Iſaac was born, circumciſed him the eight day, and Iſaac begat and circumciſed Jacob, and Jacob his twelve ſons, the heads of the twelve tribes, of which this people conſiſted.

8. And he gave him the covenant of circumciſion, and ſo Abraham begat Iſaac, and circumciſed him the eight day; and Iſaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat the twelve Patriarchs.]

9. And thoſe ſons of Jacob were much diſpleaſed with one of their brethren, viz: Joſeph, and ſold him into Ægypt, but when he was there, God protected, and provided for, and advanced him miraculouſly,

9. And the Patriarchs * moved with envy, ſold Joſeph into Ægypt, but God was with him,] * being inraged. ζηλώσαντες

10. And when he was caſt into priſon there, God brought him out, and at the ſame time brought him into favour, and eſtimation for deep wiſdome with Pharaoh the king of Ægypt, and he entruſted the affairs of his whole houſhold, yea and the whole kingdome to his managery.

10. And delivered him out of all his † affliction, and gave him favour, and wiſdome in the ſight of Pharaoh king of Ægypt, and he made him governour over Ægypt, and all his houſe.] † afflictions, θλίψεις

11. At this time of Joſeph's power with Pharaoh there came a terrible famine upon Ægypt, and Canaan, for ſeven years ſpace, and our father Jacob and his children being then in Canaan, were like to have periſhed for want of food.

11. Now there came a dearth over all the land of Ægypt and Canaan, and great affliction, and our fathers found no ſuſtenance.]

12,13. And Jacob underſtanding, that, though the famine was as great at preſent in Ægypt, as in Canaan, yet there was a magazine of corn reſerved from the former years plenty, and ſo there was now ſufficient for themſelves and to ſell to others, ſent his ſons twice into Ægypt to buy corn, And though the firſt time Joſeph dealt a little harſhly with them, yet the ſecond time he made himſelf known to be their brother, and made it known alſo to Pharaoh.

12. But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Ægypt, he ſent out our fathers firſt.

13. And at the ſecond time Joſeph was made known to his brethren, and Joſeph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.]

b. 14. And by Pharaoh's appointment, [b] Joſeph ſent for his father and brethren, and their wives and children, which reckoning in ſome of their children, born in Ægypt, together with Joſeph and his ſons, and ſons ſons, made up ſeventy five perſons.

14. Then ſent Joſeph and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, threeſcore and fifteen ſouls.]

15. And accordingly Jacob went down to him with his whole family, And he and all his ſons dyed there.

15. So Jacob went down into Ægypt, and died, he, and our fathers,]

c. 16. And Joſeph & ſome (ſay the ancients) of his brethren, being firſt buried in Ægypt, were after, at the Iſraelites going out, removed to Sichem, Joſ. 24.32.

16. And were [c] carried over into Sichem, and laid in the ſepulchre that Abraham bought for a ſumme of money of the ſons of Emmor the father of Sichem.]

24. 32. in the field bought by Jacob of the children of Hamor, And Jacob himſelf never buried in Ægypt, but by his ſons carried, and buried, Gen. 50. 13. in the field of Machpelah, bought by Abraham of Ephron ſon of Zoar, Gen. 23. 8. or of the ſons of Heth, Gen. 49. 32. And ſo, ſaith Joſephus, ſome of his ſons alſo.

17. But when the time of the promiſe drew nigh, which God had ſworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Ægypt,

18. Till another King aroſe, which knew not Joſeph.]

17, 18. And when the four hundred years began to be expired, after which the performance of the promiſe to Abraham's ſeed, of giving them the land of Canaan, was to commence, the people growing into a great number, and another King coming to reigne in Ægypt, that forgat the merits of Joſeph.

*circumvented, κατασοφισάμενος

19. The ſame * dealt ſubtilly with our kindred, and evil intreated our fathers, ſo that they caſt out their young children, to the end they might not live.]

19. (Who therefore did all that he could to keep the Iſraelites from flourithing or encreaſing, and among other things, commanded all their male children to be put to death, Exod. 1.)

† brought him up for her ſelf as, or for a ſon, ἀνεθρέψατο ἑαυτῇ εἰς υἱόν

20. In which time Moſes was born, and was [d] exceeding fair; and nouriſhed up in his fathers houſe three moneths.

21. And when he was caſt out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and † nouriſhed him for her own ſon.]

20, 21. At this point of time Moſes was born, and being a very beautifull child, he was firſt kept cloſe in his fathers houſe three moneths Exod. 2. But when that could no longer be done, he was put in a cradle of bulruſhes by a rivers brink, And being there left and expoſed, the providence of God preſerved him. For it happened that Pharaoh's daughter found him there, and took him, and put him to nurſe to his own mother, Exod. 2. 9. and ſo afterwards educated and brought him up as her own ſon.

22. And Moſes was learned in all the wiſdome of the Ægyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds.]

22. By which means he was inſtructed in all the learning of the Ægyptians, in Mathematicks, and Phyſick &c. (ſee note on 2 Tim. 3. 2.) and was thereby a perſon of great abilities above other men, both for ſpeaking (viz: in reſpect of eloquence and power of ſpeech, though for the manner of utterance he had ſome ſtammering in his ſpeech) and alſo for managery of buſineſſe. Very able both to give counſel, and to act any great affairs.

23. And when he was full fourty years old, it came into his heart to viſit his brethren the children of Iſrael.]

23. And when he was forty years old, God having ſome way revealed unto him (ſee note on 2 Tim. 3. 2) his purpoſe of delivering the Iſraelites out of their ſlavery by his hands, and making him their Leader, and inſtrument of his vengeance on their oppreſſors the Ægyptians, (ſee v. 25.) thereupon he reſolved to viſit them, and ſee how it was with them.

24. And ſeeing one of them ſuffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppreſſed, and ſmote the Ægyptian.]

24. And ſeeing an Ægyptian doe injury to an Iſraelite, he took the Iſraelites part againſt him, and in defence of the Iſraelite, kill'd the Ægyptian.

* But, or, And he thought that his brethren did underſtand, Ἐνόμιζε δὲ συνιέναι τοὺς ἀδελφούς

25. * For he ſuppoſed his brethren would have underſtood how that God by his hand would deliver them, but they underſtood not.]

25. This he did as an act of that office, to which God had deſigned him, that of a Saviour or deliverer of his countrey-men, and although he had not yet received his commiſſion to that office, but only ſome notice of Gods deſignation, yet thinking that the Iſraelites did alſo know that he was thus deſigned, he thought fit to doe this (which lawfully he might, in the defence of an innocent perſons life againſt an unjuſt aſſault or violence, which could not be averted but by this means) viz: in defence of the one to kill the other, as a firſt aſſay, or exerciſe of that office, but in this he was miſtaken, for the Iſraelites knew nothing of this purpoſe of God to imploy him, and from this act of his had not that ſagacity to diſcern it.

† perſwaded them to peace, συνήλλασσεν αὐτοὺς εἰς εἰρήνην

26. And the next day he ſhewed himſelf unto them as they ſtrove, and † would have ſet them at one again,] ſaying, Sirs, ye are brethren, why doe ye wrong one to another?

26. The next day he interpoſed himſelf again as a pacifier or compoſer of controverſies among them, to ſee how that would be accepted by them, whether they would be likely to receive him as a Judge, to goe in, and out before them, which was another part of the office, to which he was deſigned.

27. But he that did his neighbour wrong thruſt him away, ſaying, Who made thee a ruler, and a judge over us?

28. Wilt thou kill me, as thou didſt the Ægyptian yeſterday?

29. Then fled Moſes at this ſaying, and was a ſtranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two ſons.]

29. And Moſes ſeeing himſelf thus repulſed, and on the other ſide, fearing that what he had done already, might, by being known, bring hazard on him (as it did Exod. 2. 15. when Pharaoh heard of it, he ſought to kill him) he fled from thence to Midian, and there ſojourned with Revel, Exod. 2. 18. or, which is all one, with Jethro, ch. 3. 1. the prieſt or prince of Midian, Exod. 2. 16. and he kept his ſheep, and married his daughter Zipporah, by whom he had two children, Gerſhom, ſo named for his being a ſtranger or ſojourner there, and Eliezer from God's helping him or delivering him from the hand of Pharaoh, that ſought his life, Exod. 18. 2. 3. 30.

30. And when fourty yeares were expired, there appeared unto him in the wilderneſſe of mount Sinai, an Angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a buſh.]

30. And at the end of a ſecond part of three of his life, i.e. of a ſecond 40 years, which was alſo the period of the 400 years prefixt, v. 6. as Moſes was feeding his ſheep about Horeb or Sinai, that mount after ſo famous for Gods delivering the Law out of it, and therefore called the flaming mountain of God, Exod. 3. 2. he ſaw a flame of fire in a buſh, but the buſh was not hurt nor conſumed by it, which was the appearing of an Angel, according as 'twas uſuall for Angels to appear (ſee note on Mat. 3. k.)

31. When Moſes ſaw it, he wondred at this ſight, and as he drew neer to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him,

32. Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob. [Then Moſes trembled and durſt not behold.]

32. And this voice of God by an Angel ſpeaking ſpeaking (and perhaps, as it was uſuall, thunder joyned with it) was ſo terrible to him, and the flame that appeared in the buſh ſo glorious and illuſtrious, that he durſt not look upon it, but hid his face, Exod. 3. 6.

33. This appearance of an Angel is an argument and evidence of my peculiar preſence, from which any place is called holy, and therefore, in reverence due to ſuch a preſence, put off thy ſhooes, &c.

33. Then ſaid the Lord to him, [Put off thy ſhooes from thy feet, for the place, where thou ſtandeſt, is holy ground.]

34. Now is the time come wherein I will certainly viſit & relieve that people of mine, the children of Abraham, which, according to what I foretold him (ſee v. 6) have been uſed like ſlaves in Ægypt a long time, and to this purpoſe now I have ſent down my Angel, the only way of my peculiar preſence in any one place, that I may commune with thee, and ſend thee on this meſſage, as my Commiſſioner to bring them out thence.

34. I have ſeen, I have ſeen the * afflictions of my people which is in Ægypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them: And now come, I will ſend thee into Ægypt.] * oppreſſion, ill uſage, ſlavery

35. And ſo that Moſes that they would not receive to avenge their injuries, or compoſe their quarrels, v. 27, 28. was now ſent by God to lead them and bring them out of Ægypt, and to this end an Angel ſent to talk with him, and give him his commiſſion, which was done in a glorious manner, by a flame in (but not conſuming) the buſh.

35. This Moſes whom they refuſed, ſaying, Who made thee a Ruler and a Judge? the ſame did God ſend to be a Ruler and Deliverer, by the hands of the Angel, which appeared to him in the buſh.]

36. And at laſt, after the working of many terrible prodigies, firſt in Ægypt, then at their departure in the Red-ſea, he reſcued them out of Pharaoh's hands, and after fourty years ſpent in the wilderneſſe, to puniſh their murmuring, and to ſhew forth more of God's power and miracles in ſuſtaining them there, they were at laſt brought by Joſhua into Canaan.

36. He brought them out, after that he had ſhewed wonders and ſignes in the land of Ægypt, and in the Red-ſea, and in the wilderneſſe fourty years.]

37. Now what was this Moſes all this while, but a Prophet foretelling the purpoſe of God to ſend another great prophet to you in theſe later daies, the Meſſias, which (though he were God from heaven, yet) ſhould here be born in an ordinary condition of a daughter of Abraham, and warning you to be ſure to receive and entertain him, when he ſhould come, aſſuring you that if you hear not (receive not) him, you ſhall (which was the point in hand, which Stephen was all this while a demonſtrating, in anſwer to what was laid to his charge ch. 6. 14.) be utterly deſtroyed, Act. 3. 23.

37. This is that Moſes which ſaid unto the children of Iſrael, A Prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up unto you of your brethren like unto me, him ſhall ye hear.]

38. This Moſes afterward when the people were encamped in the wilderneſſe, was called up to mount Sinai, where an Angel ſpake to him and the Iſraelites, and delivered the Law to them, ſee note on Rom. 3. a.

38. This is he that was in the † Church in the wilderneſſe with the Angel, which ſpake to him in the mount Sinai, and with our fathers, who received * the lively oracles to give unto us.] † congregation, ἐκκλησία * living, ζῶντα

39, 40. And after all theſe prodigies and miracles uſed by God to give him authority among them, the Iſraelites murmured, and rebelled againſt him ſtill, and had more mind to be in Ægypt again, then under his government, and to that purpoſe made them pictures of the Ægyptians Gods to goe before, and lead them, as Moſes did, viz: a calf v. 41. only upon pretenſe that Moſes had forſaken them, was gone they knew not whither, when indeed he was only called by God unto the mount, to receive commandements to give unto them.

39. To whom our fathers would not † obey, but thruſt him from them, and in their hearts turned back again into Ægypt,

41. And when they had made this calf they very ſolemnly worſhipt it, and by ſacrifice and feſtivities celebrated that idol (which they themſelves made) in the ſame manner, as God himſelf is wont to be worſhipped.

41. And they made a calf in thoſe daies, and offered ſacrifice unto the Idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.]

42. This provoked God to forſake them, to leave them to themſelves, to permit them to follow their own hearts deſires into all the madneſſe they led them to, and ſo by not reſtraining, to deliver them up to worſhip the ſtarres of heaven, in ſtead of God, upon which it is that God expoſtulates with them, Am. 5. 25. Were the ſacrifices which you offered up in the wilderneſſe all thoſe fourty years, offered to me, O ye houſe of Iſrael?

42. Then God turned and gave them up to worſhip the hoſt of heaven, as it is written in the book of the Prophets, O ye houſe of Iſrael have ye offered to me ſlain beaſts, and ſacrifices by the ſpace of fourty years in the wilderneſſe?]

c. f. 43. Nay, as the groſſeſt idolatry, ye ſet up a chappiet or ſhrine with an image in it (ſee note on c. 19. d.) and that image the image of one of the Ægyptian Kings, under the title of Mars, and again the picture of Saturn, another planet denoting another Ægyptian god, and theſe images of theſe falſe gods have been made by you on purpoſe to be worſhipt by you, which idolatry, together with your conſequent ſinnes, hath brought that captivity upon you, Am. 5. 26.

46. Who having received ſpeciall favour from God, deſired earneſtly to build a ſtanding Temple for his ſervice.

47. But Solomon built him an houſe.]

47. But this Temple was not thought fit to be built by him, becauſe, though he were a very excellent perſon, yet he had had great warres and ſhed much blood, 1 Chron. 22. 8. & 28. 3. in which reſpect God would not permit him to have this honour of building the Temple, a place deſtined to all peaceableneſſe, purity and holineſſe, this therefore was reſerved for Solomon, who accordingly built it in a moſt ſumptuous manner.

48. Howbeit the moſt high dwelleth not in Temples made with hands, as ſaith the prophet,

But ſure God doth not ſo dwell in this Temple (who hath the whole world for his palace) as that he ſhould be bound to preſerve this for ever from being deſtroyed, when you have by crucifying his Son thus provoked his vengeance againſt you, (and this brings home Stephen's diſcourſe in this chapter to the point which he had in hand ch. 6. 14.) and continue in the rebellions of your fathers, for ſure if David's bloodguiltineſſe made him uncapable of building it, yours will render you uncapable of having it continued to you, h.

56. And ſaid,] Behold, I ſee the heavens opened, and the ſon of man ſtanding on the right hand of God.

59. And they ſtoned Stephen, calling upon God, and ſaying,] Lord Jeſus receive my ſpirit.

59 And all the time that they caſt ſtones, he continued in prayer to God, and at the laſt concluded in theſe words,

Notes on Chap. VII.

2. Τῆς ἀποικίας ταύτης

That the four hundred years here mention'd, as alſo Gen. 15. 13. or the four hundred and thirty, Exod. 12. 40. are not to be interpreted of the ſpace, wherein the Iſraelites continued in Egypt, ſo as to begin at Jacobs and his ſons coming thither, and to the end as Moſes's carrying them out, is ſufficiently manifeſt by all ſtory of thoſe times, The Chaldee paraphraſt, and the generality of the Jews determining that ſpace to be but two hundred and ten, only Joſephus defining it two hundred and fifteen years. Firſt then it muſt be obſerved, that the words here, and in thoſe other places being not ſtrictly reſtrained to their dwelling in Ægypt, but ſo as to contain alſo their ſojourning in Canaan, The [γῇ ἀλλοτρίᾳ, ſtrange land,] here may fitly comprehend both of them, and the [πάροικον ἔσται, ſhall ſojourn,] may doe ſo too; for Abraham ſojourned in Canaan, before his poſterity were ſojourners in Ægypt, yea and himſelf firſt ſojourned in Ægypt, Gen. 12. 10. And ſo the words in Gen. 15. 13 are in the ſame latitude, thy ſeed ſhall be a ſtranger in a land which is not theirs, and ſhall ſerve them; Where [the land which is not theirs,] diſtinctly the [γῇ ἀλλοτρίᾳ, a ſtrange land] here, is common to τῆς ἀλλοτρίας ὑπάρχειν

both thoſe lands, where they ſojourned, and where they were ſervants, And in the place *Exod.*12.40. the words in our Engliſh [the ſojourning of the children of Iſrael who dwelt in Ægypt] is reconcileable with this alſo, their ſojourning being defined to be ſo many years, part of which they dwelt in Ægypt, but not their ſojourning in Ægypt ſo many years, And therefore when the Septuagint read it [Ἡ κατοίκησις τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, ὧν παρῴκησε ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ, the ſojourning of the children of Iſrael which they ſojourned in Egypt] they add by way of neceſſary paraphraſe [καὶ ἐν γῇ Χαναὰν, and in the land of Canaan,] and ſo the Samaritan Pentateuch read; and Solomon Jarchi [& in terris aliis, and in other lands] inſtead of it. Secondly, it muſt be obſerved what latitude belongs in that place of Exodus 12. 40. to that phraſe [children of Iſrael] not ſo as to denote the poſterity of Jacob only, but incluſively, them, and their fathers, Jacob, and Iſaac, the poſterity of Abraham, This is done by a figure, Synecdoche, ordinary in all languages; and therefore the Septuagint, to expreſſe it more plainly, thought fit to enlarge their paraphraſe, and having added Canaan to Ægypt, they adde alſo to the children of Iſrael [αὐτοὶ, καὶ οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν, both they, and their fathers,] and ſo read that whole verſe thus, Ἡ δὲ κατοίκησις τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, ὧν παρῴκησε ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ καὶ ἐν γῇ Χαναὰν αὐτοὶ καὶ οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν ἔτη τετρακόσια τριάκοντα, The ſojourning of the children of Iſrael, which they and their fathers ſojourned in the land of Ægypt and Canaan was four hundred and thirty years, And though ſome copies of the Septuagint have not that latter addition, of [they and their fathers] yet S. *Auguſtine in Exod.qu.*47. acknowledgeth both additions. Mean while the words both here, and *Gen.*15.13. have no need of ſuch a paraphraſe, aſſigning it to Abraham's, not to Jacob's ſeed, And ſo ſaith Joſephus antiq: l. 2. Κατέλιπον δὲ τὴν Αἴγυπτον μηνὶ Ξανθικῷ πεμπτῃ καὶ δεκάτῃ, χιλιοστῷ μὲν ἔτει διακοσιοστῷ καὶ τριακοστῷ ἀφ' οὗ γεγόνει πρῶτον Ἀβραμος εἰς τὴν Χαναναίαν ἀφικόμενος, they left Ægypt in the month Xanthicus on the fifteenth day, four hundred and thirty years after our father Abraham came into Canaan. So that now the only difficulty behind is to accord the four hundred years here, and in Geneſis, with the four hundred and thirty in Exodus, And that muſt be by diſtinguiſhing of the beginning of the account, which may be either from Abrahams leaving of Chaldæa, and receiving the firſt promiſe of Canaan, or elſe from the birth of Iſaac, Abrahams ſeed, If the account be begun from the leaving Chaldæa, Abraham's own countrey, when his ſojourning did begin, then it falls right to be four hundred and thirty years, as it is in Exodus, for Abraham being born in the year of the world 2007, and the warning of God to him to goe out of his countrey, being in the ſeventieth year of his age, i.e. in the 2077th of the world, four hundred and thirty years added to that number, make up 2507, And in the next year after that, is the departure out of Ægypt placed by the beſt Chronologers. But if the account begin from Abraham's ſeed, i.e. from the birth of Iſaac, which we know was in the hundredth year of Abraham's age, and ſo thirty years after his departure from Chaldæa, then it muſt conſequently be thirty years leſſe from thence to the departure out of Ægypt, and ſo that will accord exactly with the four hundred years here, and in Geneſis, which are aſſigned to his ſeeds ſojourning in a ſtrange land. Thus the Jewes in Seder Olam collect from that place in Geneſis, thy ſeed ſhall be a ſtranger four hundred years, i.e. Iſaac, from his birth, and his poſterity, till the delivery out of Ægypt by Moſes. Of which ſpace, the ſervitude and oppreſſion of the Iſraelites in Ægypt came not, ſay they, to much above an hundred and thirty years, but their ſtay after Jacob's deſcent, to two hundred and ten, to which adding one hundred and ninety years from Iſaac's birth to Jacob's going down into Ægypt, (which is accordingly placed by Chronologers, An. M. 2298.) the whole four hundred years are made up exactly.

The difference of the number of thoſe which are here ſaid to have gone down into Ægypt, from that computation, which we find, *Gen.*46.27. & Deut. 10.22. where they are but threeſcore and ten, hath made ſome writers think fit to change the reading. Th: Beza, from Cor: Bertram is willing to beleive πέντε five] miſtaken for πάντες all] Coptus rather phanſies πάντες all together, but without any pretenſe of antient, or later copie for either, nay on the contrary, the Syriack and Arabick and Latine tranſlations are all for that which we now have, and ſo make thoſe conjectures unſeaſonable. The matter ſure is to be imputed to another Original, S. Luke, we know, was one of thoſe which made uſe of the Greek tranſlation of the old Teſtament, and accordingly citeth his teſtimonies conſtantly out of the Septuagints reading. Now in the Septuagint, *Gen.*46. where this account is made, it is clear that the ſumme ſet down ver.27. is not ſeventy, as we now read out of the Hebrew, but ſeventy five, and that that is no miſtake of the tranſcriber by confounding of numeral letters, as ſome are willing to ſuppoſe, appears by the view of the retail, there being five names more ſet down in their tranſlation, then we find now in the Hebrew, viz: the ſons of Manaſſes Machir, and Machir begat Galaad, and the ſons of Efraim, Sutalaam and Taam, and the ſons of Sutalaam, Edem. Againſt this it is of no force that is objected, that theſe five came not down with Jacob into Ægypt, for by that reaſon the number of ſeventy could not be made up, for of them Joſeph and Manaſſeh and Efraim are three, and 'tis certain, Joſeph came not into Ægypt with Jacob, and Manaſſeh and Efraim were born in Ægypt and never were out of it. Nay among them we find the ſons of Pharez, Hezrom and Hamul, v.12. and ten ſons of Benjamin, v.21. who certainly were not born at the time of Jacob's going into Ægypt; The number whether of ſeventy, or ſeventy five, belongs not preciſely to thoſe that came into Ægypt, but to the progeny of Jacob there, of which becauſe a greater part came down with him thither, therefore the greater part giving the denomination to the whole, it is ſaid that ſo many went down with him, though ſome of that number were born there, who conſequently were then in the loins of their parents (according to the ſacred ſtyle, and by a figure frequent there) as Levi is ſaid by the author to the Hebrews, to have paid tithes to Melchiſedek, though he were not born, till many years after that Abraham did ſo, Or as in the enumeration of Leah's

b. Ἑβδομήκοντα πέντε.

progeny in this very chapter of Gen. v. 15. where having reckoned both her children, and childrens children to three generations, of which only six ſons and a daughter were born in Padan-Aram, or Meſopotamia, and all the reſt in Canaan, he yet addes, Theſe be the ſons of Leah which ſhe bare unto Jacob in Padan-Aram, with his daughter Dinah, all the ſouls of his ſons and his daughters were thirty and three.

c. Μαχπηλὴ τῆς Σιχίμ

Some difficulty there is in reconciling this paſſage of the burying place of the Patriarchs, with that which is ſaid in Geneſis. There 'tis clear there were two burying places, one bought by Abraham of Ephron the Hittite, Gen. 23. in Machpelah before Mamre, i.e. in Hebron, which is in the land of Canaan v. 19. and this coſt four hundred ſhekels of ſilver ver. 15. the other bought by Jacob of the children of Emor in Salem, a city of Shechem, in Canaan alſo, Gen. 33. 19. and that coſt an hundred lambs, or pieces of money with that ſignature. If we referre to that which Abraham bought, then that was not bought of the children of Emor or Hamor; if to that which was bought of the children of Hamor, then the name of Abraham cannot be retained. Hence it is that Andr. Maſius (a learned man) on Joſhua 24. 32. hath thought neceſſary to put in into the text here the name of Jacob in ſtead of that of Abraham. And another expedient there is, that the word Abraham may be retained, but muſt ſignifie Jacob, as ſometimes the children are expreſt by the name of their father, ſo David is ſet to ſignifie the Meſſias that ſhould come from him, Ezech. 34 23. Jer. 30. 9. and Joſeph for his ſons, Gen. 48. 15. and David for Roboam his grandchild, 1 Kin. 12. 16. and elſwhere Roboam for his ſon Abia. But if we look into the ſtory, Gen. 49. 30. we ſhall find that the burying place here referred to (as farre as concerns the αὐτὸς he, i.e. Jacob v. 15.) was that in Machpelah bought of Ephron by Abraham, and therefore this way of reconciling will not be ſo commodious. The emendation poſſibly will be more proper, by ſetting the name of Heth in ſtead of Emmor: For the [τῆ Σιχίμ] which is added, is wanting in the Syriack and Arabick interpreter, and the King's MS. reads τῆ ἐν Σιχίμ, not, the ſon of Sichem, but that dwelt in Sichem) or elſe for [τ̃ ὑῶν Ἐμμορ, the ſons of Emmor, [τ̃ υἱῶ Ζοὰρ] the ſon of Zoar, (for ſo is Ephron, Gen. 23. 8.) If this may be accepted, then the ſenſe of the whole verſe may be this. The Patriarchs, Jacob and our fathers v. 15. were buried, the latter, viz: Joſeph, Joſh. 24. 32. in Sichem in the field bought of the children of Hamor by Jacob (and ſo ſome others of his brethren too, ſaith S. Jerome in Paula's Epitaph) the former in Machpelah (bought by Abraham of Ephron ſon of Zoar, Gen. 23. 8. or of the children of Heth, Gen. 49. 32. compared with ch. 23. 20.) viz: Jacob, Gen. 50. 13. and ſo (ſaith Joſephus, Ant. l. 2. c. 4.) ſome others of Joſeph's brethren alſo. And ſo both places of buriall may be here referred to in this verſe, and that after the uſuall ſcripture-manner by way of ἀναβασμὸς or regreſſe, thus, Jacob died and our fathers, v. 15. (then v. 16. beginning with the latter firſt) καὶ μετετέθησαν εἰς Σιχίμ, And they, i. e. our fathers, Joſeph &c. were removed to Sichem) (removed, becauſe they had been before buried in Ægypt, Joſh. 24. 32.) καὶ ἐτάφησαν and they were put, i.e. Jacob (and after him ſome others) was buried (without removing) in the tomb that Abraham bought of the ſons of Heth, Gen. 49. 32. or of Ephron, ſon of Zohar, Gen. 23. 8. which word Ζοὰρ might eaſily be turned into Ἐμμορ. As for the ἀργυρίου τιμῆς, price of money, that here the field is ſaid to be bought for, when the Chaldee, the Septuagint, and vulgar Latine, in Geneſis read lambs in ſtead of it, this falls out by the double ſignification of the word קְשִׂיטָה, which ſignifies both ἀμνὸν a lamb, (which in Engliſh we call coſt, and Caſtellio Job 22. 11. renders Quaſitam, from the Hebrew word) and a piece of money, that had that ſignature upon it, as the ſhekel had the arke and the rod of Aaron, and ſo ſaith * Buxtorfe out of Rabbi Aquila, that in Africk money was called Cheſitah. And to this double acception of this word, S. Peter ſeems to referre 1 Pet. 1. 18. Ye are redeemed not ἀργυρίῳ with ſilver, but τιμίῳ αἵματι ὡς ἀμνοῦ, with the precious blood as of a lamb.

* (ad Talmud de Novi Anni initio c. 3. fol. 26.

τιμίῳ αἵματι ὡς ἀμνοῦ

d. Ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ

Ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ] faire to God, may be an Hebrew phraſe, for exceeding faire; for ſo the word [God] may ſometime import an auxeſis or encreaſe. But it is poſſible that the [τῷ Θεῷ] here may be a miſtake of the Scribe for τῷ θεᾷ to ſee or look on, for ſo Ex. 2. 2. where this is related, it is ſaid, when ſhe ſaw him, that he was a goodly child, and Heb. 11. 23. ἀστεῖον παιδίον, they ſaw him a fair, or comely child.

e. Μολὸχ

That the word Μολὸχ Moloch, is originally the Hebrew מֶלֶךְ a King, there is no doubt. And ſo here it notes ſome deified King of the Ægyptians, i.e. an Idol-falſe god, worſhipt, and placed among the ſtarres; and accordingly, An old Ægyptian Alphabet, that ſets down the names of the planets, hath for Mars, μολὸχ. See Kercher: Prodrom: Coptus c. 5. Now for the Σκηνὴ here, the tabernacle of Moloch, that is ſure ſome little cabinet, wherein the image of this falſe god was kept, ſuch as the ναοὶ ἀργυροῦν τῆς Ἀρτέμιδος, the ſilver chappels of Diana, (ſee note on ch. 19. d.) This is in Amos ch. 5. 26. סכות מלככם the tabernacle or Siccoth of your King or Moloch, i.e. the chapplet, where that image of your falſe god, call'd here כיון a figure made to be worſhipt, was enſhrined, or dwelt; (ſo σκηνῦν ſignifies) and the like ſeems to be underſtood by Succoth Benoth, the tabernacle of Venus, ſome little Chappel or ſhrine, where her image was kept and worſhipt.

Σκηνὴ

f. Ῥεμφὰν

Diodorus Siculus l. 1. mention's Remphis ſon of Cephna as King of Ægypt, about the time that Jacob went down thither, and ſaith of him that he gathered an infinite maſſe of wealth, and left behind him at his death 4000000 talents, which makes it probable that he was that Prince, which in the famine by Joſeph's advice, got all the wealth of Ægypt, and the neighbour-countreys. This perſon was afterwards worſhipped as a God for having preſerved Ægypt, and accordingly placed among the ſtarres, and ſo the image of one of the planets, here called ἄστρον, a ſtarre, ſet to ſignifie him. This ſtarre, it ſeems, was Saturne, for ſo that Ægyptian Alphabet (mention'd note e.) which ſets down the names of the planets, for Saturne hath Ρεμφαν Jupiter. Of this perſon that tradition in Suidas is very intelligible, where of Apis the Ægyptian god, it is ſaid, that he was ἄνθρωπός τις a certain rich man, to whom at his death they erected a Temple, ἐν ᾧ ζῶν ἐτρέφετο, in which, an Ox was fed, as being the Hieroglyphick of an husband-man. By which also it appears, that this was that calf or bullock, worshipt by the Israelites; Saturne being among the Gentiles president of husbandry, and therefore sometimes worshipt in the shape of that beast, (under the name of Apis,) as being the chief instrument in ploughing of the ground; But withall fastened among the starres in heaven, and the image of him here called ἄστρον a starre, or as it seems to be best rendred, Amos 5.26. the starre-images of your God &c. referring to both the Images precedent, (to which also the צלמים figures in the plural, that follow, doe belong.) For that Chiun, which is there in Amos put in stead of Remphis, or Coüan, or Caiuan, was among the Persians and Arabians, another name of their Saturne, hath been observed by others. So in the Arabick Lexicon (called Camus) Caiuana Zohalo mammnun, Caiuana is Zohalo (or Saturne,) which is nomen invariabile. Which Lud: de Dieu mistaking for Raialon mammnun, he renders it vir rigidus &c. See Mr Pocock on Abul Farasii p.394. Now that they are here said for this sinne to be carried into Babylon is agreeable with that notion which the Jewes generally had, who were wont to say, that in every plague and captivity that fell upon them, there was an ounce of the calf, God continuing to punish this sinne in all their posterities, that continued to provoke him with the like.

g. Σκηνὴ μαρτυρίου

That which is rendred by the Septuagint σκηνὴ μαρτυρίου the tabernacle of the testimony (and so made use of here by S. Luke) is generally in the Hebrew אהל מועד *Exod.*27.2. c.30.26. c.31.7. & 38.21. the tabernacle of meeting, viz. of meeting with God, whither every one that sought the Lord was to goe, Exod. 33.7. This we render, the tabernacle of the congregation, (as if it referred to our meeting with one another) but certainly it must be taken in that other sense of meeting with God, as appears *Exod.*29.42. at the dore of the tabernacle מועד of meeting before the Lord, where I will meet you to speak there unto you. So c.30.36. the tabernacle of meeting where I will meet with thee, and so *Numb.*17.4. Now this place of God's meeting with men is so called in two respects, 1. because there he communicates his will, makes known his pleasure to them. 2^dly, Because there by his appointment his Name being recorded or commemorated by men, his acts of mercy praised and magnified, there he evidences his presence, to accept those offerings, to blesse those persons, Exod. 20. 24. In all places where I record my name (or in every place where the memoriall that I shall appoint of my name, shall be) I will come unto thee, and I will blesse thee. In the former respect, the tabernacle is called the tabernacle of testimony, because of the arke containing the two tables, wherein Gods covenant or commands concerning men, were made known and testified by God, and that is oft called κιβωτὸς μαρτυρίου the arke of the testimony. In the second respect the tabernacle is called the tabernacle of the testimony, in respect of our acknowledging, and testifying, and recording of God, and God's owning, and recording and blessing of us, evidencing and testifying his accepting of us.

h. Σκληροτράχηλοι

σκληροτράχηλοι] proverbially signifies undisciplinable, foolish people, According to a rule in Physiognomy, that those that have necks that doe not easily bend, are such; so saith Adamantius Physiog: l. 2. c. 26. σκληροτράχηλοι ἀμαθεῖς hard-necked persons are indocile and ignorant, and again οἱ διὰ μυελὸν τοῦ τραχήλου ἀκάμπτου ἔχοντες, some men have necks that will not bend, and this is an argument of folly; But I suppose the meaning of S. Stephen is not to be fetcht from this notation of the word, but from the metaphore of beasts, ἀπερ &c. that till they be disciplined, and accustomed to the yoke, are not willing or patient to bend down to it, And so hard, or stiff-neck't] signifies no more then refractary, disobedient, undisciplinable, and so 'tis here set to denote them that doe alwaies resist the holy Ghost, in all Gods methods toward them walk contrary to him.

i. Σικλος

μὴ σίκλῳ] may here be rendred by referring to the use of that word, (among these writers) of loues or sales, which were done by weighing out the money, and receiving it back again by weight. This is called שקל, Isa. 32.9. שקלתי אתה לה שקל, I weighed him, or, I told him out seven shekels, whence Hesychius σίκλος τὸ διδραχμον, that that is weighed, is that that is lent, for, saith he, σταθμῷ γὰρ δίδοσαν, antiently they lent by weight. Thus the Hebrew שקל which is answerable to it, is oft rendred נתן & אמשל, as to weigh out, is to pay, i.e. to punish. So that the importance of Stephen's prayer is, that God would not require back this debt, i.e. punish them for this sinne. And that this prayer was heard for them that had an hand in Stephen's blood, appears by Gods speciall mercy to Saul, who was a principall person in it, and is miraculously converted in the ninth chapter, according to that saying of the Father, Si Stephanus non orasset, Ecclesia Paulum non habuisset, If Stephen had not prayed, the Church had not had S. Paul.

CHAP. VIII.

1. And Saul which was after, chap.9. so strangely converted, and became so renowned an Apostle,

And at the same time that they dealt thus with Stephen, they vehemently opposed the professing of the faith at Jerusalem, and persecuted all that did so, And all such, but the Apostles, particularly the rest of the seven Deacons, and diverse others c.11.19. went out of Jerusalem, and were dispersed into severall places through Judæa, and Samaria, and as farre as Phœnice, and Cyprus and Antioch, ch. 11. 19. and in all those places, those that were thus dispersed (being filled with the holy Ghost ch.4.31.) preached to the Jewes, and onely the Apostles continued at Hierusalem, being not yet (all) gone out from thence.

a. Συγκομίζειν is to dreſſe, and fit the dead body for the funerall, and differs both from ἀναιρεῖν, and ἐκκομίζειν; ſo ſaith the ſcholiaſt on Æſchylus, Συγκομιδὴ signifies ἡ περὶ τὸν πόνον τοῦ ἐνταφιασμοῦ, all the care that is uſed before the buriall, ἐκκομιδὴ ἡ πρὸς τὸν τάφον ἀπαγωγὴν, the carrying out to the grave or ſepulchre, ἀναιρεσις ἡ ἐκ τάφου εἰς τάφον μετάθεσιν, the removing from one ſepulchre to another. The ſame is expreſt ch. 5. 6. by Συνετείλαντο winding the dead body in a ſheet.

Συγκομίζειν

b. Some difference may perhaps be here obſerved between εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν λόγον] v. 4. and κηρύσσων τὸν Χριστὸν] ver. 5. but this not in reſpect of the matter of their preaching, but of the manner of it, and of the qualifications of the perſons that did it. The latter of theſe [κηρύσσειν to preach Chriſt, doth generally ſignifie a publick, ſolemn proclaiming of him, as when a κῆρυξ herald, or cryer doth pro officio, by way of office, proclaim any thing; but εὐαγγελίζεσθαι] imports no more, then the telling it, making it known, as good newes is publiſhed without the voice of an herald, or cryer, by all that have heard, to all they meet with; and although in one reſpect, (that of proclaiming anew what was not known before) this κηρύσσειν to preach, and [εὐαγγελίζεσθαι to tell the glad tydings] doe agree, (ſee note on Mat. 9. l.) yet in this other reſpect they differ ſometimes, Not that εὐαγγελίζεσθαι is never uſed of that publick, authoritative proclaiming, for it is ſometimes uſed of the Apoſtles Act. 5. 42. & c. 15. 35. and the word εὐαγγελιστὴς Evangeliſt] is the name of an office in the Apoſtles times, and then, whenſoever it was done by way of office either Apoſtolical, or by miſſion from them, it is evident that Εὐαγγελίζεσθαι and κηρύσσειν are in all reſpects the ſame, but, I ſay, that ſometimes, and particularly in this place, εὐαγγελίζεσθαι may belong to whatſoever publiſhing of the Goſpel of Chriſt, and by whomſoever, i.e. by thoſe that have no calling to it. For when the doctrine of Chriſt was firſt preacht by the Apoſtles, and the miraculous gifts exerciſed in their preſence, and a multitude of men, Jewes and proſelytes received the faith, and for doing ſo profeſſly, were preſently perſecuted, and driven out of Jeruſalem, v. 1. it is not to be imagined but that all, whereſoever they came, both men, and women, publiſhed, what they knew, both of the doctrine, and the miracles, whereby it was confirmed, and of their own ſufferings for it, Though that all theſe, even women (who by S. Pauls decree, are not permitted to ſpeak in the Church) ſhould by the Apoſtles be intruſted with the preaching of the word, by way of office, it cannot be imagined. And therefore, when of Philip, which was a deacon, ordained by the Apoſtles, it is related in this chapter, that he preached Chriſt to them, it followes that he baptized them alſo, ver. 12. But of theſe other diſciples, there is no more ſaid, but that they paſſed along beyond Judea and Samaria (the terror that drove them from Jeruſalem, purſuing them farther) εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν λόγον publiſhing this good newes, the Goſpel, which they had received, but no mention of gathering diſciples, or baptizing. And accordingly, c. 11. 19. when there is mention in the proceſſe of the ſtory, of theſe very men, that being ſcattered by the perſecution, which was about Stephen, they paſſed as farre as Phœnice, Cyprus, and Antioch, and that they ſpake the word, or publiſhed the Goſpel to none but the Jewes, the phraſe uſed there is obſervable to this matter, λαλοῦντες τὸν λόγον, ſpeaking the word, the word λαλεῖν] being known to belong to any way of reporting, or relating, by talke, or diſcourſe. And ſo ver. 20. ἐλάλουν πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνιστὰς, they ſpake, talked to the Helleniſts, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν, telling them that good newes, the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, and upon the ſucceſſe of this, through Gods proſpering hand, and many receiving the faith, it followes, that when the Church of Jeruſalem, heard of it, they ſent Barnabas to viſit, and confirm them. Thus of the beleivers in common chap. 4. 31. it is ſaid indefinitely, that they ſpake (ἐλάλουν) the word of God with boldneſſe, according as they had prayed they might v. 29. noting thereby a valiant profeſſion, and publiſhing of the Goſpel, notwithſtanding the terrors of men. And though it be there ſaid of them, that they were all filled with the holy Ghoſt, and ſo that may be taken for a cõmiſſion, and authority given to all them and ſo theſe here being contained in that number, the ſame will be competible to theſe, Yet 1. it cannot be imagined that all ſimply, i.e. every beleiver there, women, as well as men, had any ſuch authority then given them, but that there are other meanings of the phraſe, filled with the holy Ghoſt, beſides that one of being ſent into the miniſtery, and the very courage of profeſſing and publiſhing the Goſpel, was one ſuch gift, or effect of the holy Ghoſt, And 2dly, it is clear in the proceſſe of this ſtory, that ſome others, which were not ſo qualified as theſe, i.e. that had not received the holy Ghoſt, or aſcended any farther then the baptiſme of John, did thus publiſh the Goſpel, as theſe here are ſaid to doe, Thus Apollos chap. 18. 25. ἐλάλει, καὶ ἐδίδασκεν ἀκριβῶς τὰ περὶ τοῦ Κυρίου, ſpake, and taught exactly the things concerning the Lord, knowing onely the baptiſme of John, (and Aquila, and Priſcilla expounded to him more exactly the way of God) and ſo, I ſuppoſe, did the Epheſian diſciples, ch. 19. who had not received the holy Ghoſt, ver. 2. nor gone any farther then John's baptiſme, at the time of Paul's coming to them.

The ſeverall uſes of impoſition of hands, are at large ſet down, note on 1 Tim. 4. f. Three in the old Teſtament, 1. as a ceremony in prayer, 2. in paternal benediction, 3. in creating officers. And proportionably to theſe, many more in the New. 1. For curing diſeaſes, 2. for abſolution of penitents, 3. for bleſſing of infants, or thoſe that are to be baptized, to prepare them to it, 4. in Confirmation, 5. in Ordination of Officers for the Church. Of the three former of theſe there is none which can pretend to be here meant, And ſo all the difficulty is, whether of the two latter it was. That it was Confirmation, may appear probable, becauſe it ſo ſoon attended their converſion and baptiſme, when the Apoſtles which were at Jeruſalem, heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they ſent unto them Peter and John, v. 14. which agrees well with that of Confirmation, which is an act reſerved to the Rulers of the Church, and not communicated, or allow'd to inferior officers, ſuch as Philip, the Deacon, here, And accordingly the Biſhops are called διδάσκαλοι Doctors, as that ſignifies the the farther inſtructing them, to whom the Goſpel hath formerly been preacht, and as εὐαγγελίζειν differs from διδάσκειν, preaching from teaching. And in Confirmation it was, that in thoſe firſt times the extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt uſed to be conferr'd on them, (ſee note on c.2.d. & *Act.*19.6.) But it is probable alſo, that the faith being here planted by Philip, and the Apoſtles coming down to confirm them, and thoſe not ſtaying there, but returning to Jeruſalem v.25. they did at their being there ordain Elders, or Biſhops in the ſeveral cities, as we know Paul & Barnabas did c.14.23. and Titus in Crete, *Tit.*1.5. This, ſaith * Clemens Romanus, the Apoſtles did in their journeyings, when they went out preaching the Goſpel, Κατὰ χώρας οὖν καὶ πόλεις κηρύσσοντες, κατέστανον ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν εἰς ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους τῶν μελλόντων πιστεύειν, preaching through regions and cities, they conſtituted their firſt-fruits, (thoſe that firſt beleived) Biſhops and Deacons of thoſe which ſhould afterwards beleive. And thus before this time, they had at Jeruſalem conſtituted James the brother of the Lord Biſhop there, in the firſt year after Chriſt's aſcenſion, and ſeven Deacons to attend him ch.6. And therefore it is not reaſonable to beleive, that the Apoſtles, Peter and John, ſhould thus come down to Samaria, where the Goſpel had been ſo univerſally received v.6. and having taken care to confirm them, ſhould not alſo ordain ſome Governours over them before they returned again. That therefore which is moſt reaſonable is, ſo to interpret this laying on of hands, and their receiving the holy Ghoſt here, as to comprehend Confirmation, and Ordination both, the holy Ghoſt by their miniſtry coming on all the ſincere beleivers, and endowing them with inward, and ſome of them with extraordinary external gifts, of healing, propheſie, &c. (ſee note on ch. 2. d.) and the Apoſtles by laying on their hands on ſome ſpeciall perſons among them, ordaining them Biſhops and Deacons in ſeveral cities, A power which belonged onely to the Apoſtles to exerciſe, and ſo was not competible to Philip, who yet had power to preach and to baptize.

d. Χολὴ πικρίας

What is the importance of χολὴ πικρίας (or πικρία χολῆς, as the antient Gr: & Lat: MS. reads it) will be beſt diſcerned (ſee note on *Mat.*27.f.) by Deut. 29.18. where apoſtaſie or falling from God is deſcribed to be a root bearing gall and bitterneſſe, ſay the vulgar, gall and wormwood, ſay our Engliſh, and the Septuagint, φύουσα ἐν χολῇ καὶ πικρίᾳ, ſpringing up in gall and bitterneſſe, but the Hebrew ראש, which we render gall, ſignifies alſo a poyſonous herb, and ſo muſt ſignifie there, where 'tis joyned with a root bearing or bringing forth; and ſo the wormwood following will beſt agree with it, and both together will expreſſe that ſinne to be a root, whoſe effects are poyſonous and bitter, very hurtfull, and infectious to men, and moſt diſpleaſing to God. Anſwerable and equivalent to this, is the χολὴ πικρίας here, which therefore ſignifies this apoſtaticall condition of Simon, ſo lately baptized, to be dangerous to him, and odious in God's ſight, he being that firſt-born of Satan, as he is ſtyled, and an Apoſtate from the Chriſtian faith. And accordingly his followers the Gnoſticks, and the poyſon of their hereſie (together with him, the root from whence all thoſe peſts of the primitive Apoſtolick Church, did ſpring) are expreſt *Heb.*12.15. by ῥίζα πικρίας ἄνω φύουσα, Leſt, ſaith the Apoſtle, there be any root of bitterneſſe ſpringing up, (not ἐν χολῇ as we read it, but as by the Greek now cited from *Deut.*29.18. and by the agreeing of the participle φύουσα with the like ὑπερῶν precedent, ſeems the moſt probable reading) ἐν χολῇ in poyſon, a root of wormwood bringing forth, or fruktifying in poyſon, i. e. bringing on the perſon that which is ruinous to himſelf, or on others that which is poyſonous or infectious to them, And ſuch moſt eminently was the hereſie of the Gnoſticks at that time.

e. Σύνδεσμος ἀδικίας

The word Σύνδεσμος ſignifies, in the Septuagint of the old Teſtament, treaſon, 2 Kin. 11. 15. and 11.20. and *Jer.*11.9. a conſpiracy, league, or covenant, and by it the Hebrew קשר is rendred Jer. 11.9. where Symmachus reads Συνωμοσία conſpiracy. The Hebrew ſignifies a binding together of minds, and here with ἀδικίας unrighteouſneſſe] added to it, it ſeems to denote either a covenanting with unrighteouſneſſe, a deliberate reſolution (as with an oath or covenant) to do all evil, as being ſworn to doe wickedneſſe, as it were, or elſe by an hypallage, a moſt unrighteous, impious treaſon, or treachery, a villainous piece of hypocriſie, (as μαμωνᾶ ἀδικίας, the mammon of unrighteouſneſſe, is all one with the falſe, or deceitfull mammon) Simon's deſigne in this propoſall being not to advance Chriſt's kingdome, by his having that power of giving the holy Ghoſt, but to ſet up for himſelf, as he after did, in oppoſition to Chriſt, and to have this addition of miracles ſuperadded to thoſe, which by his ſorcery he was able to doe. The very phraſe [Σύνδεσμος ἀδικίας] is elſwhere uſed by the Greek, Iſa. 58. 6. where the Hebrew hath חַרְצֻבּ, which ſignifies a chain, ſuch as priſoners are kept in, and there by the context appears to ſignifie oppreſſive bands, or chains laid on poor men, of the ſame ſort with the heavy burthens that follow, the looſing of which bands is explained by letting the oppreſſed goe free. But that uſe and notion of the phraſe cannot belong to this place, Another there is, which poſſibly may, viz: as it ſignifies a binding up of ſeverall things together, and ſo it may here be a conjunction, or complex, of many ſinnes, hypocriſie, covetouſneſſe, &c.

f. Πνεῦμα

It may here be queſtion'd, what is meant by τὸ πνεῦμα, the Spirit's ſaying unto Philip. Some kind of extraordinary revelation it certainly was, but whether in a viſion by appearance of an Angel, or 2dly, by a voice from heaven, or 3dly, by afflation of the Spirit of God, after the manner that Prophets received Revelations, it is uncertain. Of the firſt ſort there are examples in this book, ch.10.3. Cornelius in a viſion ſaw an Angel of the Lord, coming, and ſaying to him, and ſo here v.26. the Angel of the Lord ſpake unto Philip; Of the ſecond, at the baptiſme of Chriſt, and at the converſion of Saint Paul, And of the third chap. 10. 19. where after his Viſion of the ſheet, as he thought thereupon, the Spirit ſaid unto him, and the ſame is repeated again, ch.11.11. & ſo ch.13.2. as they were miniſtring, i. e. praying and faſting, the holy Spirit ſaid, Separate to me Barnabas and Saul, Which as it was not in any dream or viſion, ſo that it was by voice from heaven, doth not appear probable by any argument diſcernible in the ſtory, but on the other side the frequent assistances of the Spirits revealing by way of Prophetick afflation, who should be set apart for the offices of the Church, are evidences that it was so here. Thus * Clemens tells of those times, that they ordained Bishops πνεύματος προφητικοῦ διάκρισιν, discerning by the Spirit who should be ordained, and again that they did it ἐπιχορηγουμένης αὐτοῖς παρὰ τοῦ πνεύματος, having received perfect foreknowledge, who should be constituted Bishops, as Moses, saith he, foreknew by revelation from God, that Aaron should have the Priesthood, and accordingly that without the direction of the Spirit they advanced none to this dignity. So saith S. Paul of Timothy that the χάρισμα, or Episcopal office διὰ προφητείας ἐδόθη was given him by prophecie, 1 Tim. 4. 14. & ch. 1. 18. i.e. by Revelation, as Prophecying is of things presently to be done, as well as predictions of the future, and signifies no more 1 Cor. 14. 24. 31. then having somewhat revealed to him v. 30. So saith S.* Chrysostome, Τὸ τῆς διδασκαλίας ἀξίωμα μέγα ὂν καὶ τῆς Θεοῦ δεόμενον ῥοπῆς, &c. The Episcopal dignity being great, wanted Gods suffrage, to direct on whom it should be bestow'd. (see note on 1 Tim. 1. c.) Thus Act. 20. 28. 'tis said of the Bishops of Asia, that the holy Ghost had set them over the flock. And in this sense it may fitly be affirmed of Philip, that being full of the holy Ghost, ch. 6. 3. he had the afflations of the Spirit of God, such as Prophets, and by such an afflation the Spirit here had him &c. Thus Agabus signified by the Spirit, i. e. by prophetick revelation, that there should be a famine, ch. 11. 28. Thus the holy Ghost witnest in every city, i. e. prophets foretold, c. 20. 23. & 21. 11. that bands and afflictions did abide Paul. One onely objection I foresee against this exposition in this place, that ver. 39. it is said that the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, which probably is to be understood of an Angel carrying him away out of his sight, and then why should not the Spirit here, as well as the Spirit of the Lord there signifie an Angel also? especially when there is mention of an Angel speaking to him ver. 26. But to this the answer will be very sufficient, if the reading of the Kings MS. be accepted in that verse, (and that is attested by many other copies own'd by Erasmus & Beza, and so cited by S. Jerome, Dial: Orthod: & Luciferian:) the holy Spirit fell upon the Eunuch, &c. but the Angel of the Lord caught away Philip, (see note i.) For then as the Angel had him go to the Eunuch, so he carried him away again, which no way hinders but that the Spirit here may be taken in that other sense.

Διὰ προφητείας

Περικοπὴ is the Hebrew פרשה the name of a section or lesser division of Scripture, of which there be two in the first chapter of Matthew, and so forward, The Greeks call them τμήματα partitions or sections. g. Περικοπὴ

This verse is acknowledged to be a citation of Isa. 53. 8. not out of the Hebrew, but the Septuagints translation, which therefore must be interpreted by looking back on the Original there. And that will be best rendred thus, מעצר by an assembly (so the word is used Jer. 9. 2. and rendred ἀπὸ συναγωγῆς synagogue) i.e. by the Sanhedrim of the Jewes, who had determined to have him put to death, and made the people cry out against him, αἶρε, αἶρε, away with him, away with him (whereas the Greek seems to have read מעשם, ἐν πεπωκόσι) ומשפט and by judgment, or the sentence of the Roman Procurator Pilate, לקח, he was taken away, distinctly signifying the manner of his being put to death, which being so foul, and irrationall, and strange, that he that came to save, should not only not be believed, but be also put to death by them, be entertained so coldly, and used so barbarously, the Jewes and Romans both conspiring in it. The exclamation that followes ואת דורו מי ישוחח, who shall describe his generation? will most probably signifie, What an accursed wicked generation was that, wherein he was born? for so the word [דורו his generation] signifies, as Gen. 6. 9. perfect in his generation. So where 'tis called a wicked generation, Deut. 32. 5. this word is used. This though it be not the sound of the words in Greek, must be resolved to be the meaning of the prophet, whose words here S. Luke having occasion to name or set down onely (as the passage the Eunuch was reading) not to make any use of them, was in all reason to repeat in the Septuagints translation of them, which the Eunuch was a reading, and which they used, for whom he wrote this story, but not to affix any new sense to the original prophecie. Yet because the words, as they lie in the Greek, may have a commodious sense also, though that differing from the Hebrew, I have in the paraphrase set down that also, upon this ground, that Job 34. 5. taking away his judgment signifies dealing unjustly with him. h. ἐν τῇ Ταπεινώσει Κρίσεως αὐτοῦ ἤρθη Τὴν γενεὰν αὐτοῦ τίς διήγησεται

In this verse the Kings MS. reads thus, πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἐπέπεσεν ἐπὶ τὸν Εὐνοῦχον, Ἄγγελος δὲ Κυρίου ἥρπασε τὸν Φίλιππον, The holy Ghost fell upon the Eunuch, and the Angel of the Lord caught or snatcht away Philip. i. Πνεῦμα ἐπέπεσεν ἐπὶ τὸν Εὐνοῦχον

Paraphrase.

1. AND Saul yet breathing out threatnings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest,

2. And desired of him letters to Damascus, to the * synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.]

1, 2. But the death of Stephen did not satiate the bloody mind that was in Saul, or allay his zeal against Christians, but being very intent upon it, he came to the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem, and desired the high priest to give him letters of commission to the Consistories of other cities of Syria (as being under Jerusalem, the grand Metropolis of Syria, as well as Judæa) and his Commission was to impower him v. 14. to seize upon any Christians whatever, and secure them, and bring them up to Jerusalem to be judged by the Sanhedrim there.

4. And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice ſaying unto him,] Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me?

5. It is thy beſt way to be obedient to the commands that ſhall now be given thee, and not to be refractary.

9. And he was not in three daies recovered out of that fit, but continued blind, and able to eat nothing, in a kind of trance, or extaſie, ver. 12.

10. And there was a certain diſciple at Damaſcus, named Ananias, and to him ſaid the Lord in a viſion, Ananias. And he ſaid, Behold I am here Lord.

17. And Ananias went to him, and laying his hands on him, told him that Jeſus (that appeared to him as he came to Damaſcus) had ſent him to him, not only to reſtore his ſight to him, but to endow him with many extraordinary gifts and graces, thereby to fit him for Gods ſervice in the Church, to which he had deſigned him, and to which he is conſecrated, ch. 13. 2.

17. And Ananias went his way, and entred into the houſe, and putting his hands on him, ſaid, Brother Saul, the Lord (even Jeſus that appeared unto thee in the way, as thou cameſt) hath ſent me that thou mighteſt receive thy ſight, and be filled with the holy Ghoſt.]

19,20. And taking food after his long faſting he ſoon recovered ſtrength perfectly. Soon after this, he went from Damaſcus into Arabia, Gal. 1. 17. (of which journey Luke being not with him, makes no mention) and from thence returned again to Damaſcus, and having ſpent ſome time with thoſe Jewiſh Chriſtians which were driven from Jeruſalem ch. 8. 1. to Damaſcus, by virtue of his call from heaven, and of Chriſts meſſage by Ananias to him, ver. 15, 16. and being filled with the holy Ghoſt, ver. 17. he ſet preſently about the preaching of the Goſpel, and that publickly in the Jewiſh ſynagogues, and proclaimed, that Chriſt was indeed the Meſſias, the eternall Son of God.

19. And when he had received ſome meat, he was ſtrengthned. Then was Saul certain daies with the diſciples which were at Damaſcus.

21. And all that heard it were amazed at this ſudden change, remembring that he had ſo lately been a ſpeciall perſon in the ſtoning of Stephen, and very vehement againſt all Chriſtians, and was come to Damaſcus with commiſſion for this very purpoſe.

21. But all that heard him were amazed, and ſaid, Is not this he that deſtroyed them which called on this name in Jeruſalem, and came hither for that intent,] that he might bring them bound unto the chief prieſts?

23. And after that many daies were fulfilled, the Jewes [took counsell to kill him.] 23. had a designe, and entred into a conspiracy, and laid wait to assault and kill him.

Now all the Christian assemblies through Judæa, Galilee, and Samaria, were permitted a quiet use of their religion, and daily more and more confirmed and improved, superstructing all Christian doctrine, and pure pious practise on that foundation already laid, and more were daily converted to them by the Apostles discharging that office and duty, to which they were designed by the coming of the holy Ghost the Paraclete upon them, (see note on Joh. 14. 2.) d.

πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν

It was a proverbial ſpeech [to kick againſt the goad] ſignifying to be refractary to puniſhment and diſcipline, when it comes to teach us our duty; For then the refractarineſſe doth but involve us in more guilt, and puniſhment. So in Æſchylus Prometh: Οὐκουν ἐμοίγε χρήσιμον διδασκάλου Πρὸς κέντρα κῶλον ἐκλυτοῦς, and in his Alex: Πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λάκτιζε, μὴ πίσος μογῆς, If thou wilt take my counſel, thou ſhalt never kick againſt the goad, for thou wilt bring more ſufferings upon thy ſelf by that means, Parallel to this is ſtimulos pugnis cædere, in Plautus, to beat the goades with his fiſts, Truc:4.2. For this of goades was uſed not to beaſts only, but ſervants, which he calls ſtimulenum ſupplicium, Mil. 2.6. And the ſervant thus handled ſeverely, is by him call'd Carnificinum cribrum, his back was a kind of ſieve full of holes.

b. What is here ſaid of thoſe that were with Paul, that they heard the voice, ſeems directly contrary to what is affirmed, ch.22.9. οὐκ ἤκουσαν τὴν φωνὴν, they heard not the voice. As for the way of reconciling it, by ſaying that the former belongs to Paul's voice, the latter to the voice of him that ſpake to him, there is little ground in the text for that nicety, but on the contrary the μηδένα θεωροῦντες, ſeeing no man, which follows in this place, belongs ſurely not to their not ſeeing of Paul, but of him that ſpake to him. The onely way of reconciling the difficulty is by obſerving the notion of the word קול in Hebrew, which ſignifies φωνὴ and βροντὴ, a voice, and thunder, and thoſe promiſcuouſly taken the one for the other. So *Heb.*12. 26. whoſe voice ſhook the earth, i. e. whoſe thunder and lightnings and *voice of a trumpet exceeding loud, Exod.*19 16. and ſo Lu. 9. 35. the voice of a clond ſaying, was the thunder with a voice in it, a revelation from heaven given in thunder. So Mat. 3. 17. a voice from heaven ſaying, i.e. a thunder from heaven ſending forth this voice, which therefore was wont to be called בת קול the daughter of voice, or a voice coming out of it, or as the voice from heaven, Joh. 12.28. is expreſt by the by-ſtanders, by βροντὴν γεγονέναι, that it thundred, and an Angel ſpake to him, which is explained diſtinctly by S. John Rev. 4.5. where βρονταὶ and φωναὶ both are named, and ch. 10. 3. Ἐλάλησε ταῖς ἑαυτῶν φωναῖς, the ſeven thunders delivered their voices. By this the difficulty will be cleared, For here c.9. τῆς φωνῆς τοῦ λαλοῦντος the voice ought to be rendred (according to the notion of קול for βροντὴ) thunder, which was here joyned with lightning, which ſhone or flaſht about him v.3. ἐξαίφνης φῶς. As for the [φωνὴν λαλοῦντός μοι the voice of him that ſpake to me,] c. 22. 9. that was the voice of the Angel ſpeaking out of heaven, or out of the cloud. Both which put together ſignifie no more then this, that S. Paul's companions at that time, ſaw the light or the lightning, and heard the noiſe of the thunder (which is the importance of the place here) but heard not the articulate voice that came out of the thunder, i.e. the [Saul, Saul, &c.] the voice of the Angel ſpeaking to him.

c. Συμβίβασις, πίστις, διδαχὴ, πειθὼ, ſaith Heſychius, it ſignifies perſwaſion, doctrine, faith, and συμβιβαστὴς, διδακτὴς, διδάσκαλος, and συμβιβάζω (it ſhould be συμβιβαίνω) διδάσκω, all to the ſame purpoſe, that the word ſignifies to teach, or perſwade. Συμβιβάζειν

d. Οἰκοδομεῖν ſignifies properly to build or ſuperſtruct upon a foundation, and adde all the perfection of the building deſigned or belonging to it, And ſo, being accommodated to ſpiritual matters, it ſignifies to teach the whole Chriſtian doctrine of ſtrict, and pious life, of which Chriſt's being the Meſſias ſent from God, is the foundation or corner-ſtone, and the receiving and practiſing all that he commands, is that which is naturally and neceſſarily built upon it, and therefore to their being edified] here, is added in the next words, walking in the fear of the Lord. CHAP. X.

1. There was in Cæſarea, a ſtately city upon the Paleſtine coaſt, ſome 70 miles from Jeruſalem, a guard of ſouldiers, kept by the Romans to awe the conquer'd Jewes, and to defend the Roman Preſident there, and part of that was called the Italian band, and one Cornelius a Roman was captain thereof.

And he ſaid, Thy prayer ſo conſtantly obſerved at thy ſet times, and thy many works of charity on all occaſions, have been accepted by God, and brought down a ſpeciall bleſſing upon thee.

4. And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and ſaid, What is it Lord? And he ſaid unto him, Thy prayers and thine almes, are come up for a memoriall before God.]

6. He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whoſe houſe is by the ſea ſide, he ſhall [tell thee what thou oughteſt to doe.]

7. And

7. And when the Angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household-servants, and a [devout souldier of them that waited on him continually.] 7. a souldier which was also a proselyte, and lived continually with him.

8. And when he had declared all these things unto them, he sent them] to Joppa. 8. And telling them the whole matter of the vision, he sent them accordingly.

9. On the morrow as they went on their journey and drew nigh unto the city, Peter [went up upon [b] the * house to pray about the sixt houre.] 9. Went up to the roof of the house, (as a place commodious for devotion) about twelve of the clock, or midday, which was another time of prayer, used by pious men. b.

* house top

† was fasting, hungry, empty

10. And he † became very hungry, and would have eaten, but while they made ready, [he fell into a [c] trance,] 10. he fell into a trance, such as in which men are wont to receive visions from heaven. c.

* utensil, vessel. See Mar. 11. 16. and note on Mat. 21. b.

11. And saw] heaven opened, and a certain * vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet, knit at the foure corners, and let down to the earth, 11. And in a vision he seemed to see

12. Wherein were all manner of fourfooted beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowles of the ayre.] 12. In which were all sorts of creatures, clean and unclean, those that by the Jewish law a Jew might touch, and those that he might not, noting the Gentiles and Jewes together, (see note on Mat. 23. d.)

13. And there came a voice to him, Rise Peter, kill and eat.] 13. And the voice bid him eat freely and indifferently of them all, i. e. converse and preach freely to the Gentiles, as well as the Jewes.

14. But Peter said, Not so Lord: for I have never eaten any thing that is † common or unclean.] 14. But Peter refused, as having thought himself bound to eat nothing that was forbidden by the law, concerning clean and unclean.

† polluted, unclean

15. And the voice spake unto him again the second time, [What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.] 15. God hath taken away those in edicts concerning some meats, and consequently those differences and separations between Jewes and Gentiles signified by them, And therefore where God makes no distinction, doe not thou make any.

16. This was done thrice, and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17. Now while Peter doubted in himself, what this vision, which he had seen, should mean, behold the men which were sent from Cornelius had made enquiry for Simons house, [and stood before the gate] 17. and were just then come to the gate, or dore.

18. And called and asked, Whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there?

19. While Peter thought on the vision, [the Spirit said unto him,] Behold three men seek thee. 19. It was revealed to him by divine affiation, (see note on ch. 8. c.) saying

20. Arise therefore, and get thee down, and goe with them, [doubting nothing, for I have sent them.] 20. making no question upon those Jewish scruples of the unlawfulnesse of conversing with Gentiles, for it is by my appointment that they are come to thee.

21. Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius, and said, Behold I am he whom ye seek, what is the cause wherefore ye are come?

22. And they said, Cornelius the Centurion, a just man, and [one that feareth God, and of good report among all the nation of the Jewes, was warned of God by an holy Angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.] 22. a proselyte of the Jewes and generally well esteemed by them, hath seen a vision, and therein was by an Angel of God commanded to send for thee to come to him, and say somewhat of eminent concernment to him.

23. Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24. And the morrow after they entred into Cæsarea: and Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinsmen and neer friends.

25. And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and [fell down at his feet and worshipped him.] 25. took him for an Angel, or one sent immediately from heaven to him, and accordingly did behave himself toward him in great humility.

26. But Peter took him up, saying, Stand up, I my self also am a man.] 26. And Peter would not receive that expression from him, telling him that he was an ordinary man, though thus employed on God's errand to him.

27. And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together:

28. And he said unto them, [Ye know that it is an unlawfull thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation, but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.] 28. Ye all know that the lawes of the Jewish religion permit not a Jew to converse familiarly with any Gentile, but God hath by vision revealed to me, that I should not make any difference between Jewes and Gentiles.

29. Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30. an Angel appeared to me in the ſhape of a man in bright ſhining apparel.

30. And Cornelius ſaid, Four daies agoe I was faſting untill this hour, and at the ninth houre I prayed in my houſe, and behold [a man ſtood before me in bright clothing,]

31. accepted ſo farre as to bring down this mercy of God on thee,

31. And ſaid, Cornelius, thy prayer is [heard, and thine almes are had in remembrance in the ſight of God.]
and thine acts of mercy are now likely to be rewarded by God abundantly.

32. Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whoſe ſurname is Peter: he is lodged in the houſe of one Simon a tanner, by the ſea ſide, who when he cometh, ſhall ſpeak unto thee.

33. I thank thee (Phil. 4. 14.) for coming, And now we all here are ready to receive any meſſage from God, and to undertake any courſe that God by thee ſhall appoint us.

33. Immediately therefore I ſent to thee, and [thou haſt well done, that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here preſent before * God, to hear all things, that are commanded thee of God.]

* the Syriack and old Latine read, thee.

34. looks not on any one man with favour above others,

34. Then Peter opened his mouth and ſaid, Of a truth I perceive that God [is no reſpecter of perſons,] meerly becauſe he is a Jew, or for any ſuch perſonall externall prerogatives, abſtracted from actions and qualifications, 35. But of what nation ſoever a man be,

35. But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteouſneſſe, is accepted of him.]
if he undertake the ſervice of the true God, and exerciſe works of mercy and devotion, v.2. he ſhall be ſure to be accepted by God, and rewarded with higher revelations and graces from him.

36, 37, 38. The doctrine which hath been preach't through all Judæa by Gods appointment, to wit, that of ſalvation by Jeſus, appointed by God to be our king,

36. The word which God ſent unto the children of Iſrael, preaching peace by Jeſus Chriſt, (he is Lord of all)

37. That word (I ſay) you know, which was publiſhed throughout all Judæa, and began from Galilee, after the baptiſme which John preached,

d. 38. How God [d] anointed Jeſus of Nazareth with the holy Ghoſt, and with power, who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppreſſed of the devil, for God was with him.]
and which was firſt preached in Galilee preſently after John Baptiſt's preaching and baptizing, This doctrine you cannot but have heard of, viz: concerning Jeſus of Nazareth, how by the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt deſcending on him, and by the power of working miracles, God authorized him, and accordingly he hath executed his office, an office of mercy, inſtructing and calling to repentance, curing diſeaſes, and caſting out devils by the power of God, which was preſent with him.

39. put to death, and crucified.

39. And we are witneſſes of all things, which he did, both in the land of the Jewes, and in Jeruſalem, whom they [ſlew, and hanged on a tree.]

40. manifeſted him to be conqueror over death,

40. Him God raiſed up the third day, † and [ſhewed him openly,]

† and gave him to be made manifeſt, ὁ θεὸς ἔδωκεν αὐτὸν ἐμφανῆ γενέσθαι [ὁρᾶσθαι] ordained before, προκεχειροτονημένοις, ſee c. 14. 3.

41. But this manifeſtation was not immediately made to all the multitude of the Jewes, but only to his diſciples, perſons, whom God had enclined to leave all, and follow Chriſt, and to receive the faith which he preacht to them, and to repoſe their whole truſt in him, For being crucified by the Jewes, and taken from them, and ſo they left deſtitute, and hopeleſſe for a while, God was pleaſed to revive him again, and as he had choſen them to be witneſſes of all that Chriſt did when he was alive, ſo he choſe them to be the witneſſes moſt diſtinctly of his reſurrection, giving them the honour to eat and drink with him, and to ſee him eat and drink, after he roſe from the dead.

41. Not to all the people, but unto witneſſes, * choſen before of God, even to us who did eat and drink with him, after he roſe from the dead.]

42. Whom therefore he appointed to preach the Goſpel of Chriſt to the world, and to proclaim to all that this crucified Chriſt is raiſed to Gods right hand, to be judge of all men, that ſhall die before, and that ſhall be found alive at the day of doome.

42. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and teſtifie that it is he which was ordained of God to be the judge of quick and dead.]

43. This is he, of whom all the prophets foretell, that in him God would ſtrike a new covenant with mankind, of which this is the ſumme, that although men were ſinners, yet upon receiving of him, embracing his doctrine, they ſhould by their prayers, offered to God in his name, obtain pardon and remiſſion.

43. To him give all the prophets witneſſe, that through his name whoſoever beleiveth in him, ſhall receive remiſſion of ſins.]

44. Whilſt Peter was thus ſpeaking, the holy Spirit (either by ſome way of viſible appearance, ſuch as that was on the Apoſtles, Act. 1 5 8. or elſe manifeſting himſelf in them by the effects, the ſame that had attended the viſible deſcent, Act. 2. the gift of tongues, &c. v. 46.) came down upon them, ſee v. 47. and c. 11. 15. and gave unto thoſe that heard him (power of doing miracles, of ſpeaking ſtrange languages v. 46. to ſome, to others) other gifts and graces, fitting them for ſeverall conditions in the Church, ſee ch. 19. 6.

44. While Peter yet ſpake theſe words, the holy Ghoſt fell on all them, which heard the word.]

45. And the Jews, which had received the Goſpel, and came with Peter, wondred

45. And they of the circumciſion, which beleived, were aſtoniſhed, as many as came with Peter, becauſe] that on the Gentiles alſo was poured out the gift of the holy Ghoſt.
extremely,

46. For they heard them ſpeak with tongues, and [magnifie God.] Then anſwered Peter.

47. Is there any doubt or queſtion to be made of the baptizing of theſe, and receiving them into freedome of the congregation, to whom, although they be Gentiles, God hath himſelf allowed that, which is more then baptiſme, viz: the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt upon upon them, thereby fitting them for offices in his Church, in the same manner, as by descent of the holy Ghost we received our commission, Act. 2.

48. And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

Notes on Chap. X.

a. What is meant by proselytes and the two sorts of them, hath been let down, note on Mat. 23. d. and the manner of initiating them by washing, note on Mat. 3. a. and their putting off their old relations, Mat. 19. 28. c. and their new birth, note on Joh. 3. a. Now it will be worth observing what titles the New Testament hath made use of to expresse the second sort of proselytes, those, not of Justice, but of the gates, or the uncircumcised Proselytes (for such was Cornelius in this place, and such the Eunuch) and these are their titles. 1. Ἄνδρες εὐλαβεῖς, Acts 8. 2. pious men, sometimes with the addition of ἀπὸ παντὸς ἔθνους τῶν ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανὸν, of every nation under heaven, c. 2. 8. which is the very title the Rabbins give them חסידי אומות העולם of the good men of the nations of the world. 2. οἱ προσήλυτοι Ἰερουσαλὴμ, they that dwell as strangers at Jerusalem, Act. 2. 14. all one with σεβόμενοι proselytes, v. 16. Then 3dly. εὐσεβεῖς, the pious men, here of Cornelius, and v. 7. of some of his souldiers, and 4thly. φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, those that fear God, here, of Cornelius again, and so Act. 13. 16. Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, καὶ οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, men of Israel, and yee that fear God, and again v. 26. οἱ ἐν ὑμῖν φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, they among you that fear God, Proselytes of your gates, so saith Oecumenius expressly φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν σεβομένους ἐκάλεσε, by those that fear God, he means the Proselytes. And 5thly. and above all σεβόμενοι Act. 13. 43. and σεβόμενοι Ἕλληνες, Act. 17. 4. the worshippers, and the Gracian worshippers (and so the Eunuch went to Jerusalem to worship, c. 8. 27.) of which Oecumenius again, Σεβομένους ἰδίως σεβομένους εἶπε, by worshippers he means peculiarly proselytes, and agreeably to many of these was the name Τιμόθεος, Timotheus, which signifies in the Greek a worshipper of God, the name of one whose father was a Greek, though his mother were a Jew, and being himself a proselyte as his father was, yet not circumcised, till Paul caused him to be so afterward. Sixtly and lastly, προσερχόμενοι τῷ θεῷ they that come to God, Heb. 10. 6. which is the very word προσήλυτος lightly changed.

b. That δῶμα signifies peculiarly not a house but the roof, or top of the house, which being plain was fit for use, hath been said, Mat. 24. note h. of this the Jews had a speciall use, in places out of Judaea or Jerusalem, that they might more freely look that way, in performing their devotions. For the Temple of Jerusalem being the solemn place of worship, they that were at distance from that place, were to pray toward it. So 1 King. 8. 48. in the first institution, they that were carried captive out of the land, were to pray toward their land, and accordingly Dan. 6. 10. Daniel went into his house, and his windowes being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem he kneeled on his knees three times a day and prayed. So when it is said of Hezekiah, 2 King. 20. 2. that he turned his face to the wall and prayed, Jonathans Targum readeth towards the wall of the Sanctuary, i. e. toward that wall of the room, which pointed toward the Sanctuary, as now adays the Jews in the West in Italy, Germany, &c. are said to have their walls inscribed מזרח the East, because Jerusalem lies East from them. That S. Peter at this time observed this custome, there is little doubt, when we remember, that as Daniel observed those two circumstances, of time, and of posture, so Peter reteining the one, (as appears here by the sixth hour) may as reasonably be deemed to have reteined the other, that of the posture toward Jerusalem in offering up his devotions, and to that end to have gone up to the house top to pray, where he might most freely look that way. When he was at Jerusalem, he went up solemnly to the Temple to pray at the hours of prayer, Peter and John at the ninth hour of prayer, Act. 3. 1. &c. and so all the Apostles were διαπαντὸς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, continually (at the constant hours) in the Temple, Luk. 24. 53. (see note on Act. 1. c.) and then there will be little doubt, but they reteined that other part of observance to that place, of praying toward the Temple, when they were farther from it, It being no part of Christs reformation to forbid all the religious ceremonies which had been of use among the Jews, but rather to adapt and accommodate many of them to the Christians use.

The word ἔκστασις is the Greek of תַּרְדֵּמָה which signifies either 1. deep sleep (and a trance, of the nature of that) or 2dly amazement, astonishment, and accordingly is by the Septuagint rendred sometime ὕπνος, as Psal. 68. 29. and δεινὸς φόβος 1 Sam. 26. 12. (see note on Rom. 11. b.) and sometimes ἔκστασις, as Gen. 2. 21. where it is (though we render it a deep sleep) of the same kind with that here, a trance or extasie, and therefore is rendred by the Targum שְׁנָא תַקִּיפָא a strong sleep, signifying or intimating it to be something more, then that sleep, which is ordinary among men. Proportionably to these acceptions of the Hebrew, the word ἔκστασις in the New Testament signifies sometimes amazement, and astonishment, from fear or wonder, Mar. 5. 42. and 16. 8. Luk. 5. 26. Act. 3. 10. and sometimes a trance or extasie, when the outward senses being bound up as 'twere with sleep, God's will is inwardly revealed to the understanding, by way of intellectuall vision. Thus is it in all the other places of the New Testament, c. 11. 5. εἶδον ἐν ἐκστάσει ὅραμα, in an extasie or trance, I saw a vision, and c. 22. 17. γενέσθαι με ἐν ἐκστάσει, I was in a trance, and so here speaking of the same matter: where therefore it sufficiently appears to denote not a naturall sleep, such as men dis-spirited with fasting may be thought apt to fall into (which the mention of Peters fasting in the beginning of the verse hath made some men apprehend of it) but a transportation or trance into which he was cast by God, (or a binding up his outward senses, which is answerable to a deep sleep, such as Adam's was, Gen. 2. when the rib was taken out of him) to make him capable of the vision, or revelations of Gods will, which here he was to receive. To which purpose 'twill be observable, that Gen. 17. 3. when the Hebrew text text saith, Abraham fell on his face and God talked with him, the Hierusalem Talmud reads, Inclinavit se Abram super faciem ejus, & obstupuit, Abraham bowed himself upon his face, and was astonisht, where the [& obstupuit and was astonisht] is clearly the ἔκστασις here (the Hebrew word signifying, as was said, both astonishment and trance) wherein God talked with him, by way of vision to his understanding, not to his senses.

d. That the use of oyle among the Jews was for festivals, hath been said, note on Mat. 26. c. and consequently the custome of anointing, notes a solemne intertainment of any one; water to wash the feet, and bread to eat, was allowed to every of the guests, But not so the fatted calf, but when they would expresse a great joy, and welcome, and making merry, as in the return of the prodigal. And so in like manner, the anointing, or powring oyle on the heads of the guests, is the highest expression of acknowledging, and testifying the greatest joy (and so called the oyle of gladnesse, Psal 45. 8.) that is to be found among them. This anointing therefore from hence came to denote the preferring one before another (and the Targum generally renders it by a word which signifies preferring or advancing) and so became the ceremony of consecrating to any speciall office, and so was ordinarily used in the installing men to offices of any eminence. From hence (as in many other things) doth the word come to be used metaphorically, for any that is preferred before, or set over others. Abraham and the Patriarchs, that must not be toucht in the Psalmist, are called Gods anointed, i. e. persons by God preferred and advanced before others, taken into his speciall care, and so signally testified to be by Gods dealings towards them. And so the anointed of the Lord are those, whom God hath set over other men. Agreeable to this is it that that eminent person prophecyed of by Moses, whom God should send, and whom they were to hear, is generally known by the name of מָשִׁיחַ the anointed, the Messias or Christ, because he was thus preferred by God (Psal. 45. and Heb. 1. 9.) above his fellowes, men and Angels themselves. According to this notion it is, that when the Holy Ghost came down on Christ, and thereby (by a voice from heaven, Thou art my beloved son in whom I am well pleased) mark't him out as the person, whom God had sent, (of whom John therefore said, that he was greater then he, and preferred before him) it is expresst by the Prophet in these words, The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me to preach, &c. Isa. 61. 1. and Luk. 4. 18. i. e. the Lord hath preferred me before others, and set me apart to this office, as he hath no other man, so again Act. 4. 27. Thy son Jesus whom thou hast anointed, i. e. marked out to be that beloved sonne of thine, which was done at the Spirits coming down upon him, which therefore must be resolved to be the meaning of anointing him in that place. And so tis evidently in this place, How God hath anointed him with the holy Spirit, and with power, i. e. whom God by those two means (the descent of the Spirit upon him, and the power of miracles, as by priviledges and markes of prelation) preferred, and dignified beyond all others, that ever were in the world, and demonstrated him to be that promised Messias. This use of the phrase being so remarkable of Christ, and so particularly applyed to this respect of the Holy Ghosts testifying of him and setting him apart for his office (for the very testifising that he was Gods beloved son, who was to be heard before all others, is the enstalling or consecrating him to his prophetick office, to teach the world) is farther enlarged to the Apostles of Christ (on whom the Holy Ghost afterward descended in like manner) and even to all other faithfull Christians also, 2 Cor. 1. 21. where, with that phrase of confirming them into Christ, i. e. giving them assurance of the truth of Christ's being the Messias, (as an oath is said to be εἰς βεβαίωσιν for confirmation) is joyned also God's having anointed them, which signifies God's having afforded them such speciall favour, and giving them such evidences, and testimonies of the truth of that they were to believe, viz. the Holy Ghosts descending upon the Apostles (which was one assurance of Christ's being the true Messias, and the Miracles, which they wrought was another) which being not so peculiar to the twelve Apostles, but that, like the oyle on Aarons head, it descended to the beard, and to the skirts of his clothing, it is communicated by S. Paul to himself, and the believing Corinthians also, (see note on c. 2. d.) From this last place thus understood will appear also what is meant by the χρίσμα or unction, 1 Joh. 2. 20. which the Christians or beleivers to whom he writes, are by him said to have ἀπὸ τοῦ ἁγίου from the Holy, i. e. I conceive, from the Holy Ghost, The Holy Ghost by descending on the Apostles had taught them all things, i. e. given them assurance, that what Christ had preached was true, and consequently that he being the true Messias, all other contrary teachers were false-teachers, and to be avoided. This testimony from heaven afforded the Apostles, (and attendant on that, the power also of doing Miracles in Christs name allowed to many others in the Church of the first times,) was the foundation of beleife to that and the whole succeeding Church, and therefore that priviledge (as it was allowed them) being called χρίσμα or unction, is said there to belong to these beleivers, They have it] i. e. either the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit in the Church, or else the benefit of it, the evidence of those truths (which the coming of the Holy Ghost confirmed) belongs unto them, and therefore as that descent of the Holy Ghost was said to teach them all things, so here they, which have this χρίσμα, know all things, i. e. have sufficient evidence thereby of the truth v. 21. i. e. of the Gospel, or that Jesus is the Messias, v. 22. and that what they had received from the beginning, v. 24. i. e. from the beginning of Christs appearing among them (at his Baptisme, when the Holy Ghost thus descended) was such a truth, as they were never to part with. And so v. 27. the unction again (i. e. that which God had afforded them, to demonstrate that Jesus was the Messias) teacheth you of all things, i. e. gives you assurance of the truth of the Gospel of Christ, and is truth, and not a lye, i. e. infallibly true, and fit to be confronted unto, and to fortifie you against all those that come to deceive you, v. 26.

And these six men, converted or Christian Jews, went along with me, and we all went into the house of Cornelius, a Gentile, but proselyte of the Jewes, though uncircumcised.

And all the Chriſtians in all places according to their abilities reſolved to ſend relief to the Chriſtians in Judæa in this time of dearth, (and among them Helen Queen of the Adiabeni, ſaith Euſebius l.2.c.ιβ'.) bought a great deal of corn out of Ægypt, and ſent it to be diſtributed to them that were in want, ſee Joſ: Ant: l.20. c.2.

Notes on Chap. XI.

a. Χρηματίζω

The uſe of χρηματίζω in the active for [to be called] in a paſſive ſenſe, is to be ſeen *Rom.*7.3. μοιχαλὶς χρηματίσει ſhe ſhall be called an adultereſſe, but that in an eminent manner, as may be diſcerned by that acception of it in Epiphanius, Ἀστρονομία, ſaith he, ἐν Φαρισαίοις λοιπὸν ἐχρημάτιζεν, Aſtronomy was much cried up, was in great reputation among the Phariſees. So here χρηματίζειν Χριστιανὸς, is to be famouſly known under that name of Chriſtians.

b. Πρεσβύτεροι

The word [Πρεσβύτεροι Elders] is here firſt met with in the Chriſtian Church, and therefore will deſerve to be explained. And firſt it will not be amiſſe to ſee the uſe of it among the Greeks, and Hebrewes; Among the Greeks, it is the ſaying of a learned Grammarian, Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus, Πρεσβύτερος καὶ παρὰ δεῖνος καὶ παρὰ γέρουσι διαφέρει οἱ παλαιοὶ λέγειν, l.2. The antients uſed the word Elders both for Rulers and old men, and accordingly it is now in uſe among all nations, Italians, French, Spaniards, Engliſh, to call their Rulers, Seniors, Maiors, Aldermen, &c. which are litterally the rendring of πρεσβύτεροι. Among the Hebrews the ſame is acknowledged, that זקנים old men, (which, with them, that want degrees of compariſon, is all one with Elders, and generally rendred πρεσβύτεροι) denoteth dignity, and Præfecture in the old Teſtament. So the ſteward of Abrahams houſe, Eliezer, who was placed over all his ſervants, and goods, *Gen.*24.2. is called πρεσβύτερος τοῦ οἴκου αὐτοῦ, the Elder of his houſe, and ἄρχων πάντων τῶν αὐτοῦ, Ruler of all he had, not ſo as זקן ſhould be joyned joyned with עבדי and rendred his Elder servant, but with a comma, that servant, which was Elder of his house, שׁל שׁא, ſaith the Targum of Jeruſalem, ruler, adminiſtrator, ſteward, and ſo he is called *Gen.*15. 2. So the זקני or Elders of Pharaohs houſe, and of all Ægypt, *Gen.*50. 7. are the Prefects, and adminiſtrators of the Kings houſe, and of all Ægypt. So the Elders of the Moabites, Num. 22. 7. are שׂרי Princes of Moab, v.8. So when all Dominion was founded in the privileges that belonged to the firſt-born, Gen. 4. 7. (and therefore is Reuben, as firſt-born, Gen 49.3. called the excellency of principality, and the excellency of power, i. e. the excellent Principality, or Supreme power, the Magiſtrate, ſo called *Rom.*13.1.) the Princes of the families, or kindreds, are called indifferently Πατριαρχαὶ, & Πρεσβύτεροι, Patriarchs, and Elders. Such were the Elders of Iſrael, Exod. 3. 16,18. & 4.29. the heads, or rulers of the families, or kindreds, ch.6.14. Rulers of the Congregation, ch.16. 22. who are again called the Elders of Iſrael, ch.17.5, 6. & 18. 12. and Elders of the Tribes, *Deut.*31.28. And when Moſes appointed Judges for lighter cauſes, *Ex.*18. 22. who ſhould have power over thouſands, and hundreds, and fifties, and tens, i. e. firſt, over ſo many families, after, over greater, or leſſer cities, (for ſo the thouſand ſignifies a city, *Judg.*6.15. *Mic.*5.2. and the Ruler thereof is ἡγεμὼν *Mat.*2. 6.) theſe were by them called πρεσβύτεροι Elders, and Ἄρχοντες Rulers and Judges, and ἄρχοντες Συναγωγῶν, and ἀρχισυνάγωγοι, Rulers of the ſynagogues and the like, And thereupon in the Theodoſian Codex, where the ſecond law de Judæis uſes the word Presbyteros, Elders, another Law hath Synagogarum patres, fathers, or Rulers of the Conſiſtories. And ſo when the ſeventy Elders were taken in to aſſiſt Moſes, Num. 11.16. (to whom the Great Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem ſucceeded) it is evident, that theſe were ſo called, becauſe they were Princes, or Prefects, or Rulers of the people, before they were thus choſen by Moſes. (Gather unto me, ſaith God, ſeventy men of the Elders of Iſrael, whom thou knoweſt to be the Elders of the people and officers over them, and bring them to the tabernacle of the Congregation, that they may ſtand there with thee.) And ſo the word Elder was not a denotation of one of the Sanhedrim, any otherwiſe, then as ſome of thoſe that were in the Sanhedrim, had formerly been Elders, or Rulers of the people, and accordingly of three ſorts of men, of which the Sanhedrim conſiſted, but one is called Elders, the other Scribes, and chief Prieſts, (ſee Mat. 16. 20. and note on *Mar.*5. c.) By all which it appears how fitly this word [Πρεσβύτεροι, Elders] being made uſe of by the Apoſtles, and writers of the New Teſtament, is affixt to the Governours of the Chriſtian Church, the ſeverall Biſhops of ſeverall cities, anſwerable to the ἡγεμόνες Rulers of thouſands, or Patriarchs, which being firſt uſed among the Jewes, are in the Chriſtian Church the ordinary title of Biſhops. And although this title of Πρεσβύτεροι Elders have been alſo extended to a ſecond order in the Church, and is now onely in uſe for them, under the name of Presbyters, yet in the ſcripture times, it belonged principally, if not alone, to Biſhops, there being no evidence that any of that ſecond order were then inſtituted, though ſoon after, before the writing of Ignatius Epiſtles, there were ſuch inſtituted in all Churches. Of thoſe firſt Apoſtolicall times the teſtimony of Clemens Romanus in Epiſt. 1. ad Cor. p 3.

is obſervable, Ἐξεπέμφθη ὁ Χριστὸς ἀπὸ Θεοῦ, καὶ οἱ Ἀπόστολοι ἀπὸ Χριστοῦ, οἱ οὖν ὑξῆλθον εὐαγγελιζόμενοι-- Κατὰ χώρας οὖν καὶ πόλεις κηρύσσοντες, κατέστανον τὰς ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν, δοκιμάσαντες τῷ πνεύματι, εἰς Ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους τῶν μελλόντων πιστεύειν, Chriſt was ſent from God, and the Apoſtles from Chriſt, and they went out preaching the Goſpel-- And then, They therefore preaching through Regions and Cities Conſtituted (or Ordained) their firſt-fruits, (firſt-converts) into Biſhops and Deacons of thoſe that ſhould afterward beleive. Where it appears that when the Goſpel was firſt preached by the Apoſtles and but few converted, they ordained in every City, and Region no more but a Biſhop, and one, or more Deacons to attend him, there being at the preſent ſo ſmall ſtore, out of which to take more, and ſo ſmall need of ordaining more, that this Biſhop is conſtituted more for the ſake of thoſe which ſhould after beleive, then of thoſe which did already. Agreeable is that of Epiphanius ἐκ Καθολικῶν ἱστοριῶν, ſaith he, fetcht out of the profoundeſt or antienteſt hiſtories, l.3. c.1. Νῦν ὀυτῳ τοῦ χαρίσματος &c. At the beginning of the Apoſtles preaching, when there was none fit or worthy to be Biſhop, the place remained void without any, but where need required, and there were thoſe that were fit for it, Biſhops were conſtituted, but while there was no multitude of Chriſtians, there were found none among them to be conſtituted Presbyters (in our modern uſe of that word) and they contented themſelves with a Biſhop alone in every place, But without a Deacon 'twas impoſſible for a Biſhop to be, and therefore the Apoſtle took care that the Biſhop ſhould have his Deacons to miniſter to him. And accordingly when S. Paul gives directions to Biſhop Timothy for the ordaining of officers in the Church, he names Biſhops, and Deacons, but no ſecond order between them, 1 *Tim.*3. 2,8. and ſo to Titus, *Tit.*1.7. & c.2.1. (ſee note on *Phil.*1.c.) And ſo in the Church of Jeruſalem it is clear by ſtory, that James the brother of the Lord, being ſoon after Chriſts aſcenſion conſtituted their Biſhop (ſee note on *Gal.*2. c.) the Deacons are the firſt that are added to him, *Act.*6. and no mention as yet of any middle order; From whence it will be ſufficiently cleared, who are the Πρεσβύτεροι Elders] here, viz: the Biſhops of the ſeverall cities or of the brethren that dwelt in Judea, v. 29. to whom this almes was deſigned; for the famine being in all Judea and not onely at Jeruſalem, and there being brethren, i. e. Chriſtians inhabiting through ſeverall parts of Judea, there can be no reaſon to imagine, that Jeruſalem only ſhould have the benefit of this collection, or conſequently that the Elders, to whom it was delivered, ſhould belong only to that city. And thus it is known in the Primitive Church that almes, and collections (called χάριτες Χάρις and λογία) whether in the ſame Church brought by Λογία the communicants in the offertory, or by officers ſent from one Church to another, were ſolemnly intruſted to the Biſhop, as the ſteward of the houſe of God, as the oblations were brought to the high Prieſt under the Law, and the liberality of the faithfull to the Apoſtles feet, *Act.*4.34. So in the 41th Canon Apoſtolical it is appointed, Præcipimus ut in poteſtate ſuâ Epiſcopus Eccleſiæ res habeat, Si enim animæ hominum pretioſæ illi ſunt concreditæ, multò magis oportet eum curam pecuniarum gerere, ita ut poteſtate ejus indigentibus omnia diſpenſentur per Presbyteros & Diaconos, We command that the Biſhop ſhall have the goods of the Church in his own power, For if the ſoules of men ſo much more pretious, are entruſted to him, he ought much more to have the care of the monies, ſo as by his power all be diſpenſed to them that want, by the Presbyters and Deacons; and ſo ſaith * Juſtin Martyr of the προεστὼς Preſident, or Biſhop, πᾶσιν ὲν χρείᾳ ὢν προστάτης γίνεται, he is the Guardian of all that are in want. From this explication of Πρεσβύτεροι here, muſt be taken the notion of it Act. 15. 2. where the Elders at Jeruſalem with the Apoſtles, are not the Elders of Jeruſalem, that one city, but the Biſhops of all Judea, now met in Councell at Jeruſalem, v. 4. 6. 22, 23. which joyned in making that decree ch. 16. 4. and ſo ch. 21. 18. when Paul again went up to Jeruſalem, and addreſt himſelf to James the Biſhop there, it is added, as in Councell, πάντες τε παρεγένοντο οἱ Πρεσβύτεροι, and all the Elders were there. An image or repreſentation of which Councel we have Rev. 4. 4. & 11. 16. One ſitting upon the throne, The Biſhop of Jeruſalem, as Metropolitan ſitting in the midſt, and four and twenty Elders κυκλόθεν round about, in faſhion of a crown, or ſemicircle, ſitting on thrones on each ſide of him, in white garments, and golden crownes, or mitres, the characters of Epiſcopal Dignity, and ſeven lamps of fire, the Emblems of ſeven Deacons ver. 5. waiting on them. And as the Biſhops of Judea, being at Jeruſalem, are thus fitly ſtyled Πρεσβύτεροι Elders, (not of the Church of Jeruſalem, but) either ſimply Elders, or εἰς, or ἐν, at, or in Jeruſalem noting only the place where they met in Councel, not of which they were Elders, or Governours, So Act. 14. 23. it is ſaid of Paul and Barnabas paſſing through Lyſtra, Iconium, and Antioch, that having confirmed the Churches, they ordained them Πρεσβυτέρους κατ' ἐκκλησίαν Elders Church by Church, i. e. a Biſhop in every Church, one Governour in Lyſtra, another in Iconium, another in Antioch, And ſo c. 20. 17. the πρεσβυτέρους ἐκκλησίας Elders of the Church of Aſia, are the ſame that are called ἐπισκόπους ποιμαίνειν Biſhops of the flock, v. 28. ſet over them by the holy Ghoſt, to wit, the Biſhops of all Aſia, who, ſaith Irenæus, were called together ab Epheſo & reliquis proximis civitatibus, from Epheſus, and the reſt of the cities neer. l. 3. c. 14. To all which places in that book of the Acts, belongs that ſaying of Oecumenius, Πρεσβυτέρους γὰρ τοὺς ἐπισκόπους ἡ τῶν Πράξεων βίβλος εἴωθε λέγειν, the book of the Acts uſes to call Biſhops Elders. So Tit. 1. 5. when Titus is ſaid to be left in Crete, to ordain πρεσβυτέρους κατὰ πόλιν Elders city by city, there is little doubt, but as Titus was Metropolitan of that Iland, (in which there were ſaid to be an hundred cities, and Gortyna the Metropolis) ſo the Elders in thoſe ſeverall cities, were a Biſhop in each, and ſo they are diſtinctly called ver. 7. and the ſame directions given for the ordaining of them, and the πρεσβύτας, that to Timothy are given for the Biſhops and Deacons, 1 Tim. 3. And the Greek Scholiaſts ſay diſtinctly on that place. Πρεσβυτέρους τοὺς Ἐπισκόπους καλεῖ, he calls the Biſhops Elders, and Ἀπόστολος & Τίτον ἐπὶ τὸ κελεῦσαι ἐπισκόπους χειροτονῆσαι, Ἐπισκόπων ἀρχιτέρων πολέως, the Apoſtle left Titus to conſtitute Biſhops, having firſt made him Biſhop, And * Theodoret ἐπιτέτραπτο τοῦ ὑπὸ αὐτὸν ἐπισκόπους χειροτονῆσαι, He had Commiſſion to ordain Biſhops under him, and Theophylact, τούτων ἐπισκόπων χεῖρα καὶ χειροτονίαν ἐπιβάλλει, He was intruſted with the judging and ordaining of ſo many (i. e. an hundred) Biſhops. So 1 Tim. 4. 14. the Πρεσβυτέριον or Elderſhip that laid hands on Timothy, and made him Biſhop, may well be reſolved to be the Biſhops, or Apoſtolical men οἱ τῆς Ἀποστολικῆς χάριτος ἠξιωμένοι, thoſe that were vouchſafed the favour to be Apoſtles, ſaith Theodoret, who with S. Paul, (2 Tim. 1. 6.) conſecrated him. Thus S^t Peter calls himſelf, Πρεσβύτερος Πέτρος, Peter the Elder, 1 Pet. 5. 1. and S^t John Πρεσβύτερος Ἰωάννης the Elder John, 2 Joh. 1. and 3 Joh. 1. And accordingly ſaith S^t Chryſoſtome on that place, ὁ δὲ πρεσβυτέριον φησὶν ἐνταῦθα, ἀλλὰ δεῖ Ἐπισκόπου, ὁ δὲ δὴ Πρεσβύτερος τὴν Ἐπισκοπὴν ἐκάλουν, By Elderſhip he means not (thoſe that were in his daies called) Presbyters, but Biſhops, for Presbyters did not ordain Biſhops, and ſo Theophylact and Oecumenius Πρεσβυτερεῖα, τουτέστιν Ἐπισκόπων, Presbytery, i. e. Biſhops, and ſo * Ignatius calls the Apoſtles Πρεσβυτέριον Ἐκκλησίας the Presbytery of the Church. And Theodoret renders the reaſon of the appellation, for ſo, ſaith he, the holy ſcripture τοὺς ἐντίμους τῶν Ἰσραὴλ, ἀριστοκρατίαν Γερουσίαν, call'd the chief men of Iſrael, the Senate, or Elderſhip. So 1 Pet. 5. 1. and 5. Πρεσβύτεροι οἱ ἐν ὑμῖν, the Elders among you, are no doubt the Biſhops in all the diſperſions of the Converted Jewes; of whom it is there ſaid that they ſhould ποιμαίνειν and ἐπισκοπεῖν v. 2. doe the part of the Paſtor and Biſhop. Some other places there are, where the word Πρεσβύτερος may poſſibly ſignifie a lower order, if any ſuch there were in thoſe times, but yet it is not certain, that they doe ſo. Such is that 1 Tim. 5. 1. Πρεσβυτέρῳ μὴ ἐπιπλήξῃς, Rebuke not an Elder, and ver. 19. Κατὰ πρεσβυτέρου μὴ παραδέχου κατηγορίαν δίχα, Receive not an accuſation againſt an Elder, Where 'tis the opinion of Epiphanius, that Biſhop Timothy's power over the Presbyters is ſpoken of. But when it is remembred that Timothy was not only a Biſhop, but of a metropoliticall ſea, the chief of all Aſia, and ſo a Metropolitan, and he appointed by Paul to ordain Biſhops there (whoſe qualifications are therefore ſet down, and thoſe of Deacons, but no mention of a middle order) there is no doubt but thoſe Biſhops of inferior ſeas ordained by him, were alſo accuſable and rebukable before him, in the ſame manner as Theophylact ſaid of Titus, that the χρίσις judgment, as well as χειροτονία, Ordination of ſo many Biſhops was committed to him, And therefore though S^t Chryſoſtome explaining thoſe places, interpret them δεῖ πάντως γεγηραικότα of all old men, (and ſome circumſtances in the context incline to that ſenſe) yet having made this queſtion, [what ſhould be done in caſe the faults were confeſt, but had no witneſſes, but only an evil ſuſpicion? He anſwers, and ſo alſo Theophylact, and Oecumenius in the ſame words, Εἶπεν ἄνω, φησὶ, δεῖ ὃ ἀνὴρ καὶ μαρτυρίαν καλὴν ἔχειν ἀπὸ τῶν ἔξωθεν, the Apoſtle had anſwered above, He ought to have a good teſtimony from them that are without, which plainly referring to the qualifications of Biſhops 1 Tim. 3. 7. muſt ſuppoſe the Elders to denote

Paul diſcourſes to him of Elders.* Where the mention of Churches in the plural, and of all Aſia, over which Timothy was placed, muſt interpret Elders of Biſhops there. A third place there is in that Epiſtle 1 Tim. 5. 17. Let the Elders that have ruled well be thought worthy of double honour,] Which may alſo very commodiouſly be interpreted of the Biſhops, the πρωτῶτες or Prefects of Churches, (ſo ſtyled by Juſtin Martyr and others,) and thoſe diſcharging their office duely, and (beſides the farther inſtructing, or teaching their Churches already conſtituted) labouring and travailing in the preaching the Goſpel to them that have not before heard it, To whom therefore the פי שנים, the double portion of alimony, the labourers reward v. 18. is aſſigned by the Apoſtle. A fourth place is that of S. James, Jam. 5. 14. Is any man ſick? let him call for the Elders of the Church, &c. Where, as the office of viſiting the ſick, of praying, anointing, abſolving, and reſtoring health to the ſick, may well agree to the Biſhop, ſo the ſetting it in the plural number, is nothing to the contrary, for that only ſignifies the Elders, or Biſhops of the Chriſtian Church, to be the men, whom all are to ſend to in this caſe, not that there are more Elders then one in one particular Church or city, any more, then that more then one are to be ſent for by the ſame ſick perſon. To this purpoſe belongs that place of Polycarp the primitive Biſhop of Smyrna, and Martyr, Καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι εὔσπλαγχνοι εἰς πάντας —— ἐπιεικεῖς πρὸς πάντας ἀδυνάτους, Let the Elders be mercifull to all, viſiting all that are weak, or ſick, where many other particulars are mention'd, κρίσις judicature, ἀποτομία ſeverity, or exciſion, προσωπολημψία accepting of perſons, τὸ ταχέως πιστεύειν κατά τινος, beleiving haſtily againſt any, as alſo ἀποστρέφειν τὰ ἀποπλανωμένα, reducing hereticks which belong properly to the office of the Biſhop, and not to any ſecond order in the Church. And accordingly in all that Epiſtle there is no mention of any but of Elders, and Deacons. As in Papias alſo his contemporary, and after him in Irenæus, and Juſtin Martyr, though πρεσβύτεροι ſometimes ſignifie that ſecond order, yet 'tis alſo uſed to ſignifie the Biſhop, and Polycarp himſelf ſtyled Ἀποστολικὸς πρεσβύτερος, an Apoſtolick Elder, or Biſhop, Iren: in Ep: ad Plotinum, and ſo Seniores in Tertullian.

1. About this time An: Ch: 43. Agrippa grandchild to Herod the great, having obtained a great part of his grandfathers dominions, and ſo calling himſelf by his name Herod, went about, i.e. reſolved to perſecute the Chriſtians, eſpecially the Apoſtles at Jeruſalem, thereby to gratifie the Jewes. a.

3. And perceiving that the Jewes gave their voices and conſent to his death, and expreſt their good liking of it (ſee note on Joh. 8. c.) he proceeded and apprehended Peter alſo. And it was about the time of the Paſſeover of the Jewes, when he apprehended him.

4. And when he had apprehended him, he put him in priſon, and delivered him to four quaternions of ſouldiers to keep him, intending after Eaſter to bring him forth to the people.]

4. And having impriſoned him, he ſet ſixteen ſouldiers to guard him, four at a time, two to be alwaies by him, and chain'd to him, (ſee note on ch. 28. e.) and two to guard the dore, ver. 6. meaning after the feaſt of the Paſſeover, to bring him forth to the Jewes, and, if they thought fit, to put him to death alſo.

9. And he went out, and followed him, and wiſt not that it was true, which was done by the Angel, but thought he ſaw a viſion.]

9. And he followed him out, but as yet knew not that this was really done, but thought he had been in a dream or trance.

10. When they were paſt the firſt and the ſecond wards, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city, which opened to them of his own accord, and they went out and paſſed on through one ſtreet, and forthwith the Angel departed from him.]

watches or wards which ſtood every night without the gates, and at laſt came to the gate which enters into the city, an iron gate, which opening to them of its own accord, they paſſed through it, and when they had paſſed together through one ſtreet, the Angel left Peter by himſelf.

11. And when Peter was come to himſelf, he ſaid, Now I know of a ſurety, that the Lord hath ſent his Angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jewes.]

11. And Peter being perfectly awake out of the trance, and knowing that he was ſo (as he did not ver. 9.) he ſaid to himſelf, that now 'twas clear that God had ſent his Angel to deliver him from the hands of Herod, and from the malice of the Jewes, who verily expected to have had him brought out to them that day, ver. 6.

c. 12. And when he had [c] conſidered the thing, he came to the houſe of Mary, the mother of John whoſe ſurname was Mark, [where many were gathered together * praying.]

17. Let this be known to the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and all the Chriſtians there, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. a. & Gal. 2. b.) And immediately he departed from them to a place of more ſafety.

18. Now as ſoon as it was day, there was no ſmall ſtirre among the ſouldiers, what was become of Peter.

Notes on Chap. XII.

a. Ἐπιβάλλειν χεῖρα to lay hand,] taken abſolutely, or with an infinitive mood after it, as here, ſignifies to attempt or reſolve to do any thing, ſo Gen. 3. 22. leſt he put forth his hand to take of the tree, &c.

Ἐπιβάλλειν χεῖρα

b. The word ἐκτενὴς applied to prayer ſignifies importunate, enforcing the ſame requeſt, ἐκτένεια Ζωχῶς τὸ ἀυλὸ, ſaith Heſychius, 'tis continually to doe the ſame thing, and again ἐκτενὲς, διαλελυμένον, it ſignifies that which is held out, or extended to a length. Thus the Letany, or ſupplications of the Church frequently, for ſome ſpace, to ſeverall matters applying the ſame words, We beſeech thee to hear us, and the like, is in the antient Liturgies, called ἐκτενὲς, the vehement, fervent, importunate form of ſupplication.

Ἐκτενὲς

The word Ζωχῶν is ſo neer in likeneſſe (though far enough off in the nature & ſignification of it) to σπεῦσον, that it is very poſſible one of theſe may here by the tranſcriber be put for the other. And indeed the ſignification of the latter [σπεῦσον making haſt] ſeems that which is fitter for the turn in this place, where being left alone in the ſtreet by the Angel, he was in reaſon to make haſt to ſome place of ſafety and privacy, and ſuch was that which

which he here chose. If this conjecture (which I mention only as such, having no authority for it,) be not too remote, then may it also probably belong to another place, c.14 6. Συνδρόμους κελεύουσιν, perhaps for σπεύδοντας, they made haſt and fled, as out of a great danger.

d. Ὑπακούσῃ *Cant.*5.7. is proportionable to the κραυγῶν, precedent, anſwering a call, So *Iſa.*50 2. and 56.11. So in Plutarch he that goes to anſwer him that knocks at the dore, is ſaid ὑπακούειν, to hearken, and anſwer.

e. Ἄγγελος μου

That the word Ἄγγελος, which by way of excellence is ſet to denote the immortal Spirits attendant on God and miniſtring to him, doth primarily, and originally, and in vulgar uſe ſignifie a meſſenger, and from thence onely comes to denote thoſe Spirits, becauſe they are meſſengers of God, employed by him, there is little doubt or queſtion: And conſequently 'tis as certain, that it may ſignifie here no more then a meſſenger from S. Peter, ſo doth Ἄγγελός μου, *Mat.*11.10. *Mar.*1.2. Lu 7.27. my meſſenger, being ſpoken of John Baptiſt. So *Lu.*7.24. ἄγγελοι Ἰωάννου the meſſengers of John, and *Lu.*9.32. ἀπέστειλεν ἀγγέλους, he ſent meſſengers, and ſo ſure the ἄγγελοι ἐκκλησιῶν, the Angels of the Churches, were not thoſe immortal Spirits, Rev. 1.19. but as the Apoſtles ſent meſſengers to ſeveral Churches, who were to doe according to their appointment, (ſee note on Joh. 20. a.) and ſome in their ſtead to rule and govern there, ſo were theſe the rulers of the Churches, appointed by the Apoſtles. So the Hebrew מַלְאָךְ ſignifies indifferently any who hath any command or meſſage from a maſter, and is rendred πεῖς 1 *Sam.*25.42. a ſervant, πρεσβὺς a meſſenger or Embaſſadour, Num. 21.21. and מַלְאָךְ, is rendred ἄγγελοι 2 Sam. 15.13. from נגד nuntiavit, yea and עבד ſervus, miniſter, is rendred ἄγγελοι *Iſa.*37.24. The only queſtion therefore will be, of theſe two poſſible notions of the word which is the fitter and more probable for this place, and for the rendring it [meſſenger] and not [Angel,] I ſhall only ſay, that the ſtory will thereby be very clear and intelligible, thus, That Peter knocked at the dore, and Rhode asking who was there? he anſwered, Peter, thereupon ſhe knew his voice, and aſſured them within, that Peter was there; they having not heard the voice, but only hearing her affirm confidently, that he was there, thought that ſome meſſenger had come from Peter, and made uſe of his name, and that ſhe had by miſtake beleived it to be Peter himſelf, and ſo they thought they muſt reconcile the difficulty betwixt the conceived impoſſibility of Peter's being there, on the one ſide, and the maid's affirming confidently that he was there, on the other ſide, viz: by this medium betwixt both, that a meſſenger ſent from Peter was at the dore, who made uſe of his name to obtain admiſſion; Whatſoever can be ſaid for the other rendring, will, I conceive, have more difficulty in it. And it is not impoſſible or improbable, that the ἄγγελος Joh. 5.4. that went at a certain ſeaſon to move the water of Bethesda, may be ſo rendred alſo, not for an Angel of God in a viſible ſhape, but for an officer, ſervant, meſſenger, that was wont to be ſent at certain ſeaſons of the year, probably at the feaſts, to move the water, upon which it became medicinable, ſee note on Joh. 5.2.

CHAP. XIII.

* Now there were ſome in Antioch, belonging to the Church that then was, Prophets & Doctors, ὡς δὲ τινες τῶν Ἀντιοχείας κατὰ τὴν οὖσαν ἐκκλησίαν, εἰσὶν οἱ διδάσκαλοι καὶ

1. And there were at that time in Antioch ſome eminent perſons or Biſhops of the Churches of Syria, of that age, ſee note on 1 Cor.12. c. and of them ſome having the gift of prophecie, (ſee note on ch.15. c.)

2. As they miniſtred to the Lord and faſted, the holy Ghoſt ſaid, Separate me Barnabas and Saul, for the work, whereunto I have called them.]

2. And as they were upon a day of faſt performing their office of prayer to God (ſee note on Lu. 1. h.) the holy Spirit of God by ſome affiation, or revelation ((ſee c.8 note e.) commanded them to ordain or conſecrate Barnabas and Saul to the Apoſtleſhip, to which God had already deſigned them.

3. And when they had faſted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they ſent them away.]

3. And accordingly they obſerved a ſolemn day of faſting and prayer, and ſo by impoſition of hands (ſee note on 1 Tim.5. f.) ordained them, and ſent them away about the work deſigned them by God.

4. So they being ſent forth by the holy Ghoſt, departed unto Seleucia,] and from thence they ſailed to Cyprus.

4. And having thus received their commiſſion from the holy Ghoſt, or by the appointment of God himſelf (ſee ver. 2.) they went immediately to Seleucia.

5. And when they were at Salamis [they preached the word of God in the ſynagogues of the Jewes, and they had alſo John to their miniſter.]

5. they proclaimed the Goſpel in the ſynagogues of the Jewes, and they had with them John ſurnamed Mark, ch.12.25. who was with them as an attendant, to doe any thing wherein they had uſe of him, and by them to be ſent on any part of their charge (ſee note on Joh. 20. 21.) whither they could not goe.

6. And when they had gone through the iſle unto [Paphos,] they found a certain ſorcerer, a falſe prophet, a Jew, whoſe name was Bar-Jeſus, thou worketſt, art an enemy of all goodneſſe, wilt thou perſiſt in ſorcery in defiance of the faith of Chriſt, which comes armed with ſo much more power of miracles, then thoſe to which thou falſly pretendeſt?

11. It is moſt juſt that thou that holdeſt out perverſly againſt the light of the Goſpel, ſhouldſt loſe thy ſight, which therefore by the immediate power of God, ſhall be taken from thee for ſome time. And immediately he was ſtruck blind, and was not able to goe without leading.

11. And now behold the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou ſhalt be blind, not ſeeing the ſun for a ſeaſon. And immediately there fell on him a miſt and a darkneſſe, and he went about ſeeking ſome to lead him by the hand.]

12. And this act of miraculous blindneſs upon the ſorcerer convinced the Proconſul, and converted him to the faith.

12. Then the deputy, when he ſaw what was done, beleived, being † aſtoniſhed at the doctrine of the Lord.] † much ſtricken in admiration

13. And Paul and all that were in his company, except John, who returned to Jeruſalem, went by ſea from Paphos to Perga, a place famous for the Temple of Diana.

13. Now when Paul and his company looſed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia, and John departing from them, returned to Jeruſalem.]

14. But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Piſidia, and went into the ſynagogue on the ſabbath day and ſate down,

28. And though he were perfectly innocent, no capital accuſation produced againſt him, yet by their importunity they forced Pilate to condemne him to be crucified.

29. And when by thus doing they had not more acted their own malice, then fulfilled the prophecies concerning the Meſſias (according to what he himſelf ſaid, It is finiſht, and then gave up the ghoſt) they then took him down from the croſſe and put him into a tombe, ſealed it up, and watched it, ſecured him by all ways imaginable.

† That God hath performed it ἐκ τοῦτο ὁ θεὸς ἐκπεπλήρωκεν

32, 33. And the ſubject of this Goſpel, which we thus proclaim unto you, is the promiſe made to Abraham (that in his ſeed &c.) to Moſes (that God would raiſe up a Prophet &c.) which promiſe God hath now fulfilled in raiſing Jeſus from the dead, Of which alſo that in the ſecond Pſalme was a propheey, when to David after his great perſecutions it was ſaid, that God had now begotten him, thereupon calling him his ſon, i. e. ſet him upon his throne, and given him that title of greateſt dignity, and which is in Scripture the title of Kings, as on whom is enſtated that power over men which belongs originally to none but God, and derivatively to none but thoſe, on whom God beſtowes it, who conſequently are called both children of the moſt high, and Gods, Pſal. 82. 1. 6. (as thoſe that are made like unto another, are to expreſſe that ſimilitude, called his ſons, and ſometimes have his name communicated to them.)

34. And as concerning that he raiſed him up from the dead, now no more to returne to corruption: he ſaid on this wiſe, I will give you the ſure [g] mercies of David.]

34. To the ſame purpoſe alſo, that God ſhould not only raiſe him from the dead, but alſo ſecure him never to dye any more, (for Lazarus and others that were once raiſed, dyed again) are thoſe two other known propheeies, one Iſa. 55. 3. I will give you the ſure mercies &c. the expreſſion of an everlaſting Covenant, ſpoken literally to the people of Iſrael, that God would perpetuate to them the mercy promiſed to David, that of giving one of his ſeed, to ſit on his throne, (which had been for ſome time interrupted, but ſhould now be perpetuated to them upon their obedience) but here accommodated to Chriſt, that though he were crucified, yet he ſhould riſe again, and never dye any more, i. e. that Chriſt under the title of the ſon of David, ſhould be given to the Jews not onely in a mortall condition, as David was, but in a firme immutable ſtate, which could not be true of him, if he had not been raiſed from the dead, and aſſumed to heaven, never to dye any more.

35. Wherefore he ſaith alſo in another Pſalme,] Thou ſhalt not ſuffer thine holy one to ſee corruption.]

35. And to that moſt clearly belongs that other place, Pſal. 16. 11.

* For David indeed in his own generation having ſerved the counſell of God, &c. Δαυὶδ μὲν γὰρ ἰδίᾳ γενεᾷ ὑπηρετήσας τῇ τοῦ θεοῦ βουλῇ

36. * For David after he had ſerved his own generation by the will of God, fell on ſleep, and was laid unto his fathers and ſaw corruption.]

36. For if thoſe words ſhould be applyed to David perſonally, they could have no truth in them, for he having lived his term or ſpace of naturall life, and therein ruled the people over whom God was pleaſed to ſet him, dyed a naturall death, and never roſe again, but his body was putrefied in the earth.

37. But he whom God raiſed again, ſaw no corruption.]

37. But he in whom that propheey is completely fulfilled, that is Chriſt, being ſent by God into the world, and crucified, and by the power of God raiſed from the dead the third day (before the time came, wherein bodies naturally putrefie, viz. 72. houres after death, wherein the revolution of humors is accompliſhed) never came to dye again, or putrefie at all.

38. Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you forgiveneſſe of ſins.]

38. This therefore is the meſſage we bring, the Goſpell we preach unto you, that this Chriſt is the Meſſias, who by his death hath reconciled God to all penitent beleivers, and by his life and doctrine taught us a way, wherein we may obtain pardon of ſin, ſuch an one as was not to be found in the Moſaicall Law.

39. And by him all that beleive are juſtified from all things, from which ye could not be juſtified by the law of Moſes.]

39. And whoſoever receives and obeyes him ſhall certainly be freed and purged from the wrath of God, and the puniſhments attending ſin in another world, from which the law of Moſes could not by all its ceremonies, waſhings and ſacrifices purge or cleanſe any.

40. Beware therefore leſt that come upon you, which is ſpoken of in the Prophets,

41. Behold ye deſpiſers, and wonder, and periſh: for I work a work in your days, a work which ye † ſhall in no wiſe beleive, though a man declare it unto you.]

† will not beleive, if any man ἐὰν τις ἐκδιηγῆται

40, 41. you are therefore neerly concerned to take heed, and beware that by your obſtinate reſiſting and rejecting this way of ſalvation now preached, you doe not bring deſtruction upon your ſelves, and cauſe the Goſpel to be removed to the Gentiles, v. 46. which is a thing which will come to paſſe ſuddenly, though ſo incredible to you, that you will not beleive it, when the newes of it ſhall come unto you by them that ſee it done, (ſee note on Mat. 28. b.)

42. And though the Jews were not generally much moved with this, yet ſome of them were, v. 43. and generally the proſelytes, or pious perſons of heathen birth, deſired to hear more of this ſubject the next Sabbath.

42. And when the Jews were gone out of the Synagogue, the Gentiles beſought that theſe words might be preached to them the next Sabbath.]

43. who preached to them, and by way of exhortation confirmed them in the doctrine of the Goſpel, (ſee note on Heb. 13. a.)

43. Now when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and * religious proſelytes followed Paul and Barnabas, [who ſpeaking to them perſwaded them to continue in the grace of God.]

* worſhipping ſee note i.

h. 44. The Goſpel preached by them.

44. And the next Sabbath day came almoſt the whole city together to hear [the word of God.]

45. And the chief men of the Jews ſeeing how the multitude thronged to hear it, were horribly enraged, and contradicted Paul, and that with contumelies and reproches caſt on him.

45. But when the Jews ſaw the multitudes they were filled with * envy, and ſpake againſt thoſe things which were ſpoken by Paul, contradicting and † blaſpheming.

* rage ζηλος † railing βλασφημια

46. But this no way diſcouraged Paul and Barnabas, but they put off all fear, and ſaid courageouſly (ſee note on Joh. 7. a.) that now they had performed their charge from Chriſt, of preaching the Goſpel firſt to the Jews, before they applyed themſelves to the Gentile world. But ſeeing, ye Jews, ſaid they, behave your ſelves ſo obſtinately and perverſely, that you become utterly unworthy and uncapable of receiving benefit by the Goſpel, we are now by appointment to leave you, and preach to the Gentiles, and ſo we will.

46. Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold and ſaid, It was neceſſary that the word of God ſhould firſt have been preached to you, but ſeeing yee put it from you, and judge your ſelves unworthy of everlaſting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles.]

47. For this was the direction of God that Chriſt being firſt preached to the Jews, and being rejected by them, ſhould be preached to all other people of the world, and this is the ſumme of that old Prophecy Iſa. 49. 6.

47. For ſo hath the Lord commanded us, ſaying, I have ſet thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou ſhouldſt be for ſalvation unto the ends of the earth.]

i. 48. And when the Gentiles heard this good newes, that this pardon of ſinnes and ſalvation by Chriſt, was allowed them, they rejoyced, and bleſſed the name of God for this glorious mercy of his revealed in the Goſpell, and all they of the Gentiles, that had any care, or purſuit of the life to come, the Gentile proſelytes, or that were fitly diſpoſed, and qualified for the Goſpel to take root in, received the doctrine of Chriſt thus preached to them.

48. And when the Gentiles heard of the Lord, and * as many as were i ordained to eternall life beleived.]

* beleived as many as were diſpoſed for eternall life.

49. And the Goſpel was preached, and embraced over the whole countrey.

49. And the word of the Lord was publiſhed throughout all the region.]

50. Onely the Jewes exaſperated ſome of the female proſelytes, thoſe of them that were of honourable quality, and the governours of the city, ſee Job. 1. d.

50. But the Jews ſtirred up the * devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city,] and raiſed perſecution againſt Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coaſts.

51. But they, uſing that fatall ceremony, appointed by Chriſt in this caſe, thereby foretelling, and aboading the deſtruction, which ſhould overtake them for ſo doing, left them, and went from thence to Iconium.

51. But they ſhook off the duſt of their feet againſt them, and came unto Iconium.]

52. And all the Chriſtians were filled with ſpirituall joy at what they ſaw thus performed, and went on zealouſly in their courſe.

52. And the diſciples were filled with joy, and with the holy Ghoſt.]

Notes on Chap. XIII.

a. Ἑλυμας

The word שאלם alem, or עלים alim in Arabick ſignifies knowing or skilfull, and is applyed to thoſe that know things divine and humane, from עלם alam, ſcivit: and ſo μαγος perhaps מנוש from נש, which in Syriack, and Arabick ſignifies ſcrutari, or explorare to ſearch, will ſignifie the ſame alſo. From this concurrence of the words ἑλυμας and μαγος in the ſame notion, tis clear that neither of them here was a proper name (that having before been ſet down to be Barjeſus v. 6.) but both, in ſeverall languages, the title of their wiſemen, skilled in the ſecret learning, whom we ordinarily call magicians; And μαγος being in ſo common uſe among the Gracians, though perhaps of an Eaſtern origination too, is here ſet as an interpretation of the other.

b. Σαυλ Παυλος

Severall accounts are given of Sauls two names, S. Ambroſe Serm. 31. ſaith that he was at his baptiſme named Paul by Ananias. S. Auſtin tr. 72. in Pſal. will have it an effect of his Converſion, and ſo of his own impoſing, and that his humility would not own that name of a proud tall King of Iſrael, but preferred the contrary of Paulus a little one: Agreeable to which it is that he calls himſelf ἐλαχιστοτερος παντων αγιων (a word made by himſelf on purpoſe) leſſe then the leaſt of Saints. S. Jerome on the Epiſt. to Philemon, will have it a token of this his firſt victory over the heatheniſme of Sergius Paulus here (in this Chap: where he is firſt called by this name) whoſe name he was therefore to bear by way of triumph, as Scipio of Africanus and the like. But Origen in Præf. on the Epiſt: to the Romans, ſaith that he being a Jew born in a City of Rome, had at his circumciſion two names, Saul a Jewiſh, and Paulus a Roman name, And this is moſt agreeable to the forme form of ſpeech here. Σαῦλος ὁ (ἡ ἡ) Παῦλος) Bus Saul, who is alſo Paul, noting him to have had two names at once, not to have changed one for the other.

c. Παδιεργία — Παδιεργία ſignifies forgery, cheating, falſeneſſe, deceit, ſo in Plutarch, making a falſe will, is παδιέργημα, ſo Act. 18. 14. If it were ἀδίκημά ἢ παδιέργημα πονηρὸν, any injury (any piece of injuſtice) or any roguy forgery or cheat; So Phavorinus Παδιεργῶν, ᾧ πανουργίᾳ ἢ διαφθορᾷ, to doe any thing with cunning; and παδιεργία, πανεργία, πανουργία (it ſhould be πανεργία, for ſo Heſychius, παδιεργῶ πανεργῶ) ſolvint, knavery, forgery, deceit; and ſo likewiſe Heſychius παδιεργεῖ (it ſhould be παδιεργεῖ) πανουργεῖ, δολοπλεῖ. doing wicked or cunning things, and παδιεργὸς (beſide πανεργὸς a forger) πανοῦργος μαχανεργὸς πολυμήχανος, a wicked (I ſuppoſe without a cõma) contriver, or cunning, ſubtile perſon.

d. Ἀρχισυνάγωγοι — The Synagogues in the regions of Judea, not alwaies ſignifying their Conſiſtories or Judicatures, but alſo their places for religious duties, hearing the law and prophets read) was anſwerable to the cœtus eccleſiaſtici, the religious aſſemblies (ſaith Bertram de bell: Jud: p. 154.) of the Levites and Prophets inſtituted at firſt by Joſhua and Samuel by preſcript of law. The Archiſynagogi therefore are parallel to, and ſupply the place of thoſe Levites and Prophets, thoſe that officiated there, of which conſequently there were more then one in the ſame Synagogue, and ſo c. 11. 8. and 17. Criſpus and Soſthenes are Archiſynagogi of the ſynagogue at Corinth. And the ancient Gr: & Lat: MS. ch. 14. 2. inſtead of οἱ δὲ ἀπειθήσαντες Ἰουδαῖοι, reads οἱ δὲ ἀρχισυνάγωγοι τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ᾧ οἱ ἀρχοντες τῆς συναγωγῆς, making an expreſs difference between the rulers or chief of the ſynagogue, that officiated there, and the Rulers of the Conſiſtory or judicature.

e. Βαστάσει — That βαστάσει, carried as a nurſe,] is the right reading there is little doubt, this being the very word uſed by the Septuagint, Deut. 1. 31. for that which is in Hebrew [hath born thee as a parent doth a child] i.e. not only bearing his body in armes, but feeding and ſuſtaining him, and farther undertaking all the trouble of his education, and therefore the Syriack interpreter uſes here a word which ſignifies feeding or nouriſhing. And ſo Heſychius βαστάσαι, τρέφειν, bearing as a nurſe, i. e. feeding; and ſo Phavorinus alſo. This did God miraculouſly even to thoſe murmurers; But ſuffering his vengeances to fall upon them, and ſweeping them all away, that came out of Ægypt, but Caleb and Joſhua, he cannot ſo fitly be ſaid to have born their manners, or to have born with them.

f. Ἀναστῆσαι — The word ἀναστῆσαι raiſing up] ſignifies to raiſe up from the dead, and ſo doth ἐγεῖραι too, but not ſo onely, nor ſo primarily, nor neceſſarily ſo, but when either the addition of ἐκ νεκρῶν from the dead] or ſome other phraſe of that nature, or circumſtance of the context requires that ſenſe. For beſides that notion, there is another very ordinary, and proper to it, as when God is ſaid to raiſe up a prophet, i.e. to ſend him, and give him commiſſion to perform the office of a prophet, this is an uſuall notion of the word. So Act. 3. 22. & 7. 37. Προφήτην ὑμῖν ἀναστήσει, he ſhall raiſe you up a prophet, and ſo Act. 2. 30. ſpeaking of God's promiſe to David, from the fruit of his loynes according to the fleſh, ἀναστήσει Χριστὸν, that he would raiſe up Chriſt, bring the Meſſias, into the world; And the mention of the reſurrection in the next verſe, will not be able to aſſigne any other ſenſe to that place, becauſe that may come in from the force of the [ſitting on his throne] which is added to it, it being clear, that as that was promiſed of the Meſſias, ſo it was not performed till his reſurrection. So when of Theudas Act. 5. 36. of Judas of Galilee v. 37. it is ſaid, ἀνέστη he roſe up, a falſe prophet ariſing of himſelf, or raiſing himſelf, not raiſed by God (according as among the Hebrews, the word נבא for prophecying, doth in hithpael, the reciprocal conjugation, generally ſignifie a falſe prophecie, ſuch as one receives from himſelf, and not from God) ſo Heb. 7. 11. What need is there ἕτερον ἀνίστασθαι ἱερέα, that there ſhould ariſe, or be raiſed, another prieſt, and again v. 15. And thus ſome may conceive, that it ſhould ſignifie in this place; But 1. the context here, and 2. the importance of the ſecond Pſalme incline it the other way. For here the reſurrection of Chriſt v. 30. is the point inſiſted on, and though his crucifixion be firſt mention'd in order to that, v. 27. yet there is no mention of his coming into the world, or either his eternal, or temporal generation. And ſo in the following words, ver. 34. they again belong to Gods raiſing him from the dead. And for the parallel betwixt begetting, and reſurrection, it might be made clear in many particulars. As for the ſecond Pſalme, that clearly belongs to the ſetting up David King after the death of Saul, and conqueſt over his enemies, and that is aptly expreſt by Gods begetting him, and his being Gods ſon, For as ſimilitude denominates children, the children of God are they that are like him, and reſemble him in any thing, and the children of Abraham are they that doe the works of Abraham, and as the making man after Gods image, ſignified his likeneſſe unto God in power, having dominion &c. Gen. 1. 28. ſo being the ſons of God, and having the title of Gods, Pſal. 8. 2. 6. belongs to Governours, and conſequently ſignifies ſo in that ſecond Pſalme, and is but another phraſe to ſignifie what is plainly ſaid v. 6. yet have I ſet my King upon the holy hill of Sion. And thus alſo in the application, Chriſt the ſon of David, being raiſed from the dead, as David reſcued from the great dangers that encompaſs'd him, is now ſet upon his throne by his exaltation, and that is Gods begetting him his ſon here, and is the thing to which the Jewes referred when they called the Meſſias ſometime the King of Iſrael, ſometimes, which is all one, the ſon of God. And ſo Heb. 1. 5. this ſaying of God to him [thou art my ſon &c. and I will be to him a father, and he ſhall be to me a ſon] is brought as a proof of his being ſuperiour to the Angels ver. 4. which was done by his reſurrection and exaltation, Epheſ. 1. 20, 21.

The Hebrew in Iſa. 55. 3. from whence this is taken hath חַסְדֵי דָוִד הַנֶּאֱמָנִים where the word חַסְדֵי in the plural, noting beneficia, or beneficentiam, mercies, or mercifulneſſe, is by the Greek rendred ὅσια (from the ſenſe of the ſingular חָסִיד which ſignifies both beneficus and pius, charitable and godly) as if it were onely pia godly from the ſingular, pius, whereas the adjective plural is taken ſubſtantively (as many neutrals in Latine are) for acts of kindneſſe, mercies, &c. and ſo הַנֶּאֱמָנִים adjectively joyned with it, ſignifies the faithfull, durable, g. Ὅσια ἁγιῶν durable, lasting mercies of David, i.e. of Christ the son of David, and so this place out of the prophet is brought as a proof of Christ's resurrection. For as the mercies promised the Jewes in having David for their King, had with the end of his life determin'd also, unlesse his son Solomon, and after him others had sat upon the throne, and as, when they were carried into captivity, the perpetuating these benefits of David to them, i. e. being govern'd by their own Kings, signifies their return from their captivity, so Christ, being called David, or meant in a second mystical sense when David is named, and being (crucified, and so) dead, as David was, unlesse he had withall risen again, that Covenant, those mercies promised by and in him to the world, could not have been πιστὰ firm, sure, faithfull, ratified for duration or continuance, but had ended with his life, whereas now by his resurrection and ascension to heaven they still continue, and are made good unto us. Thus, saith Athanasius of Christ's sacrifice, τετελείωκε τὸ πᾶν, καὶ πιστὸν γέγονε μένειν διὰ παντὸς, it perfected all, and became faithful, wherein? why, in that it remaineth forever. And again saith he, Ἡ κατὰ νόμον ἱερωσύνη χρόνῳ καὶ θανάτῳ παρήμειβε πρὸς ἕτερον, ὁ δὲ Κύριος ἀπαραβάτου καὶ ἀδιαδόχου ἔχων τὴν ἀρχιερωσύνην, πιστὸς γέγονεν ἀρχιερεὺς, ἕως αἰῶνος ἀεί. The legal priesthood by time and death passeth from one to another, but Christ having an high priesthood which passeth not from him to any successour did therein become a faithful high priest (Heb. 2. 17.) enduring, or, continuing forever. where the word πιστὸς in that Epistle to the Hebrews is interpreted by that Father to signifie durable, continuing forever.

h. ἐχομένῳ In stead of ἐχομένῳ Σαββάτῳ, the coming or approaching Sabbath, the King's MS. and some others read ἑξῆς τῷ next or adjoyning sabbath, as πόλεις ἐχόμεναι have been shewed to signifie the adjoyning cities, note on Mar. 1. b.

i. Τιθεμένους εἰς ζωὴν That this phrase τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον] is here a notation of the proselytes among the Jewes, which were allowed by them to have partem in sæculo futuro, a portion in the age to come (whether that signifie heaven, or the kingdome of the Messias) without submitting to their whole law, but only to the seven precepts of the sons of Noah, hath been not unhappily conjectured by M. Mede, And the context is somewhat favourable to it, The company consisted of Jewes, and proselytes, v. 43. many of those proselytes (as well as Jewes) followed Paul and Barnabas after the dissolving the assembly; and their doing so, and the form of the Apostles exhortation to them, προσμένειν to abide, or persevere, signifies, that they were already beleivers. Then ver. 45. The Jewes contradicted, and spake against this doctrine, and therefore, say Paul and Barnabas, seeing ye judge your selves unworthy of everlasting life, i. e. seeing you behave your selves, as those, that look not after, care not for your eternal weale, Behold we turn to the Gentiles, v. 46. which when the Gentiles heard, i.e. the people of other nations that were there among the Jewes, they rejoiced, and glorified the word of God, v. 48. And upon that it is immediately added, that as many as were τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, disposed, or in readinesse for, or to eternall life, beleived. In this conjecture there is a faire appearance of truth for the whole of it, And for one part of it it is undoubted, that those who are here said to beleive were most of them, if not all, such proselytes of the Gentiles, and those again not the proselytes of justice which had undertaken the whole Mosaical law (for they were as deeply engaged in opposing Christianity, as the most refractary Jewes, and accordingly ver. 50. the Proselyte women, which were zealous for the law, were exasperated by the Jewes, see note on Mat. 23. d.) but especially those of the gates, which received the precepts of the sons of Noah, but were not possest with the Jewish prejudices against Christianity. But then 1. it no way appears that all the proselytes of this sort, did now receive the faith at this one time, and consequently it cannot be affirmed, in the latitude of [ὅσοι, as many,] which seems to include all of the sort (whatever it is) that is noted by the phrase. Or if that word may be so qualified, as not to extend to all, yet there is no propriety of the phrase τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν, to confine it to that sort of proselytes, any more then there is to confine the like phrase ἱκανοὶ εἰς βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, fit for the kingdome of God. Lu. 9. 62. to this sort of proselytes, which there appears not at all to belong to them, Of that phrase see note d. on Joh. 6. where it appears to signifie one that by Gods prevenient graces hath that qualification wrought in him, which is the peculiar temper, wherein the Gospel takes root, and prospers, the honest heart, or sincere desire of reforming, and living piously; For these, when the Gospel is preacht to all, are peculiarly the men, that lay hold on it, and bring forth the fruits of it, And these are very fitly described by this phrase here, and accordingly it is said that as many as were such, beleived, or turned Christians. Now for the main difficulty, how this phrase [τεταγμένοι &c.] should come to signifie these, I shall enlarge a while by viewing the nature of the word τάσσειν, to order, or ordain, among writers, sacred and profane. In scripture it often signifies to appoint as that is to command or constitute, So Act. 22. 10. ἃ πάντων ἐστί σοι τεταγμένα ποιῆσαι, all things which are appointed thee to doe] is all one with τί σοι δεῖ ποιῆσαι, what thou oughtest, what is thy duty to doe, in the parallel place, ch. 9. 6. So Act. 15. 2. ἔταξαν they commanded or gave order, or appointed, and Mat. 28. 16. the mountain ὃ ἐτάξατο αὐτοῖς Ἰησοῦς, which Jesus had appointed, or commanded, But more frequently 'tis used in the military sense, in the notion, wherein the Books of disposing or marshalling armies, are called Tacticks, and in which διαταγαὶ ἀγγέλων, dispositions of Angels, Act. 7 53. signifies troops, or hosts of Angels. So of the Centurion, Lu. 7. 8. ὑπὸ ἐξουσίαν τασσόμενος, he that hath such a place in the army, as (though he be a commander) to be himself under others, in which sense Rom. 13. 1. the powers that are, are τεταγμέναι ὑπὸ Θεοῦ, constituted by God, and placed under him. And by analogie from hence 'tis applied to other things, as 1 Cor. 16. 15. ἔταξαν ἑαυτοὺς εἰς διακονίαν τοῖς ἁγίοις, they disposed, or devoted themselves to that function, that part, as it were, of the Ecclesiastical militia, which consisted in ministring to the saints. In the Translators of the old Testament, and writers of the Apocrypha, 'tis generally in the military sense answerable to the Hebrew פָּקַד, so Ezech. 44. 14. τάξουσι αὐτοὺς φυλάσσειν φυλακὰς, they shall appoint, or dispose, or marshall them to keep watches, watches, which is spoken of the Temple, but as that represents an host, and is usually so called, (and thence Lu. 1. 8. τάξις ἐφημερίας, the order of his daily course, is in that sense also) so 2 Mac. 15. 20. ὡς ἵππος ἐστὶ καλῶς πεπαγμένος, the horse being so disposed or placed (as in Hesychius the word πρωτοστάτης is explained by ὁ πρῶτος μετὰ τὸ κέρας) not κέρας as tis corruptly read) τῆς μεσοτάξεως πεπαγμένος, he that is placed first next the horn of the Battalia) and 1 Mac. 5. 27. εἰς ἄνεσιν τάσσουλαι παρεμβαλεῖν, they are disposed, or marshalled, so that to morrow they may encampe. So 2 Kin. 15. 19. ἐκλέξασθαι ἀπ' αὐτῶν λαὸν, is to muster the people. Among profane writers 'tis sometimes [to dispose, or put in order] so the shepheard doth τάττειν ἀγέλας, order his flocke, in Philostr. de vit: Apoll: l. 3. c. 3. And in * Assyrius, (in the ἱππικ.) after Σκαμανδρίους ἐν τάγμασι, having fought in rankes (in the military sense) follows within a line διατεταξάμενος ἐν ταῦτα, having disposed these things in order, (i. e. of writing) προσφωνῶ σοι I addresse my selfe to thee, &c. In the military sense nothing is more ordinary, ἐτάσσοντο οὕτως εἰς μάχην, they were marshalled as for a fight, in Thucyd. l. 3. (and ἀντιτεταγμένοι in Julian, and others, is simply for enemies) so Ἕλληνες πεπαγμένοι προσῆσαν, the Gracians being marshalled &c. l. 2. as in Ælian πεπαγμένοι are souldiers in their ranks in services (as ἄτακτοι on the cõtrary are those that are disbanded) & πάγμα a band or troop of such. And in this sense they that are truly pious, sincerely and honestly disposed to do whatsoever God requires of them towards eternall life (whether that signifie Christianity, the present part of that life, which shall end in eternity, or whether the life of glory in another world) may fitly be said to be πεπαγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, enrolled in the number of those that look after eternall life, marshalled, standing ready, in order, in rank, centuriati, to eternall life, and so as they that 1 Cor. 15. 16. ἔταξαν ἑαυτοὺς εἰς διακονίαν, devoted themselves to the ministration, might be expresst by πεπαγμένοι εἰς διακονίαν, devoted and ready for that, so here πεπαγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν, devoted and ready for life) will be all one with ὅσοι ἐαυτοὺς ἔταξαν εἰς ζωὴν, they that devoted, addicted themselves to eternall life, according to that ordinary custom among sacred writers, where- ἔταξαν εἰς διακονίαν in the reciprocall conjugation Hithpahel is expressed by the Greek passive, which is observable of compounds of this very word very frequently, as in ὑποτάσσεσθαι, to obey, Rom. 10. 3. and 13. 1. 5. Heb. 12. 9. James 4. 7. In all which the passive signifies either to subject himself, or neutrally to obey, ἀνυπότακτοι submit, and so the contrary ἀνυπότακτοι, Rom. 13. 2. Ja. 4. 6. and 5. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. to be disobedient. The short is, that they that having renounced the heathen Idols of their Countries embraced the worship of the one onely true God, and the hope of eternall life, and so were ἐυθεῖοι εἰς βασιλείαν Θεοῦ well placed, or disposed, in a good posture toward the kingdome of God, are here thus expresst, This is that which is expresst Heb. 11. 6. by προσερχόμενοι εἰς τὸν Θεὸν, they that come to God, which is the paraphrase of the word προσήλυτοι Proselytes so called from coming to, or indeed the same word participially set, and of all such it is required, to beleive, what is there said, that there is a God, and that he is a rewarder of all that diligently seek him, i. e. that Gentiles (other nations besides Jews) if they seek God, may come to eternall life, and consequently as many as put forward to the exercise of piety, which is one part of eternall life in Scripture (this is life eternall to know thee, i. e. live according to thy commandments) and to the expectation of a reward, which is the other part, are distinctly capable of this title here, and there of that. This was acknowledged by Chrysostome, when he explained this phrase by [ἀφωσιωμένοι τῷ Θεῷ, separated to God] those that had betaken themselves to his onely service, or, as * Procopius expresses it * on Isa. p. 616. speaking of the Gentiles, οἱ δι' ἀρετῆς καὶ εὐσεβείας παρασκευάμενοι εἰς τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, they that by virtue and piety were in procinctu for sonnes of God, ready to be such. I shall adde but one place more, and that out of Philo, where speaking of the προσκείμενοι Θεῷ, they that were added to God, godly men, that gave up their names to the worship of God, he addes οἱ τὰ μετὰ τὸν ὄντα Θεὸν πεπαγμένοι τάξιν, ἀθάνατον βίον ζῶσιν, they being marshalled in the ranke next to the true God, live an immortal life, where the πεπαγμένοι &c. is all one with the προσκείμενοι Θεῷ, they that were added to God, i. e. with the προσερχόμενοι Θεῷ, they that come to God, that give themselves up to his service, And baptisme among us being the form of our initiation to Christ, the ancient form of those that were to be baptized, was, ἀποτάσσομαί σοι, Σατανᾶ, καὶ συντάσσομαί σοι, Χριστέ (in this military sense, from whence 'tis called a Sacrament) I renounce thy service, O Satan, and I put my self, list my self with thee O Christ. That this phrase cannot reasonably be interpreted to any sense of divine predestination, may appear, 1. by the no-reasons that are producible to encline it that way; Those must be produced, if they are any, either from the context, or the propriety of the phrase. From the context no reason is pretended, but on the other side, the comparison here lying betwixt the Jews on one side, and the Gentiles on the other, of the Jews it is said, that they contradicted, and blasphemed, and so judged not themselves worthy of everlasting life, v. 46. which sure referres not to any decree from eternity past against their persons, absolutely considered, but only as contumacious unbeleivers, uncapable of that salvation which was preached to them, And then in reason, and by laws of opposition, they that did beleive, of the Gentiles, must be those, that were otherwise qualified then those Jews were, and so that qualification of pliable temper, will be the interpretation of the πεπαγμένοι &c. not that all the Gentiles received the Gospel (which yet if it were true de facto, would be no argument against what is now said) but that as many of them, as were thus qualified, received it. As for the phrase, that hath no propriety to incline that way, for 1. there is no intimation, or mention of God in the phrase, which would be necessary, to restrain it to that sense of Gods predestination, 2 ly, for the word πάσσειν, which is rendred ordaining, and seems somewhat favourable that way, and is the only part of the phrase that doth so, there is no example of this being any where used for Gods eternall decree, but διδόναι, or προορίζειν, to determine or predetermine, 3 dly, there is no preposition answerable to pra, before, in any part of the phrase, nor any thing else to supply that place, as οὐ χρόνου διαστῶν, or οὐ προβολῆς δεόμενα, before the foundation of the world, Ephes. 1. 4. Secondly, this may be resolved on by the reasons, which stand in force against it, For 1. the word [ὅσοι as many] being an inclusive, universal particle, it is not imaginable yet that all of that assembly, that were predestin'd, and so all that could ever beleive, or come to life, did beleive that day; The beleivers of a city, do not all come in thus, every one at the same time, but καθ' ἡμέραν daily, some one day, some another, Acts 2. 47. and some that were now negligent, or refractary, might after repent, and become more pliable, and Gods decree certainly would not shut them out, when they did so. 2dly, It is as unreasonable to determine, that all that did then beleive, and receive the Gospel, were predestined to eternall salvation, those that beleived at other times were not all predestined thus, Judas, we know, was not, Hymeneus was not, and beleiving here noting no more, then receiving the faith, without any consideration of their persevering, or not persevering, it is evident of the stony ground, and of a multitude of Christians, denoted thereby, that in time of temptation they fall away; and so are not (unlesse they return, and recover) predestin'd to salvation. 3dly, It is not to be thought, that Luke, which wrote this, knew of that whole assembly of Gentiles, how many were predestin'd to salvation, nor consequently could he affirme it of them in that sense, or that none should ever beleive, which this day did not, whereas on the other side, he might by the effect conclude, that all that were rightly qualified at that time, did at that time receive, and beleive the Gospel preacht to them, and all that did then truly beleive, were so qualified, the obstinate and contumacious Jews, and proselytes, opposing, and persecuting it. Mean while it must be remembred, that these qualifications are not pretended to have been originally from themselves, but from the preventing graces of God, to which it is to be acknowledged due, that they ever are pliable or willing to follow Christ, though not to his absolute decree of destining them whatsoever they do, unto salvation.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. XIV.

1. convinced them so powerfully, that great store both of the Jews and the Greeks, proselytes of the Jews, received the Faith.

1. AND it came to passe in Iconium, that they went both together into the Synagogue of the Jews, and [so spake that a great multitude both of the Jews, and also of the Greeks beleived.]

2. But the refractary Jewes incensed the Gentiles against the Apostles, v. 4. and all others which received the faith of Christ from them.

2. But the unbeleiving Jews * stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evill affected against the brethren.]

* stirred up the minds of the Gentiles, and made them evil affected ἐπήγειραν τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν ἐθνῶν καὶ ἐκάκωσαν αὐτὰς κατὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν

3. preaching the Gospel in their publick assemblies (see note on Joh. 7. a.) and God added his testimony to their preaching (see note on Heb. 13. c.) by enabling them to work miracles,

3. Long time therefore abode they [speaking † boldly in the Lord, which gave testimony unto the word of his grace, and granted signes and wonders to be done by their hands.]

† publickly through the Lord, which παῤῥησιαζόμενοι ἐπὶ τῷ κυρίῳ τῷ μαρτυροῦντι

4. But the multitude of the City was divided, and part held with the Jews, and part with the Apostles.

5. * And when there was an assault made both of the Gentiles and also of the Jews with the rulers, to use them dispightfully and to stone them,

6. They were ware of it, and fled unto Lystra, and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and unto the region that lyeth round about.

* And as the Gentiles & Jewes were bent, ὡς δὲ ἐγένετο ὁρμὴ τῶν ἐθνῶν καὶ Ἰουδ.

7. And there they preached the Gospel.

8. And there sate a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a creeple from his mothers wombe, who never had walked.

9. and Paul looking earnestly upon him, and either by his words, or by the discerning spirit which Paul had, perceiving that he beleived that they were able to heal him,

9. The same heard Paul speak, [who stedfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed,]

10. and by the bare speaking of the word he was made so strong, that he leaped and walked.

10. Said with a loud voyce, Stand up right on thy feet. [And he leaped and walked.]

11. the Gods, which all the nations worship, have put on the shape of men, and come down among us.

11. And when the people saw what Paul had done, they lift up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, [The Gods are come down to us in the likenesse of men.]

12. And Barnabas they looked on as Jupiter the supreme God, (see c. 8. 10.) and Paul as Mercury, the interpreter of the will of the Gods, because Paul did speak more then Barnabas did.

12. And they called Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul Mercurius, because he was the chiefe speaker.]

13. And the priest of Jupiter, whose statue was worshipped before the city, as the president of it, came presently to the gates of the house where Paul and Barnabas lodged, and brought oxen to sacrifice, and garlands to put upon their hornes, when they were to be killed, verily purposing to offer sacrifice to them.

13. Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before the city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and would have done sacrifice with the people.]

14. Which

14. Which when the Apostles Barnabas and Paul heard of, [they rent their clothes,] and ran in among the people, crying out,

14. they look upon it as an abhorred blasphemous thing, and rent their garments to expresse their sense and detestation of it,

15. And saying, Sirs, why doe ye these things? we also are men of like passions with you, and preach unto you, that ye should turn from these [vanities] unto the living God, which made heaven and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein,

15 idol-false-gods (so vain things signifie, Zach. 11. 17. see Act. 8. note d.)

16. Who in times past [suffered all nations to walk in their own waies.]

16. left the Gentiles to their own blind worships.

17. Nevertheless he left not himself without witnesse, in that he did good, and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitfull seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladnesse.]

17. And yet, while he did so, left he not off to evidence himself sufficiently to them, by that great goodnesse of his in temporall things, inviting and drawing them off from their impieties.

18. And with these sayings scarce restrained they] the people, that they had not done sacrifice unto them.

18. All which discourse of Paul and Barnabas could hardly restrain

19. And there came thither certain Jewes from Antioch and Iconium, who [perswaded the people, and having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead.]

19. gaind by fair words the multitude to be on their side, and to joyne with them against the Apostles, And so in a furious, tumultuary manner, they threw stones at Paul, and verily beleived they had killed him, In which posture, they took him, as a dead man, and dragg'd him out of the gates of the city.

20. Howbeit, as the Disciples stood round about him, he rose up and came into the city, and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.]

20. But as the Christians there came piously and solemnly to interre him, Paul being not dead all this while, v. 19. made use of that opportunity, when there were none but beleivers present, and he rose up, and went thence with them into the city, and the next day Barnabas and he went together to Derbe.

21. And when they had preached the Gospel to that city, and had [a] taught many,] they returned again to Lystra, and to Iconium, and Antioch,

[a] made a good many disciples, συμβαθητευσαντες ικανους

21. And having preached at Derbe, and converted many to the faith,

22. Confirming the soules of the Disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdome of God.]

22. And in all those cities gave confirmation to those whom before they had baptized, and exhorted them to persevere, and hold out against all terrors, counting and resolving with themselves that Christianity bringeth many tribulations necessarily along with it.

23. And when they had ordained them [a] Elders in every Church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they beleived.]

23. And having consecrated Bishops for them, (see note on c. 11. b.) one in every city, by fasting, and prayer, and imposition of hands, they then took their leave of them, referring them to the good providence of Christ, whose faith they had received, to defend them, and to encrease all good things in them.

24. And after they had passed throughout Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia.

25. And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia.

26. And thence sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God, for the work which they fulfilled.]

26. And they came back to Antioch, from whence it was that they were sent forth (ch. 13. 3.) on this voyage, and that with solemn prayer and fasting, for the preaching of the Gospel (see v. 3. and note on Heb. 13. c.) to these so many cities, of which they had now made an end, and so returned.

27. And when they were come, and had gathered the Church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them, [and how he had opened the dore of faith unto the Gentiles,]

27. And that it had pleased God, that by their preaching to the Jewes in the Gentile cities, many of the Gentiles had received Christianity.

28. And there they abode long time with the Disciples.

Notes on Chap. XIV.

2. χειροτονησαντες προσβυτερους

The word προσβυτερους here is not (as some think) the description or notation of the state of the men, before they were ordained, or of the qualifications, which made them fit to be installed Governours, viz: their being such, who were counted Elders of the people for wisdome, and knowledge of Christianity, but χειροτονειν προσβυτερους is to consecrate or ordain Governours by imposition of hands, to make them such, that were not so before, to invest and endow them with authority in the Church. The word χειροτονειν literally signifies, to stretch out the hand, or hold it up, and signified among the antient Greeks, choosing, or giving of sentence, or suffrages, which in popular elections, or judicatures, was done after this manner. But this being the original of the word, it is (as is ordinary with other words) somewhat enlarged, and changed in the ordinary usage of other writers, Jewish, and Christian, and signifies indifferently Constituting, or Ordaining, without any intimation of suffrages, or plurality of persons, or voices, by whom this Ordination is made. This may best appear by some testimonies of those writers which were neareſt the times, and the style of the New Testament. Thus saith Philo Judæus of Joseph, Βασιλευς υπαρχων ὑπο χειροτονιας, He was (not by any votes, or suffrages of many, but by the act of Pharaoh the King) constituted Governour of all Æ-

χειροτονιαν

gypt under the King. So of Moſes ἡγεμὼν ἐχειροτονήθη, he was (by God certainly, without any ſuffrages of others) conſtituted the Ruler of the Iſraelites. So of Aarons ſonnes ἱερεῖς ἐχειροτόνησε, God (without any concurrence, or choiſe of others) choſe them Prieſts. So Lucian of Alexanders kindneſs to Hephaſtion θεὸν χειροτονῆσαι † τελευτήσαντα, he made him a God when he was dead, which ſure was a ſingle act of Alexanders, was not done by voices or ſuffrages, In all theſe places, the Ordination being an act of ſome one perſon, Pharaoh, God, Alexander, the word is capable of no other notion. In like manner, when the word is uſed of the Roman affaires, as in Appian, and Dio we know it is, it muſt needs be taken in this ſenſe, becauſe that ceremony of lifting up, or ſtretching out hands in elections, was not in uſe among them. And thus it is uſed in this place, not of any multitude or number of men, to whom ſuffrages might belong, but of Paul, and Barnabas, who did it by joynt conſent and there is no other poſſible way for two to vote any thing, As for the ſuffrages of any others, if ſuch could be imagined to have interpoſed here, it would not then be Paul and Barnabas, but thoſe others, who did χειροτονῆν, ſtretch out their hands, or give the ſuffrages. And for Paul and Barnabas to doe it by the ſuffrages of others, this is farre from the original uſe of the word from whence it pretends to be concluded, for where χειροτονία in the primitive ſenſe is uſed of chooſing by ſuffrages, (as in popular elections, &c.) it is certain that their own, not others ſuffrages are meant by it. And therefore χειροτονῆν is by Heſychius rendred καθιστᾶν to conſtitute (as well as χωρίζειν to elect) and ſo it is here all one directly [χειροτονῆν πρεσβυτέρους to ordain Elders.] as Tit. 1. 5. καταστῆσαι πρεσβυτέρους to conſtitute Elders, And thus the word is clearly uſed Act. 10. 41. where προχειροτονηθεῖσι being ſpoken of the Apoſtles being whether fore-ordained, or fore-choſen of God to be witneſſes of Chriſts reſurrection, muſt needs be without votes or ſuffrages; and accordingly Theophylact on 2 Tim. 1. 6. inſtead of S. Pauls [διὰ ἐπιθέσεως τῶν χειρῶν μου, by impoſition of my hands] hath [διὰ τοῦ ἐχειροτονῆσθαί σε ἐπίσκοπον, when I ordained thee Biſhop] And though 2 Cor. 8. 19. it be uſed of the Churches conſtituting one to travail with S. Paul, yet is this no variation from the preſent notion of it, the word ſignifying to ordain, or elect, or conſtitute indifferently, whether it be done by God, or one, or more men, or by the whole Church. Now for the κατ' ἐκλησίαν, it is beſt rendred Church by Church, i. e. in every Church one Elder, or Biſhop, and ſo χειροτονῆν πρεσβυτέρους κατ' ἐκλησίαν, to ordaine Elders in every Church] is all one with καταστῆσαι πρεσβυτέρους κατὰ πόλιν, to conſtitute Elders in every city, Tit. 1. 5. Every city having a Biſhop in it, and ſo being called a Church, to which the beleivers in all the parts about it belonged, and that Biſhop having power to make as many inferiour officers in that Church, as he thought good. Of the notion of πρεσβύτερος, ſee note on ch. 11. b.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XV.

1. And ſome converted, or Chriſtian Jewes, which though they beleived in Chriſt, yet thought themſelves ſtill bound to the obſervation of the whole Moſaicall law, told thoſe of the Gentile proſelytes v. 19. that were converted to the faith of Chriſt alſo, (of whom ſome, i.e. the proſelytes of the gates, were not wont to be circumciſed, but only ſubſcribed to the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Noah) that they muſt be complete proſelytes of the Jewes, ſubmit to their whole law, and ſo be circumciſed, &c. or elſe they could not be ſaved.

1. AND certain men which came down from Judæa, taught the brethren, and ſaid, Except ye be circumciſed after the manner of Moſes, ye cannot be ſaved.]

2. And Paul & Barnabas oppoſed theſe, and the matter being turned into a queſtion, and that undecidable among themſelves, neither yeilding to the other, it was neceſſary to appeal to Jeruſalem, under which, as the prime Metropolis, the Jewes of all Syria and ſo Antioch were, And accordingly the Church-Governours of Antioch determined to ſend up Paul and Barnabas, and ſome others with them, to the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and the Apoſtles that were there, and the other Biſhops of Judæa (ſee note on ch. 11. b.) belonging to that Metropolis, to adviſe whether the Gentiles that received the faith, and lived among the Jewiſh beleivers, ſhould be bound to be circumciſed, or no.

2. When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no ſmall diſſenſion and diſputation with them, they determined that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them ſhould goe up to Jeruſalem, unto the Apoſtles and Elders about this queſtion.]

3. And the Church bore the charges of their journey, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 16. 2) and as they went through Phœnice and Samaria, they told them the great newes, that occaſioned this their journey, the coming in of the Gentiles to the Faith, and all the Chriſtians were very much joyed at it.

3. And being * brought on their way by the Church, they paſſed through Phœnice and Samaria, declaring the converſion of the Gentiles, and they cauſed great joy unto all the brethren.]

* ſet forth προπεμφθέντες

4, 5. And when they came to Jeruſalem, they were kindly received by the Chriſtians there, and particularly by James the brother of the Lord, then Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and thence called an Apoſtle (ſee note on the title of the Epiſtle of James, b. & note on 1 Cor. 15. a.) by Peter v. 7. and by John Gal. 1. 9. remaining there at that time, and by all the Biſhops of Judæa (ſee ch. 11. note b.) and began their meſſage by telling them alſo, what ſucceſſe God had given to their preaching among the Gentiles, And how that when the Gentiles, proſelytes, or others, uncircumciſed, came in to the Faith, ſome Judaizing Chriſtians, of the ſect of the Phariſees, ſaid, that ſuch of the Gentiles, as came in to the faith of Chriſt, were to be obliged to receive circumciſion, and to obſerve, not only the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Noah, but alſo all the ceremonies of the whole Judaical law.

4. And when they were come to Jeruſalem, they were received of the Church, and of the Apoſtles and Elders, and they declared all things that God had done with them,

5. But there roſe up certain of the ſect of the Phariſees, which beleived, ſaying, that it was needfull to circumciſe them, and to command them to keep the law of Moſes.]

6. And

6. And the Apostles and Elders came together for to consider of this matter.] 6. Hereupon James the Bishop of Jerusalem, and Peter, and John, the Apostles (see note on 1 Cor. 15. a. Rev. 4. g. Gal. 2. d.) and the Bishops of Judea met in councel, to deliberate, and debate about this difficulty.

7. And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while agoe, God made choice among us, that [the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the Gospel and beleive.] 7. some uncircumcised proselytes, Cornelius, and his family, Act. 10. should have the Gospel preached to them, and accordingly had, and received the faith, and never were circumcised.

8. And God which knoweth the hearts, bare them witnesse, giving them the holy Ghost even as he did unto us.] 8. And God, that knew the sincerity of their hearts, testified that they were beleivers, such as were acceptable to him (though they were not circumcised) and fit to be baptized, giving them that great witnesse from heaven, sending down the holy Ghost upon them in like manner as he was before sent down upon the Apostles. Act. 10. 44.

9. And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith.] 9. And dealt with them just as with us, making no difference between us and them, but by the Christian doctrine by them received and entertained, did the same thing on them (farre more effectually) for which all the Jewish rites (particularly circumcision) were first ordained, i.e. took them off from all their heathen sinnes.

10. Now therefore, why tempt ye God to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers, nor we were able to bear?] 10. This one evidence is sufficient to conclude this whole debate, For is not the thing already determined by that one act of God's giving the holy Ghost to the Gentiles? That sure makes it evident that there is no difference betwixt us Jewes and them, Why then doe ye presse that which is so contrary to the will of God? why doe ye refuse to beleive that which is so testified to be his will, and so in effect require more arguments of this, as of a matter still uncertain, and thereby tempt God, (see note on Mat. 4. c.) and think to impose upon Christians of the nations the performance of the whole Mosaicall law, which belonged not to them, and which we Jewes were never able to perform, so as to be justified thereby.

11. But we beleive that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, we shall be saved, even as they.] 11. 'Tis by the Gospel (see ch. 11. 23.) that we expect justification and salvation, through faith and obedience to Christ, and not by Mosaical performances; and so they, if they beleive, have the same way to salvation as we.

12. Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.] 12. After this, the next thing was, that Paul & Barnabas declared in like manner, what miracles God had enabled them also to doe in the converting of the Gentiles, which was another argument and testimony from heaven, that no difference was to be put between Jewes and Gentiles.

13. And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying,] Men and brethren, hearken unto me. 13. And next after them James the Just, the brother of the Lord, the then Bishop of Hierusalem began to speak, saying,

14. Simeon hath declared how God at the first * did [a] visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name.] 14. Peter hath sufficiently demonstrated that it was the will of God (in that case of Cornelius) that the Gentiles should without any scruple have the Gospel preached to them, and be baptized, and received into the Church.

15. And to this agree the words of the Prophet, as it is written,] 15. And this is agreeable to what had been foretold by the old prophets, for so Am. 9. 11. they are the words of God,

16. After this I will return, and will build up the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruines thereof, and I will set it up,
17. That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doth all these things.] 16, 17. In the latter daies (the age of the Messias wherein now we are) I will rebuild me a Church among the Jewes, those few of them who shall beleive in Christ, who together with the beleiving Gentiles shall become my people, saith the Lord Jehovah, whose wonderfull work this is, to make the Jewes and Gentiles one people, and who doth very well like, that Jewes and Gentiles should be thus united, though formerly he had made some difference between them.

18. Known unto God † are all his works from the beginning of the world.] 18. This, though it were not brought to passe actually till these later daies, was yet foreseen and predetermined by God long agoe, and accordingly thus foretold through revelation from God by that prophet.

19. Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God.
20. But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of Idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled and from blood *.] 19, 20. Therefore my conclusion and determination is, that we should not require, or force them to be circumcised, who from Gentiles turn Christians, but content our selves that they receive the precepts of the sons of Noah only, as proselytes of the gates are wont to doe.

21. For Moses † of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day.] 21. Nor need we Jews to fear that this will bring a contempt upon Moses or the law of the Jewes, For the contrary appears by the Christian practise, even where these proselytes of the Gentiles are, There the books of Moses, as hath been customary from of old, are still continued among them, to be read aloud in the synagogue every saturday, (to which the councell of Laodicea did after adde the reading of a Chapter in the New Testament) to signifie their respect to the Mosaicall law, and their not offering it contempt among the proselytes, though they did not require them to be circumcised.

Notes on Chap. XV.

2. Ἐπιτίθεται λαοῖς

Ἐπιτίθεται] in the Septuagint, joyned with an infinitive verbe, not an accusative nounе after it, signifies to be pleased, to delight, Ier. 32. 41. ἐπιτεθήσομαι ἀγαθῦναι, where the Hebrew hath, ושמחתי, and I will rejoyce, or delight. It is true the word signifies to visite, Luke. 1. 68. and that may be thought also to have at some distance an infinitive, ποιῆσαι ἔλεος, to shew mercy] after it, v. 72. But ἐπιτίθεται λαβεῖν λαὸν] here is another kind of phrase, ἐπιτίθεται hath no nounе after it, but onely, and immediately an infinitive mood, and so is parallel onely to that before mentioned in the Septuagint, and so in reason must be interpreted.

b. Ἀναστατοῦν ψυχὰς

Ἀναστατοῦντες ψυχὰς is to remove or transferre (as Gal. 1. 6.) men's minds, to carry them from one object to another: so Hesychius ἀναστατοῦν μετανδρίνας it signifies to transpose, and Budæus, that it is properly of those, who gather up their goods, and goe some whither else, and again Hesychius, ἀναστατούμενοι, μετακιζόμενοι removing to some other place, and so here to infuse some new false doctrine into them.

c. Ἀπαγγέλλοντας Ἀποστρεφόμενος Γενηθῆναι Ἐρχόμενος Ἐκλείποντος Θεωρεῖτε Ἔρχομαι Ἐκκόπτεται

The participle present ἀπαγγέλλοντας] is here used in the sense of the future, who shall tell, dicturos: And so 'tis frequent in these writers. Act. 21. 3. ὅτι ἦν τὸ πλοῖον ἀποφορτιζόμενον, &c. where the ship was to be unladed of its burthen, and so Mat. 2. 4. ποῦ γενηται; where is Christ to be born? and 1 Cor. 15. 35. πῶς ἐγείρονται, and ἔρχονται; how can it be that the dead shall be raised, and with what body shall they come? So Iob: 14. 19. ye see me, and the world seeth me no more, Θεωρεῖτε in the present tence, where the sense is, ye shall, and the world shall not see me, in the future, and again v. 28. ye have heard that I said to you, I go away and I come unto you, i. e. that I am to goe, and shall after that again return to you. So Mat. 3. 10. every tree that beareth not good fruit, ἐκκόπτεται is (i. e. is to be, must be, shall be) cut down &c.

d. Ἀνέχεσθαι εἰδωλοθύτων &c.

To what hath been said of the Proselytes among the Jews in many places (all referred to note on c. 10. a) more must now be added for the explication of this Canon of the Councell at Jerusalem. For the question being, whether the Gentiles that turned Christians should be bound to all those things which were required of the proselytes of justice, or onely those things which were required of the proselytes of the gates, and the Apostles answer being in these words, that they should be bound to no more but these necessary things, to abstain &c. The question will be, what those particulars, that are there named, belong to. To which the answer must be by setting down, what was required of each of those sorts of Proselytes: Of the former sort 'tis sufficiently known that it was required, that they should submit to the whole Mosaicall Law, to be circumcised, &c. as appears by the ground of this quarrel or dispute here, at the beginning of the chapter. And to this purpose 'tis observable that the Epistle which is extant, and affirmed to be written by this Barnabas, here mentioned, doth principally insist upon the no necessity of circumcision in Christians, (see §. 7.) and §. 2. hath these words, In hoc providens est & misericors Deus, quia in simplicitate crediturus erat populus, quem comparavit dilecto suo, atque ostendit omnibus nobis, ut non incurramus tanquam Proselyti ad illorum legem. 'Tis Gods mercy that the people which he purchased for his son should beleive in simplicity and not as proselytes (of the Jews, of this first kind) runn to their law. Of the second sort of Proselytes 'tis as much acknowledged, that there was no more required, then the observation of sixe precepts given to the sons of Adam, and the seventh, superadded to the sons of Noah, all together styled the seven precepts of the sons of Noah, which were these; The first עבודה זרה על, of strange worship, or of renouncing the Idolatry of the heathens, the not worshipping other Gods. The second ברוך השם על, of the benediction, (i. e. the worship) of the name, i. e. the true God. The third דינים על, of judgments, or administration of justice. The fourth גלוי ערוות על of discloſing nakednesse, i. e. of abstaining from all uncleanesse. The fift שפיכות דמים על, of shedding blood, or against homicide. The sixt הגזל על, of theft or rapine, and doing as they would be done to, by others. The seventh אבר מן חתך a member of any live creature, or that they should not eate the flesh of any creature with the blood in it, a ceremony chosen by God as a means to keep them in detestation, and abhorrence of the sin of homicide occasioned probably by the bloudyneſse that was among the men of the old world, and accordingly given to Noah after the flood, Gen. 9. 4. and consequently to all the proselytes among the Jews. Lu. 17. 10. Now that the observation of the whole law, particularly circumcision (the matter of the question, and the character of the first kinde of proselytes) was not required here by the Apostles, 'tis clear, It followes therefore that it must be onely the second sort, the observation of the precepts of the sons of Adam and Noah. Of which 'tis clear that some are here named, and it were sufficient to say that those some might be set down to signifie all the rest, though they were not expresly mentioned, As in Phocylides, 'tis not unreasonable to say, that that verse of his,

not to eate blood, and to abstain from the Idol-sacrifices, denotes the whole number of these seven precepts. But it is possible we may goe farther in this matter, matter, and finde all the whole number of the seven here set down; thus, The command to abstain from things offered to Idols] contains the two first precepts, that of rejecting Idols, and worshipping the true God; The worshipping the true God, is the affirmative part of the precept, and must be supposed, cannot be left out when all the Idol-worships are prohibited, and therefore are they prohibited that the true God may not have a rival in his worship, which therefore must comprehend the precept of worshipping him. And for the negative part of the precept, the rejecting of Idols, or the not worshipping them, that is contained in the abstaining from things offered to them, for the feasts being a part of the Gentile sacrifices, or a table for the worshippers, being always furnisht with the remainders of the sacrifices, the abstaining from those feasts, was the abstaining from that worship, and therfore 1 Cor. 10 14. when the Apostle saith, fly from Idolatry, it is clear by the consequents, v. 19. 20. that this abstinence from the Idol-feasts, together with the consequents thereof, is the thing forbidden by him. Then the command to abstain from blond, is the fift of those precepts, the solemn prohibition of Murder or of the effusion of mans blond, Gen. 9. 6. given before to the sons of Adam, and there renewed to Noah. Thirdly that of things strangled, is the seventh of those, Gen. 9. 4. Flesh with the life thereof, which is the blond, ye shall not eate. A ceremony superadded to that former precept of not shedding mans blond, to hedge it in, and secure it now, having as 'tis probable, been so foully broken by the Giants before the flood, Gen. 6. 4. So again in the Judaicall law, Thou shalt not eat the flesh in the blood, but powre out the blond of every beast upon the ground, Lev. 17. 13. Fourthly, that of fornication, is the fourth of those, containing the interdict of all unnaturall pollutions, especially such as the Gentiles were so generally immerst in, All which are, here and in many other places, meant by πορνεία fornication, according as Thomas Magister makes πορνὸς, a proper word to render κιναιδὸς by. To which if we adde those words which some editions adde after these (the Complutensis out of three or four very antient Manuscripts and particularly Beza's venerable Greek and Latine one, as we have noted) and which the Æthiopick and other interpreters retain, viz.: καὶ ὅσα μὴ θέλουσιν ἑαυτοῖς γίνεσθαι ἑτέρῳ μὴ ποιεῖν, what you would not have done to your selves, do not ye to another, that will be verbatim that other precept of theft or rapin, for which other Jewish writers read, doing as they would be done to. And so we know that thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy self, Mat. 19. 19. is set in stead of μὴ ἀποστερήσῃς, thou shalt not defraud or deprive, in the parallel Mar. 10. 19. As for that de judiciis that might reasonably be left out, now that the Jews were every where under the Roman power, and they that came from Gentilisme to Christianity were not to change their obedience to Magistrates; However all that could be their duty to do in this respect, was to live justly with one another (not to subject themselves to the judicial laws of the Iews, which they were never concerned in) and that was the summe of the former precept of doing as they would be done to, and therefore may very well be reduced to it. And so all the seven precepts will be here contained. By this it appears, 1. what was the direct importance of this Jerusalem-Canon, viz. that the Gentile Christians should not be obliged to the lawes of the first sort of proselytisme, to circumcision and the like Judaicall observances, concerning which was the only question, v. 1. And this one thing they are pleased thus to expresse, that the observations that belonged to the second sort of proselytisme, were all that were proposed to the Gentile Christians, and nothing besides, the whole weight of the Canon (as of the Question brought before the Councell) lying on these words in the beginning of it, Ἔδοξε μηδὲν πλέον ἐπιτιθέναι ὑμῖν βάρος, We have defined that no more weight be laid on you, i. e. that Circumcision &c. be not imposed, where if it be asked, whether they were not here commanded to abstein from things strangled and offered to Idols, &c. I answer by these degrees, 1. that those things which by the Law of nature, or positive law of God, given to all the sonnes of Adam, were before commanded to all mankinde, did no doubt remain in force, and oblige those Gentiles that had received the faith, and of this sort are all that are here named, but that one of abstaining from things strangled. For as for that of things offered to Idols, which being sometimes sold in the shambles are elsewhere defined by S. Paul to be indifferent, 1 Cor. 10. 25. this belongs not to this matter, where abstaining from the Idol-sacrifices, i. e. from joyning with Idolaters in their feasts, or sacrifices, is the thing forbidden, and is therefore expresst by Iames, in the first draught of this Canon, v. 19. by abstaining from the ἀλισγήματα τῶν εἰδώλων, the pollutions of Idols, their abominable Idol feasts, or the μερίδες portions, the taking and eating of which, as such, was a partaking of the Idol-feasts, or of the table of devils. 2*dly*. That they, who were concerned in this question, and to whom the decree was sent, did already observe these seven precepts of the sonnes of Noah, and therefore needed not be commanded by the Councel to observe them. This appears 1. in that the Apostle, when he preacht in any city, did it as yet in the Synagogues of the Iews, whither the Gentiles could not come, unlesse they were Proselytes of the gates, and so had received these seven precepts, see c. 13. 5. 14. 16. 26. 42, 43. and c. 14. 1. And accordingly it is set in the words of the decree, v. 29. ἐξ ὧν διατηροῦντες ἑαυτοὺς, εὖ πράξετε, from which keeping your selves, ye shall do well, noting them to keep them (in the present tence) already, as all such Proselytes did. Thirdly, as there was no need of making any command to them, who did it already, so the words are not delivered in form of precept, but only so, as to pronounce them free from any further obligation, doing this, which you do already, ye shall do well, i. e. no more shall be imposed upon you. Here, I suppose, it will be objected, that the abstaining from these here named, and so from the [things strangled] which is one of them, is called these necessary things, and therefore that these are lookt on as necessary for Gentile Christians, To which I answer, that the word [necessary] must here be interpreted by the context, not [necessary to all Christians] but [necessary to all Proselytes of the Iews] and then the mention of that will signifie no more, but that the observing those seven precepts was necessary to the lowest ſort of Jewiſh proſelytes, thoſe of the gates, not that it was here required of the Chriſtians, being, as was ſaid, already performed by them, and the deſigne of the Canon being only to pronounce their liberty, or that circumciſion was not required of them, and medling no farther, unleſſe by way of counſell, (as the ἐπιστεῖλαι writing to them v.20. may import) not of command, thus farre, at the preſent, to comply with the Jewes, for unity and amity ſake, to doe what the loweſt ſort of their proſelytes did, that ſo they might not abhorre them as profane perſons, and refuſe to live among them. This perſon, with his mother Helen, was converted to the Iewiſh religion, and thinking that he was not a perfect Iew, unleſſe he were circumciſed, told Ananias, who had inſtructed him in the Iewiſh religion, how willing he was to be circumciſed. This Ananias perſwaded him from ſo doing, becauſe it might aliene the minds of his people from him, and threatned that he would leave him, unleſſe he gave over that purpoſe, told him that he might pioufly worſhip God (i. e. in the ſcripture phraſe, be an ἰουδαῖος and σεβόμενος, a worſhipper, or proſelyte of the Iewes) without being circumciſed, that religion conſiſted more in this, then in the circumciſion of the fleſh, that God would pardon the omiſſion of that ſcale, when neceſſity ſo required, and conſequently when ſuch a danger, as the defection of his ſubjects, was conſequent to it, And by this means he quieted his mind. But after this, comes one Eleazar a Galilaan out of Judea, one counted very skilfull in the law, and he finding the King reading Moſes's books, preſently thus aſſaults him, Doe you know, Sir, what injury you doe to the law, and ſo to God? 'tis not enough to know God's commands, unleſſe you practiſe them, How long will you remain uncircumciſed? If you have never yet read the law, which commands circumciſion, read it now, that you may know what an impiety 'tis to omit it. This preſently perſwaded the King, who went accordingly into a chamber, and cauſed a Chirurgeon to circumciſe him.

Notes on Chap. XVI.

a. Προσευχὴ

That προσευχὴ signifies a place set apart, or accustomed for the service of God, there is little question, so προσευχὰς κατὰ πόλεις building Oratories, in the 3. book of Maccab: and so perhaps προσευχῇ τῇ Θεῷ, signifies Lu.6.12. And from the ordinarinesse of that use of the word for praying places, it is that Juvenal hath made use of it, for a begging place, or a corner, or porch, where beggers meet, in quâ te quæro proſenchâ? and Cleomedes l.1. c.1. speaking of some strange words and forms of speech, used by Epicurus, saith they are such as are fetcht from the middle of a proſencha, from those that use to deprecate there, like those of the Jewes, saith he, much more humble, then those that creep upon the ground. The custome of building such, is said to come from the fact of Isaac,

*Gen.*24.62,63. where 'tis ſaid that he went out into the field, to a well to pray, ſaith the Chaldee paraphraſe, and therefore they built theſe proſeucha in fields for the moſt part, neer fountains, or rivers, or brooks-ſides, which the Idolaters imitated, Iſa. 57.6. (and ſuch perhaps it was where they prayed ch.21.5. a little way without the city, and upon a ſhore) Or on mountains, as that *Lu.*6. which the Idolaters imitated alſo. Now that this here was ſuch an one, will appear not onely by that which is here ſaid of Paul, that he ſate down, and ſpake to the women, making it a place not to pray, but to preach, but alſo by the expreſſe words of Epiphanius, t.2.l.3. c.80. There were, ſaith he, anciently ſome places of prayer without the city, both in Judea, and among the Samaritans, and there is a place of prayer in Shechem, (which is now called Neapolis) without the city, &c. Which is neer this very place, which is here ſpoken of, v.11. Beſides, the Syriack is diſtinct and punctuall in rendring it, בת צלותא a houſe of prayer. All the difficulty will be, what is the meaning of ἐνομίζετο τοῦ, which is here added. The Syriack reads becauſe there ſeemed to be an houſe of prayer, and ſo the antient Greek and Latine MS. reads ἦν ἐκεῖ, which may be interpreted either that there was an oratory there, (as ἔχειν, and videri are oft but expletives, ſee note on Mat. 3.c.) or elſe that in their paſſage to Philippi, as they came from Neapolis, there ſeemed to them to be ſuch a place, or they ſaw it by the way. The King's MS. that reads ἐνομίζομεν, we thought, agrees fully with this ſenſe, we thought] being all one with [it ſeemed to us.] But if the ordinary reading be retained, then νομίζειν, ſaith Budeus, ſignifies in famâ aut exiſtimatione eſſe, and then 'twill be beſt rendred, where an houſe of prayer was fam'd or reputed to be. There is alſo another notion of the word, for conſecrating, and ſo νομιζόμενοι δάλοι τοῦ ἱεροῦ, are the conſecrated boughs of the Temple, 2 *Mac.*14.4. but that ſeems not ſo proper for this place.

b. Πύθων ἐνθεον. Python was a name of the city Delphos, where oracles were delivered by the Devil, and they that prophecied there, were called by that name Πύθωνες Pythons, From thence the word was accommodated to other ſorts of diviners, eſpecially to the ἐγγαστριμύθοις theſe out of whoſe bellies (as the Oracles out of caves) the devil ſpake. Of theſe ſee Photii Epiſt: pra. p.106. Τὸ ἐμφωλεῦον τῇ ἀνθρωπίνῃ γαστρὶ πνεῦμα, καὶ ἄξιον ἅμα καὶ κατοικίαν ἔχον ἰσχίων, ἀκάθαρτον πνεῦμα, λίαν ἐμφρόνως περιφερόμενοι ἐγγαστρίμυθον, The wicked and unclean ſpirit, that inhabits a mans belly as a ſerpent his hole in the earth, and being unclean is fit to dwell in that place which is the receptacle of ordure, they appoſitely call Engaſtrimuthum. This, ſaith he, the Grecians commonly call ἐντερόμαντιν, the diviner from the guts, others ἐγγαστρίμαντιν, the diviner in the belly, But Sophocles and Plato being aſhamed that their Dæmon ſhould have ſuch a dwelling, one of them, ἀντὶ γαστρὸς αὐτῷ τὸ στέρνον χαριζόμενος, στερνόμαντιν μᾶλλον ἐκάλεσεν, inſtead of the belly allow'd him the breaſt, and called him the diviner out of the breaſt, and the other called every ſuch by the name of Eurycles, a perſon who had been famous for this, and ſo tranſmitted the appellation to all other the like. And of this kind of devil ſaith he, which loves to dwell in the ordure both of men and women, Λοιδορεῖσθαι τοῦτ᾽ ἐστὶ τῆς ἐχούσης ἀπωλείας τῆς περιέχειν δυνᾷ ἀκαθαρσίαις ἥδεσθαι, It is a great deceiver of people, and author of deſtruction to all that give eare to it. That this is it, which is here meant by Πύθωνος πνεῦμα, the ſpirit of Python, appears by Heſychius, being read, as that place ought to be, Ἐγγαστρίμυθος —(not as we now read without any ſenſe, τέτον ἡμεῖς πίστον ἐκ καλοῦμεν, but) τοῦτον ἡμεῖς Πύθωνα νῦν καλοῦμεν, we now call this Python, Theſe the Hebrew calls אובים, from אוב the belly, and the reaſon is rendred by Galen, becauſe they ſpeak without opening their mouth, and ſo ſeem to ſpeak out of the belly. Theſe are they that have *familiar ſpirits Lev.*19.31.

c. Ῥαβδίζεσθαι ὑμᾶς. Among the rites of ſcourging, this of rending the garments aſunder, is mention'd for one, in Miſchna, c.3. Both hands are tied to the pillar on both ſides, then the officer of the ſynagogue, the ὑπηρέτης, the miniſter, i.e. lictor, takes hold of his garments, not caring whether he tear, or rip them, till his breaſt be quite uncovered. And the Roman faſhion was agreeable.

12. Therefore many of them beleived, also of honourable women, which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.]

12. Many therefore of those Jewes received the faith, and so likewise of the Gentiles many of the better sort, both women and men.

30. And tis certainly long enough, that men have gone on in ſuch prodigious conceits as this, Be it therefore now known unto you, that there is place of repentance, if you will make haſt to accept it, For God not looking, or faſtning his eyes upon the continued idolatry of the heathens for many years, (which might provoke him to deſert them forever) now ſends us to you their progeny, to call you to repentance, enters a new covenant with you, as well as others, a covenant of free pardon upon reformation.

Notes on Chap. XVII:

2. κατείδωλος πόλις] is a city full of images, or idols, or altars erected to the Gods, and much given to the worſhip of them, That Athens was ſuch, appears by Pauſanias, the number of the Simulacra, or εἴδωλα there, being more then in all Greece beſides, ſo ſaith Philoſtratus in Apollonius's travail thither, φιλόθυτος τοῦ Ἀθηναίους εἶδεν, de vit: Apollon: l. 4. c. 6. he ſaw the Athenians were lovers of devotion, of ſacrificing, &c. ſo ſaith Pauſanias that they did ἐυσεβῆν θεοὺς ἄλλων πλέον, expreſſe more piety to the Gods then any, and preſently adds, as an evidence of their piety, that they had altars αἴδους, φήμης, καὶ ὁρμῆς, of Baſhfulneſs, of Fame, and of Deſire, and again Ἀθηναίοις σπουδαιότερον τι ἢ τοῖς ἄλλοις εἰς τὰ θεῖα ἔστι σπουδῆς, they exceed all in their diligence about the Gods. So Strabo Ἀθηναῖοι δ' ὥσπερ οἱ τὰ ἄλλα φιλοξενοῦντες διαλιλεῖπται, οὕτω καὶ οἱ πρὸς θεοὺς, Πολλὰ γὰρ ξενικῶν ἱερῶν παραδέχονται, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐπωμοσάμενοι, Their hoſpitality to ſtrangers extends to the Gods too, being very ready to receive in any ſtrange worſhips, Whereas Dionyſius Halic: ſpeaking of the Romans, ſaith, they did rather μισοξενεῖν οἱ θεοὶ, then φιλοξενεῖν, were very unkind and unhoſpitable to ſtrange Gods. And Maximus Tyrius διαλ: λβ'. ὁ Ἀθηναίων δῆμος ὑπερεχαύνα δαιμόνια ἐπεισφέρων, The common people of Athens brought in other new Gods. And Joſephus 2. cont: Appion: Ἀθηναίους τε Ἑλλήνων ἐυσεβεστάτους πάντες λέγουσιν, All men ſay that the Athenians are the moſt pious of all the Gracians; and Sophocles Oedip: Col: Οὗ δ' ἵππιός τις γῆ θεὸς δέδοκται Τιμαῖς ζαβάζειν, ἥτις ἐνδόξοις, This city goes beyond all in worſhipping and honouring the Gods. This here is the meaning of δεισιδαιμονεστέρους ὑμᾶς θεωρῶ, v. 23. I ſee you more addicted to the worſhip of the Gods then others, as it farther appears by their ζεβασμάτα, which Paul in paſſage takes notice of, v. 23. (not their worſhipt, or their altars, but their Idols, i.e. their deities themſelves, for ſo the word is uſed Wiſd. 14. 20. ſee 2 Theſſ. 2. note f.) among which, ſaith he, was an altar To an unknown God. — ζεβάσματα

p. 15.

The notion of the word ζωμολόγος (all one with ζοφωνόμος) is clear by the concurrence of the Grammarians in their explication of the Attick word, as it is proverbially uſed among them, and by the Greek fathers upon this place, both generally agreeing, that the word primarily ſignifies εἶδος ὄρνεου, a ſort of bird, that was wont to be about the ſtreets, λαβαίνον τὰ σπέρματα picking up the ſeeds. So Oecumenius and Phavorinus; from whence, ſay they, the Attick writers applied the word proverbially to thoſe that doe οἱ ἐμπειρα καὶ ἀγυιὰς διατρίβουσιν, ſpend their time in the ſtreets, at faires, and markets, i.e. very idly, and from hence, ſay they, it comes to ſignifie τοὺς ὑπερηλίους καὶ εὐτελεῖς λόγου ἀξίους, mean, vile perſons, that are worth nothing, And ſo Euſtathius on Homer Ὀδυσσ: ε'. — h. ζωμολόγος

That

c. Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἀνάστασιν] That Jesus and ἀνάστασις, the resurrection] were by them taken to be (both of them) δαιμόνια ξενὰ, new or strange Gods, is not onely affirmed by some of the fathers, but very reasonable to beleive, when we remember out of Pausanias, that αἰδὼς and φόβος, and ἵμερος, Modesty, and Fame, and Vehement desire, were Gods, and had altars erected to them by these Athenians, see note a.

d. Ἀρείου πάγου] Their Areopagus was their Senate, or court of judicature, sitting in Mars's street in Athens, by whose lawes and orders any new Gods were received among them, and therefore assoon as they conceived that Paul was καταγγελεὺς ξένων δαιμονίων, a promulger of new strange deities, they bring him to the Areopagus, to have him examined, what Gods they were, that he thus preacht.

e. δεισιδαιμονία] What is the notion of δεισιδαιμονία superstition, doth here deserve to be considered, And by what hath been said of εὐσεβὴς (note a.) 'twill soon appear that in this place [δεισιδαιμονεστέρους more superstitious then ordinary] signifying the worship of more Gods, then other cities worshipt, the positive δεισιδαίμων, and the substantive δεισιδαιμονία must denote no more then the worship of God; and accordingly it followes v.23. ὃν οὖν ἀγνοοῦντες, whom ye worship, ἀγνοοῦντες not knowing who it was. Thus ch.25.19. Festus or S. Luke in his story, saith, that the Jewes had certain ζητήματα questions, or accusations against Paul περὶ τῆς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας concerning his own religion or superstition, or worship peculiar to him from them, and (as it follows to explain what he meant by the word) περὶ τινὸς Ἰησοῦ τεθνηκότος, of one Jesus that was dead, putting him under the vulgar notion of a δαίμων or dead Heros, and so meaning the worship of him by δεισιδαιμονία. Thus in the Greek and Latine Lexicon at the end of Cyril, Δεισιδαιμονία superstitio, religio, rendring it indifferently by those two; So in Athenæus δεισιδαιμονία θεοσεβείας, is religione teneri, to be held by religion, and so rendred by Budæus, as δεισιδαιμονία is rendred Religio by Cicero, and in an antient glossary δεισιδαίμων θεοσεβὴς. It signifies a worshipper of the Gods. And the word being compounded of δαίμων, and δείδω to fear, it is rendred by Hesychius φοβούμενος, fearing God or religion, by others φόβος θεῶν ἢ δαιμόνων the fear of Gods and Demons, but this Fear sometimes in an ill sense, for cowardise, and so saith the Etymologist δεισιδαίμων ὑπολήψεις ἢ δείλης περὶ θεὸν, both pious and cowardly toward the Gods, and Clemens, ἡ γὰρ δεισιδαιμονία πάθος, Strom: p. 377. Superstition is a passion, being a fear of the demons, and Theophrastus, char: περὶ δεισιδ: δείλη φόβος τὸ δαιμόνιον ὄν, 'tis a cowardly fear of, or toward the demon, and accordingly Maximus Tyrius having compared a pious man to a friend, a superstitious to a flatterer, [ὁ μὲν εὐσεβὴς φιλὸς θεῷ, ὁ δὲ δεισιδαίμων κόλαξ θεοῦ] he explains the meaning in the following words, the pious comes to God ἀφόβως θεὸν without fear, the superstitious μετὰ πολλοῦ δέους with much fear, δυσκόλως ἢ δεδιότως πρὸς θεὸν ὥσπερ πρὸς τυράννους, dreading the Gods as so many tyrants. So saith Diodorus Siculus of Bomilcar l.2.p.779. δεισιδαίμονές εἰσιν οἱ μέλλοντες ἐγχειρεῖν ἢ ἀθεμίτοις ἢ μεγάλαις πράξεσι, they that are about to undertake any unlawfull and great actions are generally afraid of the Gods or demons, whence is that of Plutarch in Alex: ἐκ τοῦ δεισιδαίμων ὁ βίλιππος, the Atheist thinks there are no Gods, the superstitious wishes there were none. And accordingly the Epicureans, and the Cyrenaics that were so much against superstition, expresse themselves to mean by it τὸν περὶ τοῦ μετὰ θάνατον φόβον the fear of any thing after death, of the punishments of God after this life. And so those that did not beleive this, and withall thought it a very painfull, inconvenient errour, for any man to beleive it, generally spake of δεισιδαιμονία superstition, and so of Religion too, as of an ill thing. And so it goes in Plutarchs tract περὶ δεισιδαιμ: as another extreme, contrary to Atheisme, an astonishment of soul, looking on the Gods as so many δεινὰ spirits or furies, cruel, bloody-minded &c. which rather then he would beleive, he professes he would wish μηδὲ εἶναι Πλούταρχον that he had never been, and this he looks on with most abhorrence in the Jewes δεισιδαιμονία ὡς σκότον ζωὴν δεισιδαίμονας, they are, saith he, tied and bound with their religion or superstition as with a net, that they could not move for it. This therefore being acknowledged that among the heathens the word hath sometimes upon this score been taken in an ill sense, and Superstition, and Religion indifferently spoken against, as beleiving it an error that the Gods would punish men for what they did in this life, It remains that they of them that were not thus bent, doe generally, speak of δεισιδαιμονία superstition with a great reverence, generally in a good, not evil sense, the same that they allow to religion it self. Thus Polybius of the Romans l.16. p.497. giving his opinion of their government that it excell'd others extremely ἐν τῇ περὶ θεῶν διαλήψει, in the apprehension they had of the Gods, he expresses what it was he so cõmends, λέγω δὲ δεισιδαιμονίαν, I mean their superstition, which εἰς πᾶσιν ἐκτέθειται καὶ πεποίηται, was so cried up, and taken in to all their affairs, ὥστε μὴ ῥᾳδίαν εἶναι ὑπερβολήν, that it did not fall short of superlative, which though 'twere among other men made matter of reproach to them, ὅπερ ἐστὶ παρὰ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀνθρώποις ὀνείδους μέρος, yet he thinks fit extremely to extoll it as that which seem'd to him μεγάλην διαφορὰν ἔχειν πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον, to be very much for the better, καὶ συνέχειν τὰ Ῥωμαίων πράγματα, and to keep their affairs in good order. Thus Diod: Siculus l.5.p.305. speaking of the antient Gaules, There lies, saith he, in their temples a great deal of gold consecrated to their Gods, which yet none of the natives ἅπτονται touch, i.e. steal away, διὰ δεισιδαιμονίαν, because of their superstition, i.e. reverence which they bear to their Gods, καίπερ ὄντων τῶν Κελτῶν φιλαργύρων καὶ κάκβολων, though the men are extremely covetous. So the same author speaking of Imilco l. 14. p.395. after an act of sacrilege, saith he, he condemn'd himself, and died, πολλὰ τῇ πόλει καταλιπὼν δεισιδαιμονίας, leaving to his citizens much superstition, which the interpreter rightly renders Dei reverentiam, reverence of God. So in Heraclitus περὶ ἀπίστ: speaking of Orpheus περὶ κυκ. ὡς δεισιδαιμονίας ἀγωγὸν, καὶ δὴ τὸ εὐσεβεῖν ἐξαιρούμενος, leading to superstition, or the worship of the Gods, and exhorting them to be pious, making superstition, and piety all one exactly. So in an edict of the Emperour Tiberius set down by Josephus, l. 19. c.4. where immunities are by him allow'd the Jews on condition that they misuse not the Emperours kindnesse kindneſſe towards them, καὶ μὴ τὰς ἄλλων ἐθνῶν δεισιδαιμονίας ἐξουθενίζειν, and that they do not ſet at nought the ſuperſtitions, i. e. Religions (ſome of which he that wrote the Edict, thought to be true, and therefore took that care of them) of other nations. And though being by the heathens uſed for the worſhip not of the true God, but of their demons, (dead men, and Angels deified by them) it be juſtly deteſted by us Chriſtians, yet ſtill this is not an argument that that word is uſed in an ill ſenſe, any otherwiſe, then Religion it ſelf is alſo, becauſe falſe, heatheniſh religions are lookt on with the ſame averſation alſo by all that count them ſuch, to which agrees that of the Etymologiſt, ἰσέον ὅτι φαῦλον μὲν τοῖς Ἕλλησι δοκεῖ τὸ λαμβάνεσθαι, ἀγαθὸν δὲ ἡμῖν τοῖς χριστιανοῖς δοκεῖ τῆς ἀσεβείας λέγειν, the word among the heathens is taken for a good thing, but among us Chriſtians for impiety. Beſides theſe there is yet one farther acception of the word, for the uſe of magicall ſpells, ligatures, characters &c. execranda ſuperſtitio ligaturarum, quibus inaures &c. non ad placendum hominibus, ſed ad ſerviendum demonibus adhibetur Aug: Ep. 73. that execrable ſuperſtition of ligatures, among which are the earings &c. uſed not to pleaſe men but to ſerve devils. Of theſe indeed there were ſtore among the worſhippers of falſe Gods, a catalogue of which Clemens Alex. Str. 3. p. 312. tells us was to be ſeen in Menanders comœdy called Δεισιδαίμων, ſcoffing at thoſe which make every accident almoſt σημεῖον πρὸς a ſign of ſomething, divine by the flight of birds (Αἶξις ὄρνις Αἶπος ὑψιπετὴς in Homer) the feeding of chickens by the Ῥαβδομαντεία, ſtriking a ſtaffe againſt the ground (to which the Prophet is thought to referre, Hoſ. 4. 12.) κλειδομαντεία, and the reſt of the ἐναίσιμα σήματα auſpicious ſignes, (ἀστεροπὴν ἐπὶ δεξιὰ lightning on the right ſide, Hom. Il. 2.) which they that uſed are by Suidas ſaid δεισιδαιμονῶν ἐπὶ τοῖς σημείοις, to be ſuperſtitious obſervers of ſignes, ſee Aug: de doctr: Chr. l. 2. The like may be ſaid of ominous and auſpicious days, the not obſerving of which Heſiod makes to be impiety, and deſignes his whole book of Ἡμέρας to that purpoſe,

——— Ὄλβιος ὃς τάδε πάντα
Εἰδὼς ἐργάζηται, ἀναίτιος ἀθανάτοισιν,
Ὀρνίθας κρίνων, καὶ ὑπερβασίας ἀλεείνων. Theſe being heatheniſh obſervations conſequent to their Religions, as they are juſtly branded by thoſe that diſlike their Religions, ſo among them that diſliked them not, they were taken for branches of piety alſo, and ſo ſtill faſten no ill character upon this word, abſolutely conſidered.

Concerning this Altar at Athens inſcribed to the unknown God, there is a famous ſtory in Laertius in Epimenid: that in time of peſtilence at Athens, Epimenides being accounted by them διοφιλὴς καὶ θεοφιλὴς, one moſt beloved of God, was conſulted by them, who appointed this luſtration for the city. Taking many ſheep black and white he brought them into the ſtreet called Mars's ſtreet, the Areopagus here, and permitted them to goe whither they would, appointing ſome to follow each, and where-ever they lay down, there to kill and ſacrifice them προσηκούσῃ θεῷ, to a fit God, or to a God to whom ſacrifices were due, and ſo the plague ceaſed. ἔστιν ἔτι καὶ νῦν ἴδειν τῶν ἐκεῖ τόπων καὶ τὰς δήμους τῶν Ἀθηναίων βωμοὺς ἀνωνύμους, whence, ſaith he, is it that among the Athenians in publick places there are Altars that have no names on them. So in Philoſtratus l. 6. c. 7. of Apollonius mentioning Athens, ἔνθα καὶ ἀγνώστων δαιμόνων βωμοὶ ἵδρυνται, ſaith he, where are built altars of unknown damons, or Spirits, or Gods. And ſo Lucian in his Philopater, Νὴ τὸν ἄγνωστον ἐν Ἀθήναις, By the unknown God at Athens. And Ἡμεῖς δὲ τὸν ἐν Ἀθήναις ἄγνωστον ἱκετεύσαντες καὶ θεοσεβῆ ταῦτα, χεῖρας εἰς οὐρανὸν ἐκτείναντες τούτῳ εὐχαριστήσομεν, We having found and worſhipt the unknown God at Athens, will ſtretch out our hands to heaven, and give thanks to him. And ſo ſaith Pauſanias, that there were at Athens Altars of unknown Gods. And the ſame Author mentions among the Lydians or Perſians ſome Sacrifices, that by invocation of an unknown God, and a forme which he calls barbarous, becauſe not underſtood by the Grecians (the God of Abraham &c.) brought fire down, and burnt the wood upon the Altar, Eliac. l. 1. which is a deſcription of the πυρκαϊὰ mentioned by Strabo l. 15. which may well be thought an imitation of that fact of Elias in Ahabs time, who by invoking the name of God brought down fire upon the Altar. Of Saint Pauls making uſe of this inſcription at Athens againſt the heathens, ſee Photii Epiſt. ξβ. p. 114.

CHAP. XVIII.

1. AFter theſe things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth.

2. And found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with Priſcilla his wife [(becauſe that Clandius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome)] and came unto them.

2. (Claudius the Emperor of Rome having about this time, toward the latter end of his reign (ſee note on c. 26. 2.) made an Edict to baniſh the Jews out of his dominions, eſpecially from Rome, and Italy and thoſe parts.)

3. And becauſe he was of the ſame craft, he abode with them, and wrought (for by their occupation they were tent makers.)]

3. And Paul being by trade a tent-maker as they were, aſſociated and wrought in his trade with them, 1 Cor. 4. 12. and 9. 6. 12.

4. And he reaſoned in the ſynagogue every Sabbath, and perſwaded the Jews and the Greeks.]

4. And every Sabbath he preached the Goſpel in the Synagogues of the Jews, labouring to convince them all that were preſent, both Jews and Grecians viz. thoſe that were Greeks by birth, but proſelytes to the Jews Religion.

5. And

* or, was moved in ſpeech, for the King's MS. and the antient Gr: & Lat: read (συνείχετο τῷ λόγῳ

5. And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, [Paul * was preſſed [a] in ſpirit, and teſtified to the Jewes that Jeſus was † Chriſt.]

5. Paul being extraordinarily moved and excited in Spirit preacht and convinced the Jewes that Jeſus was the Meſſias, or elſe he was very earneſt in diſcourſe, ſpake very vehemently to them on this ſubject, reſolving to make it his laſt, and (upon their refuſing) to preſſe no more, to leave them and preach to the Gentiles. a.

6. And when they oppoſed themſelves and * blaſphemed, he ſhook his rayment, and ſaid unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads, I am clean, from henceforth I will goe unto the Gentiles.]

6. And when they not onely withſtood him, but railed or uſed him contumeliouſly, he uſed that ordinary ceremony of ſhaking his ſhooes, or other his garments, noting thereby his opinion of their great unworthineſſe of having the Goſpel farther preacht to them, and with all abooding ſad conſequents to them, And he ſaid unto them, Having thus warned you, I am free from the guilt of your deſtruction, which will certainly come upon you, I will ſtay no longer among you Jewes, but without any ſcruple preach to the Gentiles of this and other cities.

7. And he departed thence, and entred into a certain mans houſe, named Juſtus, one that worſhipped God,] whoſe houſe joyned hard to the ſynagogue.

7. And going out of the ſynagogue he went into a private houſe in Corinth, the houſe of one Juſtus, by birth a Gentile, but a Jewiſh proſelyte.

8. And Criſpus the chief ruler of the ſynagogue beleived on the Lord with all his houſe, and many of the Corinthians hearing, beleived and were baptized.

9. Then ſpake the Lord to Paul by night in a viſion, Be not afraid, but [ſpeak and hold not thy peace.]

9. preach the Goſpel confidently in this place.

10. For I am with thee, and no man ſhall ſet on thee to hurt thee: [for I have much people in this city.]

10. For there be many pious men in this heathen wicked city, that will receive the Goſpel.

11. And he continued there a year and ſix months, [teaching the word of God among them.]

11. preaching the Goſpel to them of Corinth, and of all Achaia, and farther inſtructing and confirming them that received it.

† And Gallio being Proconſul, Γαλλίωνος δὲ ἀνθυπατεύοντος

12. † And when Gallio was the deputy of Achaia, the Jewes * made inſurrection with one accord againſt Paul, and brought him to the judgment ſeat,]

12. But the Jewes throughout the whole region of Achaia, banded againſt him, and brought him before the tribunal of Gallio the Proconſul of that province,

13. Saying, This fellow perſwadeth men to worſhip God [contrary to the law.]

13. another way then what the law of the Jewes v.15. determines.

14. And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio ſaid unto the Jewes, If it were a matter of wrong or [wicked † lewdneſſe,] O ye Jewes, * reaſon would that I ſhould bear with you.

14. See note on chap. 13. a.

15. But if it be a queſtion † of words, and names, and of your law, look ye to it, for I will be no judge of ſuch matters.]

15. But ſeeing the queſtion betwixt you is onely a verball controverſie, as whether Jeſus be to be called and acknowledged the Meſſias, and of names, whether it were lawfull for Chriſtians by that name, or by that of Diſciples &c. to diſtinguiſh themſelves from incredulous Jewes, and concerning the law of you Jewes, whether it condemn all Gentiles that are not circumciſed, and make it utterly unlawfull to converſe with ſuch, all which are things of that nature, that I underſtand not, and of which conſequently I am no competent Judge, and ſeeing there is yet no law ſet out by the Emperours againſt Chriſtian religion, (for this was in the reign of Claudius, who ſet out an Edict againſt the Jewes v.2. but none againſt Chriſtians, any otherwiſe then as they were comprehended under the name of Jewes) this matter belongs not to my cognizance, I will not meddle with it, ſee note on chap. 26. a.

16. And he drave them from the judgment-ſeat.]

16. And he caſt their enditement out of the court.

17. Then all the Greeks took Soſthenes the chief ruler of the ſynagogue, and beat him before the judgment-ſeat, and Gallio cared for none of thoſe things.]

17. And Soſthenes one of the rulers of the Jewiſh Conſiſtory there, which appeared in this complaint againſt Paul, was by ſome of the natives of Corinth, upon Gallio's ſhewing a diſlike of their buſineſſe, v.16. ſtrucken in the court, and the Proconſul took no notice of it.

18. And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren and ſailed thence into Syria, and with him Priſcilla, and Aquila, [having ſhorne his head in Cenchrea, for he [b] had a vow.]

18. who had made a vow of a Nazarite for a time not to ſhave his head, after which expired, it was the manner to cut it ſolemnly, and accordingly ſo he did at Cenchrea. b.

19. And he came to] Epheſus, and left them there: but he himſelf entred into the ſynagogue, and reaſoned with the Jewes.

19. And in his way to Syria, v.18. he came to

20. When they deſired him to tarry longer time with them, he conſented not.

21. But bade them farewell, ſaying, [I muſt by all means keep this feaſt, that cometh in Jeruſalem, but I will return again unto you, if God will:] and he ſailed from Epheſus.

21. I will be at Jeruſalem before the Paſſeover, but after that I deſigne with God's help to return to you.

22. And when he had landed at Cæſarea, and [c] gone up, and ſaluted the Church, he went down to Antioch.]

22. And in his journey to Jeruſalem, he landed (not at Joppa one haven to Jeruſalem, but a very dangerous one, but) at Cæſarea Stratonis, as his ſafer landing, and from thence went up to Jeruſalem, and viſited the congregation of Chriſtians there, and having done ſo and there kept the feaſt, he went thence to Antioch. c.

23. And

23. confirming and farther inſtructing all the new converted Chriſtians.

23. And after he had ſpent ſome time there, he departed, and went over all the countrey of Galatia and Phrygia in order, [ſtrengthning all the diſciples.]

24. And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and [mighty in the ſcriptures,] came to Epheſus.

25. This Apollos had been inſtructed in the Goſpel, and being in reſpect of knowledge, not ſo perfectly inſtructed in all things as yet, ſee v.26. yet being very zealous in the way, wherein he was entred, he began to preach the Goſpel among them out of the prophets, inſtructing them in the Chriſtian doctrine very truly, and agreeably to the rule taught by the Apoſtles as farre as his inſtruction went, and this before he was baptized with the Chriſtian baptiſme, being only received by John to the beleiving in him that was to come, (ſo as the Epheſian diſciples c.19.2.)

26. And he entred into the ſynagogue of the Jews, and there publickly and confidently (ſee note on Joh.7.2.) preacht the Goſpel. And Aquila and Priſcilla hearing that what he preached was all true, but yet wanted ſomewhat of that knowledge which they had attained to, b: having never aſcended above John's baptiſme, but they higher,) they communicated it unto him.

27. the Chriſtians there exhorted him to goe, and wrote to the Church of Corinth and all Achaia commendatory letters by him. And he when he came thither, did a great deal of good among them, farther inſtructed and confirmed thoſe that by the preaching of the Goſpel had formerly been converted to the faith, 1 Cor. 3.6.

Notes on Chap. XVIII.

a. Συνέχετο τῷ πνεύματι

That which is in the ordinary printed copies συνεῖχετο τῷ πνεύματι] is συνείχετο τῷ λόγῳ, in the two great MSS. that of the King's Library, that was ſent from Conſtantinople, and the Gr: and Lat: one at Cambridge, ſent them by Theo: Beza. And which of theſe is the moſt probable reading is not eaſily defined. Σωνέχομαι ſignifies intention or vehemence, or incitation, Συνέχεσθαι φόβῳ, to be vehemently afraid, Job 3.24. Συνέχεσθαι οἴνῳ, in Jeremy to be carried vehemently with wine, Συμπλέκεσθαι, ſaith Heſychius, and again κρατεῖσθαι, to be intangled, or held faſt, which as it really notes to be in the power of another, ſo figuratively 'tis to be under any incitation, or tranſportation in any reſpect. And thus according to the nature of the word it may be proper enough for the place, with which ſoever it be joyned, If with πνεύματι, then 'tis either his own ſpirit, or the Spirit of God, If his own, then it ſignifies him to have had ſome incitation of ſpirit; And ſo of Apollos we read v. 25. ζέων τῷ πνεύματι, that he burned in ſpirit, as when David ſaith, his heart was hot within him, and at laſt he ſpake with his tongue: And ſo if the Spirit of God, then 'tis that he was ſtirr'd up, or incited by God by revelation. But 'tis moſt ordinary for the word ἅγιον, holy] to be prefixt to the word Spirit, when tis taken in this ſenſe, as c.16.6. and ſo this is not ſo probably the meaning: ſo likewiſe if it be τῷ λόγῳ in ſpeech, it will then ſignifie no more then that he ſpake very earneſtly, and that is the importance of διαμαρτύρεσθαι following, he teſtified and earneſtly inſiſted on it, and prov'd that Jeſus was indeed the Meſſias, which the Jewes denied. That this may be the meaning, appears not improbably by another parallel expreſſion, ver.28. for there as Apollos was doing the ſame thing, that Paul here, earneſtly labouring to convince the Jewes, that Chriſt was the Meſſias, ſo the expreſſion peculiarly belongs to λόγῳ ſpeech, not πνεύματι ſpirit, ἰουδαίοις τότε τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις (or, as I ſuppoſe it ſhould be, τοῦ Ἰουδαίου) διαπαλαίσχετο δημοσίᾳ, he did publickly with intention or earneſtneſſe of ſpeech convince the Jewes, demonſtrating by the ſcriptures that Jeſus is the Chriſt, Where the force, and power of his ſpeech, and arguments contained in it, was that which was meant by ἰσχύος. To what hath been ſaid, may be added, that the antient Greek and Latine MS. after [Ἰησοῦν] in the end of the verſe, hath annexed theſe words, πολλῷ τῷ λόγῳ χρώμενος καὶ γραφῶν διερμηνευόμενος, and having had much ſpeech and interpreted the ſcriptures, which as it makes it more fully parallel with that of v.28. ſo it enclines to the reading of λόγῳ, not πνεύματι, ſpeech, not ſpirit.

ζέων τῷ πνεύματι

ἰσχύος

The ηὐχὴν εἶχε had a vow] here, is not to be referr'd to Paul, but to Aquila, for with his name is conjoyned [κειράμενος &c. ſhaving his head] without ſo much as a comma between in ſome printed copies, And it is not improbable, that when it is ſaid v.19. that Paul went to Epheſus, and left them there, the ἐκεῖ there ſhould not denote Epheſus, to which, but Cenchrea, from which he came, (for why ſhould his leaving them at Epheſus be immediately ſubjoyned to his coming thither?) and this on this occaſion, to purifie himſelf, and to be ſhaved, to which ſome ſtay, at leaſt ſeven daies, was neceſſary; This vow was without all queſtion the vow of the Nazarites among the Jewes, Num. 6.5. which was not alwaies for life, but ſometimes for a determinate time, wherein they did κόμην τρέφειν, and not ſuffer the razor to come upon them, but when that time was paſt, then one part of the vow was, to be ſhaved v.18. and to offer up the haire (called the haire of his ſeparation) to put it in the fire, which is under the ſacrifice of the peace-offerings; And accordingly here is [ſhaving himſelf, for he had a vow.] But becauſe this is here done by him at Cenchrea, and not at Jeruſalem (where

b. Ηὐχὴν εἶχε

ἐκεῖ

(where the accompliſhment of the vow was to be performed, as before at the dore of the tabernacle, *Num.*6.13. and as we ſee it performed here, Act. 21.23.) therefore it is moſt probable that this ſhaving here, was not on the accompliſhing of his vow, but upon ſome intervening legal pollution, in which caſe he was bound to offer for a cleanſing, and on the ſeventh day to ſhave his head, and ſo begin the daies again, Num. 6.11, 12. This probably might be done in any city, where a man happened to be ſo polluted, But that at the completion of the vow, when the daies of his ſeparation were fulfilled, was to be at Jeruſalem. The practiſe of this cuſtome among the heathens, and the offering the haire (when 'twas cut) Ἀπόλλωνι κειροτρόφῳ, to Apollo that nouriſheth haire, may be ſeen at large in Euſtathius on Homer, Ιλιαδ. Ζ. ἐν κομῇ ἄκμῆς, ſaith he, ἐπιφέρει, ᾗ πάντων ἀπόλλωνι κειροτρόφῳ, and accordingly the haire ſo conſecrated is by Æſchylus called τροφίμου, haire that had been nouriſhed ſometime, ſee c.21.24.

Baſil Ed: p.114.

c. Ἀναβὰς

That the Church here ſignifies not the Chriſtians of Caſarea, but the Church of Jeruſalem appears v.21. where the reaſon of his departure from Epheſus, is that he may keep the feaſt at Jeruſalem, which cannot be, if he went from Caſarea to Antioch, for that was his way of return to Epheſus again, which he promiſed to doe, v.21. but not till he had been at Jeruſalem. And it ſeems ſome Syriack copies have read it [gone up to Jeruſalem, and ſaluted the Church] for Tremellius ſuppoſeth that, when he ſaith, ſome copies have not nomen Uriſhelem, the name Jeruſalem. And ſo c.21.12. where Paul was again at this Caſarea, the phraſe is at large, ἀναβαίνειν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, to go up to Jeruſalem, and ſo c.25.1. But without the addition of that (which, I ſuppoſe, the Syriack here added, not as a tranſlation, but a paraphraſe) the word [ἀναβὰς going up] following after his landing at Caſarea, will enforce this ſenſe. And ſo c.24.1. the κατέλθῃ deſcending of Ananias &c. notes the going from Jeruſalem to Caſarea, without naming of either, ſee ch. 25.6,7. For Caſarea was the haven, where they landed moſt commodiouſly in going from Epheſus to Jeruſalem, and being landed there, what needed more to be ſaid, but that he went up? for that will imply his going up to that place, in paſſage, and in order to which he there landed. Joppe was indeed one haven to Jeruſalem, but that a dangerous one, and thereupon it was that Herod was at ſo huge an expenſe to repair this old haven at Caſarea, formerly called Στράτωνος πύργος Strato's towre, ſee Joſephus l.1. de bell: Jud: c.16. Herod, ſaith he, ſeeing one of the haven-towns decayed with age, and capable of his munificence, repaired it with white ſtone, &c. for betwixt Dora and Joppa, the whole ſhore was ſo ill provided with havens, that all that ſayl'd from Phœnicia to Ægypt were much endangered, But the King overcame nature by his liberality and expenſes, and built a ſtately haven at this Towre of Strato, and in it many ſafe harbours for ſhips to abide in, and though the nature of the place gave him many difficulties, yet he conquer'd them all and made it moſt firm and ſumptuous, as it is at large deſcribed by Joſephus in that place, And this, ſaith he, to the honour of Caſar, he call'd Caſarea, with it retaining the addition of Stratonis, which before belonged to it, and by which it is diſtinguiſht from Caſarea Philippi, which is not farre from it, of which ſee Mat. 16. note c.

For the uſe of προσθέμενος for putting forward, encouraging, ſee *Wiſd.*14.18. d. Προσθέμενος

What χάριτι here ſignifies may beſt be collected from c.11.23. & 13.43. In many other places it ſignifies the Goſpel of Chriſt (ſee note on Heb. 13. c.) as when 'tis oppoſed to νόμος the law, *Joh.*1.17. The law was given by Moſes, but grace and truth came by Jeſus Chriſt. So the σωτήριος χάρις the ſalvifick grace of God, *Tit.*2.11. But in thoſe and many the like places, Grace ſignifies the matter, or ſubject of the Goſpel, not the preaching of it, for that is expreſt by the coming or appearing of that grace. But in that place of ch. 11. 23. where 'tis ſaid, that ſeeing the grace of Chriſt he rejoiced, (i.e. ſeeing that the Goſpel had been preached with ſo good ſucceſs among them) it ſignifies the preaching or promulgating of the Goſpel, (juſt as εὐαγγέλιον Goſpel doth, *Rom.*1.1. and 9.16.) and ſo c.13.43. when they exhort them to continue in the grace of God, that was the work of confirmation, following that of preaching the Goſpel to them. And that notion of it ſeems to be the moſt adæquate, and proper for this place, ſo that παρακλήσις διὰ τῆς χάριτος] ſhall ſignifie thoſe that had been formerly converted to the faith by the preaching of the Goſpel by S. Paul, According to that of [Paul planteth and Apollos watereth] for that watering, being the inſtructing them farther who already had received the faith, the edifying, or ſuperſtructing on the foundation, is all one with [πολὺ ζωπυρήσαντος he conferred much,] or contributed his aſſiſtance (or, as perhaps it ſhould be read, ζωπυρήσαντος aſſiſted) helped to improve them, that before beleived. As for that of applying [διὰ τῆς χάριτος by grace] to ζωπυρήσαντος he conferred, that Apollos by grace, i.e. his gift, and power in ſcripture contributed much to the beleivers, there is no neceſſity of flying to that refuge, nor probability from the placing of thoſe words (which follow and goe not before παρεκάλουν) to favour that rendring. In the ſame ſenſe we find εἰς χάριν Χριστοῦ in, or to, or through the grace, i.e. the Goſpel of Chriſt, Gal. 1.6. to or by which Paul is ſaid to have call'd them, and is there ſet oppoſite to ἄλλο εὐαγγέλιον another Goſpel, a doctrine of ſome falſe teachers crept in among them. e. CHAP. XIX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND it came to paſſe that while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having paſſed through the upper-coaſts came to Epheſus, and finding certain [diſciples,]

1. Chriſtian profeſſors publiſhing the Goſpel there, See note on c.8.b.

2. And

2. Hath the holy Ghoſt, ſince your receiving the faith, deſcended on you, and ſet you apart, given you authority or gifts for the work of the miniſtery? (ſee c.10.44.) and they ſaid, The doctrine which we received, had nothing in it of the holy Ghoſt.

2. He ſaid unto them, [Have ye received the holy Ghoſt ſince ye beleived? And they ſaid unto him, We have not ſo much as heard, whether there be any holy Ghoſt.]

3. And he ſaid, How can that be, when the Chriſtian baptiſme is in the name of the holy Ghoſt? To which they replied, that John's baptiſme was all that they had received.

3. And he ſaid unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they ſaid, Unto John's baptiſme.]

4. And Paul knowing that they by John his baptiſme had implicitely acknowledged Chriſt under the title of [he that comes after] and had promiſed to repent, and reform their lives, he explicitely taught them the whole doctrine of Chriſt, and of the holy Ghoſt alſo.

4. Then ſaid Paul, John verily baptized with the baptiſme of repentance, ſaying unto the people that they ſhould beleive on him which ſhould come after him, that is, on Chriſt Jeſus.]

5. And they preſently received and beleived it, and were received in as Chriſtian Proſelytes in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the holy Ghoſt.

5. When they heard this they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jeſus.]

6. After this Paul by impoſition of hands and benediction gave them confirmation, by which means the holy Ghoſt came on them, and therewith gifts of tongues, and ſome other extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, the ſame which came as upon the Apoſtles at the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt, ch.2. ſo on divers others after, ſee c.10.44.

6. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the holy Ghoſt came on them, and they ſpake with tongues and prophecied.]

7. And all the men were about twelve.

8. And he went and preacht the Goſpel in the ſynagogues that were at Epheſus, to the Jewes, for the ſpace of three moneths, labouring to convince them.

8. And he went into the ſynagogue and ſpake boldly for the ſpace of three moneths, diſputing and perſwading the things concerning the kingdome of God.]

9. But when in ſtead of being convinced, he ſaw them, (in an obdurate refractary manner) not onely reject the Goſpel, but ſpeak of it contumelioufly in publick before the people, he left them, and took thoſe that were converted by themſelves, and inſtructed them daily in a place, which was uſed to entertain ſcholars privately.

9. But when divers were hardned and beleived not, but ſpake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and ſeparated the diſciples, * diſputing daily in the [a] ſchoole of one Tyrannus.]

a. * diſcourſing διαλεγόμενος

10. And doing thus for the ſpace of two years, all the inhabitants of the Proconſular Aſia, both Jewes and Proſelytes, had in that ſpace the Goſpel preacht to them.

10. And this continued by the ſpace of two years, ſo that all they which dwelt in Aſia heard the word of the Lord Jeſus, both Jewes and Greeks.]

11. And many extraordinary miracles were wrought by Paul, through the power of God, among them.

11. And God wrought ſpeciall miracles by the hands of Paul.]

12. For he did not onely cure them, which came to him, but by his touching of linen clothes, and ſending them to ſuch as were ſick, or poſſeſt with devils, they were cured immediately.

12. So that from his body were brought unto the ſick, † handkerchiefs, or [b] aprons, and the diſeaſes departed from them, and the evil ſpirits went out of them.]

† napkins σουδάρια

13. And ſome of the Jews, that went about to cure diſeaſes, and caſt out devils (ſee note on Mat.12. g.) tried to caſt them out by uſing the name of Jeſus Chriſt.

13. Then certain of the * vagabond Jewes, exorciſts, took upon them to call over them, which had evil ſpirits, the name of the Lord Jeſus,] ſaying, We adjure you by Jeſus, whom Paul preacheth.

* Jewiſh exorciſts that came about, attempted τῶν περιερχομένων Ἰουδαίων ἐξορκιστῶν ἐπιχειρησάντων

14. one of the chief of the families of the Prieſts, ſee note on ch. 4. a.)

14. And there were ſeven ſons of one Sceva † a Jew, [and chief of the prieſts,] which did ſo.

† a Jewiſh chief prieſt, Ἰουδαίου ἀρχιερέως

15. But the devil would not obey them, as not coming with any authority from Chriſt which had given it to Paul.

15. And the evil ſpirit anſwered, and ſaid, Jeſus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye?]

16. But made the man, that was poſſeſt, fall violently upon them, which accordingly he did, and was too hard for them all, and tore off their clothes, and wounded them, and made them run away.

16. And the man, in whom the evil ſpirit was, leaped on them, and overcame them and prevailed againſt them, ſo that they fled out of that houſe naked and wounded.]

17. And this accident being made known to the Jewes, and natives of Epheſus, wrought very much upon them, and brought many to the faith of Chriſt.

17. And this was known to all the Jewes, and Greeks alſo dwelling at Epheſus, and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jeſus was magnified.]

18. And they that were thus wrought on, came, many of them, to the Apoſtles, and told them the actions or courſes of their former lives, to know how agreeable they were to the faith, that ſo they might forſake or continue in them.

18. And many that believed came, and confeſſed, and ſhewed their deeds.]

c. d.

19. And many that had ſtudied and practiſed Magick and ſorcery, brought out and publickly burnt their books, though they were of a very high value.

19. Many alſo of them which uſed [c] * curious arts, brought their books together and burned them before all men, and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thouſand [d] † pieces of ſilver.]

* charms or ſorcery, † ſhekels

20. So

20. So mightily grew the word of God, and prevailed.]
20. Of ſo great authority was the word of God, the Goſpel of Chriſt, as it was now preach't by Paul among the Epheſians, and thoſe of Aſia.

21. After theſe things were ended, Paul purpoſed in the Spirit, when he had paſſed] through Macedonia and Achaia, to goe to Jeruſalem, ſaying, After I have been there, I muſt alſo ſee Rome.
21. After this, Paul reſolved or determined with himſelf in his paſſage

22. So he ſent into Macedonia two of them which miniſtred unto him, Timotheus and Eraſtus; but] he himſelf ſtayed in Aſia for a ſeaſon.
22. And ſending into Macedonia two of his aſſiſtants that went with him, and were ready to doe whatſoever he appointed them, viz: Timothy and Eraſtus, (ſee note on Joh. 20. b.)

23. And the ſame time [there aroſe no ſmall ſtirre about that way.]
23. a great ſtirre was raiſed among them of Aſia about the doctrine of the Goſpel.

24. For a certain man, named Demetrius, a ſilver-ſmith, which made [c] ſilver * ſhrines for Diana, brought no ſmall † gain unto the crafts-men, 24, 25. For one Demetrius, a ſilver-ſmith, that deale in making of little cabinets of ſilver with the image of Diana in them, had a great many of that trade that wrought under him, who were all maintained by that imployment. And many others of ſeverall occupations were employed about theſe pictures. And all theſe, whoſe livelyhoods were concerned in it, he called together, and ſaid unto them, c.

25. Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and ſaid,] Sirs, ye know that by this * craft we have our wealth.

26. Moreover ye ſee and hear, that not alone at Epheſus, but almoſt throughout all Aſia, this Paul hath perſwaded and turned away much people, ſaying, That [they be no Gods which are made with hands.]
26. the Images which we make and worſhip, are not indeed true Gods.

27. So that not onely this [our † craft] is in danger to be ſet at nought, but alſo that the Temple of the great goddeſſe Diana ſhould be deſpiſed, and her magnificence ſhould be deſtroyed, whom all Aſia and the world worſhippeth.
27. trade, by which we get our living,

28. And when they heard theſe things, they were full of wrath, and cried out, ſaying, * Great is Diana of the Epheſians.]
28. And hereupon they were enraged & cried down the doctrine of Paul, by crying up Diana, the goddeſſe of the Epheſians, ſo long worſhipt by them.

29. And the whole city was filled with confuſion, [and having caught Gaius and Ariſtarchus, men of Macedonia, Pauls companions in travail, they ruſhed with one accord into the Theatre.]
29. And in this hurrey they ſeiz'd upon two of Pauls companions, and brought them out, probably with an intention (howſoever they were hindred) to throw them to combate with wild beaſts upon the ſtage (ſee note e.) as it was ordinary to doe with malefactors.

30. And when Paul would have entred in unto the people, the diſciples ſuffered him not.]
30. And Paul was willing to have come among them, with an intention to give them an account of the faith of Chriſt contrary to theſe Idol-worſhips of theirs; but the Chriſtians that were there, perſwaded him to the contrary.

31. And certain of † the [f] chief of Aſia, which were his friends, ſent unto him, * deſiring him that he would not adventure himſelf into the Theatre.]
31. And ſome of the Præfects of the games or ſports there, which being conſecrated to their Gods, were intruſted to the charge of the prieſts, were ſo kind to him, that, knowing the purpoſe of the people to caſt him to the wild beaſts, they ſent to him to keep cloſe, and not to come out among the people, as he meant, v. 30. leſt if they took him, they ſhould carry him (as it ſeems they meant, ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. b) and caſt him to wild beaſts on the theatre. f.

32. Some therefore cried one thing, and ſome another, for [the aſſembly was confuſed,] and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.
32. a great hubbub and confuſion there was,

33. * And they drew Alexander out of the multitude, the Jewes [g] putting him forward, and Alexander beckned with the hand, and would † have made his defence unto the people.]
33. And ſome of the popular officers brought out Alexander, a Jewiſh profeſſor of the faith, and the Jewes examined and queſtioned him, beleiving (probably) that he would excuſe himſelf, and lay the fault upon Paul: And he made a ſigne with his hand, that he would gladly make his own apologie, and give them an account of the whole matter. g.

34. But when they knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice about the ſpace of two houres, cried out, Great is Diana of the Epheſians.
34. But the heathens of Epheſus knowing that he was a Jew, and ſuppoſing that he was for Paul's way, and that derogatory to Diana (though the truth is he meant to clear himſelf, and lay the blame on Paul, for which he is ſaid to have done him much injury, 1 Tim. 1. 19. and 2 Tim. 4. 14.) they would not permit him to be heard, but cried for two houres ſpace, Diana, the great Diana the Goddeſſe of the Epheſians.

35. * And when the [h] Town-clerk had appeaſed the people, he ſaid, Ye men of Epheſus, what man is there that knoweth not, how that the city of the Epheſians † is a [i] worſhipper of the great Goddeſſe Diana, and of the image which fell down from Jupiter?
35. And the Regiſter of their games compoſed & quieted the people with this oration, Every body knows that Epheſus among the cities of Greece hath the honour to be called the chief officer in the worſhip of Diana, to whom it belongs to preſerve and adorn her Temple, and the Temple that encloſes that image that fell down out of heaven from Jupiter, (ſo much talk't of among the heathens.) h. i.

36. Seeing then that theſe things cannot be ſpoken againſt, ye ought to be quiet and to doe * nothing raſhly.]
36. And therefore this being granted by all, what need is there of this ſo much adoe?

37. For this Paul &c. hath neither robbed your Temples, nor ſpoken any thing againſt your Goddeſſe Diana.

37. For ye have brought hither theſe men, which are neither robbers of Churches, nor yet blaſphemers of your Goddeſſe.

38. As for Demetrius and the tradeſmen that depend on him, if any man hath done them any injury, let them form their inditement or accuſation, 'tis now a fit time for them to have juſtice done them, the court ſits, let them bring in their charge.

k. l.

38. Wherefore if Demetrius and the craftſ-men which are with him, have a k matter againſt any man, * the l law is open, and there are deputies, let them implead one another.]

* the court-daies are come, and the Proconſuls are preſent

39. But if you have any other ſuit or controverſie among you, it ſhall be referred to ſuch a meeting or judicature, as the law appoints for ſuch matters.

39. But if ye † enquire any thing concerning other marters, it ſhall be determined in a lawfull full aſſembly.]

† ſeek or require any thing τι ἐπιζητεῖτε

40. For we are in danger to be * called in queſtion for this daies uproar, there being no cauſe whereby we may give an account of this concourſe.

Notes on Chap. XIX.

a. Σχολὴ Τυράννου

There were two kinds of ſchools among the Jewes, wherein the law was taught, private or publick. 1. Private wherein any Doctor entertained ſcholars, and ſuch was this of Tyrannus here, contained under the title, בתי המדרש houſes of learning, mentioned by Maimonides, as one kind of their holy places; their ſchools, and not onely their ſynagogues being accounted ſo. Then 2dly Publick, where Conſiſtories ſat to reſolve differences of the law.

b. Ἡμιζώνιον

Ἡμιζώνιον is lightly changed from the Latine ſemicinctum, that which is called by the Chaldee בְּטַן or cingulum coriaceum, or ſuccinctorium, which work-men put before them, that they may not foule their cloathes.

c. Περίεργα

What is the meaning of the περίεργα, or curious things, here uſed among the Epheſians, will be beſt gueſt firſt by Heſychius's gloſſe, and then by a paſſage in Irenæus, both miſtead in the ordinary copies, In Heſychius we have Περιεργία (that ſhould be Περίεργα) καθάρσια, The word denotes their heathen rites of purgations; Of their luſtrations, or purgations the heathen books are full, ſee Porphyry περὶ ἀπ: Iamblichus, Hierocles, Marinus de vitâ Procli, Plotinus &c. All which were nothing but magick, and ſorcery, γοητεῖαι and θεουργίαι, and accordingly the Greek fathers on this place ſay they were their γοητικὰ βίβλοι books of ſorcery, that here were burnt. Irenæus l. 1. c. de Simonian: hath theſe words, Amatoria quoque & agogima — & quæcunque ſunt alia parerga (it ſhould certainly be perierga) apud eos ſtudioſe exercentur, Love-charms, and philtres, and all other ſuch curious, i. e. Magical tricks, are in great uſe among them, Φαρμακείας These are the φαρμακείας medicaments, from which ſorcerers are generally called φαρμακοὶ medicamentarii, as the Latines uſe venefica witches, from venena poyſons, not that they alwaies uſe medicaments, but many times only charms and words, in ſtead of them. And accordingly Menander mentions them proverbially of Epheſus here, Ἐφέσια ἀλεξιφάρμακα, Epheſian charms, or ſpells which ſuch an one τῆς γαμῆσαι θέλοντι κόρης, walks, and ſpeaks to the bridegroom and his bride. Theſe are the Ἐφέσια γράμματα, Epheſian words, or writings, ſo often ſpoken of by writers, as charms, or ſpells. Of them Heſychius gives an account, Ἐφέσια γράμματα, ὧν μὲ πάλαι, ὕστερον ὁ φοσιδιὸς πῆξε ἀπιστῶν καὶ ἄλλα. φασὶ δὲ τὸ πρῶτον τὰ ὀνόματα τάδε. ἄσια. κατάσιον. ἄξιον. τίτραξ. δαμναμενεύς. αἴσιον. δίκολον δὲ ὁ μὲν ἄσια, αὐτόθι· τὸ δὲ κατάσια, ζῶες· τὸ δὲ ἄξιον, αὐτὸς· δαμναμενεὺς δὲ ἥλιος· αἴσιον δὲ ἀλήθεια. Theſe words are much deformed, but by the help of a paſſage in Clemens Alex: Strom: l. 1. c. 18. may eaſily thus be mended. Ἐφέσια γράμματα ὧν μὲν πάλαι ὑστέρων δὲ φοσιδιὸς πῆξε ἀπιστῶν καὶ ἄλλα· φασὶ δὲ τὸ πρῶτον τὰ ὀνόματα τάδε, ἄσιον, κατάσιον, λίξ, τίτραξ, δαμναμενεύς, αἴσιον. δίκολον δὲ τὸ μὲν ἄσιον, τὸ αὐτόθι, κατάσιον ζῶες, τὸ δὲ λίξ γῆ, καὶ τίτραξ ὁ ἐνιαυτὸς, δαμναμενεὺς δὲ ἥλιος, αἴσιον δὲ ἀλήθεια. The Epheſian words were antiently ſix, but afterwards deceivers added others alſo; the names of the former were &c. and the ſignification of them, darkneſſe, light, the earth, the year, the ſun, and truth, (ſee Canter: var: lect: l. 1. c. 18.) Of which he concludes, πάντα ἦν ἱερὰ καὶ ἅγια, theſe are ſacred and holy, i. e. part of the heathen Idolatry, See Plutarch ſympoſiac: 7. Clemens Alex: Strom: l. 5. Euſtathius ad Homer. Odyſſ. 21. Suidas, and the books of the Greek Proverbs. And ſo the περίεργα περιεργάσαντες are the ſorcerers, or Magicians among them, who brought the books of their black art, which though they were of great value, and would have been ſold for much, yet they neither kept, nor ſold, but as a teſtimony of renouncing their former courſe, they burnt them publickly.

The Hebrew כֶּסֶף that is literally rendred ἀργύριον, ſilver, ſignifies peculiarly ſiclum argenteum, a ſilver ſhekel among the Hebrews, ſee note on Mat. 26. d. d. Ἀργύριον

In the Idolatry of the heathens, it is ſufficiently known, that they were wont to carry the images of their falſe Gods about in pomp, i. e. proceſſion, from one city to another, This they did in a Chariot, that was ſolemnly conſecrated for that imployment, and by the Romans ſtyled Thenſa, i. e. the chariot of their Gods. But beſide this greater, there was a leſſer frame, wherein it was placed, a box, or ſhrine, called Feretulum by them; Accordingly at the beſtowing of divine honours on their great men alive, or dead, the Romans had their Circæan games, and in them Thenſam, and Feretulum, that Chariot, and that Shrine beſtowed on them, As it is related of Julius Cæſar. This Feretulum among the Romans, differs not much from the Gracians Ναὸς, a little Chappel, repreſenting the form of a Temple, with an image in it, which being ſet upon the Altar or other ſolemn place, and the valve, the leaves or dores open'd, the image ſtood, or ſat in ſtate, and ſo was repreſented to the ſpectators. Accordingly an old anonymous Scholiaſt on Ariſtotles Rhetoricks, l. 1. c. 15. hath theſe words, Ναοποιοὶ οἱ πρὸ ναῶν ποιοῦσι, ἅπερ εἰκονοστάσια πρὸ μικρὰ ξύλινα ἃ πομπεύουσι, noting the vaſi here, to e. Λαὸν ἀγόμενοι be ναοποιήματα Chaplets with Images in them of wood, or any other metall, (as here of silver v.24.) which they make, and sell, as here ver.25. they are supposed to doe, and so get wealth by that trade.

28.33. Agreeable to this is it, that Ammianus Marcellinus saith of Asclepiades, that whithersoever he went he carried about with him Deæ cœlestis argenteum breve figmentum, a small silver image of Urania.

Romul. 1.40. And Dion of the Roman ensigne (which is known to be an Eagle) that it was ναὸς μικρὸς, ᾧ ἐν αὐτῷ ἀετὸς χρυσοῦς, a little temple, and in it a golden eagle; and again Ἐν τῷ Ἀλβανῷ, there was, saith he, ναὸς Ἥρας βραχὺς, a short or little chappel of Juno, ὃν καὶ πρωΐζης πρὸς ἑσπέραν ἑστῶς, set upon a table.

10.1.39. This hath been shew'd (note on ch.7. d.) to be the meaning of the tabernacle of Moloch, Act. 7. 43. Σκηνὴ Μολὸχ taken from Am. 5.26. סכות מלככם there, the tabernacle of your King, but by the LXX σκηνὴ Μολὸχ, the tabernacle of Moloch, (that word in Hebrew signifying a King) where σκηνὴ tabernacle, is the chaplet, wherein was the figure of that false God, or starre so call'd. And that it is so, may be gueſt, by that which followes there, the τύπους οὓς ἐποιήσατε the figures which you made to worship, which it seems were put in such tabernacles, or chappels to that end. The like also was the סכות בנות the tabernacle of Benoth, or Venus, another of those false-deities, whose image was enshrined in such a little Chappel, ναὸς or ναΐσκος, to be worshipped.

f. Among the heathens there were agones & games Ἀσιάρχαι instituted ad placanda bona numina, to appease the good deities, saith Labeo, as sacrifices and victims to appease the bad or angry. And therefore in the Anthology, the τέτταρες ἀγῶνες οἱ Ἑλλάδα the four games in Greece, Olympian, Nemaan, Isthmian, Pythian, are called τέτταρες ἱεροὶ, all four sacred: And so in Julian μισοπωγ: there is mention of the ἱπποδρόμια, the running of horses ἐν ταῖς ἑορταῖς τῶν θεῶν in the feasts of the Gods, and in the rescript of Honorius and Theodosius, sacra munera, sacra festa, sacros agones, sacred offices, sacred feasts and sacred games. At Rome the Pontifices, or chief priests were presidents of these. And therefore when the heathen customes had gotten in among the Jewes, we find Jason 2 *Mac.*4.7. buying the Pontificate, and with it the power of instituting, and moderating their games; and so in the severall provinces the severall chief priests; who were called by the names of the Provinces, which they administred, so Κυπριάρχης, the Governour of Cyprus, 2 *Mac.*12.2. So Συριάρχαι, saith * Cujacius, Sacerdotes istius Provinciæ, qui ludos in honorem Deorum celebrari solitos, curarent, moderarentur, præsiderent, The officers of Syria, i.e. the Priests of that province, which took care of their games, which were customarily celebrated to the honour of their Gods, ruled them, presided in them. So Bithyniarchæ, the officers of Bithynia, Cappadociarchæ, of Cappadocia, and here Asiarchæ of Asia, i.e. the officers of those so many Provinces, not Kings, or Proconsuls, or Procurators, the rulers and Governours of them, but popular officers or ministers, to whom the care of those things was intrusted, and in particular cities, πολιτάρχαι, Πολιτάρχας c.17.6. the city-magistrates. The ἀγωνοθέτης, ἀγωνοθεσία, ἀλυτάρχαι, all commands or offices of some honour among them, as appeared by Jason's purchasing them together with the priesthood, but yet subject to the people, as being executioners, and ministers of their will. To these belonged also the execution of malefactors, condemned to the θηριομαχίαι, or fighting with beasts on the Theatre, a θηριομαχίας customary ceremony or complement of their festivities (see note on 1 Cor. 15. b.) and so some of them here being kind to S. Paul, warned him not to come out, knowing the purpose of the people to have him thus put to death, if they could light on him. And that appears by the Register's speech ver. 37. ἠγάγετε τοὺς ἄνδρας τούτους ἔτι ἱεροσύλους &c. these men, Paul and his company, are neither robbers of Churches, nor blasphemers of your Goddesse, yet you have dealt with them as if they were, bringing or dragging them to the Theatre, for so 'tis said ver.29. that they ran, or hurried into the Theatre, συναρπάσαντες carrying or haling along Συναρπάσαντες with them thither Gaius, and Aristarchus, Paul's fellow-travellers; And v.33. ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου some of the multitude προβιβάσαντες Ἀλέξανδρον, brought forth Προβιβάσαντες Alexander, who, it seems, was a Christian of Ephesus though one that forsook Paul (probably upon the danger at this time) 1 *Tim.*1, 20. and, having done so, did him much injury, 2 Tim. 4. 14. and here was about to excuse himself to the people, (to escape the hazard approaching,) and lay all the blame on Paul. Of this Alexander saith Photius, Epist: 170. That μὲ διαβολῶν ἀπορῶν, ἢ μηδὲ ἐυρεῖν ἐλπίσας, αὐτὸς καθ' ἑαυτὸν μόνος ἐνεχειρησάτην, καὶ γλῶσσαι καὶ χεῖρες ἐφέροντο, Neither wanting accusations nor hoping to find any, became he alone, both tongues and hands in the plurall, against his greatest benefactors. Where, as [ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου] being set for [τινὲς ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου, some out of the multitude, signifie some of the popular officers, serjeants or apparitors, so προβίβασις their bringing him forth, is to be understood, as an act of their office, to bring forth to examination, (as among the Greek lawyers, the serjeants, ὑπηρέται, προάγοντες in the Gospels, are styled ἐκβιβασταὶ, those that serve men with writs and bring them before their courts) And therefore it follows that the Jewes did προβάλλειν αὐτὸν question him that was thus brought forth, examined him about S. Paul, see note g.

Προβάλλειν hath a peculiar notion among the Grammarians, proper to forinsecall matters, it Προβάλλει g. signifies to examine, to question upon interrogatories, to call any man into the court to testifie his knowledge concerning any thing in question. So saith Phavorinus, προβάλλειν and προβάλλεσθαι, ἐρωτᾶν to question, and προβάλλεσθαι μάρτυρα to call a man as a witnesse. So Domninus (cited by Jo: Malela l. 12.) speaking of the Ἀμφιθαλὴς an officer in the agones, αὐτὸν βιλὰ, καὶ ὁ δῆμος προβάλλονται, the Senate and people called him to testifie what was done in the agones. Accordingly must the Glosse of Hesychius be mended, not as the printed copie hath it, προβάλλει, ἐρωτᾷ, προβάλλειν ἀρνεῖται τὸ ἀπαγγεῖλαι, but προβαλεῖ ἐρωτήσει, προβαλλειν μάρτυρα, τὸ ἀπαγγεῖλαι, noting this use of the word for interrogating a witnesse, calling a man to testifie, ἀπαγγεῖλαι to appeal to for the truth of what is controverted. And so the meaning of this whole passage is, that Alexander a Christian of Ephesus, but a Jew by birth, was in this tumult about S. Paul, seised upon by the serjeants and brought forth, and the Jewes, that were malicious to S. Paul, thinking that Alexander might be brought to lay ſome blame upon him, queſtion'd and examined him, and then he was preſently deſirous to have made his apologie to the people, i. e. to avert the danger from himſelf, by laying it upon others, And although, by reaſon of the crie, that follows, v. 34. he is not permitted to doe it to the people, yet by what S. Paul after ſaith of him, it appears that he forſook the Chriſtian profeſſion, 1 Tim. 1. 20. and renounced, or blaſphemed, i. e. forſook Chriſt, and did S. Paul very great injury, 2 Tim. 4. 14.

h. Γραμματεὺς

Γραμματεὺς is the name of an office in the ſacri agones, the Regiſter or Actuary, who regiſtred the Victors names in a book or table, called γράμματα τῶν ἱερονικῶν, and the office, where thoſe records were put, was γραμματεῖον, ſaith Petrus Faber Agoniſt. l. 3. c. 23. & 27. Of the ordinary γραμματεῖς, ſaith Phavorinus, οὐδενὸς ἦν χύριοι ὅτι, ἀλλ' ἢ γράφειν καὶ ἀναγινώσκειν, they had no authority, but onely to write and read what they had written. So ſaith the Scholiaſt on Thucydides, γραμματεὺς ὁ ἐν τῷ δήμῳ τὰ τοῦ δήμου γράμματα ἀναγινώσκων, that uſed to read to the people the regiſters of their buſineſſe. But in theſe ſacred games, where every thing was ſacred alſo, (the Aſiarcha, bearing the perſon of Jupiter, the Amphithales of Mercury) the Γραμματεὺς here, ſaith Dominus, cited by Johannes Antiochenus, was honoured, and adored as Apollo, wearing a white robe, and a crown of pure gold, and being, ſaith he, choſen by the Senate and people, he was the better qualified, to doe what is here affirmed of him, to appeaſe the people.

i. Νεωκόρος

That the Epheſians, when they were beſieged by Cræſus, devoted or conſecrated their city to Diana, ἐξάψαντες ἐκ τοῦ νεὼ χοίνικα εἰς τὸ τεῖχος, tying with a rope the Temple and the wall of the city together, is affirmed by Herodotus l. 2. From hence it is, that that city had a peculiar relation to Diana ever after. But there being other cities, that worſhipped that Goddeſſe alſo, this is not, alone, ſufficient, to appropriate that title to Epheſus, to be her νεωκόρος, or Sacriſt. The word ſignifies ὁ τοῦ ναοῦ ἐπιμελούμενον, ſaith Phavorinus, he that takes care of the Temple, ὁ τὸν ναὸν κοσμῶν, he that adornes it, ſaith Heſychius, and ὁ ἐνσχημονίζων, he that makes clean, ſaith Suidas, from κορεῖν to ſweep; or κοσμεῖν to beautifie, ſaith the Scholiaſt on Ariſtophanes in Νεφ: p. 61. This office at other times belonged to other cities, and accordingly in antient Inſcriptions we find Νικομηδέων τρὶς Νεωκόρων, the Nicomedians being the third time in that office, and particularly of Diana, Μαγνήτων Νεωκόρων Ἀρτέμιδος, The Magneſians having that office, in Maximinus's time, and this in reſpect of the ἱεροὶ ἀγῶνες, the holy Games, which in honour of the Gods, peculiarly of Diana, were in Greece, ſometimes in one city, ſometimes in another, according to the Gods, which were celebrated by them; So that now thoſe feſtivities being celebrated to Diana, and this year, and at this time kept at Epheſus (which is alſo the reaſon of the concourſe of the people at this time) Epheſus had now the honour to take care of Diana's ſervice, and ſo to be her Νεωκόρος, her ſacriſt, or aditua, or Church-warden, as the Syriack renders the word in this place, and that is the meaning of the νεωκόρος ὤν, being at this time, this year, Diana's Sacriſt.

k. Λόγος

The Hebrew רבר which ſignifies λόγος word or ſpeech ſignifies alſo accuſation, and is accordingly rendred ריב Exod. 18. 22. and אשמה enditement Exod. 18. 16. and accordingly here the one is taken for the other, λόγος ſpeech, for an accuſation.

l. Ἀγορᾶιοι

Ἡ ἀγορᾶιος, ſaith Phavorinus, is ἡ ἡμέρα ἐν ᾗ ἀγορὰ πανήγυρις, a day when a court is kept, and ſo in Suidas and the Gloſſary [ὅτι ἡ ἀγορᾶιός ἐστι] is expounded to be the time when men goe to law, and the ſame is the meaning of ἀγορᾶιοι ἄγειν, a time not of vacation or lay daies, but of judicatures, term-time, as we call it, when the Proconſuls, who are the judges, were preſent to decide any controverſie. The word ſignifies alſo judicature ſimply, ſo in Strabo Geog: l. 13. p. 629. δικαιοῦσι ἐν αἷς τὰς ἀγορᾶιους τιθῶσι, καὶ δικαιοδοσίας, the provinces in which they exerciſe their judicatures and give every man his right. And ſo in Heſychius, Ἀγορᾶιαι (perhaps it ſhould be ἀγορᾶιον) δικαιολογίαι diſtribution of juſtice, And ἀγορᾶια, δίκαι, καὶ ἐκκλησιαστικὰ, judgment, and calling of a court.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XX.

1. And this commotion being thus compoſed at Epheſus, Paul called all the Chriſtians together, and having conſtituted Timothy Biſhop of Epheſus, 1 Tim. 1. 3. he took his leave of them, and departed from Epheſus, and paſt the direct way from thence (by Troas 2 Cor. 2. 12, 13.) to Macedonia.

1. AND after the uproar was ceaſed, Paul called unto him the diſciples, and [imbraced them, and departed for to goe into Macedonia.]

2. And there he ſpent ſome time, inſtructing and confirming them in the faith, and in all Chriſtian practiſe (ſee note on Joh. 14. 2.) and after that, departing thence, he wintred in Epirus Tit. 3. 12. and came into Greece,

2. And when he had gone over thoſe parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece,

3. And there he ſtaid three moneths, And being now on his journey to Syria, to carry almes to Judæa, he was diverted by an advertiſement that the Jewes which knew of his purpoſe, laid wait for him in the way thither to rob him, and to take away his life, thereupon he changed his determination, and reſolved to goe a little out of his way, and again to paſſe through Macedonia the third time.

3. And there abode three moneths, and when the Jewes laid wait for him, as he was about to ſaile into Syria, he * purpoſed to return into Macedonia.]

* reſolved ἐγνώμη γένετο

4,5. And Sopater went along with him as farre as Aſia, never parting from him, but Ariſtarchus, and Secundus, and Gaius, and Timotheus, and Tychicus, and Trophimus, theſe ſix went not with him through Macedonia (Sopater onely doing ſo) but went before to Aſia, and expected Paul and his company at Troas, who accordingly came thither, 2 Cor. 2. 12, 13.

4. †And there accompanied him into Aſia Sopater of Berœa: and of the Theſſalonians Ariſtarchus, and Secundus, and Gaius of Derbe, and Timotheus, and of Aſia, Tychicus and Trophimus.

5. Theſe going before, tarried for us at Troas.]

† And Sopater of Berœa accompanied him as farre as Aſia Σωσίπατρος δὲ Πύρρου Βεροιαῖος

6. And

6. And we ſailed from Philippi, after the daies of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five daies, where we abode ſeven daies.]

6. And after the Paſſeover we departed from Philippi in Macedonia, and came and met them at Troas, and ſtaid there with them ſeven daies.

7. And upon the firſt day of the week, when the diſciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow, and continued his ſpeech untill midnight.]

7. And on the Lord's day, or Sunday, the Chriſtians being met together to receive the ſacrament, (Act.2. 46.) Paul ſpake to them at large, and meaning to be gone the morrow, continued his exhortation to them untill midnight.

8. And there were many lights in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together.

* or the 3d

9. And there ſat * in a window a certain young man, named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep ſleep, and as Paul was long preaching he ſunk down with ſleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.

10. And Paul went down and fell on him, and embracing him, ſaid, Trouble not your ſelves, for his life is in him.

11. When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, ſo he departed.]

11. And they ſpent the time together in receiving the ſacrament of the body of Chriſt, and Paul farther inſtructing them till the next morning, then he departed.

12. And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.]

12. And the youth that fell out of the window, and was dead v.9. recovered, and they were joyfull at it.

13. And we went before to ſhip, and ſayled unto [a Aſſos,] there intending to take in Paul, for ſo he had appointed, minding himſelf to goe a foot.

13. Aſſos, a ſea-town of Aſia, a.

14. And when he had met with us at Aſſos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene.

15. And we ſailed thence, and came the next day over againſt Chios, and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium, and the next day we came to Miletus.

16. For Paul had determined [to ſaile by Epheſus,] becauſe he would not ſpend the time in Aſia, for he haſted, if it were poſſible for him, to be at Jeruſalem the day of Pentecoſt.

16. not to go in, or ſtay at Epheſus, but to paſſe by,

17. And from Miletus he ſent to Epheſus, and called the Elders of the Church.]

17. But yet deſirous to ſpeak with the Biſhops of Aſia, ſee note on c.19 26. he ſent to Epheſus, the chief Metropolis of Aſia, and by that means gave notice to the Biſhops of Aſia, that they ſhould come to him to Miletus.

18. And when they were come to him, he ſaid unto them, [Ye know from the firſt day that I came into Aſia, after what manner I have been with you at all ſeaſons,

18,19. Ye know in what manner I behaved my ſelf among you of Aſia, all the ſpace of three years that I was among you

19. Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears and temptations, which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jewes,] preaching the Goſpel, with all humility and affection, with great ſorrows, and hazards of dangers from the Jewes, which conſpired againſt my life,

20. And how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have ſhewed you, and taught you publickly, and from houſe to houſe,]

20. And how I freely declared to you all things that I thought uſefull for you to know, willing to uſe all opportunities of inſtructing any both in the publick ſynagogues ch.19.8. and in private ſchools v.9. and in your ſeverall houſes, whither I alſo came,

21. Teſtifying both to the Jewes, and alſo to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

21. Preaching to the Jewes and Proſelytes in their ſynagogues, and to the Gentiles elſwhere the whole doctrine of the Goſpel, aſſuring them that there was pardon to be had from God, upon amendment of their former lives, forſaking of all the impieties, which they had been guilty of, through neglect of the Moſaicall Law, and the dictates of nature, which before they ſtood obliged to obſerve, and exhorting them that they ſhould live according to the pure doctrine of Chriſt for the future.

† being bound in Spirit I go

22. And now behold, † I goe b bound in the Spirit unto Jeruſalem, not knowing the things that ſhall befall me there, 22, 23, 24. And now I am a going to Jeruſalem, willing and ready to endure what ſhall befall me there, and foreſeeing that there I ſhall be apprehended, and impriſoned, being told it by thoſe that have the gift of propheſie, (as afterwards again it appears he was, c.21.4.& 11.) whereſoever I come, and I am prepared for it; and I know not whether death it ſelf may not attend it, but whatſoever it is, I am ready to ſuffer it for the Goſpel's ſake (ſee c.21.v.13.) and count nothing of it, no nor of loſſe of life, if I may ſucceſsfully preach the Goſpel, and ſerve Chriſt faithfully in the office which he hath intruſted to me, (ſee note on Heb.13. c.) b.

23. Save that the holy Ghoſt witneſſeth in every city, ſaying, That bonds and afflictions abide me.

24. But none of theſe things move me, neither count I my life dear unto my ſelf, ſo that I might finiſh my courſe with joy, and the miniſtery which I have received of the Lord Jeſus to teſtifie the Goſpel of the grace of God.]

25. And now behold I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdome of God, ſhall ſee my face no more.]

25. And now this I know, that after this my departure from you, ye are never likely to ſee me again, ye, I ſay, of Aſia, whom I have ſo long converſt with, preaching the Goſpel among you, and therefore I ſhall take this long farewell of you.

26. And to that end, I proclaim to you all, that I am guiltleſſe of that ruine, that will I foreſee befall thoſe that do not keep cloſe to Chriſt, having done my beſt to prevent it.

26. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the bloud of all men.]

27. For I have fully communicated to you the whole Chriſtian doctrine, which may ſerve you as an antidote againſt all the hereſies which are likely to break in among you, v. 29.

27. For I have not ſhunned to declare unto you all the counſell of God.]

28. Wherefore, ye that are Biſhops or Governours of the ſeverall Churches of Aſia, Revel. 1. 11. (ſee note on Phil. 1. 6.) and who were deſigned to that office by the appointment of God himſelf, look to your ſelves and to the Churches committed to your truſt, to rule and order all the faithfull Chriſtians under you, thoſe whom that Chriſt might gain to himſelf he laid down his own life to purchaſe them.

c.

28. Take heed therefore unto your ſelves and to all the flock, over the which the holy Ghoſt [c] * hath made you overſeers, to † feed the Church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his own bloud.]

29. For tis certain that when I am gone, you will ſoon be ſolicited with falſe teachers, ſeducing the faithfull and doing great miſchiefe.

29. For I know this, that after my departing ſhall grievous wolves enter in among you, not ſparing the flock.]

30. And ſome of your own Churches ſhall vent pernicious falſe doctrines to make diviſions and factions, and get followers.

30. Alſo of your own ſelves ſhall men ariſe, ſpeaking perverſe things, to draw away diſciples after them.]

31. Be ye careſull therefore, remembring how much ſorrow and tears it hath coſt me to forewarn you of theſe things before hand.

31. Therefore watch, and remember that by the ſpace of three years I ceaſed not to warn every one night and day with tears.]

32. And now I recommend you to God and the Goſpel (ſee note on Heb. 13. c.) which if adhered to, will be able to inſtruct and perfect you, and to bring you to the bliſſe of Saints.

32. And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are ſanctified.]

34. But you can witneſſe for me that I have by working at my trade of making tents, maintained my ſelf, and thoſe that are with me.

34. Yea, you your ſelves know that theſe hands have miniſtred unto my neceſſities, and to them that are with me.]

35. I have as by words, ſo by actions alſo demonſtrated to you, how that men are obliged by pains taking to enable themſelves to relieve the poor, and not to be chargeable or burthenſome to others, according to that ſaying of Chriſt (not recorded in the Goſpels) that 'tis a bleſſed and an heroicall thing to give to others out of a mans own earnings, and this infinitely more bleſſed, and better becoming a Chriſtian then to be relieved by others.

35. I have ſhewed you all things, how that ſo labouring you ought to ſupport the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jeſus, how he ſaid, * It is more bleſſed to give then to receive.]

* It is a bleſſed thing to give, rather then receive Μακάριόν ἐστι διδόναι μᾶλλον ἢ λαμβάνειν

36. And when he had thus ſpoken he kneeled down and prayed with them all.

37. And they all wept ſore, and fell on Pauls neck and kiſſed him.

38. Sorrowing moſt of all for the words which he ſpake, that they ſhould ſee his face no more. And they accompanied him to the ſhip.

What [bound in Spirit] ſignifies may perhaps be judged by the like phraſe [poor in ſpirit] Mat. 5. 2. That ſignifies him, which though he be not actually poor, yet is prepared to bear poverty contentedly: And ſo Paul reſolving to venture the hazard of impriſonment here, by going up to Jeruſalem, whither if he goe, he knowes, and the Spirit of God tells him v. 23. it will befall him, may be ſaid to be bound in Spirit. But it may alſo be interpreted onely of his preſaging and foreſeeing his bonds, which being revealed by the Spirit of God to others of him, and probably immediately to him alſo, he may be ſaid to be δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι, bound in the Spirit in that reſpect. b. δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι

What Ὑμᾶς put, or ſet, or appointed] importeth here, is ſomewhat uncertain, It may ſignifie their Ordination to the Epiſcopal office, attributed to the holy Ghoſt, as to the Originall, by whoſe deſcent upon c. ἔθετο ἐπισκόπους

1. AND it came to paſſe, that after we were * gotten from them, and had launched, we came with a ſtreight courſe] unto Coos, and the day following unto Rhodes, and from thence unto Patara.

1. After this ſad parting (c. 20. 37.) from the Biſhops of Aſia at Miletus (c. 20. 17.) we took ſhip, and ſayled proſperouſly without any incommodation

2. And finding a ſhip ſailing over into Phœnicia, we went aboard and ſet forth.

3. Now when we had diſcovered Cyprus, we left it on the left hand, and ſailed into Syria, and landed at Tyre: for there the ſhip † was to unlade her burthen.

4. And finding diſciples, we tarryed there ſeven days, who * ſaid to Paul through the Spirit, that he ſhould not go up to Jeruſalem.]

4. And meeting there with ſome that had received the Goſpel, and were indued with gifts, particularly that of prophecy, (ſee c. 20. 23, 24.) we ſtaied with them a while at Tyre, and they by revelation told Paul, that he would incurre much hazard by going up to Jeruſalem, and therefore adviſed him not to go.

5. And when we had accompliſhed thoſe days, we departed and went away, and they all brought us on our way with wives and children, till we were out of the city, and we kneeled down on the ſhore and prayed.]

5. But this moved not Paul (ſee c. 23. 24.) but we left that place, all of them, men, women, and children attending us out of the city, and there, on the ſea ſhore, we kneeled down, and prayed at parting.

6. And when we had taken our leave one of another, we took ſhip, and they, returned home again.

† having ſailed

7. And [a] † when we had finiſhed our courſe from Tyre, we ame to Ptolemais and ſaluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

8. And the next day [we that were of Pauls company departed, and came unto Cæſarea, and we entred into the houſe of Philip the Evangeliſt (which was one of the ſeven) and abode with him.]

8. Paul and the reſt of us that accompanied him, (whereof Luke the writer of this book was one) went from Ptolemais to Cæſarea a haven town in Syria (ſee note on c. 18. c.) called Stratos tower, but rebuilt by Herod, and called Cæſarea (ſee note on Mat. 16. c.) and went into the houſe of Philip, he that, being one of the ſeven Deacons, was by the Apoſtles ſent out to Samaria and other places to preach the Goſpel, (ſee note on Joh. 20, 21.) and with him we made ſome ſtay.

9. And the ſame man had four daughters, virgins, which [did prophecy.]

9. had the gift of foretelling things to come.

10. And as we tarryed there many days there came down from Judæa a certain [Prophet] named Agabus.

10. See note on c. 15. c.

11. And when he was come unto us [he took Pauls girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and ſaid, Thus ſaith the holy Ghoſt, ſo ſhall the Jews at Jeruſalem, bind the man that oweth this girdle, and ſhall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.]

11. after the manner of prophets of old, which often prophecyed by ſymbols, or ſignificant expreſſions, of what they foretold, he took Pauls girdle, and bound his hands and feet with it, and ſaid, it hath been revealed to me by God, that after this manner that I have bound my ſelf with Pauls girdle, ſo the Jews of Jeruſalem ſhall bind Paul and deliver him to the Procurator of the Romans to be put to death.

12. And when we heard theſe things, both we, and they of that place beſought him, not to go up to Jeruſalem.

13. Then Paul anſwered, [What mean ye to weep, and to break mine heart? for I am ready, not to be bound onely, but alſo to dye at Jeruſalem, for the name of the Lord Jeſus.]

13. Why do you by your compaſſionate ſad diſſwaſions trouble and grieve me, who have nothing elſe to afflict or diſturbe me, but your importunity againſt my taking this journey? For of my ſelf I am moſt heartily willing to ſuffer any thing, bonds or death it ſelf, for the propagating of the Goſpel of Chriſt, or for the profeſſing my conſtancy in it, in deſpight of all perſecutions.

15. And

15. And after thoſe daies we [took up our carriages, and went up] to Jeruſalem.

16. one, who had formerly received the faith when Paul and Barnabas was at Cyprus, (c.13.4.) who would gladly entertain us in our paſſage.

† bringing us to one Mnaſon a Cypriote δηῦρο πρὸς Μνάσωνά τινα

17. And when we were come to Jeruſalem, the brethren received us gladly.

18. and we went to James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. a.) who with all the Biſhops of Judæa (ſee note on Phil. 1. b.) were aſſembled together, that they might in councel conſider of S. Paul's buſineſſe.

18. And the day following, Paul [went in with us unto James, and all the Elders were preſent.]

19. And when he had ſaluted them, he declared particularly, what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his miniſterie.

20. they bleſſed God for his wonderfull works wrought upon the heathen Idolaters by his preaching; And after that, began to tell him what at preſent would be prudent for him to doe, not ſo much in reſpect of the unbeleiving, as the converted Jews, of whom there were many myriads, great multitudes in Judæa, who though they had received the Goſpel, yet ſtuck cloſe to the obſervances of the Moſaicall law.

20. And when they heard it, [they glorified the Lord, and ſaid unto him, Thou ſeeſt, brother, how many * thouſands of Jewes there are which beleive, and they are all zealous of the law.]

* myriads, or ten thouſands, μυριάδες

21. Theſe, ſaid they, have heard it affirm'd of thee, that not only according to the decrees of our councel, thou permitteſt the Gentile-converts to remain uncircumciſed, but alſo that thoſe Jewes that are diſperſed in Aſia, and elſwhere, whom thou haſt converted to the faith, thou perſwadeſt them that they may leave off circumciſion, and the other ceremonies of Moſes law.

21. And they are informed of thee that thou teacheſt all the Jewes, which are among the Gentiles, to forſake Moſes, ſaying, That they ought not to circumciſe their children, neither to walk after the cuſtomes.]

22. This therefore, (ſay they) will be the event, in all probability, All theſe Jewiſh Chriſtians will hear of thy being come hither, and ſo will come in multitudes to ſee how thou behaveſt thy ſelf in this matter.

22. What is it therefore? The multitude muſt needs come together, for they will hear that thou art come.]

23. Therefore take our advice, There be four men here at this time, which have had a Nazarites vow upon them, which being accompliſht, (ſee Act. 18. 18.) they are now to perform the ceremonies preſcribed, Num. 6. 13.

23. Doe therefore this that we ſay to thee, We have four men, which have a vow on them.]

24. Them take, and purifie thy ſelf with them, and be at charges with them, that they may ſhave their heads, and all may know that † thoſe things, whereof they are informed concerning thee, are nothing, but that thou thy ſelf alſo * walkeſt orderly and keepeſt the law.]

24. Theſe doe thou perform with them, and make proviſion of ſacrifices for them, ſuch as the law preſcribes, Num. 6. 14. that ſo they may ſhave their heads according to order, Num. 6. 18. (ſee note on c. 18. a.) and by this means they will be perſwaded that they have had falſe reports of thee, and that thou doſt ſtill obſerve the Moſaicall rites.

† there is nothing of thoſe things, or, nothing is true of thoſe things, οὐδὲν ἐστιν ὧν

* walkeſt keeping the law, φυλάσσων τὸν νόμον

25. As touching the Gentiles which beleive, we have written and concluded that they obſerve no ſuch thing, ſave only that they keep themſelves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from ſtrangled, and from fornication.]

25. As for the Gentiles, that have received the Goſpel, c. 15. we have made a decree, thou knoweſt, (and ſent it to Antioch by thee and Barnabas,) by which they are not required to any ſuch obſervances, or to any more then onely to obſerve the precepts of the ſons of Adam and Noah.

26. And Paul took their advice, thus farre to comply with the Judaizing Chriſtians, that he might not exaſperate them, and went into the Temple, and did all that belonged to the purifying of the Nazarites, and when that was done, gave ſolemn notice of it, upon which they were, according to the law of Moſes, to proceed to offer an offering for each perſon.

26. Then Paul took the men, and † the next day purifying himſelf with them, entred into the Temple, to ſignifie the accompliſhment of the daies of purification, untill that an offering ſhould be offered for every one of them.]

† ſee note on Mat. 1. b.

27. And when the ſeven daies were almoſt ended, the Jewes which were from Aſia, when they ſaw him in the Temple, ſtirred up all the people, and laid hands on him,]

28. Crying out upon him, as the man, that had taught all men, whereſoever he preacht, that the Jewes ſhould be deſtroyed, the Moſaicall law be aboliſh't, and the Temple, where now he was purifying himſelf, laid waſt, and had brought heathen men into the Temple, which was utterly unlawfull to be done, and was the profaning of it.

28. Crying out, Men of Iſrael, help: this is the man, that teacheth all men every where againſt the people, and the law, and this place, and farther, brought Greeks alſo into the Temple, and hath polluted this holy place.]

29. (This laſt thing they ſpake confidently, but not truly, onely having ſeen Trophimus with him in the city of Jeruſalem, and knowing him to be a Gentile of Epheſus, they beleived that he had carried him into the Temple, and from thence made this concluſion.)

29. (For they had ſeen before with him in the city, Trophimus an Epheſian, whom they ſuppoſed that Paul had brought into the Temple.])

30. And

30. And all the city was moved, and the people ran together, and they took Paul, and drew him out of the Temple, and forthwith the dores were shut.

30. And all the people were exaſperated upon this, and having apprehended, haled him out of the Temple, and the dores of the Temple were preſently ſhut after them.

31. And as they went about to kill him, tidings came to the chief captain of the band, that all Jeruſalem was in an uproare.

31. And they fell a beating Paul, and had like to have killed him, had not the commander or Colonel, that was appointed to guard the Temple, and to quell all tumults there, (ſee note on Lu.22. f.) been told, that there was an uproare.

Notes on Chap. XXI.

2. διανύσαντες ἀνύω

Of this word διανύσαντες] it is generally ſuppoſed, that it is compounded of the old word ἀνύω and that that is to be rendred perficio, to perfect, or finiſh; But how this notion ſhould be competible to this place, where they are in the midſt of their journey or navigation, it is not eaſie to determine. It were ſomewhat more reaſonable to ſuſpect, that διανύσαντες might by a ſcribe be miſtaken for διαναύσαντες, (as we find in Heſychius, διαναῦσαι διαπλεῦσαι) and then ἀπὸ τῆς διαναύσεως, will be no more then ſayling, or having ſayled ἀπὸ Τύρου from Tyre, and then it fitly follows, whither κατηλθομεν, which is again uſed in this ſenſe, c.18.13. or, as the Kings MS. reads κατήνυσαν, (perhaps that ſhould be κατήχθησαν, chap. 27.3. contrary to ἀναχθέντες launching out v.4.) we advanced, or went forward to Ptolemais. But if the ordinary reading be retained, then it muſt be obſerved, that as Ἀνύω is generally explicated by πλέω, and πλεύσω, and ἐκπλεῖν in Heſychius, ſo each of theſe in theſe writers ſignifies many times no more then πλεῖν to doe, and receives the particular notion from the word, that is joyned with it. So ἱερατεύειν λειτουργίας to perform the ſervices, Heb.9.6. So πλεῖν δρόμον is to run a race, and is not ſo properly finiſhing his courſe, as that ſignifies life, 2 Tim. 4.7. for there it appears ver.17,18. that his life, and his Apoſtolacy was not at an end, (ſee note on the title of that Epiſtle,) ſo in the Old verſe of Linus,

Καλὸν πλεῖν Θεῷ πάντα, καὶ ἀνύειν ἀδύνατον οὐδέν,

All things are eaſie for God to doe, and nothing is impoſſible, 'tis evident that πλεῖν and ἀνύειν ſignifies to doe, and no more, And then διανύσαντες ἀπὸ τῆς Τύρου (for there is no reaſon to ſet a comma before ἀπὸ) will be no more then πλεύσαντες, having ſayled, or made our navigation, or having taken (but not finiſht) our courſe, for it follows immediatly, we advanced to Ptolemais.

They came, ſaith he, under pretence of Religion up to Jeruſalem with Sicæ or daggers under their coates, and being once invited by Felix ſecretly to ſtrike into the train of Jonathan the high Prieſt, and ſo to kill him, for which they were not puniſhed, they after that ſolemnly came up at every feaſt, and either for revenge, or being hired, killed many even in the Temple it ſelf, ſaith Joſephus, and ſo pollnted it in that manner, that made it neceſſary for God to ſend the Roman Armies thither to purifie it, by way of luſtration. And theſe (ſaith he, c. 7.) within a little while, grew into a very vaſt number, uſing ſwords like the Perſian acinaces, ſuch as the Romans call Sicæ, &c. As for the number of men that were ſeduced by this deceiver, writers, it ſeems, do not agree upon them, neither is it neceſſary they ſhould, thoſe kinds of accounts of multitudes being of neceſſity uncertain; Onely 'tis a little ſtrange that Euſebius in Chron: out of Africanus ſhould call them τρισχιλίους three thouſand: and in his Hiſtory thirty thouſand, but perhaps the miſtake of numerall letters, may cauſe that variation. And then the three thouſand there will be more agreeable with the chief officers account here, who makes them but four thouſand.

CHAP. XXII.

1. MEN, Brethren, and Fathers, [hear ye my defence, which I make now unto you.]

1, give me leave, & audience to purge and clear my ſelf from the accuſation charged on me v. 28.

2. (And when they heard that he ſpake in the Hebrew tongue to them, they kept the more ſilence: and he ſaith)

3. I am verily a man, which am a Jew, born in Tarſus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city [at the ᵃ feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the manner of the law of the fathers, * and was zealous towards God as ye all are this day.

3, 4. a ſcholar of Gamaliel's, a Doctor of the Phariſees, and accordingly was imbued with the ſtricteſt Judaicall principles, and ſo became as zealous a propugner of the law of Moſes, and religion of the Jews, as that is oppoſed to the reformation wrought by Chriſt, as any of you are at this time, being of that ſort of men among the Jews, that are called zelots, and are very punctuall and ſtrict in the obſervances of the law, and think themſelves obliged to put all men to death, that teach any thing againſt it. And ſo did I to the Chriſtians.

* being a Zelot of God, ζηλωτὴς τοῦ θεοῦ

7. And I fell unto the ground, and heard [a voyce, ſaying] unto me, Saul, Saul, Why perſecuteſt thou me?

8. And I anſwered, Who art thou, Lord? And he ſaid unto me, I am Jeſus of Nazareth, whom thou perſecuteſt.

9. And they that were with me ſaw indeed the light, and were afraid: but heard not the voyce of him that ſpake to me.]

9. And they of my company heard the thunder and ſaw the lightning round about me, though they heard not (ſee note on c. 9. b.) the ſpeech that out of the thunder was delivered to me.

10. And I ſaid, What ſhall I do, Lord? And the Lord ſaid unto me, Ariſe, and go into Damaſcus, and there [it ſhall be told thee of all things, which are appointed for thee to doe.]

10. I have provided and appointed one Ananias to come unto thee, and declare to thee what I have deſigned for thee to do and ſuffer for me.

11. And being blinde, and not able to ſee, by reaſon of this ſhining appearance, v. 6. I was fain to be led by thoſe that were with me, and ſo I was conducted to Damaſcus.

12. And one Ananias, [a devout man according to the law,] having a good report of all the Jews which dwelt there,

12. A Chriſtian Jew, that lived according to the Moſaical law,

13. Came unto me, and ſtood, and ſaid unto me, Brother Saul, receive thy ſight: and the ſame hour I [looked up upon him.]

15. For of thee it is appointed that thou ſhalt preach and make known to all men the things, which Chriſt hath made known unto thee.

16. And now, why tarrieſt thou? Ariſe and be baptized, and waſh away thy ſins, calling upon the name of the Lord.]

16. To what purpoſe therefore ſhould any delay be made of baptizing thee, and admitting thee into the Church, by that ſeal of the covenant, whereby thou art engaged to forſake, and God to pardon all thy former ſins, (upon condition of a ſincere change on thy part) upon which thou maieſt joyn with the Church in performance of all Chriſtian duties of devotion to God.

18. And in a viſion me thought I ſaw

Chriſt, and he commanded me to go ſpeedily out of this city, becauſe my former zeal againſt the Goſpell would hinder my preaching of it now, from being beleived, or heeded by thoſe of Jeruſalem.

argued, that my former zeal againſt Chriſtianity being ſo remarkable among all the Jews, as it muſt needs be by my impriſoning and ſcourging the profeſſors of it, in the conſiſtories of many cities, c. 9. 2. by my joyning and aſſiſting in the ſtoning of Steven, and keeping the accuſers garments, whilſt they threw ſtones at him, c. 7. 58. & 8. 1. this might be an argument to aſſure the Jews at Jeruſalem, that it is on right grounds, that I now teach the contrary, and this may give them a greater willingneſſe to enquire into the grounds of my change, and ſo may render me a more competent atteſter of the doctrine of Chriſt now, by how much the more I oppoſed it formerly.

21. And he ſaid unto me, Depart, for I will ſend thee farre hence unto the Gentiles.]

21. But this, me thought, did not prevail with Chriſt for my ſtaying at Jeruſalem, but he in his infinite wiſdome ſeeing that this would not perſwade, but exaſperate the Jews, commanded me to depart from Jeruſalem telling me, that he would give me a commiſſion, as an Apoſtle, to goe and preach to the Gentiles, who had not that exception to me, and would more cheerfully receive me.

21. Thus farre the Jews had patience to ſuffer him to

23. And as they cryed out, and caſt off their clothes, and threw duſt into the aire,]

23. And while they were thus violent making as if they would preſently ſtone him (ſee c. 7. 57. 58.) and giving other expreſſions of their fury,

24. The chief captain commanded him to be brought into the caſtle, and bad that he ſhould be examined by ſcourging, that he might know wherefore they cryed ſo againſt him.]

24. The Colonel or chief commander of the guard, bid the ſouldiers carry him into the Tower, and commanded that he ſhould be ſorely ſcourged (ſee note b.) till he would confeſſe what it was that he had done, with which they were ſo enraged. See v. 30.

* he bent him forward or prepared him for ſcourges,

25. And as * they [b] bound him with thongs, Paul ſaid unto the Centurion that ſtood by, Is it lawfull for you to ſcourge a man that is a [c] Roman and uncondemned?

25. And as the captain which was appointed to ſcourge him, and brought him to the block, and faſtned him to it, in order to the ſcourging of him, Paul ſpake to the Captain, that had the execution of that command committed to him, ſaying, Will the Roman laws permit you to deal thus with a free denizon of Rome, before any ſentence is legally paſt upon him?

b. c.

26. When the Centurion heard that, he went and told the chief captain, ſaying Take heed what thou doſt, for this man is a Roman.]

26. This a Captain of a troop told to the Colonel and withall admoniſht him what danger he might incurre by doing thus to a free denizon of Rome.

27. Then the chief captain came, and ſaid unto him, Tell me, art thou a [Roman?] He ſaid, Yea.

27. a free denizon of Rome?

28. And

d. 28. I am not ſo by birth, but purchaſed the privilede at a great charge. But Paul ſaid, the city where I was born, and my parents before me, though of a Jewiſh ſtock, had by living there, this privilege.

28. And the chief captain ſaid. [* With a great ſumme obtained I this [d] freedome. And Paul ſaid, But I was free born.

† At a great price bought I this privilege of a citizen, Ἐγὼ πολλοῦ κεφαλαίου τὴν πολιτείαν ταύτην ἐκτησάμην.

29. Then they ceaſed from their deſigne of ſcourging him, ver. 24. to make him confeſſe his crime, and the conſideration that he was a free man of Rome, made the Colonel fear he had already done more then he could well anſwer in binding, or putting chains upon him, c. 22. 33.

29. Then ſtraightway they departed from him, which ſhould have examined him, and the chief captain alſo was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and becauſe he had bound him.

30. And therefore he ſoon looſed him from his bands, but yet being deſirous to know the bottome of the buſineſſe, he convented the Jewes Sanhedrim, and brought out Paul, to ſee what they would object againſt him.

30. On the morrow, becauſe he would have known the certainty, wherefore he was accuſed of the Jewes, he looſed him from his bands and commanded the chief prieſts and all their councel to appear, and brought Paul down, and ſet him before them.]

a. Πόδας Ταμαλιήλ. It was the manner of diſciples to ſit at the feet of their Maſters which in Pirke Avoth is called to duſt themſelves in the duſt of their feet, for ſo ſaith Joſe there, Let thy houſe be the houſe of aſſembly for wiſe men, i.e. be thou ever converſant in the ſchools of the Doctors וְהֱוֵי מִתְאַבֵּק בְּעַפַר רַגְלֵיהֶם. and doe thou roll, or duſt, or tumble thy ſelfe in the duſt of their feet.

b. Ἱμάντες That ἱμάντες are here the ſame that μάστιγες ſcourges v. 24. there is no doubt to be made, Ἱμᾶντες λῶροι, they ſignifie whips, or ſcourges, ſaith Heſychius, and Ἱμὰς λῶρος, οἱ δὲ ῥάβδον ὑποτείνων ἱμάντι they whip him with a ſcourge, or cord, adding καὶ ὅτι τὸ χαλινόν, (it ſhould ſure be χοινίς) it is alſo uſed for a rope. And ſo Ἱμάσαν ἱμαστιξαν, Ἱμάσθλαις μάστιξας, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἱμάσθλην ὃ ὅτι τύπτειν τῷ ἱμάντι, and Ἱμάσαι πατάξαι πλῆξαι μαστιξαι, it ſhould ſure be μαστιξι. All to the ſame purpoſe that the word ſignifies cords, or ſcourges to beat with. This of ſcourges was a puniſhment much ſeverer then that of rods, Porcia lex (ſaith Cicero pro Rabirio) virgas ab omnium Romanorum civium corpore amovet, hic miſericors flagella retulit, the Porcian law freeth a Roman citizens body from rods, and he a mercifull man (ſpeaking ironically) hath brought back ſcourging. And accordingly the μάστιγες or ἱμαντες ſcourges here are uſed, as elſwhere the greateſt torments are εἰς ἀνετασμὸν for examination, or to make him confeſſe what his crime was, v. 24. ſee 2 Mac. 7. 37. As for προτείνειν that ſignifies literally to bend forward] it referres to the cuſtome in ſcourging, which was to faſten them to a block or piece of wood, made faſt to the earth, of a cubit and an half high, for the perſon that was to be puniſhed, to lean on, bending his body down to it, And ſo προέτεινεν here ſignifies the bending him forward to this block, or little pillar, that the upper part of his body ſhould lean on it, and ſo expoſing him to the Lictor, or executioner. This is here ſaid of the Centurion in the ſingular number, προέτεινεν, whoſe office, it ſeems, it was to doe this.

c. Ῥωμαῖος That Paul was free of Rome by being born in a city that had the Roman privileges, is ſufficiently known, ſo ſaith Philo of Agrippa, φίλων ἑαυτοῦ πατρίδας ὅλας τὴν Ῥωμαϊκὴς ἐξίωσε πολιτείας, he gave the privileges of the Roman citizenſhip to whole countreys of ſome of his friends. So the Philippians call themſelves Romans, Act. 16. 21. Philippians ἐκ πατρίδος by countrey Romans ἐκ ψηφισμάτων by decrees, ſaith Photius Ep: ρβ. p. 146. & Ep: σμζ. And that Tarſus the Metropolis of Cilicia was ſuch, is intimated by Diodorus Siculus l. 47. where ſpeaking of the Emperours Julius and Auguſtus, he ſaith, ὅτου μὲν προσφιλῶς τῷ Καίσαρι τῷ προτέρῳ καὶ δι' ἐκεῖνον καὶ τῷ δευτέρῳ οἱ Ταρσεῖς εἶχον ὅσι καὶ Ἰουλιόπολιν σφᾶς ἀπ' αὐτῶ μετονομάσαι, Thoſe of Tarſus were ſo kind to Julius, and after for his ſake to Auguſtus Caeſar, that from his own name he call'd them Juliopolis: that it was unlawfull for any ſuch perſon to be bound, or ſcourged, is apparent by Cicero Or: 5. in Verr: Facinus eſt vincire civem Romanum, ſcelus verberare, prope parricidium necare, quid dicam in crucem tollere? It is a foule fault for any Prator &c. to bind a citizen of Rome, a piacular offence to ſcourge him, a kind of parricide to kill him, what ſhall I call the crucifying of ſuch an one? And for that that followes of his being ſcourged before condemnation, (as being by way of examination, or ἀνετασμὸς ver. 24. it is here ſuppoſed to be,) 'tis that which Cujacius hath obſerved out of Salvian to be diſtinctly againſt law; And all that is here ſaid in this verſe, is ſet down by S. Paul, as diſtinctly according to the Roman form, as if the whole verſe were taken and tranſlated out of their law. Yet was not this ſo farre true, that a Roman citizen might not be puniſhed, but, as * Rawardus obſerves, the cuſtome was, that before he were ſo puniſhed, he ſhould, judicio duumvirum, be adjudg'd to loſe his priviledge, and he uncitizen'd, and pronounced an enemie of the common-wealth, and then he might be ſcourged or put to death, that being the form of diſfranchizing him, Lictor colliga manus, or caput obnubito, infelici reſte ſuſpendito, verberato vel intra pomœrium vel extra pmœrium, Lictor bind his hands, or cover his face, hang him, ſcourge him either within or without the ſuburbs, as Livy teſtifies, l. 1.

Μαλιὰ ἀκριβῶς μετὰ Ἀντιγράφου

Moſt of the Jewes, ſaith Philo in leg: ad Caium, were Ῥωμαῖοι ἀπελευθερωθέντες Romans made free, ἀιχμαλωτοὶ γὰρ ἀχθέντες εἰς Ἰταλίαν ὑπὸ τῶν κεκτημένων ἠλευθερώθησαν, for being brought captive into Italy, they were ſet at at liberty by their maſters that poſſeſt them, but payed a price for that favour. So 2 Mac. 4. 9. Jaſon promiſeth a great ſumme of money to Antiochus, among other things to have power to make ſome of Jeruſalem citizens of Antioch, meaning to make his money ſoon up again by ſelling it to thoſe that deſired that privilege (ſee note on Phil. 3. k.) So ſaith Photius Epiſt: ρβ. p. 145. Τιμᾷς γὰρ ἀπήλαυον τότε ἐκεῖνο χαιρῷ οὐκ ὄντι μόνον ἰθαγενεῖς τῆ Ῥώμης ἐπύγχανον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅσοις ἀυτῆς ἡ κλῆσις νόμῳ χαρίσων ἢ χρημάτων ἐπολιτεύετο, About that time that privilege was enjoyed not only by thoſe which were natives of Rome, but but to as many as either by favour or money were made partakers of that appellation. So also Epist: ομς. p. 378. & σμζ. p.379. ἔθνος ἀλλόφυλοι, εἰς Ῥωμαίων ἐπίλεκτοι πολιτογραφίαν, being aliens of another nation and countrey, they were received into the Roman album, made citizens of Rome. Such an one it seems was the chief Commander here, who had himselfe personally bought this freedome or privilege of a citizen of Rome. But Paul was born to this liberty, by being born in a city, that had obtained of the Emperours that privilege for all the inhabitants thereof, (see note c.) Thus in Eusebius Eccl: Hist: l.5. c.1. in the examining of Christians by the persecutors, ὅσοι ἐξόχων πολιτείαν Ῥωμαίων ἐχρημάτισαν, they that proved to be municipes, free denizons of Rome, τὰ τῶν ἀνιτήτων τῆς κεφαλῆς, their heads were cut off, A privilege which belongs to such, in stead of more ignominious punishments. So Josephus the historian, born at Jerusalem, of the sacerdotal family, ἐξ ἱερέων τε καὶ ἱερέως, of priests, and himself a priest, saith Photius, Ep: σμζ. had the privilege of a Romane, and was called by a Romane name, Flavius, the prænomen of the Emperour Vespasian.

CHAP. XXIII.

Paraphrase.

1. AND Paul, earnestly beholding the councell, said, Men and brethren, [I have lived in all good conscience before God untill this day.] 1. I have, all my life long, both when I was a propugner of the Mosaicall law against Christ's reformation, and since I have been a preacher of the Gospel, acted sincerely and uprightly according to my conscience.

2. And the high priest Ananias] commanded them that stood by to smite him on the mouth. 2. And Ananias, the chief person among the Jewes, (see note on Lu 3.b.)

* will, μέλλει 3. Then said Paul unto him, [God * shall smite thee, thou whited wall, for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?] 3. God will punish thee by way of retaliation, deale with thee, as thou hast done with me, thou hypocrite. Dost thou sit like a magistrate or distributer of legall justice, and dost thou break the law thy self, and command me to be punisht, before thou hast heard the cause? (see c.22 25.)

4. And they that stood by, said, [Revilest thou Gods high priest?] 4. Dost thou speak such contumelious words to him, who is the high priest of Gods appointment, a sacred person, and under God, the chief Magistrate among the Jewes?

5. Then said Paul, [I wist not, brethren, that he was the high priest: for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.] 5. I did not know that to be true, which thou tellest me, that Ananias was an high priest of Gods appointment, (that he was not so, nor yet the high priest put in by the Roman Procurator at this time, see note on Lu 3. b.) However knowing him to be a person in authority, placed in a judicature (as Paul confesseth v.3.) I acknowledge I did amisse, and am sorry I did revile him, for that is unlawfull, by that place of scripture, Exod.22. 28.

6. But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the councel, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee, of the hope and resurrection of the dead, I am called in question.] 6. And Paul discerning the Sanhedrim to consist partly of Pharisees, who beleive another life after this, partly of Sadducees, that doe not, said aloud, I am (as my father was) of the sect of the Pharisees, and the main thing that I am question'd for, is my beleiving that there is another life after this, which is a pure Pharisaical doctrine, which all of that sect hold, as well as I.

7. And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees, and the multitude was divided.

8. For the Sadducees say that there is [no resurrection, neither Angel, nor Spirit,] but the Pharisees confesse both. 8. no life after this, no immortal Spirit, nor soul of man subsisting without a body.

† the Spirit 9. And there arose a great crie, and the [Scribes that were of the Pharisees part, arose and strove, saying, We find no evil in this man, but if † a [a] Spirit, or an Angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God.] 9. Doctors of the law, which were generally of the Pharisees opinion, took his part, and profest to think he had done nothing amisse, and that 'twas possible that he had received some infusion or incitation from Gods Spirit, or else some voice from heaven, or vision by an Angel, and if he had, 'twould not become them to resist his doctrine, lest if that were truly revealed to him by God, they should fight against God himself. 2.

* And there being a great uproar, or sedition, πολλῆς δὲ γενομένης στάσεως † a band of souldiers, σπεῖραν * the things concerning me, τὰ περὶ ἐμοῦ 10. * And when there arose a great dissension, the chief captain, fearing lest Paul should have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded † the souldiers [to goe down,] and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle. 10. to go to him at the barre, where he was, as a prisoner, answering for himself,

11. And the night following [the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul; for as thou hast testified * of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witnesse also at Rome.] 11. Paul saw a vision again, and God appeared to stand by him, and encourage him, telling him, that he should now receive no farther harm there, but as he had defended and avowed the faith of Christ there at Jerusalem, so he should live to doe at Rome also.

12. And when it was day,] certain of the Jewes banded together, and bound themselves under a curse, saying, that they would neither eat nor drink, till they had killed Paul. 12. And he had soon a notable testimony of the virtue of Gods protection over him, promised him in that vision, for early in the very next morning †confederacy or agreement by oath, συνωμοσίαν 13. And they were more then fourty which had [made this † conspiracy.] 13. thus bound themselves by oath and execration on themselves.

14. And they came to the chief prieſts and elders, and ſaid, We have bound our ſelves under a great curſe, that we will eat nothing, untill we have ſlain Paul.]

14. And they came to the Sanhedrim, and told ſome of them what they had reſolved on.

15. Now therefore ye, with the councell, ſignifie unto the chief captain, that he bring him down unto you to morrow, as though you would * enquire ſomething more perfectly concerning him: and we, or ever he come neer, are ready to kill him.]

15. And therefore deſired that the whole Sanhedrim would ſignifie their deſire to the Colonel, that he would on the morrow bring Paul down to them, to examine him upon ſome interrogatories; And, ſaid they, by the way, before he come neer the Councel-houſe, we will lie in ambuſh, and be ſure to kill him.

18. So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and ſaid, Paul the priſoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath ſomething to ſay unto thee.

19. Then the chief captain took him by the hand, and went with him aſide privately, and asked him, What is it, that thou haſt to tell me?

20. And he ſaid, The Jewes have agreed to deſire thee that thou wouldſt bring down Paul to morrow into the Councel, as though they would enquire ſomewhat * of him more perfectly.

21. But doe not thou yeild unto them, for there lie in wait for him of them more then fourty men, which have bound themſelves with an oath, that they will neither eat nor drink, till they have killed him, and now they are ready, looking for a promiſe from thee.

22. So the chief captain then let the young man depart, and charged him, See thou tell no man, that thou haſt ſhewed theſe things to me.

23. And he called unto him two [Centurions, ſaying, Make ready two hundred ſouldiers to goe to Cæſarea, and horſe-men, threeſcore and ten, and ſpear-men two hundred, at the third houre of the night.]

23. Captains of two bands, and bid them have their bands in readineſſe, and take to their aſſiſtance 70 horſe-men, and 200 ſpear-men to go to Cæſarea Stratonis, an haven town, (ſee note on c. 10. c.) preſently after nine of the clock that night.

24. And provide [them beaſts that they may ſet Paul on,] and bring him ſafe unto Felix the Governour.

28. And when I would have known the cauſe wherefore they accuſed him, I brought him forth into their Councel.

29. Whom I perceived to be accuſed of queſtions of their law, but to have [nothing laid to his charge, worthy of death or of bands.]

29. no charge brought againſt him puniſhable either with death or bonds by the Roman law (which had not yet ſet out any decree againſt Chriſtians.)

30. And * when it was told me how that the Jewes laid wait for the man, I ſent ſtraightway to thee, and [gave commandement to his accuſers alſo to ſay before thee what they had againſt him,] Farewell.

30. alſo gave order to his accuſers to appear before thee, and implead him.

* when I was told of a conſpiracy that would be againſt him from the Iewes, preſently I ſent him, Μηνυθείσης μοι ἐπιβουλῆς εἰς τὸν ἄνδρα μέλλοντος ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων ἀνασπᾶσθαι παραχρῆμα ἔπεμψα

31. Then the ſouldiers, as it was commanded them, took Paul, and brought him by night to Antipatris.

32. And on the morrow they left the horſe-men to goe with him, and returned to the caſtle.

33. Who when they came to Cæſarea, and delivered the Epiſtle to the Governour, preſented Paul alſo before him.

34. And when [the Governour] had read the letter, he asked of what province he was, and when he underſtood that he was of Cilicia,

34. Felix the Procurator of Judæa under the Roman Emperour.

35. I will hear thee, ſaid he, when thine accuſers are alſo come. And he commanded him to be [kept in Herod's judgment hall.]

35. ſecured in the hall called Herod's hall.

Notes on Chap. XXIII.

a. Of the four ſeverall wayes of Revelations, which were among the Jewes, theſe are confeſſly two, רוּחַ הַקֹּדֶשׁ the holy Spirit, and בַּת קוֹל the daughter of voice, or a voice from heaven, brought by an Angel, by which any thing was made known to them. The other two were אוּרִים וְתֻמִּים Urim and Thummim, under the firſt Temple, the twelve ſtones in the peſtoral of the high Prieſt (which was called hoſchen judicii) the irradiation of which foretold many things to the the Jewes; This is by Joſephus called λόγιον, the oracle, which, ſaith he, ceaſed to ſhine 200 years before he wrote; Of which ſee Suidas in the word Ephod, and note on Rom. 3. 2. And the laſt was נבואה prophecy, which under the ſecond Temple, after the death of Haggai, Zachary, and Malachi, was taken away. This was of two ſorts, either in time of ſleep, by way of dream, or when they were waking, by caſting them into a trance or extaſie, where by way of viſion, they ſaw ſome body ſaying this, or that to them, or elſe ſeeing no ſhape, onely heard a voice; Both which ſorts of prophecie we have mention'd together Joel 2. 28. dreaming of dreams, and ſeeing of viſions, as that other of the holy Ghoſt in the phraſe [pour out my Spirit] Many examples of the viſion or trance we have here in this book, of Ananias, Act. 9. 10. and of Saul v. 12. of Cornelius, ch. 10. 3. and of Peter ver. 10. and of the dream alſo, called a viſion by night, which was ſeen by Paul, c. 16. 9. and again ch. 27. 23. where an Angel appeared to him in a dream, and the Lord, c. 23. 11. as to Joſeph, Mary's husband, Mat. 1. As for that of the holy Ghoſt, which belongs to this place, it is thus defined by the Jewes, that a man being awake, and in his full ſenſes, ſpeaks and acts like another man, but the Spirit of God, or Spiritus excelſus excites him, and ſuggeſts unto him words which he ſhall ſay, as in that of Chriſt to the Apoſtles, Mar. 13. 11. ['tis not you that ſpeak, but the holy Ghoſt] the interpretation of the [dabitur in illâ horâ, it ſhall be given in that hour] which went before. Three of theſe four waies of Revelation the Jewes reſolved to be aboliſhed at this time, that of the Urim and Thummim, with the firſt Temple, that of prophecie, with Malachi, and that of the holy Ghoſt, in the ſecond year of Darius, as it is in Joma c. 7. and therefore ſaith S. John c. 7. 39. οὔπω γὰρ ἦν πνεῦμα ἅγιον, as yet there was not the holy Ghoſt, onely they did, according to the prophecie of Joel, expect that it ſhould return to them again in thoſe daies, and ſo here we have mention of it in the [πνεῦμα ἐλάλησεν αὐτῷ, the Spirit hath ſpoken to him,] and ſo of the בת קול alſo, in the word Angel (as indeed it was, when he heard a voice from heaven delivered out of thunder, Saul, Saul, &c.) though 'tis poſſible that this laſt of the Angel, may belong to that of the appearance of an Angel in a dream, or viſion to him.

CHAP. XXIV.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND after five daies [Ananias the high prieſt deſcended with the Elders, and with a certain oratour named Tertullus, who informed the Governour againſt Paul.]

1. Annas the chief of the Jewes (ſee note on Lu. 3. b.) with ſome others of the Sanhedrim, and a lawyer or pleader, named Tertullus, went down all from Jeruſalem to Cæſarea, (ſee note on ch. 18. c.) to Felix, and brought in their accuſation, or charge againſt Paul.

2. And when he was called forth, Tertullus began to accuſe him, ſaying, Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietneſſe, and that very worthy deeds are done unto this nation by thy providence,

3. We accept it alwaies and in all places, moſt noble Felix, with all thankfulneſſe.]

2, 3. And when Tertullus was admitted to ſpeak, he began his plea againſt Paul with a flattering oration to Felix, telling him, how happy the Jews counted themſelves under his government and managery of affairs, and that they were very thankfull to him for it.

4. Notwithſtanding that I be not farther tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldſt hear us of thy clemency, a few words.

5. For we have found this man a peſtilent fellow, and a mover of ſedition among all the Jewes throughout the world, and a ring-leader of the ſect of the Nazarens.]

5. This Paul we Jewes know to be a dangerous perſon, and every where, where he comes, he diſquiets the peoples minds, and prepares them to commotions and ſeditions againſt the preſent government, that of the Romans, (ſee v. 18. & ch. 25. 8.) and he is a great promoter of the religion of thoſe, that are ordinarily called Nazarens, from Jeſus that dwelt in Nazareth, (i.e. of Chriſtians.)

6. Who alſo hath gone about to profane the Temple: whom we took, and would have judged according to our law.]

6. And he hath done ſuch things in the Temple of the Jewes among us at Jeruſalem, as are abſolutely contrary to the laws of our God (ſee c. 21. 21.) and we apprehended him, and would have had him puniſht, ſo as our law appoints thoſe to be puniſht, that bring ſtrangers beyond that court of the Temple, that was aſſigned them, and ſeparated from the other (ſee Eph. 2. 14.)

7. But the chief Captain Lyſias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8. Commanding his accuſers to come unto thee, by examining of whom thy ſelf mayſt take knowledge of all theſe things, whereof we accuſe him.]

7, 8. But as we were proceeding againſt him, Lyſias the Captain of the Temple, or commander of the guard of ſouldiers that guards the Temple, would not permit us to proceed againſt him in our Court, but carried him away with a guard of ſouldiers, c. 23. 10. and cited ſome of the Sanhedrim to come hither to thee, and accuſe him; whom therefore thou mayſt pleaſe to examine, and heare what they can ſay.

9. And the Jewes alſo aſſented, ſaying, That theſe things were ſo.]

9. And the Jewes of the Sanhedrim that came down, v. 1. confirmed the truth of all that Tertullus had pleaded.

10. Then Paul, after that the Governour had [beckned unto him] to ſpeak, anſwered, For as much as I know that thou haſt been of many years [a Judge unto this nation,] I doe the more cheerfully anſwer for my my ſelf,

10. given him leave, permitted him

ruler, or Procurator of Judæa,

11. Becauſe that thou mayſt underſtand, that there are but yet twelve daies, ſince I went up to Jeruſalem for to worſhip.]

11. And firſt thou mayſt pleaſe to underſtand, that about twelve daies ſince I came up to Jeruſalem to keep the feaſt of Pentecoſt, a ſolemn feaſt of the Jewes there, when by law 'tis appointed to be kept.

12,13. And there I behaved my ſelf very quietly, made no diſturbance, raiſed no ſedition, And they that ſay I am a ſeditious perſon, and raiſe diſturbances wherever I come, are not able to prove any thing of this nature, but onely content themſelves with a generall charge of ſedition.

12. And they neither found me in the Temple diſputing with any man, neither raiſing up the people, neither in the ſynagogues nor in the city.
13. Neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuſe me.]

14. But as for the other part of the accuſation ver.5. that I am a great promoter of the ſect of the Nazarens, I acknowledge this, that that way of worſhipping the God of Abraham, which Chriſt hath taught, and the Chriſtians practiſe, which I ſuppoſe they mean by the word Sect, or peculiar way of profeſſion or religion (ſee Act. 26. 5.) is the way that I doe uſe, and in doing ſo, doe agreeably to all that is written in the Moſaicall law, and the writings of authority among the Jewes, by which they think themſelves obliged.

14. But this I confeſſe unto thee, that after the way which they call * hereſie, ſo worſhip I the God of my fathers, beleiving all things which are written in the law, and the prophets.]

* ſect, αἵρεσιν, ſee v.5. & c.26.5.

15. And the main part of this is, that there ſhall be a life after this, and that all that ever lived here, ſhall then be judged and rewarded, whether they be good or evil. And this is no more then theſe men themſelves, all but the Sadducees, profeſſe to beleive, and depend on.

15. And have hope towards God, which they themſelves alſo allow, that there ſhall be a reſurrection from the dead both of the juſt and unjuſt.]

16. In this religion and practiſe, I am as carefull as I can, to live blameleſly, and to doe my duty in all things towards God and man.

16. And herein doe I exerciſe my ſelf to have alwaies a conſcience void of offence toward God, and toward men.]

17. As for that which they mention of my profaning the Temple, thus it was, Many years after my converſion to this way, that they ſpeak of, I was ſent by the pious Jewes, &c. of other parts to Jeruſalem and Judæa, with their charity, and free-will oblations, brought in for the ſervice of God, c.11.30.

17. Now after many years I came to bring almes to my nation, and offerings.]

18. And whilſt I was doing thus, ſome Jewes of Aſia ſaw me in the Temple, where I was farre from profaning of it, as was ſuggeſted ver.6. and ch.21.23. but was there in ſuch a manner, as the law of the Jewes required of me, and they ſenſleſly miſtaking, affirmed that I carried Trophimus a Gentile of Epheſus into the Temple, and ſo affirmed me to have profaned the Temple. But this was a down-right falſity, for which there was no other ground of affirming, but only this, that he was ſeen with me in the city (ſee ch.21.29.) And as I was in the Temple without any ſuch company there which might be ſaid to profane it, ſo it is certain that I was not attended with any number of men, that might bring me under ſuſpicion of raiſing any ſedition ver. 5.

18. Whereupon certain Jewes from Aſia found me purified in the Temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult,]

19. Or if any man living would affirm I had, he ought to come now in open court, and teſtifie againſt me here.

19. Who ought to have been here before thee, and object if they had ought againſt me.]

20. Nay for all theſe things I ſhall make mine appeal to theſe that are here preſent of their own Sanhedrim ver.1. and deſire they will teſtifie, whether when I was brought before their Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem c.23. I was not diſmiſt with a good teſtimony from themſelves, ver.9. viz: that there was nothing of moment charged and proved againſt me; And let them ſpeak, if it were not ſo.

20. Or elſe let theſe ſame here ſay, if they have found any evil doing in me, while I ſtood before the councell.]

21. There is I am ſure but one thing, that can by any be teſtified againſt me from the proceedings there, and that none but Saducees will lay to my charge, who are engaged in the maintenance of their own tenets, and that chargeable upon all the Phariſees as well as me, viz: my acknowledging another life after this, ch.23.8.

21. Except it be for this one voice, that I cried ſtanding among them, Touching the reſurrection of the dead I am called in queſtion by you this day.]

22. When Felix had had this cognizance of the matter, and diſcern'd how things ſtood, he deferred paſſing any ſentence, ſaying, Concerning Chriſtian religion, whether it were derogatory to the law of the Jewes, I will determine, when I have adviſed with learned men, that know your pretentions, and that concerning the tumult, ſaid to be raiſed by Paul, when Lyſias comes, whoſe teſtimony will decide it.

22. And when Felix heard theſe things, * having more perfect knowledge of that way, he deferred them, and ſaid, When Lyſias the chief captain ſhall come down, I will know the uttermoſt of your matter.]

* he put them off, ſaying, When I know more exactly the things that belong to this way, and when Lyſias the Commander comes down, I will determine the buſineſſe between you, ἀκριβέστερον εἰδὼς τὰ περὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ, διαγνώσομαι τὰ καθ' ὑμᾶς.

23. And he commanded the Captain of the guard to keep Paul ſafe, but not as a cloſe priſoner, and that any that would bring him any relief, or diſcourſe with him, might freely doe it.

23. And he commanded a Centurion † to keep Paul, and * to let him have liberty, and that he ſhould forbid none of his acquaintaince to miniſter, or come unto him.]

† that Paul ſhould be guarded, τηρεῖσθαι Παῦλον

* that he ſhould have ἔχειν

24. And Felix's wife being a Jew, when ſhe came, he thought fit to have her preſent, and ſent for Paul, and bid him ſay, what he had to ſay concerning the doctrine, or Goſpel of Chriſt.

24. And after certain daies, when Felix came with his wife Druſilla, which was a Jew, he ſent for Paul, and heard him concerning the faith of Chriſt.]

25. And Paul, in a diſcourſe of that ſubject, inſiſted particularly on the great obligation, that by the law of Chriſt lay on all men to obſerve juſtice between man and man, and to live chaſtly, either in conjugal, or ſingle life, (two virtues contrary to two ſpeciall vices, that Felix was particularly guilty of) and withall of the ſevere judgment, that all men one day ſhould be called to for their offences in theſe and the like kinds. And as he inſiſted on theſe three branches of the Chriſtian faith, wherein Felix was ſo much concern'd, he fell a trembling, and being in pain to hear ſuch doctrine, he broke him off abruptly, bidding him depart for that time, and he would find ſome other ſeaſon to hear him again.

25. And as he reaſoned of † righteouſneſſe, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix [a] trembled, and anſwer'd, Goe thy way for this time, * when I have a convenient ſeaſon, I will call for thee.]

† juſtice & continence δικαιοσύνης καὶ ἐγκρατείας

27. But [b] after two years Portius Festus came into Felix's room; and Felix, willing to shew the Jewes a pleasure, left Paul bound.]

27. And when Paul had remained in custody under the time of Felix's Procuratorship for the space of two years, Felix was by Nero removed out of his place, and Portius Festus succeeded him, and though Felix had nothing to condemn in Paul, yet meerly to gratifie the Jewes at parting, he left Paul in prison. b.

Notes on Chap. XXIV.

2. Ἐμφοβος γενομενος

The grounds of Felix's trembling at this discourse of Paul's of justice and chastity, or continence, will be best fetcht from a view of the character of this man both in Tacitus, and Josephus, Tacitus Hist: l. 5. mentions him an Eques Romanus, to whom Claudius the Emperour had intrusted that Province, where, saith he, per omnem saevitiam, & libidinem jus regium servili ingenio exercuit, he practised all cruelty and injustice in his government, Drusillâ Antonii & Cleopatra nepte in matrimonium acceptâ, and that he took to wife Drusilla the neece of Antonie and Cleopatra. Of this marriage of his Josephus enlarges, and saith that Agrippa his brother had given her first to Azis the King of the Emisseni, and whilst she was his wife, Felix falls in love with her, and by the help of one Simon a Magician (not he of Samaria, but another of Cyprus) obtained her from her husbands bed; From these two parts of his character, an unjust Governour (of which his expecting bribes here ver. 26. is an evidence also) and one that lived with another man's wife, arises the fitnesse and properness of S. Paul's discourse before him, of justice and continence, and the guilt of his conscience, hearing that there was a judgment to come for such sinnes as these, might very well set him a trembling. Ἐγκρατεια

That this two yeare is to be referred to Felix's Procuratorship is the opinion of Baronius, meaning those two years, which he spent in Nero's reigne, But the truth is, Claudius had, five year before, placed him in the Praefecture, and there is no reason to think, that S. Luke should define the time of his Procuratorship from Nero's reigne, who removed him, rather then from Claudius's who put him in: And therefore the biennium two years, must referre to Paul's imprisonment rather. b. Paraphrase.

* entered upon the government, ἐπιβας τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ

1. NOW when Festus was * come into the Province, after three daies he [ascended from Cæsarea to Jerusalem.]

1. See note on ch. 18. c.

2. Then the high priest and [the chief of the Jewes informed him against Paul, and besought him,

2. other members of the Sanhedrim accused Paul before him, and besought of him that favour, that he might be sent for to Jerusalem, (meaning to lay some villains by the way, to kill him as he came.)

4. But Festus answered, that Paul should be kept at Cæsarea, and that he himself would depart shortly thither.

† Let therefore, saith he, the men of power among you οἱ δυνατοὶ ἐν ὑμῖν, οἱ ἐν ἀξίᾳ, οἱ, * no more, οὐκέτι

5. † Let [them therefore, said he, which among you are able,] goe down with me, and accuse this man, if there be any wickednesse in him.

5 the chief priest, said he, and the rest in authority among you, ver. 2.

6. And when he had tarried among them * more then ten daies, he went down unto Cæsarea, and the next day sitting in the judgment seat, commanded Paul to be brought.

7. And when he was come, the Jewes, which came down from Jerusalem, stood round about, and laid many and grievous complaints against Paul, which they could not prove.

8. While he answer'd for himself, Neither against the law of the Jewes, neither against the Temple, nor yet against Cæsar have I offended any thing at all.]

8. And he cleared himself against all the accusations, which were reducible to three heads, offences against the Mosaicall law, prophaning the Temple, raising sedition against the government of the Romans (see ch. 24. 5, 6.)

9. But Festus being willing to doe the Jews a pleasure, answered Paul, and said, Wilt thou goe up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?

10. Then said Paul, I stand at Cæsar's judgment seat, where I ought to be judged, to the Jewes have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest:]

10. I am a Roman, and I ought to be judged not by the Jewish Sanhedrim or laws, but by the Roman: (And though I were lyable to them, yet thou already discernest, that they are not able to prove that I have any way trespast against the Jewes, or their law.)

† desire not to escape death, οὐ παραιτοῦμαι τὸν θανατον

11. For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I † refuse not to die, but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal unto Cæsar.]

11. And if I have done any thing w^ch by the Roman lawes is punishable capitally, I will be content most willingly to suffer death, I desire no mercy, (this he did, knowing there was then no edict of the Emperours against Christianity, (see note on ch. 26. a.) But if all their accusations are invalid, if I am as thou knowst I am, v. 10. free from that charge of having wronged them, and being a Roman ought to be judged by the Roman lawes, and none of them hath interdicted Christianity, there is then no reason, I should be delivered up to my enemies to be my judges. 'Twere absolutely unjust to doe so, and from that intention of mine, I make mine appeal to the Roman Emperour, and desire that he may judge between us.

12. And Feſtus conferring with thoſe of the Jewiſh Sanhedrim, 12. Then Feſtus, when he had conferred with the councel,] anſwered, Haſt thou appealed unto Cæſar? Unto Cæſar ſhalt thou goe.

13. Agrippa, who, after Herod, was Tetrarch of Galilee, and 13. And after certain daies [king Agrippa and Bernice] came unto Cæſarea, to ſalute Feſtus. his ſiſter Bernice

14. And when they had been there many daies, Feſtus declared Paul's cauſe unto the king, ſaying, There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix,

15. brought in an accuſation to me, 15. About whom, when I was at Jeruſalem, the chief Prieſts and the Elders of the Jewes, [informed me] deſiring to have judgment againſt him.

16. to give ſentence of capital puniſhment againſt any man, 16. To whom I anſwered, It is not the manner of the Romans [to deliver any man to die] before that he which is accuſed, have the [a] accuſers face to face, and have licenſe to anſwer for himſelf, concerning the crime laid againſt him.

17. And therefore that they muſt of neceſſity goe to Cæſarea and accuſe him; 17. Therefore when they were come hither without any delay, on the morrow I ſate on the judgment-ſeat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.] And when they came, I uſed all expedition, and the very next day I went to the bench to hear this cauſe of Paul.

18. And upon hearing I found him abſolutely free from all capitall crimes, 18. Againſt whom when the accuſers * ſtood up, they brought none accuſation of ſuch things as I † ſuppoſed.] * appeared † ſuſpected,

19. And all that ſtuck, was ſome diſputable matters about his particular way of ſerving or worſhipping God, and whether one Jeſus were ſtill dead, or whether he were riſen again, as Paul affirmed. 19. But had certain queſtions againſt him of * their own ſuperſtition, and of one Jeſus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.] * his owne way of worſhipping God, τὴν ἰδίαν δεισιδαιμονίαν, ſee note on c. 17. e.

20, 21. And making ſome ſcruple, whether it were fit for me to give ſentence in this matter, or whether it were not better to referre him to the Jewes Sanhedrim, to be judged there, Paul appealed to Cæſar, claimed his priviledge of a Roman, that he might not be delivered up to the Jewes, and thereupon I remanded him to priſon, till I could conveniently ſend him to Rome to Cæſar. 20. And †becauſe I doubted of ſuch manner of queſtions, I asked him, whether he would goe to Jeruſalem, and there be judged of theſe matters. 21. But when Paul had appealed to be reſerved unto the hearing of Auguſtus, I commanded him to be kept till I might ſend him unto Cæſar.] † having ſome doubt, whether I ſhould examine this matter, I διαπορούμενος ἐγὼ εἰ δεῖ περὶ τούτου ζητεῖν

24. Jewes whereſoever inhabiting, thoſe of Jeruſalem and others have made complaints to me, as againſt a moſt notable malefactor, that ought to be put to death. 24. And Feſtus ſaid, King Agrippa, and all men which are here preſent with us, ye ſee this man, about whom all the multitude of the [Jewes have † dealt with me, both at Jeruſalem, and alſo here, crying, that he ought not to live any longer.] † beſought me, or pleaded to me, ἐντυχόν μοι

25. no capital crime, and ſeeing he appealed to the Emperour of Rome, to be ſentenced at his tribunal, 25. But when I underſtood that he had committed [nothing worthy of death, and that he himſelf hath appealed to Auguſtus,] I have determined to ſend him.

26. the Emperour, 26. Of whom I have no certain thing to write unto [my Lord,] wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and eſpecially before thee, O king Agrippa, that after examination had, I might have ſomewhat to write.

27. For it ſeemeth to me unreaſonable, to ſend a priſoner, and not withall to ſignifie the crimes laid againſt him.

* stand question'd, ἑστηκα κρινόμενος

6. And now I * stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers.]

6. And accordingly now I am accused for asserting the resurrection of the dead, which as it is a doctrine acknowledged by the Pharisees, so is it the fundamental promise made of old.

7. Unto which promise our twelve tribes instantly serving God day and night, hope to come, for which hopes sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jewes.]

7. And generally depended on by the Jewes, and in intuition thereof it is, that they spend their time in piety and obedience to God, And yet for the beleiving and expecting this I am accused by these Jewes.

8. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?]

8. This being by me asserted to be founded in the resurrection of Christ, that is the thing that is most disbeleived, God's having raised Christ from the dead, And why should that be judged so incredible?

Notes on Chap. XXVI.

a. οὐδὲν ἄξιον θανάτου ἢ δεσμῶν.

The truth of this ſpeech of King Agrippa and his company, that Paul had done nothing worthy of death or bands,] depends on the conſideration of the time, wherein it was ſpoken. For the Roman Magiſtrates judging by the Roman Lawes, that which was not againſt any Law of the Emperors, was not cognoſcible, or puniſhable (eſpecially by death or impriſonment, deprivation of life or liberty) by them. Thus when Paul is accuſed by the Jewes and brought before the Proconſul of Achaia, Gallio, c. 18. he tels them plainly, that he will not be a Judge of ſuch matters, which the Roman Law, then in Claudius's reigne, had ſaid nothing of, For though c. 18. 2. an Edict had been by Claudius, toward the end of his reigne, ſet out againſt the Jewes, to baniſh them out of Italy, &c. and by that, the Chriſtian Jewes, as Jewes, not as Chriſtians, fell under that interdict, and ſo did Priſcilla and Aquila there, (and John the Apoſtle, baniſhed into Patmus, in Claudius's reigne, ſaith Epiphanius, hær: λδ΄:) yet as to the difference betwixt Jewes, and Chriſtians, there referr'd to by Gallio (in proportion to the accuſation brought againſt him by the Jewes, περὶ λόγου of a word, as whether Jeſus were the Meſſias, or no, περὶ ὀνομάτων of names, as whether the name Chriſtian, or diſciple &c. were unlawfull as thoſe diſcriminated them from incredulous Jewes, περὶ νόμου τοῦ καθ' ὑμᾶς, concerning the Law in force among the Jewes about converſing with the uncircumciſed, &c. there was then no Law ſet out by the Emperors at Rome, and therefore no rule for the Proconſul to go by, in taking cognizance of them. And thus it continued, till Nero's rage againſt the Chriſtians began, for that he firſt dedicated perſecution, is Tertullian's expreſſion, and Primum Neronem in hanc ſectam gladio ferociſſe, Nero was the firſt that made any capitall Law againſt them. Now this appearance of Paul before Agrippa, was in the ſecond of Nero's reigne, Anº. Ch. 57. long before this rage of his brake out, and accordingly Paul had made his appeale to Cæſars tribunall, knowing that this difference betwixt him, and the Jewes, was a thing of that nature, that no Law of the Romans could take hold of, all his danger being from the tumultuary proceedings of the Jewes, inraging, and importuning the Magiſtrates againſt him, and the beſt way of ſecuring himſelfe, being a triall by the Roman Lawes, to which prudently he appeales, c. 25. 11. making it his plea, that he had done nothing againſt Cæſar, v. 8. and as a Romane, clayming the privilege of being judged by the Imperiall Lawes, and not to be delivered up to the Jewes, v. 10. Which plea of his could have ſtood him in no ſtead, if Chriſtianity had then been under any Imperiall Interdict, and by being accepted for him, demonſtrates that at that time it was not.

CHAP. XXVII.

1. AND when it was determined that we ſhould ſaile unto Italy, they delivered Saul and certain other priſoners unto one named Julius, a Centurion of Auguſtus band.

3. And the next day we † touched at Sidon: and [Julius courteously intreated Paul, and gave him liberty to go unto his friends] to refresh himselfe.

3. The Captain of the guard that was to guard the Prisoners, was very civill to Paul, and permitted him to go on shore at Sidon, and visit those whom he knew there.

4. And when we had lanched from thence, we sailed under Cyprus, because the winds were contrary.

5. And when we had sailed over the Sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia, we came to Myra, a City of Lycia,

6. And there the Centurion found a ship of Alexandria, saying into Italy, and he put us therein.

7. And when we had sayled slowly many dayes, and scarce were come over against Cnidus, the wind not suffering us, we sailed under Crete, over against [Salmone.]

7. Salmone, a City which is called by Ptolemy Samonium

8. And hardly passing by it [] came unto a place which is called the Faire-havens, nigh whereunto was the City of Lasea.

9. Now when much time was spent, and when sayling was now dangerous, because the ᵃ fast was now already past, Paul admonished them,

10. And said unto them, Sirs, I perceive that this voyage will be with hurt, and much damage not onely of the lading and ship, but also of our lives.]

9, 10. And being thus long upon the Sea, and the Sea beginning to grow tempestuous, as it is wont at that time of year, to wit after the day of expiation, the great yearly fast, about which time the Michaelmas flawes are wont to be on the Seas, Paul would have perswaded them to have gone a shore, and expected more seasonable time to have performed this journey, Telling them that, if they went on, it would be very dangerous to the ship, the goods in it and even the lives of the men. a.

11. Nevertheless the Centurion beleived the Master and the owner of the ship, more then those things which were spoken by Paul.]

11. But the Governour of the ship being also the owner of it, and so concern'd to consider the danger, was of another minde, and the Captain of the guard preferred his judgement before Paul's.

12. And because the haven was not commodious to winter in, the more part advised to depart thence also, if by any means they might attain to Phœnice, and there to winter, which is an haven of Crete, and lyeth toward the Southwest and Northwest.]

12. Especially considering that the haven v. 8. was no good winter harbour, In which respect most of the passengers advised to put out from thence, and endeavour to gain Phœnice, an haven of Crete, situate toward &c. and there they might winter conveniently.

13. And when the Southwind blew softly, supposing that they had obteined their purpose, loosing thence, they sailed close by Crete.

13. And by a calm Southerly gale which came, they thought this would be easily compast, and therefore put out, and presently they got beyond the shore of Crete.

14. But not long after, there arose against it a tempestuous wind, called [Euroclydon.]

14. The North-East wind (see note a.)

15. And * when the ship was caught, and could not bear up into the wind, [† we let her drive.]

15. we were fain to yeeld the ship, to the force of the wind, and saile with it, whither soever 'twould drive us.

16. And running under a certain * Island, which is called Clauda [we had much work to come by the † boat.]

17. But at last they got it, and then they made use of some artifices to secure them from splitting, and fearing they might fall upon some quicksand to prevent that,

18. And being exceedingly † tossed with a tempest, the next day they [lightned the ship.]

18. disposed some of the goods out of the ship.

19. And the third day we cast out with our own hands the tackling of the ship.

19. And the next day we were forced to cast into the Sea, the furniture of the ship.

20. And when neither Sun nor Stars in many dayes appeared, and no small tempest lay on us, all hope, that we should be saved, was then taken away.]

20. And then there came such a season of tempestuous foul weather, that we utterly despaired of escaping.

21. But * after long abstinence, Paul stood forth in the midst of them, and said, Sirs, [ye should have hearkned unto me, and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss.]

21. You should have taken the counsell which I gave you v. 10. and not have run this hazard.

22. And now I exhort you to be of good cheer, for there shall be no loss of any mans life among you, but of the ship.

And in the ſpace between that and day-break, Paul exhorted them to refreſh themſelves with eating, telling them that they had ſo ſollicitouſly attended the fate of this fourteenth day, as the ſpeciall criticall day, (had ſo much feared caſting away upon that day) that they had had no leiſure, or thought of eating, and ſo had faſted till that time of night, eaten no bit all that day.

a. Νηστεία δία παροιμίαν. There is no queſtion but the faſt, which is here ſaid to be newly paſt, was the great anniverſary faſt, the day of Expiation; The deſcription of which we have *Iſa.*58. under the name of a ſabbath v.13. which may ſeem to have occaſion'd that error in the heathen writers, which thought that the Jewes had faſted on the ſeventh day or ſabbath, So * Suetonius, Ne Judæus tam libenter ſabbatis jejunium ſervat &c. a Jew doth not faſt on his ſabbath ſo willingly, and Juſtin l.36. Septimum diem, more Gentis ſabbatum appellatum, in omne ævum jejunium ſacravit, the ſeventh day, being by their cuſtome called their ſabbath, was appointed a faſt forever. Which error aroſe by not obſerving the difference betwixt the weekly and the anniverſary ſabbath. Now the preciſe time of this ſabbatick faſt is Levit: 16. 29. on the tenth day of the ſeventh month called Tizri, which falls on the ſame time almoſt with our September, the firſt day of Tizri on the ſeventh of that, and ſo the tenth of Tizri on the ſixteenth of September, i.e. thirteen daies before our Michaelmas, or, as * Scaliger ſets it, on the twentieth of that month. This being thus obſerv'd, the reaſon of the Apoſtles obſervation, that ſailing was now become dangerous, becauſe the faſt was paſt, will be eaſily cleared, it being all one, as if he had ſaid, becauſe it was paſt the twentieth of September, It being obſerved by all ſaylers, that for ſome weeks before and after Michaelmas, there are on the ſea ſuddain and frequent ſtorms, which we now call Michaelmas-flawes, which muſt needs make ſailing dangerous, and ſo the experiment proved it, v.14. whereas the ſouth wind blew ſoftly, preſently comes a boyſterous wind called Euroclydon (or, as perhaps that word may be otherwiſe read with a light change, Εὐρακύλων the North-eaſt wind, for which the King's and other ancient MSS. read Εὐρακύδων) which ſo hurried the ſhip, that it could not ἀντοφθαλμεῖν hold up the eyes againſt it, and ſo ver.20. there was no appearance of ſun or ſtarres for many daies together. Thus in * Heſiod, At the going down of the Pleiades, ſaith he, ναυτιλίη δυσπέμφελος, navigation is dangerous, δὴ τότε πνοιῆσιν ἀνέμων δύσεται αὔτη, huge tempeſts of all kind of winds, where the fall of the Pleiades is ſaid to be μεσοπωρινὸς, viz: when after harveſt they begin to plough again (ἀρότοιο δ' ἀναστασίην l. 2. lin: 2.) which is clearly the time juſt now mentioned, ſo again lin:292. ſpeaking of proſperous ſailing, he deſignes the time fifty daies after the ſummer ſolſtice or tropick, i.e. about the end of July, and then deſigning ſome ſpace for navigation, he admoniſhes

Σπεύδειν δ' ἔμπλην πάχνης πάλιν, οἷόν δὲ καὶ ὕδωρ, Μηδὲ μένειν οἶνόν τε νέον, καὶ ὀπώρινον ἅμ' ὄμβρῳ.

to make haſt and be at home before new wine, and the harveſt ſhowres, for after that preſently comes μεσοπωρινὸν and —νότοι δ' ἁμαρτῇσιν Διὸς ὄμβρῳ that very thing that we here obſerved, making the ſea or navigation dangerous. Thus in * Philoſtratus ἐν ᾧ δὴ μάλιστα καιρὸς ἦν ἐπιπλεῖν, καὶ ἡ θάλαττα ἤδη ἦν Cabala, the ſea was at this time more unſetled, for it was now the time immediately after ripe fruits, for ſo μετόπωρον ſignifies (beginning about the midſt of Auguſt, and laſting neer our Chriſtmas) at which time, ſaith Ariſtotle Meteor: l.1. χαλάζαι μάλιστα γίνονται, ſtorms is ſpecially wont to ariſe. So ſaith Philo leg: ad Caium, ἔτι πλοῦν ὄντων, ἀρχὴ γὰρ ἦν μετοπώρου, The ſea was yet fit for navigation, for twas the beginning of that ſeaſon after ripe fruit, about the middle of Auguſt, which argues, that ſhortly it would not be fit, this being, as he ſaith, παλαιὰ τοῖς θαλαττεύουσι, the time of giving over the ſea; What this time was, will be yet clearer by what we find in him * adverſus Flac: that this Faſt was κατὰ μετοπωρινὰ ἰσημερίαν about the winter aquinoctial.
Πολλῷ ὀπωρινῷ, χαλεπὴν δέ τε πόντον ἔθηκαν.

"Λαον πλησίον, ſaith Heſychius, it ſignifies nigh; b. But being here joyned with παραλέγοντο, which is [paſſing juſt under] there ſeems to be very little uſe of the word, or propriety, that here it ſhould be put; Perhaps there may here be place for a conjecture, reading δίαυτον preſently, inſtead of ἄντον, and then joyning that, not with παραλέγοντο, but ἀφέντες, precedent, preſently looſing thence, Thus in Syneſius, we find Ep: 4. ἀφέντες ἐνθένδε, looſing immediately, which is all one with δίαυτον, τάχιον, ταχύτερον, ſaith Heſychius.

"Ασιτος, is he that eateth nothing all day long c. (as μονόσιτος, he that eateth but one meale a day) and ſo 'tis here explained by μηδὲν προσλαβόντες, having taken nothing at all. The meaning therefore of this place (without any miracle of ſubſiſting without any nouriſhment fourteen daies together) is to be gathered from the former part of the period, τεσσαρεσκαιδεκάτην σήμερον ἡμέραν προσδοκῶντες, expecting this day the fourteenth day, i.e. waiting to ſee the ſucceſſe of this day, which, it ſeems in the opinion of the mariners, was the critical day to them, their danger was then at the higheſt, and they were not likely to outlive it, and ſo there was no uſe of eating, and if they eſcaped this day, they might then poſſibly hope; and upon theſe conſiderations, they eat nothing all that day, they had no leiſure to conſider hunger, when their greater danger, and more inſtant feare was of drowning, and that is the clear meaning of the place.

The word [Σάνις] ſignifies any plain thing, a d. dore, or table, or board, or plank, and is rendred by Heſychius 1. δίφρα a dore, then λεύκωμα a white table, ἐν ᾧ αἱ κατὰ Ἀθηναίων ἐγκλήματα ἐγράφοντο ἢ τὰ κακούργων, on which among the Athenians accuſations were written againſt malefactors, πίναξ ἢ ξύλον τῆς σανίδος (not, as 'tis corruptly read, πανὸς) and this was wont to be ſet upon the Croſſe, (as the inſcription of Chriſt.) The former of theſe, or any thing like that, any plain tabulatum, is here meant by it, as that which would be moſt uſefull to eſcape by in this ſhip-wrack.

24. And some beleived the things which were spoken, and some beleived not.

25. And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, after that Paul had spoken one word, Well spake the holy Ghost by Isaias the prophet unto our fathers,

25. And when by this difference of minds there began to be some falling out (or, arguing on both sides v. 29) between them, they departed, Paul telling them at their departure, that this unbeleife of their's was a thing, which the prophet Isaias had punctually foretold, two years, and preacht the Gospell to all that came to him, and to those that had already received it, superstructed the whole Christian doctrine; and this he did with all freedome, and openesse, and confidence (see note on Jo. 7. 2.) and no man gave him any disturbance.

Notes on Chap XXVIII:

a. Μελίτη

Two Islands there are of that name Melita. The one in the Libyan, saith Strabo l. 6. the other on the Adriatick Sea. Of the former Ortelius speakes in Thesaur. Geograph. Melita una ex Pelagiis apud Ptolemaum, Haec insula B. Pauli naufragio celebris est, & hodie Rhodiensibus militibus habitatur, It was by Ptolemie said to be one of Pelagia, it is famous for Saint Pauls shipwrack, and is now inhabited by the Knights of Rhodes. And that this was it here spoken of, appears by the consequents of this story, which brings Paul from Melita to Syracuse and from thence to Rhegium, within the straits of the Sicilian, or Libyan Sea.

b. Δίκη

That there is a Dike or vengeance, which will not let murtherers go unpunisht in this world, hath been the observation of all sorts of men. In the Gemara tract: Sanhedr. there is the like story of Simeon sonne of Schutach, who found a manslayer, but had no witnesse to testifie it legally, and therefore prayed thus, He that knoweth the thoughts of men, punish thee as a murtherer. And presently, saith he, a Serpent bit him, and slew him. In like manner as Orestes, that had killed his mother, dyed with the bite of a viper, in a place of Arcadia called Orestion, saith Stephanus Byzant. περὶ Πολις: in the word ἐρεσὴ. In that place of the Gemara, there is also mention of a tradition of Hezechias, that after the destruction of the Sanctuary and the Sanhedrim, there yet still continued among the Jewes four kindes of Capitall punishment, in stead of the four established by the law of Moses; For he that deserved to be stoned, either fell from an house, or was torn with wild-beasts; He that deserved to be burnt, either fell into the fire, or was struck with a Serpent; (which was therefore called fiery by Moses, because they that were bitten with it, felt such a flame in their veines.) They that were to be killed with the sword, fell either into the hand of the King or of theeves; They that deserved suffocation or hanging, either were drowned, or dyed of a melancholy or suffocation, (such as is affirmed of Judas; see note on Mat: 27. a.) Two of these are here mentioned by the Barbarians, drowning, and the bite of the Serpent or viper, as a revenge due to a murtherer in their conceit; and when they saw he escaped, they looked on it, as a stupendious thing.

c. Παράσημον

Παράσημον] is the σχοτομὴ, some Image, or Picture of some creature in the forepart of the ship, from whence the ship was named. So saith Agatharcides, when 'tis said, that a Bull carryed away Europa, the meaning is, that a ship called the Bull, as having that παράσημον upon it, carryed her, and so the eagle that carryed Ganymede, was a ship with an Eagle upon it, and so called the Eagle, saith Epiphanius. So Bellerophon's riding on Pegasus, was his sayling in a ship, that had a flying horse for its signe, and name. So Virgil Æn. 10.—aratâ Princeps secat aquora Tigri, Where the signe of the ship, being set upon the rostrum of it (which was made of brasse) was a Tigre, and so the ship was called. So Diodorus Siculus l. 4. of Phryxus, that is said to swim upon a Ram through the Euxine Sea, saith, διαπλεῦσαι αὐτὸν φασὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ κριοῦ, σεσημῶ δὲ τὸ σκάφος ἐχούσης γραῦν, that he ſayld in a ſhip which had the picture of a Ramme on the forepart of it. So Palaphatus of Pelops, that was ſaid to have winged horſes, 'twas to be underſtood, ſaith he, in the ſame manner as of Pegaſus, that he had a ſhip, ἐγέγραπτο δὲ ἐπὶ τῆ πρῴρᾳ ἵπποι πτερωτοὶ and there were painted on it winged horſes. And of Pegaſus he had before ſaid, Ὄνομα δὲ τῷ πλοίῳ Πήγασος, ὡς καὶ νῦν ἅπαν τὸ πλοῖον ὄνομα ἔχει, 'twas the name of a ſhip, as now every ſhip hath a name, ſo that the mention of the σημεῖων or ſigne here is alſo the intimation of the name of the ſhip, Caſtor and Pollux or Dioſcuri. Διόσκουροι

d. Mention of theſe two places we have in Cicero ad Atticum, l. 2. Epiſt. 10. & 13. Ab Appii foro horâ quartâ, dederam aliam paulò antè à Tribus Tabernis, This Epiſtle was dated from Appii Forum, at four of clock, I had written another a little before, from the Three Taverns. The latter of which was three and thirty miles from Rome, the former fifty one, ſaith Antoninus in his Itinerary. Ἀπὸ Ἀππίου φόρου Τριῶν Ταβερνῶν

The manner of the ſouldiers guarding the priſoner among the Romans is thus deſcribed by Lipſius on Tacitus Ann: l. 3. that the Priſoner ſhould have a chain on his right hand, and the other end of it on the ſouldiers left hand, ſo that they might conveniently go together, the chain being of ſome length. And accordingly Peter being between two ſouldiers, ch. 12. 6. is ſaid to be bound with two chains, with one of them made faſt to one ſouldier, by the other to the other. So Paul is bound with two chains, i. e. thus guarded with two ſouldiers, ch. 21. 33. e. Φυλάσσων στρατιώτης Ἀλύσεσι δυσί

THE EPISTLE OF PAVL THE APOSTLE TO THE ROMANS.

a. Ἐπιστολὴ Παύλου

OF the Epiſtles of S. Paul and other the Apoſtles, it is firſt ſufficiently known, that being written to whole Churches (or ſingle perſons) of Chriſtians, they doe preſuppoſe the Chriſtian faith planted among thoſe to whom they write, and were not deſigned to plant it any where, and conſequently that it is not to be expected of them, that they ſhould ſet down all the neceſſary doctrines, or the foundations of Chriſtianity, any otherwiſe then by way of intimation ſometimes, as appeared neceſſary for the confuting ſome falſe doctrines, which Hereticks had ſuperinduced and ſcattered in the Churches. Secondly then the true reaſon of the writing all the Epiſtles to the ſeveral Churches, (and of thoſe to ſingle perſons, to Timothy and Titus, they were the ſame alſo) being to confirm the Churches, to fence them againſt the invaſions of Hereticks, to reprove the falſe doctrines, or vicious practiſes that were crept in, and to ſupply all their wants, It is conſequently to be reſolved, that the beſt way to interpret the difficult parts of all theſe Epiſtles, is to learn and conſider by the ſtories of thoſe times, what was the ſtate of thoſe Churches, what the oppoſitions which they then met with, what the dangers that were moſt cautiouſly to be prevented; And of theſe ſorts two eminent parts of ſtory are moſt known, and moſt uſefull to be taken notice of, in order to this end.

1. The great ſcandal taken againſt the Apoſtles, eſpecially S. Paul, by the Jewes, which alſo diffuſed it ſelf to the Chriſtians that were of that nation, and continued zealous for the law of Moſes, viz: the Apoſtles converſing with, and preaching to the Gentiles, and (either by their practiſe or their doctrine) aſſerting the abolition of circumciſion, and other parts of the Moſaical law. This brought upon the Chriſtians very heavy perſecutions in every place where the faith was received; And as it was neceſſary for the Apoſtles to defend and vindicate their practiſe herein, and to anſwer all the objections that were brought againſt any part of it, ſo it was very ſeaſonable to fortifie the poor perſecuted Chriſtians in their conſtancy, and to encourage them to the bearing of perſecutions, and that not only by propoſal of that eternal reward in another world, and of the advantages that were reaped in this exerciſe of their Chriſtian virtues (of both which none that were Chriſtians could be ignorant) but, as an antidote to the preſent pungency of their diſtreſſes, by remembring or advertizing them particularly of the promiſe of Chriſt, to own and protect and ſecure thoſe, who ſhould cleave faſt to him, and to that end to come in an eminent and notable manner, and that ſpeedily, to the deſtruction of the obdurate Jewes, and, at the ſame time, and by that means, to the deliverance of all his faithfull ſervants the perſecuted Chriſtians: From hence is it, that there is ſo often mention (under divers phraſes) of the approach of this coming, as that which would ſupport their patience, and help them cheerfully to perſevere, as expecting an iſſue ere long out of all their troubles: And although the future eternal reward in the reſurrection were an excellent motive to this end, yet that being ſuppoſed and preſumed to be beleived and acknowledged by all Chriſtians, as it was not neceſſary that this foundation ſhould again be laid, ſo it was not unſeaſonable to ſuperadde to this (and ſo often to inculcate) that other conſideration of temporall deſtruction upon theſe perſecuters, and deliverance to the faithfull even in this life, the contrary to which being more probable to the eye of the world, and more beleived by carnal Goſpellers, was then the great engine, uſed to ſhake the Chriſtians conſtancy. And upon this obſervation are founded many interpretations of ſeveral paſſages, as in the proceſſe will appear. And this was a theme fit to be inſiſted on, and inculcated to the Chriſtians not onely in Judea, but in all other parts where the Faith was planted, in Aſia, and at Rome it ſelf, becauſe of the diſperſion of the Jewes in all thoſe parts, and ſo of the perſecutions cauſed by them on the Chriſtians. To which it was conſequent in the divine juſtice, and by the rules of ſympathie, which are ordinarily diſcernible in the ſuffering of members of the ſame body, that not onely in Judea and Paleſtine, but in all other parts, in Syria and Aſia &c. theſe deſtructions ſhould follow them: And ſo it fell out according to Chriſt's words, that wherever the carcaſſe was, thither the Eagles ſhould be gathered together, wherever the Jewes were, the Roman armies or interdicts found them out and deſtroyed them. And conſequently as this deſtruction of the Jewes was, among other ends of juſt vengeance, deſigned alſo to reſcue and free the Chriſtians in all parts from their preſſures, ſo it was reaſonable for the Apoſtles in their Epiſtles to them in all parts, whereſoever the Goſpel was received, to comfort them with this aſſurance, that it ſhould ſhortly come to paſſe. To this purpoſe (as we now diſcern in their writings, ſo) Lactantius teſtifies of their preaching, l. 4. c. 21. Petrus & Paulus Romæ prædicaverunt, & ea prædicatio in memoriam ſcripta remanſit. In quâ cùm multa alia mira, tum etiam hoc futurum eſſe dixerunt, ut poſt breve tempus immitteret Deus Regem, qui expugnaret Judæos, & civitates eorum ſolo adæquaret, ipſos autem fame ſitique confectos obſideret, tum fore ut corporibus ſuorum veſcerentur &c. Peter and Paul preached at Rome, and that which they preached remained written for a memorial, In which as they foretold many wonderful things, ſo this among others, that after a ſhort time God would ſend a King, who ſhould deſtroy the Jewes, and make their cities level with the ground, beſieging them ſtraightly, when they were brought low with a famine, ſo that they ſhould feed on one anothers bodies &c. And ſo, ſaith Lactantius, it fell out, ſoon after their death, Veſpaſian extinguiſhed the name and nation of the Jewes &c.

The ſecond thing which is known in ſtory, and uſefull to be here præmiſed, is, the riſe and growth of the Hereſie of the Gnoſticks, the followers of Simon Magus, which in a ſhort time, while the Apoſtles lived and preached, overran all their plantations, and in a greater or leſſe degree infeſted all the Churches of thoſe times, and by the two baits which they uſed, liberty of all abominable luſts, and promiſes of immunity from perſecutions, attracted many unto them, and, whereſoever they came, began with oppoſing the Apoſtles and Governors of the Churches. And accordingly theſe Epiſtles being adapted to the preſent urgencies and wants of thoſe Churches, it cannot be ſtrange, that there ſhould be frequent admonitions intermixt in all of them, to abſtain moſt diligently and flie from theſe; And from the ſeveral parts of that character, which belonged to theſe Hæreticks, many paſſages of ſome difficulty will be explained alſo.

Beſide theſe, many other particular matters there were, either wherein the Apoſtles were themſelves concerned to vindicate their authority or practiſes, or which had been propoſed by the Churches to obtain ſatisfaction in them, which occaſioned ſeveral diſcourſes on thoſe ſubjects, as will be diſcernible alſo, when the particulars are ſurveyed, And then, though, by analogie and parity of reaſon, theſe may be extended very profitably to the general behoof, and advantages of other Churches of God, and particular Chriſtians of all ages, yet for the right underſtanding of the literal and primarie ſenſe of them, it will be moſt neceſſary to obſerve theſe, or the like particular occaſions of them, and accordingly to accommodate the interpretations. And this was all which I thought neceſſary to præmiſe in general by way of entrance on the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles.

b. Of this Epiſtle of S. Paul to the Romans theſe few things will be fit to be præmiſed.

non Pu-ritanis First, What is the reaſon of the place which it hath in the Canon, before all the reſt of his Epiſtles; And this will be defined 1. Negatively, then Poſitively: 1. Negatively that it is not to be taken from the order of time wherein it was written, For moſt of the other Epiſtles are antiently affirmed, and by ſome characters doe ſeem to have been written before it. And although the defining the time and the place of writing them be but conjectural, and fallible, no way deducible from Scripture-ſtory (there being ſo great a part of Paul's time, whereof the book of the Acts, which ends at his firſt being at Rome, ſaith nothing) yet becauſe, as Euſebius ſaith, the ſtory of thoſe years after the Acts, is not written by any, and conſequently whatever different account be pitched on, that will be meerly conjectural alſo, I ſhall therefore by keeping (in this matter of time and place) to the ordinary road, rather chooſe to adventure erring thus (in matters of no greater importance) then to attempt any new way, which will be equally, if not more, uncertain.

Thus then it is commonly acknowledged, that the firſt to the Theſſalonians was written at his firſt being at Corinth, An. Chr. 50. The ſecond to the Theſſalonians probably while he ſtaid there the next year after. The firſt to the Corinthians in the third year of his being at Epheſus, An.Chr. 54. wherein accordingly he mentions his deſigne to tarry at Epheſus till Pentecoſt ch. 16. 8. The firſt to Timothy from Macedonia in the ſame year. That to Titus from Greece, An.Chr. 55. The ſecond to the Corinthians, from Philippi, aſſoon as he had received newes by Titus, what ſucceſſe his firſt Epiſtle had found among them; Which appears by 2*Cor.*2.12. and by the freſh mention of his danger at Epheſus c.1.8. to be ſoon after the firſt. And perhaps about the ſame time the Epiſtle to the Galatians alſo. After which coming again to Corinth he wrote this to the Romans, a little before the Emperour Claudius's death, which is placed by Chronologers in the 55. yeare of Chriſt. That he wrote it at this time, may appear by his own words, c.15.19,23,25. For there v.19. he ſaith he had preached the Goſpel through Greece round about to Illyricum, (agreeable to what we find, *Act.*20.3. where after his departure from Epheſus, &c. he came, and ſtaid three months in Greece, meaning thereby the region from Achaia to Illyricum) and v.23. that he had no more to doe in thoſe parts, but was at the preſent at the writing hereof v.25. a going to Syria and Jeruſalem, to carry the almes to the Chriſtians there, This journey we find him ready to undertake *Act.*20.3. though becauſe of the Jewes laying wait for him, (not onely to kill him, but to ſeiſe upon the money which he carried with him) he diverted through Macedonia, By which it is manifeſt, that this was the point of time, wherein this Epiſtle was written, after his coming to Illyricum, and before his going up to Jeruſalem, with the collection, and ſo about the death of Claudius, and after the writing thoſe other Epiſtles. The reaſon then of this præcedence is to be taken (poſitively) from the dignity of the city, to which the Epiſtle was addreſſed, viz: Rome, the Imperial ſeat, which, as afterward it gave præcedence to the Biſhop of that city, and ſeat of majeſty, before all other cities, though earlier planted with the Faith, ſo in the forming of the Canon of Scripture, it brought the præcedence to this Epiſtle, before thoſe which were more antiently written.

Secondly, that this Epiſtle was written to the Romans, before this Apoſtles havin g being among them; This appears very probable from ſeveral paſſages in the firſt chapter v. 10, 11, 13. but eſpecially v. 15. So as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the Goſpel to you that are in Rome alſo, joyning them with the Greeks and Barbarians, to whom he was a debter, v.14. i.e. had not yet paid that charity of preach- ing the Goſpel to them. If this be rightly concluded, it will then follow, that a Church being before this time planted there, and that in an eminent manner, ſo as to be taken notice of in all the Provinces, c.1.8. ſome other Apoſtle, and particularly S. Peter, muſt before this time be ſuppoſed to have preached there, by force of that known affirmation of the antients, that the Church of Rome was θεμελιωθεῖσα καὶ οἰκοδομηθεῖσα, founded and edified by thoſe two Apoſtles, Peter and Paul. So ſaith Irenæus of the Apoſtles indefinitely, and Epiphanius of theſe two by name, And ſo Gaius (in Euſeb: l.2. c.25.) ſpeaking of their monuments, calls them τρόπαια τῶν τότε ἱδρυσαμένων ἐκκλησίαν, the trophies of them which built that Church, and ſo Dionyſius Biſhop of Corinth (in the ſame place of Euſebius) affirms the Churches both of Rome and Corinth τὴν ἀπὸ Πέτρου καὶ Παύλου φύτευσιν γενομένας to have been the plantation of both theſe, the one laying the foundation, or firſt preaching the faith there, the other confirming them, v. 11. eſpecially the Gentile part of them.

Thirdly, That S. Peter being the Apoſtle of the Circumciſion or Jewes (as S. Paul of the uncircumciſion or Gentiles) the Church which was now at Rome conſiſted much of the Jewes, that were diſperſed from their own country, and dwelt there, but withall of ſome Gentile-Chriſtians alſo, to whom eſpecially this Epiſtle is addreſſed, as appears c.1.13,14. where the ὑμῖν you, to whom he writes, are joyned with the other heathen nations, and the Ἕλλησι καὶ Βαρβάροις, Greeks and Barbarians, v. 14.

Fourthly, That the Jewiſh Chriſtians here, as in other places, Act. 15.1. & 21.20. though they had received the faith of Chriſt, were yet very zealous for the upholding the Jewiſh law, the Moſaical rites, and conſequently oppoſed the preaching of the Goſpel to the Gentiles, unleſſe they firſt became Proſelytes of the Jewiſh Covenant of Circumciſion, and ſo ſubmitted to their whole law. And this they did eſpecially upon two arguments, 1. that the Gentiles being Idolaters, and ſo great ſinners, and by them ſtyled and counted ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſinners by way of eminence, were utterly uncapable of the favour or ἁμαρτωλοὶ mercy of God, and conſequently of the benefits of the Goſpel. 2dly. That circumciſion being the ſeale of God's covenant of mercy, none were capable of mercy from God, that were not circumciſed; This doctrine of theſe Jewiſh converts was directly contrary to that which was every where practiſed and taught by S. Paul; For as he freely preached the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and in every city, where the Jewes reſiſted, forſook them, and profeſſly betook himſelfe to the Gentiles, Act. 13.46. ſo he taught the no-neceſſity of circumciſion and other Moſaical obſervances, (as of an abrogated, aboliſhed law, ſee Rom. 7. 1.) even to Jew-Chriſtians, Act. 21. 21. much more to thoſe that from the Gentiles ſhould convert to Chriſt, whoſe paſt ſinnes, how great ſoever they were, yet if they ſhould now upon the preaching of Chriſt forſake them, and accept the faith and obedience of Chriſt, they ſhould freely be forgiven them, whereas on the other ſide, without the receiving the faith, the law of Moſes (circumciſion and ſacrifices &c.) would not be able to juſtifie any (whether Jew, or Gentile-Proſelyte) from any wilfull ſinnes againſt that law. This was the ſumme of S. Paul's doctrine at Antioch, Act. 13. 38, 39. that through Chriſt is preach'd unto them remiſſion of ſins, And by him all that beleive are juſtified from thoſe things from which they could not be juſtified by the law of Moſes, i. e. from the guilt and puniſhment of known, deliberate ſinnes of the greateſt ſize, even Idolatry it ſelf (for which the law afforded no mercy, no place of repentance, but inflicted preſent death) in caſe of ſincere reformation, As when Heb. 9. 15. Chriſt is ſaid to be mediator of a new Covenant, to redeem us by his death from the tranſgreſſions that were under the law, i.e. from thoſe ſinnes, for which the law afforded no pardon, upon repentance and reformation. And the ſame is the theme and ſubject of a conſiderable part of this Epiſtle, And becauſe the objections of the Judaizers both in the groſſe, and in every branch of them, being familiarly known to the writer, are not ſo diſtinctly, and formally ſet down by him to receive their ſeverall anſwers, but proceeded to, covertly, and ſo as might leaſt interrupt the thread of the diſcourſe, this is one chief cauſe of the difficulty of the Epiſtle, which may be leſſen'd by this præmonition.

Fiftly, That before the time of writing this Epiſtle, Simon Magus and the Gnoſticks (the darnel which in thoſe firſt times the devil conſtantly ſowed, wherever the Chriſtian faith had entred) were come, as to other places, ſo to Rome alſo, For in Claudius's time it was that a ſtatue was erected at Rome, To Simon the Holy God, and to that this Apoſtle referres 2 Theſſ. 2. 4. which Epiſtle, as hath been ſaid, was written four years before this. From whence, as it will be eaſie to beleive that many paſſages in this Epiſtle referre to, and are purpoſely oppoſed againſt that hereſie of the Gnoſticks, ſo when we remember the character of theſe men, that they were great aſſerters of the Moſaical rites, oppoſed and condemned all that neglected them, and yet lived in all the foule villanies of the Gentiles, we ſhall the leſſe wonder that a great part of this Epiſtle, being addreſs'd to Chriſtians at Rome, is yet ſet diſtinctly to reprehend thoſe Gentile practiſes c.1, & 2. and to anſwer the Jewiſh objections againſt the Chriſtians, There being ſo many unclean Judaizing Gnoſticks, which had crept in among the Chriſtians, and every where brought diſturbances among them, that the Apoſtle that deſired to defend the faith, and confirm the weak ſeducible profeſſors of it, could doe nothing more worthy of his Apoſtleſhip; Meaning, as he ſaith, when he came among them, to withſtand theſe oppoſers of both ſorts with all boldneſſe, c.1. 16,17,18. and particularly to juſtifie and vindicate his practiſe of preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles (who neither by their former ſinnes, nor their want of circumciſion were præjudged or excluded from receiving benefit by it) at which the Judaizers were ſo much offended. That this was the occaſion of this Epiſtle, and that this was the theme accordingly ſet upon, c.1.16. I am not aſhamed of the Goſpel of Chriſt, for it is the power of God unto ſalvation, to the Jew firſt, and alſo to the Greek.] and purſued from thence to the concluſion, at the end of c.15. will appear in the explication of it; wherein as we ſhall find much of difficulty in many places, as particularly in that of c.11. (the paſſage which S. Peter ſeemed to have pointed at 2 Pet. 3.16.) ſo our having this grand ſcope of the Apoſtle in our eye (the vindication of this act of God's providence, as in calling the Gentiles, ſo in leaving the obdurate incredulous Jewes) will be very usefull to extricate the reader out of those difficulties, which the obstruseneſſe of the writing, and the (unobserved) conciſe passing from one Jewiſh objection to another (rather glancing, by the way, at their known objections, then solemnly proposing and answering them) have first caused, and then some inconvenient prejudices and prepoſſessions have improved and enhanſed, and at length made appear so insuperable. In order to which it is that I have in this Epiſtle taken liberty to enlarge the Paraphraſe to a great length in many places, by inculcating, and, by way of parentheſis, interſerting those heads of discourse, which I conceive are chiefly referred to, and from the observing of which the explication doth principally proceed, conceiving this length, and circumlocution, the ſhorteſt way to my designed end, the clear underſtanding of this Epiſtle, and that which hath ſuperſeded the neceſſity of multiplying the Annotations on all the dark passages, which would much more have lengthened the work, and have been leſſe intelligible by the vulgar reader. The prime things that muſt here be taken care of are, first, that the occaſions of the severall parts of the Apoſtles discourſe be adverted to, viz. some objections of the Judaizers against his doctrine and practiſe, which are secretly inſinuated, and require great and diligent care to discern them, And then secondly, that the rationall importance of every part of this Epiſtle, the relation it hath to the concluſion, which it is designed to inferre, and the connexion of one part with another, be weighed and permitted to have its due inſluence on the interpretation, and then the bare sound of some few incidentall paſſages will not be of force to miſguide any.

The Epiſtle of PAUL the Apoſtle to the ROMANS.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1, 2. One that hath received this speciall singular mercy from him to be an Apoſtle, authorized, and set apart (Act. 13. 2.) to that office of preaching the Goſpell (which God had promiſed by the prophets that it ſhould now be revealed to the Gentiles, as well as Jewes, to all the world by the Miniſtery of the Apoſtles)

1. PAUL a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, [* called to be an Apoſtle, ſeparated unto the Goſpell of God,

2. (Which he had promiſed afore by his Prophets in the holy Scriptures)]

* a called, or ſpeciall Apoſtle, κλητὸς Ἀπόστολος, See note on Mat. 20. c.

3, 4. Concerning the Meſſias, the Son of God, by him ſent into the world (who according to the fleſh was born a Jew, of the ſtock of David, but according to the ſpirit of holineſſe, or in reſpect of that other nature in him, called his eternall ſpirit, Heb. 9. 14. (far above all that is fleſh and blood) that, I ſay, which ſhone in him moſt perfectly, after, and through, and by his reſurrection from the dead, 2 Cor. 13. 4. was ſet at God's right hand, the Sonne of God in power, to whom accordingly, as to a Sonne, all power was given by the Father) even Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

3. Concerning his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, who was † made of the ſeed of David according to the fleſh,

4. And * declared to be the Sonne of God with power, according to the ſpirit of holineſſe, by the a reſurrection from the dead.]

† born 3. γενομένου. * demonſtrated, or defined the Son of God in power, τοῦ ὁρισθέντος υἱοῦ θεοῦ ἐν δυνάμει,

5. Who hath afforded me the favour or honour to be ſent as Apoſtle of the Gentiles, to all the Nations of the world, to reveal to them, and work in them obedience to the doctrine of the Goſpell (called the faith, Act. 6. 7.) in his name, and to his glory,

5. By whom we have received grace and Apoſtleſhip † for obedience to the faith among all Nations, for his name,]

† for the obeying of the faith, εἰς ὑπακοὴν πίστεως.

6. In which number ye alſo are, as many as have received the faith of Jeſus Chriſt (ſee note on Mat. 20. c. 7.)

6. Among whom are ye alſo, the called of Jeſus Chriſt.]

7. To all the Chriſtians that are in Rome, Jewes and Gentiles both, beloved of God, and which have received that ſpeciall mercy from him, to be from a ſtate of all unworthineſſe brought in, and received by him to be Chriſtians and Saints, I ſend greeting, and thereby my heartieſt wiſhes, and prayers, that all the divine mercies and goodneſſe and all manner of proſperity, from God our father and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, be multiplyed upon you.

7. To all that be in Rome, beloved of God,* called to be Saints: Grace be to you and peace from God our father and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

* the called Saints, ſee v. 1.

8. And the beginning of my greeting to you muſt be, my acknowledgement of the great goodneſſe of God unto you all (which is an infinite mercy alſo to me, who do exceedingly deſire the advancement of the Goſpell amongſt you) that the report of your ſubmiſſion to the Goſpell of Chriſt is ſpread far and neer over all the world.

8. Firſt, I thank my God through Jeſus Chriſt for you all, that your faith is ſpoken of throughout the whole world.]

† how unceaſſantly, ὡς ἀδιαλείπτως.

9, 10. For God knowes, and will bear me witneſſe (whom I inwardly and ſincerely ſerve in the preaching of the Goſpell of Chriſt) how daily conſtant I am in mentioning all your wants to God, and, whenſoever I pray, making this one ſolemne requeſt, that what I have ſo long deſigned and deſired, may happily, if it ſeem good in Gods eyes, be accompliſhed at laſt, viz. that I may come perſonally unto you.

9. For God is my witneſſe, whom I ſerve with my ſpirit in the Goſpell of his ſonne, † that without ceaſing I make mention of you * alwayes in my prayers,

10. Making requeſt (if by any means now at length I might have a proſperous journey by the will of God) † to come unto you.]

* requeſting always in my prayers, πάντοτε ἐπὶ τῶν προσευχῶν μου δεόμενος εἴ πως ἤδη ποτὲ † that I may come unto you, εὐοδωθήσομαι ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς.

11. For

11. For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spirituall gift, to the end you may be established,]

11. For I earnestly and passionately desire to see you, that what ever part of my Apostolicall office, or of the gifts which God hath endued me with, may contribute any thing toward the confirming of you in the faith (who are Christians already) may be by mee freely communicated unto you, * in it.

12. That is, that I may be comforted together* with you, by the mutuall faith both of you and me.]

12. That by my affording you some spirituall aide, you may receive comfort and advantage, and I also by your being thus confirmed by my means; and so we may be mutuall comforts to one another, by the communicating of my knowledge, and the encrease of yours.

13. Now I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oft times I purposed to come unto you (but was let hitherto) that I might have some fruit among you also, even as among other Gentiles.]

13. And truly, brethren, I desire you should know that it hath been no fault or omission of mine, that I have not come all this while, many resolutions I have had (but from time to time some obstacle hath interposed) that I might have the comfort of seeing you and imparting somewhat to you, which may tend to your advantage and proficiency, as I have in the rest of the Nations, that have been either converted by me, or whom I have since visited, and confirmed, as I desire to do you at this time, v. 10.

14. I am a debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians, both to the wise, and to the unwise.]

14. I count my selfe obliged to do whatsoever I can (either in the preaching of the Gospell, or confirming them which have received it,) to all sorts of men in the world, both those of the Churches in Asia, Ephesus, &c. which are in Greece, and others which are most distant from them, and by the Greeks called Barbarians; And so I count my selfe to owe to you Romans the taking a journey to you at this time, from which I have hitherto been hindred, v. 13.

15. So as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the Gospell to you that are at Rome also.]

15. And so 'tis not my fault, who for my part, and as much as my will is concerned in it, am most cheerfully ready to take this journey to Rome also, to preach the Gospell among you.

16. For I am not ashamed of the Gospell of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that beleiveth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek.

16. For I am so far from concealing, that I am very forward and earnest to make known the Gospell of Christ, whatsoever opposition, or persecution, or pains it cost me, knowing it to be a most effectuall means, the onely one now designed by God, to bring all men that embrace it, to repentance, and reformation of life, (see note on c. 10. a) and that which is by God appointed to be made known not onely to the Jewes, who had the privilege of having it first revealed to them, (see Act 3. 26.) but to all others of all the Nations of the world.

† the righteousnesse of God by faith is revealed to faith,

17. For therein † is the [b] righteousnesse of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith.]

b. 17. For that œconomy of Gods, that gracious method of accepting and rewarding all those that shall receive the faith and obedience of Christ, whether Jewes or Gentiles, is in, or by the Gospell revealed and promulgated, To this end, that men should beleive on him, and obey him sincerely, and so be partakers of it, and being justified by faith, should continue to live by faith, That, according to that which is said by the Prophet Habakkuk, c. 2. 4. The just shall by God's mercy accepting and rewarding his faith (his adherence and fidelity to him) return from captivity, and live happily, so now in like manner all that fear God, should return from the captivity of sin, and continue to live a pure Christian life here, according to the rules of the Gospell.

* retein, or hinder,

18. For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodlinesse and unrighteousnesse of men, who * * hold the truth in unrighteousnesse.]

c. 18. For on the other side, the displeasure and vengeance of God is most severely denounced against those that joyn impious, and unrighteous lives with the profession of Christianity, that obey not the Gospell, which they receive, c. 2. 8. (and such are the Gnostick hæretickes among you) or that by indulgence in vicious courses obstruct the Gospell, suffer it not to have force on themselves, or others, see c. 2. 24.

† among them, in eis

19. Because that which may be known of God is manifest † in them, for God hath shewed it unto them.]

19. It being certain (and by their profession acknowledged) that God, as farre as is necessary, is made known among them, for indeed God himselfe hath revealed and made himself known, (beyond all excuse of ignorance) by the various methods, that he hath made use of.

* done, manifest

† so far that they are, ut sint

20. For the invisible things of him [d] from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are * made, even his eternall power and Godhead, † so that they are without excuse.]

d. 20. For those things that are not of themselves visible, the infinite power and divinity of God, which from time to time, ever since the creation of the world, have been in themselves invisible, yet being beheld and seen (as in reflexion) by his various dealings in the world, are now become visibly discernible, so far as to render them, which do not discern, or which knowing do not serve, and worship him as God, i. e. do not live according to the rule of the Gospell, utterly uncapable of the excuse of faultlesse ignorance, See note on Mat. 1. k.

21. Because that when they * knew God they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkned.]

e. 21. Because that knowledge which men) is not by them made use of to the worshipping, or acknowledging of him, but they have fallen to the worshipping of Images (which are in Hebrew called vanities, falsities, v. 25. and nothings, see note on c. 8. d. and by so doing, put out that light which was vouchsafed them by God, (How this was true of the Gnosticks, see note e. and f.)

* the likenesse of an image of corruptible man, ἐικόνι φθαρτοῦ ἀνθρώπου

22. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools,]

22. Assuming the title of Gnosticks, of knowing more, of being wiser then other men, they have proved more fortish then any,

23. And changed the [f] glory of the uncorruptible God into * an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things.]

f. 23. And in stead of the invisible majesty and glorious appearance rances of God in bright clouds, &c. wherein God on Mount Sinai manifeſted himſelf to Moſes, but was not ſeen by him, they have expreſſed him, and worſhipt him in the images of Simon Magus, and Helena, (ſee note e.) and have fallen into all the heathen Idolatry, of worſhipping of birds, and beaſts, and ſerpents, i. e. the vileſt and meaneſt things, by partaking in their idol-feaſts, &c.

24. Upon which provocation of theirs, God hath withdrawn his grace from them, hath not reſtrained, but left them to themſelves, to the purſuit of all their filthy deſires, and permitted them to break out into all uncleanneſſes of the moſt odious unnaturall kinds, one with another to commit all reproachfull and unnaturall villanies.

24. Wherefore God alſo gave them up * to uncleanneſſe, through the luſts of their own hearts, to diſhonour their own bodies between themſelves.]

* in the luſts of their hearts, unto uncleanneſs, ὡς τὸ ἐπιθυμίαις τοῦ καρδίας αὐτῶν εἰς ἀκαθαρσίαν

25. A juſt puniſhment on them that had changed the Goſpel into a fable (ſee note f.) or the true inviſible God into an Idol (a falſity, an empty vain nothing v. 21.) worſhipping meer creatures, even above and in oppoſition to the creator (ſee 2 Theſſ. 2. 4.) that one eternall majeſty, whom all are obliged to worſhip.

† As many as have transformed ὡς μετήλλαξαν

26. This, I ſay, hath provoked God to leave them to their own luſts, and, without reſtraint, to permit them to fall into reproachfull ſins, and meer violences, and contumelies to nature.

28. And this by way of retaliation, as they have not thought fit to acknowledge God in their practiſes (but only to boaſt of their deep knowledge) ſo God hath left them to themſelves, and given them up to a villanous deteſtable abominable ſtate of mind, to commit unnaturall things, ſuch as no body will think tolerably fit, or approve of,

a. Ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν

Ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν] is the generall word which contains under it the riſing again of every dead body, and is appliable to every ſuch particular that riſeth, and ſo here denotes the reſurrection of Chriſt, being by the context particularly determined to that, as in other places it may denote the reſurrection of any one or more men, as the context ſhall enforce.

b. Δικαιοσύνη

For the explaining of this verſe, the firſt thing to be examined is the notion of Δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, and with the addition of [Θεοῦ] the righteouſneſſe of God. Δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe] ſignifies not alwaies the virtue of juſt dealing, but ſometimes, by a metonymie, the matter, about which that is converſant, the things, which by law are required of any, and in performance of which his righteouſneſſe conſequently conſiſts. Thus when Mat. 3. 15. Chriſt ſaith to John, Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteouſneſſe,] by righteouſneſs are meant all thoſe things, that under that more imperfect miniſtery of John were preſcribed men, and required of them to doe, to their being approved by God. Thus thoſe things, which are required of Jewes to perform under the Moſaical law, are called δικαιοσύνη ἡ ἐν νόμῳ, the righteouſneſſe which is in the law, Phil. 3. 6. And, there being two ſorts of proſelytes of the Jewes, one of thoſe which undertook the whole law of the Jewes, were circumciſed, &c. the other of thoſe, which onely received the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Adam, and Noah, the former of theſe were called indifferently גרי ברית, proſelytes of the covenant, and גרי צדקה proſelytes of righteouſneſſe, Where righteouſneſſe ſignifies all thoſe commands, and ordinances, which δικαιοσύνη ἡ ἐν νόμῳ

in that Mosaical Covenant were required of the Jewes, and without submission to which no stranger was permitted to come into their inner court of the Temple, and joyne with them in the worship of God. To this purpose it is observable, what was the prime occasion of this Epistle, the great charge, which by the Jewes was laid on Paul, for preaching the Gospel to the Gentiles, and thereby promising them acceptance and mercy from God for all their past sinnes on condition of their embracing the Gospel, and living for the future according to that rule, without any performance of the ritual lawes of Moses, circumcision, &c. This the Jewes violently opposed, as that wch was an apostatizing from the law of Moses, and the setting up a new righteousnesse, a new summary of performances, a new law, to the prejudice of the Mosaical; What Paul had thus done, he here asserts, and stands to, as that which was now the declared will of God, under the Gospel, though distant from that, which had before been required of Jewes under the law. And as now he sets up the faith of Christ, νόμον πίστεως the law of faith, the summary of those things which Christ from God requires of all men, against the Ordinances of external obedience in the Mosaical law, so he thinks fit to style one the righteousnesse of God, as the other was the Jewes righteousnesse, and this righteousnesse of God ἐκ πίστεως, of, or by faith, i.e. that which Christ hath now revealed or declared to be our righteousnesse, that which is required of us, now under the Gospel, to our being justified in Gods sight, in opposition to the δικαιοῦν ἐκ νόμου, that sort of legal performances, circumcision &c. by observation of which the Jew, and the Judaizer pretended to be acceptable, and justified before God, and without which they contended that there was no justification to be had, and consequently that the uncircumcised Gentiles could not be justified, or acceptable in the sight of God; the contrary to which is by S. Paul here undertaken to be proved, and is after enlarged on, c.3, & 4. &c. Thus much for the occasion of this phrase, and the general importance of it, to note that way of œconomy of saving, and justifying men under the Gospel. As for the more particular nature of this way of Gods dealing in Christ, that is also contained in the [ἐκ πίστεως, by faith] as faith signifies the embracing, and obeying of Christ, after a former life of sinne and ignorance, such as the heathens had lived in, For whatsoever their former lives had been, against which the Jewes objected, that they were Idolatrous, and vile, and neither capable of Gods favour, nor fit to be converst with by any pious person yet Christ, that came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance, came particularly, though not primarily, to call, and offer place of repentance to them, and upon reformation, to allow them pardon, which though it were not δικαιοσύνη ἐξ ἔργων a righteousnesse by, or from works, a way of œconomy, whereby only just, or worthy persons are called and received, yet it is a righteousnesse by, or from faith, whereby through Gods mercy, and pardon of sinne in Christ, those that come in to him, and give up themselves to sincere obedience for the future, are accepted, and justified by God, as Abraham was, which is styled Gods justifying the ungodly, because those that have been most impious, have yet place of repentance given, and are accepted by God upon repentance. In this sense we shall oft find this word δικαιοσύνη righteousnesse in the ensuing chapters. So c. 9. 30. ἔθνη κατέλαβε δικαιοσύνην the Gentiles laid hold on righteousnesse, i.e. on this Evangelical way, and c. 10. 3. ἀγνοοῦντες τὴν τοῦ δικαιοσύνην, the Iewes not knowing this course of justifying sinners set down in the Gospel, sought to establish their own (Iudaical) righteousnesse, and were not subject to Gods righteousnesse. So again v. 6. ἡ ἐκ πίστεως δικαιοσύνη (the same phrase, as here, in this placing and construction of the words) the righteousnesse from, or by faith, i.e. this Evangelical way, which is by the faith, or the Gospel, and is opposed to the διαθήκη παλαιὰ, the promulgation of the law, which brought nothing but death to every act of wilfull sinne. So the Apostles are called διάκονοι δικαιοσύνης 2 Cor. 11. 15. ministers of righteousnesse, viz. of this way of justifying men in Christ, which elsewhere are called ministers of the new covenant, noting righteousnesse in this notion, to signifie this new covenant (as righteousnesse and covenant, and צדקה, and ברית, were said to be all one) or this Evangelical way under it, explained v. 24. by δικαιούμενοι δωρεὰν τῇ αὐτοῦ χάριτι, our being justified freely by his grace, or mercy, without any such precedent obedience of ours, that may any way challenge it. All that remains is, to enquire, first, why ἐκ πίστεως, from, or by faith, should, in the construction, be joyned with δικαιοσύνη righteousnesse, then why [εἰς πίστιν to faith] should signifie [that we may beleive.] For the first, it is but an ordinary ὑπερβατὸν both in these and other authors, thus to transpose words, on the like occasion, and that it is so here, is evident by the ensuing citation out of the prophet, as it is written, (which notes these two to be parallel) the just by faith shall live, and by the like phrase, c. 3. 22. & c. 10. 6. And for the second [εἰς πίστιν, that we may beleive,] that will be very agreeable also to many other places in this book, for so [εἰς σωτηρίαν to salvation] v. 16. is, that they may be saved, so [εἰς κρίσιν, to burning] Heb. 6. 8. that it may be burnt, and so Wisd. 11. 23. Παρορᾷς ἁμαρτήματα ἀνθρώπων εἰς μετάνοιαν, Thou passest over the faults of men to repentance, i.e. that they may repent, And so here c. 6. 16. εἰς ὑπακοὴν to obedience, is [that ye may obey] & v. 19. εἰς τὴν ἀνομίαν, to iniquity is, that you may commit all villany, as in the conclusion of that verse [εἰς ἁγιασμὸν to purification, or sanctification] is [that ye may live pure and sanctified lives.]

The word κατέχω] signifies two things, (very distant) to retain and hold fast, and to obstruct or hinder, κατέχειν, κωλύειν, κωλύειν, ζωέχειν, saith Hesychius, it signifies to hold fast, to hinder, to compresse. In the notion of hindring 'tis taken 2 Thess. 2. 6, 7. and in the other in divers places. By this means 'tis become uncertain, what it should signifie here, especially when either way the sense is very commodious, for even they that retain the truth in unrighteousnesse, that under the acknowledgment and profession of the truth, veile and joyn all manner of impious living, doe thereby hinder and obstruct the truth, viz. the force of it on themselves, and the propagation of it to others by that impious living of theirs. But the former is the more likely sense of it, and most agreeable to the consequents, of

of their knowing the truth, and becoming unexcuſable thereby.

d. Ἀπὸ κτίσεως κόσμου The phraſe [ἀπὸ κτίσεως κόσμου] is here joyned with ἀόρατα ἀπῦ the inviſible things, or attributes of God, his power and Godhead, from the foundation or creation of the world, i.e. ever ſince the creation, ſo doth ἀπ' ἀρχῆς κτίσεως from the beginning of the creation] ſignifie Mar. 10. 6. and 13. 19. and 2 Pet. 3. 4. ſo κεκρυμμένα ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου Mat. 13. 35. the things hidden from the foundation of the world, and c. 25. 34. Lu. 11. 50. Heb. 4. 3. where it clearly ſignifies from, i.e. ever ſince the creation, and ſo c. 9. 26. ſo Rev. 13. 8. and 17. 8. names written and not written in the book of the lamb from, i.e. ever ſince the foundation of the world. By which it appears that there is no neceſſity of underſtanding God's ποιήματα doings or actions here, of the works of the creation, but of all things that from that time to this, incluſively, have been done in the world by him, and ſo it will be extended to all the doctrines, and miracles, and actions of Chriſt, the whole buſineſſe of the Goſpel. Ποιήματα

e. Γνόντες τὸν Θεὸν The phraſe γνόντες τὸν Θεὸν knowing God] here ſeems to referre the whole preſent diſcourſe to the Gnoſticks; who were ſo called from their aſſuming to themſelves ſo much of the knowledge of God, and the myſteries of religion. And theſe being a ſort of hereticks in that firſt age under the Apoſtles, who affirmed Simon to be God the Father, that appeared in Mount Sinai, as alſo God the Sonne that appeared in the fleſh, and the holy Ghoſt, who was promiſed to come, were the darnell ſown by the envious perſon, whereſoever the Goſpel was planted, and this as in other places, ſo in Rome, where Simon Magus the founder of them (contended after this time with S. Peter, but) before the writing of this, in Claudius's daies, had a ſtatue erected to him, as to the ſupreme God. Theſe Gnoſticks pretended to be great zelots for the law of Moſes, particularly for circumciſion, thereby to avoid the perſecutions, which the Jewes raiſed againſt the Chriſtians, Gal. 6 12. and on the other ſide thought it lawfull to offer ſacrifice to Idols, 1 Cor. 8. (to comply with the heathens) becauſe, as they ſaid, an idol was nothing, and yet farther, worſhipped the images and pictures of Simon and Helena, and ſo, as Euſebius ſaith, ἐ σύφρονα καὶ διὰ καθαρότητα βίου βεβοηθημένην πᾶσι χειρίστων φιλοσοφίαν ὑποκρινόμενοι, ἧς μὲ ἔδοξαν ἀπαλλαττόμενοι δεῖ τὰ εἴδωλα δυσσεβοῦντες, ὑδὲν ἧττον αὖθις ἐπιλαμβάνονται), pretending to have turned Chriſtians, and ſo to have changed the idolatry and ſuperſtition, that before they lived in, for the pure and ſober rules of life taught by Chriſt, they fell nevertheleſſe back again to all that which they ſeemed to have forſaken, καταπίπτοντες δὲ ταῖς γραφαῖς καὶ εἰκόναις αὐτῦ τε τῦ Σίμωνος, καὶ ἐ τῆν αὐτῷ συνοῦσαν Ἑλένης, θυμάμασί τε καὶ θυσίαις καὶ σπονδαῖς τύτες προσκυνῦντες δεῖσιδαίμονες, falling down to the pictures and images of Simon and Helen, worſhipping them with incenſe, and meat and drink-offerings. Τὰδε τύτων ἀπορρητότερα — but for their more ſecret and hidden actions they were ſuch, as would aſtoniſh any to heare them δι' ὑπερβολὴν ἐ ἀσεβείας καὶ ἀῤῥησιουργίας καὶ ἀῤῥησιοπιίας, for the ſuperlative impurity and abomination that was in them. This, I ſuppoſe, will be a key of entrance into the deſigne and meaning of this Epiſtle, wherein the Apoſtle willing to fortifie the Roman converts againſt the danger of theſe ſuperſeminations, confutes theſe doctrines of the Gnoſticks, eſpecially that of complying with the Jewes concerning the neceſſity of obſerving the Judaical law, and here firſt gives a character of them, as they agree with the heathens in idolatry, and all kind of wickedneſſe, and unnatural uncleanneſs, v. 29. &c. and by their living ſo contrary to the law, ſhew what little reaſon they have to pretend to the obſerving of it, when indeed 'tis the inward purity of the heart and actions, and not the outward circumciſion of the fleſh, which the law principally aimed at. That theſe Gnoſticks are the men here referr'd to, may farther appear by comparing this place, eſpecially v. 27. with the diſcourſe of the Gnoſticks in S. Jude directly parallel to this (ſee note on Jude d.) and ſo by their character here v. 29. the πορνεία and πορνεῖα (fornication and inordinate deſires) compared with many other places of the Epiſtles, Gal. 5. 19. Eph. 5. 3. Col. 3. 5. and the pride &c. v. 30. with 1 Tim. 6. 4. and the like in the other particulars.

The word δόξα glory here ſeems to referre to the notion or uſe of it, Exod. 24. 16. where it is ſaid of God's preſence and appearance there in the Mount Sinai, וַיִּשְׁכֹּן כְּבוֹד יְהוָה עַל הַר the glory of the Lord abode upon the mount. From whence it is that the word ſchechinah, abiding] is ordinarily uſed to ſignifie this, or the like glorious appearance, or preſence of God, and is directly parallel to δόξα glory here, Now of God's appearance on Mount Sinai it is to be obſerved, 1. that God did not there exhibite himſelf in any bodily ſhape; Onely glorious appearances there were, v. 16. as it were a paved work of Saphire ſtone, &c. and the ſight of the glory of the Lord was like devouring fire v. 17. but ſaith Moſes, Deut. 4. 15. Te ſaw no manner of ſimilitude in the day that the Lord ſpake to you in Horeb. And this is there preſs'd by Moſes to enforce God's commandement, that they ſhould not corrupt themſelves and make them a graven image, the ſimilitude of any figure, the likeneſs of male or female, the likeneſs of any beaſt, of any winged fowle, of any thing that creepeth on the ground, of any fiſh, &c. Now of theſe followers and worſhippers of Simon (the Gnoſticks) it is ſufficiently known, firſt that they affirmed Simon to be the ſupreme God, diſtinctly he that appeared in Sinai, ſo ſaith Cyrill of Jeruſalem, Cat: 6. ſpeaking of Simon at Rome, οὗτος ἐλήλυθεν εἶναι ἑαυτὸν μὲ ὄν ὁ δι' ὄρους Σινᾶ ὡς πάλιος φανείς, he preſumed to ſay of himſelf that he was he that appeared on Mount Sinai as the Father. Secondly that he had a ſtatue erected to him at Rome, inſcribed, To Simon the holy God, and ſo alſo his whore Helena, ſaith Euſebius (ſee note e.) and both of them worſhipt by them. Nay moreover 3dly, that the Gnoſticks complied with the other heathen Idolaters, partaking of their ſacrifices and feaſts, and ſo were guilty of all kind of idolatry. Of theſe therefore the Apoſtle may be beleived to ſpeak here particularly, and to lay to their charge firſt that they changed the glory of God, i.e. the glorious appearance of his in Mount Sinai, wherein yet there was no ſimilitude ſeen, into an image or ſimilitude of a man, viz: of Simon Magus, a bodily ſhape of a meer mortal man, whereas the immortal f. δόξα immortal God, that appeared in Sinai, was never seen in any such shape. 2dly, That in doing this they are guilty of that great sinne of idolatry (there forbidden, upon this ground of their seeing no similitude in Sinai,) viz: of worshipping the image of a man, and of flying, and fourfooted and creeping things, which are here repeated, as the very things that had been there interdicted. And though it be true of the Gnosticks that by their joyning with the heathen Idolaters, they were literally guilty of worshipping every one of these here named, yet their worshipping of Simon and Helen alone, is sufficient to own all the charge that is here laid on them. The worshipping of one sort of the things forbidden, the likenesse of the male and female, being as direct a breach of the commandment which forbad that, and others also, as the worshipping of all and each of them would be. This is after set down more succinctly ver.25. They turned the truth of God into a lie, i.e. either the true story Exod. 24. where no similitude was seen, into this false story of Simon there appearing, or else transformed that infinite invisible deity into an image or idol, and, παρὰ ἢ κλίσιν, above and beside the Creator of heaven and earth, worshipt also ἢ κλίσιν this creature, vile sinfull creatures of his, Simon and his whore. This phrase of turning or transforming the glory &c. seems to be borrowed from Psal. 106. 20. They made a calf in Horeb and worshipped a graven image, thus they turned their glory into the similitude of a calf that eateth hay, &c. As they there that saw no similitude in the mount, yet made one presently, viz: the similitude of a calf, so these Gnosticks here making Simon to have appeared in Sinai, as the Father, make him an image & statue to worship him in it. Of the word δόξα glory somewhat hath been said before, note on Mat. 3. k. and more will be added, Rom. 9. b.

g. ἀδόκιμος

The word ἀδόκιμος hath two notions especially, one among the metallists, the other belonging to the agones; any metall that will not bear the δοκιμὴ or triall, or which, being tried, betraies it self to be adulterate, is ἀδόκιμος reprobate. But the notion that seems most peculiarly to belong to it in the New Testament, is the other, taken from the agones, where, as he that strives, as he ought, and conquers, is δόκιμος approved, 2 Tim. 2. 15. and Jam. 1. 12. δόκιμος γὰρ γενόμενος λήψεται, approved, and such as shall receive the crown, and in other authors, εὐδόκιμος well approved, (and of other creatures ἵππος δόκιμος an approved horse in the ἱππασίᾳ.) so he that loses the game, and prize, that doth not run or strive νομίμως, according to the laws of the game, and so overcome, is said to be ἀδόκιμος, to miscarry in the race, and so to lose the reward of it; Thus in Democrates, Δόκιμος ἀνὴρ καὶ ἀδόκιμος οὐκ ἐξ ὧν πράττει μόνον, ἀλλ' ἐξ ὧν βούλεται, A man is approved or rejected not onely by what he doth, but by what he wills, So in the Sibylline Oracles,

Ἄγγελος ὃς κείνοις τότε τὴν δίκην βεβαιώσει.

Καὶ δοκίμους στέψει. —— Christ will crown the approved. Thus 1 Cor 9.27. 'tis at the conclusion of an agonistical discourse of running and cuffing, &c. the close of which is that the Apostle uses all his most earnest endevours, lest, (being a κῆρυξ preacher, crier, officer in the agones, to propose the lawes and rewards of the agones to others, which is ἀκηρύκτων and ἀπηρύκτων to proclaim such a man conqueror, such a man to have lost) he himself should ἀποκριθῶ be rejected, found uncapable of the reward by all aspired to, i.e. faile of that crown of eternal life. So 2 Tim. 3. 8. ἀδόκιμοι περὶ τὴν πίστιν, in the matter of faith, such as were found unworthy of reward by God, proposed to Christians; So Tit. 1. 16. ἀδόκιμοι to every good work, that doe nothing fit to be approved by God or man, where yet, as in all the former places, the figure λιτότης is to be observ'd, the word being used not for him onely that deserves no reward, or that misses it, but for him that is most contrary, the most vile and wicked, that deserves the contrary punishment (as ἄπιστος, and ἄνομος, and ἀχρεῖος, and ἀσυμφώνων, ungodly, without law, unprofitable, uncomelinesse, signifie the most wicked, the most unfaithfull servant, most violent opposer of the law, the greatest impurities, and many other the like) and therefore is interpreted by βδελυκτοὶ ὄντες καὶ ἀπειθεῖς] that went before, being abominable, and disobedient, or contumacious, So Heb. 6. 8. of the ground that brings forth nothing but bryars and thorns, that 'tis ἀδόκιμος, and κατάρας ἐγγύς, reprobate, and nigh to a curse. And so saith Hesychius, and Phavorinus, Ἀδόκιμος, πονηρός, it signifies a wicked man. And so it is here taken in this sense of extremely ill, as appears by the effects that follow, the μὴ καθήκοντα, all the abominable sinnes that were in fashion among the Gentile-idolaters, and Gnostick Christians. And the same may be said of that place 2 Cor. 13. 5 6,7. which we will explain when we come to it. There is one thing more here observable, the answering of [ἀδόκιμος] here to [οὐκ ἐδοκίμασε] in the beginning of the verse, They approved not, thought not good to have God in their acknowledgment, and answerably God gave them up to a mind, such as neither God nor any else will approve of, which manner of speaking is very frequent in the Scripture, especially in setting down God's punishments on sinners, in which the sacred writers delight to observe some correspondence. As Psal. 18. With the froward thou wilt shew thy self froward, And, Because you have walked contrary to me, I will walk contrary to you, And Mat. 5. 19. Whosoever shall break one of the least of these commandements, the same shall be the least in the kingdome of heaven. And many the like, which have formerly been observ'd.

μὴ καθήκοντα

h. πλεονεξία

The word πλεονεξία] in this and many other places of the New Testament which we generally render covetousnesse, signifies excessive, or unnatural lusts, (not desire of money onely) and is ordinarily set down among the basenesses of the Gnostick heresie, as I here suppose it is. So Eph. 4. 19. Οἵτινες ἀπηλγηκότες, who giving over all labour (as idleness was the mother-sinne of the Sodomites) gave themselves up to lasciviousnesse, to work all uncleanness ἐν πλεονεξίᾳ, in inordinate unnatural desires. Thus in Photius Epist. 168. ἡ βδελυρὰ πλεονεξία signifies such lust, as was among Barbarians, or heathens, (and had been before exemplified in Josephs Ægyptian mistress) τὸν ἐχθρὸν ἔρωτα κτησαμένη, which possest the disturbed lover, as there it follows. For as to the nature of the word, it is known to come from πλέον ἔχω, and to signifie any immoderate desire, of any thing above ones portion, So in Aristotle tis opposed

ἴσον

ἰσότητι, to equality, So in Hesychius, Πλεονεξία τὸ πλέον τοῦ δίκαιος ἐν πρὸς λαμβάνειν, to take more then is due or meet of any thing. So in Lucian de Cal: the calumniator is described to be one, that will have and inclose all his auditors to himselfe, will let no man else be heard, and for this he cals him πλεονεκτὴν, one that assumes more then belongeth to him, and so Democrates in his γνωμ: defines πλεονεξία to be speaking all, and not enduring to hear any body else. And in Themistius Paraphrase of the first Book de animâ, πλεονεκτῶν is taken for any kinde of exceeding πᾶσαν γνῶσιν ἡμῶν εἶναι, πλεονεκτῶν δὲ ἑτέραν ἑτέρας, One exceeds, or excels the other, and in Alex: Aphrod: τὰ ἁμαρτ: σωματικὰ πλεονεκτήματα are the faculties of the body wherein beasts exceed men, and so φυσικὴ (perhaps it should be read ψυχικὴ) πλεονεξία the excellence of the minde of men above beasts. And the notion of which now I speak, though it differ in the object, and matter, about which it is conversant, is the same in effect with these, a desiring, and usurping that which is not agreeable to his condition, sex, nature &c. τὰ μὴ καθήκοντα, those things that are not meet, which Alex: Aphrodis: more directly expresseth in his Schol: on Arist: de an: Ὁ ἄδικος αὐτῷ πλέον τῶν ἡδέων νέμει, The wicked man allows himselfe too large a proportion of sweet things, or pleasures. And of this we have a Grammaticall ground in the Hebrew word, בֶּצַע, which signifies both covetousnesse, and lust, and being by the Septuagint often rendred πλεονεξία covetousnesse, is once rendred μιασμὸς pollution. Ezec. 33. 31. and to that notion of the word the place agrees, if we compare it with v. 29. Where the cause of their desolation is the abominations committed by them, and those joyned with defiling the neighbours wife v. 26. Thus in an antient Prayer of Ephraim Syrus appointed for confession, and the sin chiefely insisted on being that of uncleannesse (as appears by ἐμὲ τὸν αἰσχρὸν, τὸν φλυαρὸν, τὸν μαίνοντα, τὸν αὐτὸν αἷμα ἀπὸ τῶν αἰσχρῶν καὶ ἀπράκτων ἔργων μι, τὸν μαίνοντα τὸν ταὺν τὸ σώματός μι, &c. ἀπώσις καὶ πονηρᾶς φιλησυχίας μι, πῶν μέλος μα ἐμίανα, ἔρθειρα &c:) he prayes, σπλαγχνίσθητι ἐπὶ τῆς ἁμαρτίαις μι, τῆ ἀδικίαις, τῆ πλεονεξίαις, τῆ μοιχείαις, τῆ πορνείαις, τῆ καταλαλιαῖς, τῆ αἰσχρολογίαις, &c: have mercy on my sinnes, my iniquities, my unnaturall lusts, adulteries, fornications, idle and filthy speakings; where if we may judge by the attendants, the word is used in this sense. Thus I conceive Plato used the word de Rep: l. 9. where speaking of sensuall men, he compares them to the beasts, χορταζόμενοι καὶ ὑγιαίνοντες, full fed and lascivious, and farther addes ἅτινα τῆς τύπου πλεονεξίας κυρίττοντες καὶ λακτίζοντες &c. where the πλεονεξία τύπου must refer to the fulnesse of lust and flesh together, To these may be added the Glosse of Phavorinus, Πλεονεξία ἡ ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας τὸ πλείονος βλαβὴ (for which he cites the Apostle) the hurt of immoderate lusting, And so the word τρυφὴ which signifies this very thing, and which he expresseth by λιχνεία φιλήδονος, voluptuousnesse, he expresseth also by πλεονασμὸς περίεργος πρὸς ἡδυπάθειαν ἀεὶ μᾶν ὤν, an excesse which is alwayes very curious, busie, importunate to fetch in pleasures, πλεονεξία, and πλεονασμὸς] being but little different from one another. Thus 'tis used in the Epistle of Barnabas, p. 231. where giving the reason why hares were forbidden under the Law, to intimate that we should not be παιδοφθόροι like them, he addes, ὅτι ὁ λαγὼς κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν πλεονεκτεῖ τὸν ἀριθμὸν. And in the fragments of Polycarpus's Epistle speaking of Valens an Elder of Philippi and his having committed somewhat utterly unworthy of that calling, by his example he admonisheth others to abstein ab avaritiâ (that sure was in Greek ἀπὸ πλεονεξίας) from inordinate desires, & sint casti, and that they be chaste, adding that whosoever did not thus abstein, ὁ μὴ ἀπεχόμενος πλεονεξίας, ab idololatriâ coinquinabitur, & tanquam inter Gentes judicabitur, will be contaminated with Idolatry, and judged as among the Gentiles. And so there is little reason to doubt, but that, when Bede on Mat. 5. 32. speaking of divorce saith, [non hic intelligitur tantùm fornicatio in stupro, quod in alienis viris aut fœminis committitur, sed omnis concupiscentia, vel avaritia, vel idolatria, &c. tis not only adultery that is here understood, which is committed on other mens wives, but every concupiscence, or covetousnesse, or Idolatry,] hee meanes by avaritia coveting, unnaturall lust, having, no question, translated that note out of some Greek commentator who had used πλεονεξία in this sense. And so when * Holkot out of Papias observes that the Scriptures call by the name of Fornication, omnem illicitam corruptionem, all unlawfull, or interdicted corruption, (sicut est Idololatria & avaritia, such are, Idolatry and coveting,) it is evident, that corruptio illicita, is the ἀθέμιτος φθορὰ abominable villany, as φθορὰ signifies, (see note on c. 8. 1.) and idolatry and covetousnesse, the unnaturall sinnes used by the heathen worshippers, the πλεονεξία, which is Idolatry. Thus in all reason the word is to be taken here, where these four, [πορνία fornication, πονηρία villany, κακία naughtinesse, and πλεονεξία inordinate desire] are put together, πονηρία and κακία in the same notion, that Gen. 19. 7. and 9. πονηρεύεσθε and κακώσει are taken, i. e. to signifie the sinne of Sodom there described, and in all probability πορνία and πλεονεξία in the same sense also. So Col. 3. 5. in relation to the Gnosticks he bids them mortifie fornication, uncleannesse, πάθος (i. e as the Syriack render it,) passivity, evil concupiscence, and πλεονεξία inordinate desire, which is Idolatry. So Eph. 5. 3. Let neither fornication, nor uncleannesse, nor πλεονεξία, inordinate desire be named among you, putting them in the number of the nefanda, sinnes not to be named, and so v. 5. Every fornicator, or unclean person, or πλεονέκτης, (not covetous, but inordinate luster) who is an Idolater. as when Maimonides Mor: Neb: l. 3. c. 38. speaking of the unnatural sinnes used by the Gentiles, and having named one abominable custome of theirs, propter hoc, saith he, prohibita est incisio arboris in aliam speciem, ut elongemur à causis Idololatriæ & fornicationum. To the same sense is πλεονεκτῶν ἐν τῷ πράγματι τὸν ἀδελφὸν 1 Thess. 4. 6. as shall there (note a.) be explained. So 1 Cor. 5. 11. ἢ πόρνος ἢ πλεονέκτης ἢ εἰδωλολάτρης, either fornicator, or inordinate luster, or Idolater, speaking of the Gnostick Christians again, as in Barnabas's Epistle p. 252. in the bedroll of destroying sinnes there is εἰδωλολατρεία, φαρμακία, μαγία, πλεονεξία, ἀροσία Θεῦ, Idolatry, sorcery, magick (in reference to the Gnostiks witchcrafts) inordinate lusts, fearlessnesse of God; So the the προνια γεγυμνασμενη πλεονεξιας 2 Pet. 2. 14. by the matter of that whole chapter is confined to this sense, a heart exercised with inordinate lusts, which renders them κατάρας τέκνα, children of a curse, sure to be destroyed; and all this makes it reasonable to pitch upon this notion of this word πλεονεξία in this place. So when Saint Paul 2 Cor. 7. after an exhortation of coming out from among them, (as out of Sodom) and of not touching the unclean thing, c. 6. 7. and of cleansing themselves from all filthiness, c. 7. 1. subjoynes v. 2. Receive us, οὐδένα ἠδικήσαμεν, we have injured no man, οὐδένα ἐφθείραμεν, we have corrupted no man, and addes οὐδένα ἐπλεονεκτήσαμεν, it may very fitly be rendred in this sense, of foul unnaturall lusts, referring all the three words to their Gnostick false teachers, that debauched those, who intertained them, brought them to all ἀδικία wickedness, injustice (which is used for that sinne Gen. 6. 5. and here Rom. 1. 18.) φθορὰ corruption, (used for that sinne, Gen. 6. 11, 12. and 2 Pet. 2. 12. See note on 2 Pet. 1. b.) and πλεονεξία inordinate lusts, in the same sense; not that Saint Paul had any reason to vindicate himselfe from these sins (no more had he, whatsoever other notion they could be interpreted in) but to intimate the vast difference betwixt him, and the Gnostick teachers, or seducers, which had these designes upon them; which the rather appears by his next words, v. 3. I speak not to condemne you] which implies that what he last said, was by way of reproach to their new leaders, though not to the condemning of them to whom he wrote. In the same sense it is that he tels the Thessalonians, 1 Thess. 2. 5. that he was not with them ἐν προφάσει πλεονεξίας, see note on that place.

The word ὑβρισταὶ may here most probably denote those unnaturall lusts also. So in Philostratus de vitâ Apoll. l. 1. c. 11. ὑβριστὴς ἀνθρωπος is presently said to be πρὸς τὰ ἐρωτικὰ, wicked in his loves or lusts, and of him it followes, that he fell in love with Apollonius for his beauty. And this agrees most aptly with many former passages of this chapter, and the character of the Gnosticks here set down. i. ὑβρισταὶ

Ἀσυνέτους, τοὺς ἀσυνδέτους λέγει ὁ Ἀπόστολος, saith Phavorinus, the Apostle means those that have no conscience, knowledge, and conscience, σύνεσις; and συνείδησις, being all one, and for the want of that, is the want of conscience. This, it seemes, was the judgement of that learned Grammarian of this place, to which, no doubt, he referres by the word [Ἀπόστολος,] Hesychius renders it onely ἄφρων foolish, but so as foolish signifies unreasonable actions, and as ἄνοια Luc. 6. 11. signifies designing malice and mischief against Christ, and as Tit. 3. 3. Ἀνόητοι] signifies those that were guilty of unreasonable practises. And this according to the use of σύνεσις which is sometimes the minde, the understanding, Mar. 12. 33. with which God is to be loved, as well as known, and so the not knowing him thus may be set for the greatest impiety. Of σύνεσις see more in note on 1 Cor. 1. c. k. Ἀσύνετοι

Ἀσύνδετοι, ὁ δύσμαχος, καὶ ὃ συμβάσεις μὴ ἐμμένων, not apt to agree with others, one that stands not to pacts, bargains, saith Phavorinus, and so Hesychius being rightly pointed, Ἀσυνδέτους μὴ ἐμμένοντας καὶ συνθήκας, and Ἀσυνδέτους ἀπιστοῦντας, καὶ ἀβεβαίους, unfaithfull and unconstant. l. CHAP. II.

Paraphrase.

* every one, that judgest

1. Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, *[a] whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thy self, for thou that judgest dost the same things.] 1. By this it appears how little can be said in excuse of those seducers among you, who judge and condemn the orthodox Christians, as breakers of the Law, onely because they are not circumcised, &c: when they who thus condemn them, observe not the Law, no not in that very particular, which circumcision peculiarly noted, the abstaining from abominable uncleannesses, but live and go on in those sins, c. 1. 29. and so condemn themselves in judging others. a.

† we know, οἴδαμεν

2. But † we are sure that the judgement of God is according to [b] truth against them which commit such things.] 2. Whereas it is most infallibly certain, and acknowledged by all, that hee passes judgement rightly, not sparing a Jew for his outward ceremonies, when he punishes a Gentile that lives as well as hee, but punishing sinne, rewarding disobedience (if it be not reformed and forsaken) wheresoever he findes it, without any acceptation of persons, or consideration of externall performances, or privileges, or advantages in any. b.

3. And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do such things, and dost the same, that thou shalt escape the judgement of God?] 3. And then how is it possible, that thou shouldest judge the pure Christian to be a breaker of the Law, and thereupon in a damnable estate, onely for not being circumcised, and yet deem thy selfe safe, when thou art guilty of those filthinesses, which were most eminently prohibited by the Law of circumcision?

4. Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and long suffering, not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?] 4. Or shall God's great patience and longanimity in deferring his vengeance on unbelievers, and his forbearing so long to punish thy sinfull course, be cast away upon thee, be despised, and not made use of by thee? Dost thou not consider that all this long-suffering of God to thee, is purposely designed to bring thee to reformation, and, if it work not that effect, will tend to thy heavier ruin?

* according to κατα † or, retribution of, for the King's MS. reads ἀποκρίσεως

5. But * after thy hardness and impenitent heart, treasurest up unto thy self wrath against the day of wrath, and † revelation of the righteous judgement of God?] 5. Wilt thou thus go on in obdurate resisting of all God's methods, and be never the better by his deferring these judgements so long, but onely to adde more weight to thy ruin when it comes?

6. Who will render to every man according to his deeds.] 6. Who shall not consider circumcision or uncircumcision, but punish or reward every man according to his actions.

7. To them, who by * patient continuance in well doing ſeek for glory, and honour, and immortality; eternall life.]

* patience of the good work, κατὰ ὑπομονὴν ἔργου ἀγαθοῦ

7. To them that by conſtancy of pure Chriſtian performances, and by patient bearing of the perſecutions that fall upon them for that profeſſion, go on in purſuit of that reward which Chriſt hath promiſed to ſuch, he ſhall beſtow another life upon the loſſe of this, eternall bliſſe in the world to come.

8. 9. 10. But to ſchiſmaticall factious men, which are as it were born, and compoſed, and made up of contention (as the Gnoſticks are) that reſiſt the right way, deny the Chriſtians the liberty of not being circumciſed, and themſelves live in all unnaturall ſins, thoſe that do thus renounce the Goſpell, and live contrary to the Law, to ſuch all judgements muſt be expected, deſolations and deſtructions here in a moſt eminent manner, and eternall miſery attending them. And as the Jew ſhall have had the privilege to be firſt rewarded for his good performances (as appears by Chriſt's being firſt revealed to him, in whom conſequently and proportionably he ſhall have all ſpirituall grace and crown, if he embrace Chriſt, and live exactly, and conſtantly according to his directions) ſo muſt he alſo expect to have his puniſhment and deſtruction firſt, and that a ſad one at this preſent by the Roman armies, upon their finall rejecting and refuſing Chriſt. The greater his privileges are, the greater alſo his provocations and his guilt will be; And then the Gnoſtick alſo that takes part with the Jew, ſhall bear him company in the vengeance. As for the Gentiles, as they are put after the Jewes onely (and not left out) in the mercies of God, particularly in the revealing of Chriſt, ſo ſhall their puniſhments upon their provocations, onely come after the puniſhment of the Jewes, not be wholly ſuperſeded (and accordingly 'tis to be ſeen in the prædictions of both their ruines, in the Revelation, the Jewiſh unbelcivers and Gnoſticks are puniſht firſt and then the Gentiles and carnall Chriſtians with them alſo.)

11. For there is no reſpect of perſons with God.]

11. For God's rewards and puniſhments are not confer'd by any uncertain rule of arbitrary favour or diſpleaſure, neither depend they upon any outward privileges or performances, as either having or not having received the Law, being or not being circumciſed, but are exactly proportion'd, according to mens inward qualifications or demeanures.

12. For as many as have ſinned without law, ſhall alſo periſh without law: and as many as have ſinned in the law, ſhall be judged by the law.]

12. For all thoſe of the Gentile world, who having not received the Moſaicall Law of circumciſion, have ſinned againſt that knowledge of God, which hath otherwiſe been afforded them, ſhall be adjudged to perdition, though not by the Law of Moſes (it ſhall never be laid to their charge that they have not been circumciſed) And thoſe who having received the Law of Moſes, and in it the ſign of the covenant, circumciſion, doe not yet live according to it, (ſuch are theſe unbeleiving Jews, and Judaizing Gnoſticks) all the benefit that they ſhall reap by their having received the law and circumciſion, ſhall be to have that their accuſer, by which they may be condemn'd, in ſtead of their advocate to plead for them.

13. For not the hearers of the law are juſt before God, but the doers of the law ſhall be juſtified.]

13. For, to ſpeak to the latter firſt (ſee note on Mat 7. b.) 'tis a dangerous unchriſtian error, to think that the hearing or knowing their duty, the having the Law delivered to them (yea and the ſeal of the covenant, circumciſion in their fleſh) without conſcientious practiſe of the duties thereof ſhall ſtand them in any ſtead: No, 'tis onely the living orderly, according to rule and Law, that will render any man acceptable in Gods ſight.

14. For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law: theſe having not the law, are a law unto themſelves.]

14. And for the former, 'tis clear, for when the other people of the world, which have not had that revelation of God's will and Law, which the Jewes had, do without that revelation, by the dictate of their reaſon, and thoſe natural notions of good and evill implanted in them, (and by thoſe præcepts of the Sons of Adam by parents tranſmitted to children, and ſo, without any further revelation from heaven, come down unto them) perform the ſubſtantiall things requited in the Law of Moſes, and denoted by circumciſion and other ceremonies, This is an argument and evidence, that theſe men do to themſelves ſupply the place of Moſes's Law.

15. Which ſhew the work of the Law written in their hearts, their conſcience alſo bearing witneſs, and their [c] thoughts * the mean while accuſing, or elſe excuſing one another.]

c. * among themſelves, either accuſing, or pleading for them· μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων λογισμῶν, ἢ καὶ κατηγορούντων

c. 15. And that obligation to puniſhment, which is ordinarily cauſed by the Law, theſe men demonſtrate themſelves to have, without help of the Moſaicall Law; From whence alſo it is, that as conſcience (which, according to the nature of the word, is a man's knowing that he hath done, or not done, what is by Law commanded), is conſtantly witneſſe either for, or againſt them, that they have done, or not done their duty, ſo the genrall notions and inſtincts of good and evill that are in them, without any light from the Moſaicall Law, do either accuſe them as tranſgreſſors of the Law of God, or elſe plead for them, that they have not culpably done any thing againſt it. From whence it appears to be moſt juſt even by their own confeſſion, that they that have ſinned without Law, tranſgreſt the Law of nature, ſhould alſo be puniſht, though they never heard of this Moſaicall Law, (which was the thing affirmed v. 12. from whence to v. 16. all that hath been ſaid is but a parentheſis.)

16. In the day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of men by Jeſus Chriſt according to [d] my Goſpell.]

d. 16. And when I ſpeak of periſhing, and judging, v. 12. I ſpeak of that doom, which ſhall involve all both Jewes and Gentiles, at that great day, when Chriſt Jeſus, being by his Father ſeated in his regal power, ſhall at the end of all come forth again to judge the world, not according to outward privileges or performances, but inward qualifications and demeanures, being, as he is, a ſearcher of hearts: For then ſhall the Jewes be dealt with either in judgement or mercy, as they have lived or not lived according to the rules of the Moſaicall Law, and ſo the Gentiles alſo according as they have obey'd or not obey'd the Law of nature, (And this is the very doctrine that hath been taught us by Chriſt, and by me and others preached to the world.)

17. Behold thou art [e] called a Jew, and reſteſt in the Law, and makeſt thy boaſt of God,]

17. And thus ſhall the proceſs be, to the Judaizing Gnoſticks, in this or the like form; Thou that calleſt thy ſelfe, or ſaiſt thou art a Jew, though indeed thou art not, thou that dependeſt on the outward performances of the Law, circumciſion &c: as if juſtification were to be had by that, and could not be had without it, Thou that boaſteſt that God is thy father, or favourer in a peculiar manner, becauſe thou adhæreſt ſo faithfully to his Law, even in oppoſition to Chriſts reformations, (ſee note on Mat: 5. g.)

18. And

18. And knoweſt his will, and [f] approveſt the things that are more excellent, being inſtructed out of the Law,]

18. Thou that undertakeſt to know all the myſteries of God's will (and thence art by thy ſelfe called a Gnoſtick or knowing perſon) and upon examination, to approve, and practiſe the higheſt perfections, by the skill which thou haſt in the Law of Moſes,

19. And art confident, that thou thy ſelfe art a guide to the blinde, a light of them which are in darkneſs,]

19. And ſo by that advantage takeſt thy ſelfe to be a moſt knowing perſon, fit to lead all others; and deſpiſing the orthodox Chriſtians for blinde and ignorant, (ſee note on Ja. 3. a.)

20. An inſtructer of the fooliſh, a teacher of babes; which haſt the [g] form of knowledge and of the truth in the Law.]

20. Aſſumeſt great matters to thy ſelf, as having a ſcheme or abſtract of all knowledge and true religion (ſee note on 2 Tet: 1. c.) by the knowledge and underſtanding which thou haſt, and by the gloſſes which thou giveſt of the Law.

g.

* proclaimeſt, κηρύσσεις

21. Thou therefore which teacheſt another, teacheſt thou not thy ſelfe? Thou that * preacheſt, a man ſhould not ſteal, doſt thou ſteal?

22. Thou that ſayeſt, A man ſhould not commit adultery, doſt thou commit adultery? thou that abhorreſt Idols, doſt thou commit ſacrilege?

21. 22. Thou therefore, I ſay, that pretendeſt ſuch zeal to, and skill in the Law, that art ſo ſtrict for legall performances, doſt thou commit the ſame ſinne thy ſelfe (ſuppoſing it ſtealth &c:) which thou condemneſt in others? doſt thou, that condemneſt a Chriſtian for not being circumciſed, commit the great ſinne forbidden in the Law of circumciſion? This is, as if he that pretended ſuch a pious reſpect to the place of God's worſhip, as not to endure with any patience a falſe God, or idol to be ſet up in it, ſhould yet ſo much deſpiſe the ſame place, as to rob it of thoſe things that are conſecrated to it: which ſure is as abſolute a profaning of any holy place, as to ſet up the moſt heathen idol in it.

23. Thou that makeſt thy boaſt in the Law, through breaking the Law diſhonoureſt thou God?]

23. Thou that gloryeſt in thy zeal to the Law, doſt thou commit the moſt unlawfull practiſes, and by ſo doing, bring a reproach on all Chriſtian religion?

24. For the name of God is blaſphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is written.]

24. For the unbeliving Gentiles ſeeing and judging by your evill lives, are aliened from Chriſtianity, have an evill opinion of the profeſſion, and of Chriſt, whom you worſhip, and ſo thoſe Scriptures which mention the diſhonour of God's name among the Gentiles, Iſa: 52.5. Ezec: 36.20. 23. may fitly be accommodated to you.

25. For circumciſion verily profiteth, if thou keep the Law; but if thou be a breaker of the Law, thy circumciſion is made uncircumciſion.]

25. For men that thus live, 'tis madneſs to think that circumciſion will ſtand them in any ſtead; For circumciſion is a Sacrament to ſeal benefits to them who are circumciſed, if the condition required of them (i.e. the ſanctity and purity ſignified thereby) be performed alſo; but if not, there is no ſpeciall advantage comes to them by being circumciſed, i. e. by thus complying with the Moſaicall Law.

† ordinances, δικαιώματα, See note on c. 1. b.

26. Therefore if the uncircumciſion keep the † righteouſneſs of the Law, ſhall not his uncircumciſion be counted for circumciſion?

26. And by the ſame reaſon, if thoſe who are not obſervant of the Law, or circumciſed, viz: the Chriſtians of the Gentiles, live thoſe lives of purity and ſanctity, which that Sacrament was ſet to engage men to, they ſhall be accepted by God, as well as if they had been circumciſed.

27. And ſhall not * uncircumciſion, which is by nature, if it fulfill the Law, judge thee, † who by the letter and circumciſion doſt tranſgreſs the Law?]

27. And thoſe, that having not been circumciſed, nor received the Law of Moſes (ſee note on Mat: 5. g.) but onely thoſe naturall dictates, and directions, which are common to all men, if they yet do the things commanded in the Law of the Jewes, i. e. the morall ſubſtantiall part of it, they ſhall condemn thee, who obſerving not the ſenſe and meaning, but onely the letter of the Law, art outwardly circumciſed, but doſt not perform that purity, which that ceremony was ſet to ſignifie, and to engage all, that are circumciſed, to obſerve it.

28. For he is not the childe of Abraham, ſuch as to whom the promiſes pertain, who is born of his race or ſeed, and no more; nor is that the availeable circumciſion, which is externall, that mark imprinted on the fleſh.

29. But he is a Jew, which is one * inwardly, and circumciſion is that of the heart, in the ſpirit, and not in the letter, whoſe praiſe is not † of men, but of God.]

29. But hee is the Jew indeed, the true childe of Abraham (who ſhall be accepted by God) though he be not ſo by birth, who in the purity of the heart performs thoſe ſubſtantiall Lawes required by God of the Jewes, and revealed to them more diſtinctly then to other Nations, and the availeable circumciſion is that of him, who cuts off all ſuperfluities and pollutions which are ſpiritually, though not literally meant by the Law of circumciſion, and ſo becomes pure in heart (ſee note on Mat: 5. g.) who hath that Law, of which circumciſion was the ſign and ſeal, (the Law of purity, or abſtinence from thoſe unnaturall ſins &c:) printed in his ſpirit, or inner man, his ſoul, (i.e. that practiſes it) not he who hath literally obeyed it, and been circumciſed outwardly in the fleſh, even he whoſe praiſe is not of men (who ſee the outſide onely, and among whom 'tis counted a great dignity to be a circumciſed Jew) but he who ſo behaves himſelfe (whether he be a Jew or Gentile) that God may accept of him, as a ſincere performer of his commands, an obedient ſervant of his.

Notes on Chap. II.

2. Κρίνων Thou that judgeſt] here, and in the end of the verſe, and v. 3. is clearly the Gnoſtick Judaizer, who teaches the obſervation of the Moſaical law, and accuſes the Orthodox Chriſtians, who are not circumciſed, for breakers of the law; And yet himſelf runs riotouſly into thoſe ſinnes, for the abſtaining from which, circumciſion was deſigned, and inſtituted by God. This judging and condemning ning of the Gentile-Christians, was by them taken up from the Jewes, who having themselves guilt enough of sinne, as well as the Gentiles, would yet discriminate themselves from all others by this, or the like character of legal observances, as by that, which should justifie them, or free them from judgment, under which the Gentiles, which knew not the Mosaical law, and were not circumcised, were to lie, and be accursed. This was the thing, that John Baptist warns them of, to bring forth meet fruits of repentance, and not to say within themselves, We have Abraham to our father, which, they were apt to beleive, should stand them in stead in the absence of all those fruits. This was the great error of that people, consequent to their opinion of their absolute election, whereby they resolved, that 'twas not their just, or pious performances, that were looked on by God, or required to their justification, but their being Abraham's seed, within the Covenant, and having the signe of the Covenant in their flesh, which they looked on, as engagements, (if not allurements, and motives) of the favour of God to them, howsoever they lived; by this means making God a προσωπολήπτης, one that chose, or accepted, or favoured πρόσωπα, persons, i.e. men barely considered, with some outward advantages to set them off, without any intuition of their qualifications, or demeanures, Which was the thing, that is distinctly disclaimed here, ver. 11. and which S. Peter discerned to be so false by the revealing of the Gospel to the Gentiles, Act. 10.34. Thus is the word [κοινὸν] used c. 14.4. of the Jewish Christian, that abstained from some sorts of meats v.2. and though he doth that, either out of weakness, as that signifies disease, erroneous seduction, or at least out of infirmity and ignorance, as thinking himself bound to it by the Mosaical law (which he beleives still to oblige) and so ought not to be despised, or set at nought by him that understands Christian liberty better, yet doth very ill in judging all others, that do not abstain as he doth; For this is the very same error that is here reprehended in the Jews and Gnosticks, of judging all others as men out of God's favour, because they doe not what they doe, or pretend to doe, i.e. observe not the ritual parts of Moses law. And this being an error which the Jewes and Gnosticks were so guilty of, (and consequently of this sinne attending it, of judging and condemning all but themselves) is particularly markt in the Jewes Mat. 7.1. and beaten down by Christ (as here in the Judaizers by the Apostle) as an irrational sinne, the grounds of which were quite contrary to the prime attribute of God, his justice, and rewarding all that diligently seek him, Heb. 11.6. and every man according to his works here, ver. 6. and justifying the doers not hearers of the word, v.13.

b. The Hebrew אמת signifies both truth and justice, and is rendred by ἀλήθεια and δικαιοσύνη, and here one of them is put for the other, ἀλήθεια truth, for δικαιοσύνη justice, so as on the other side, ἄδικον μαμωνᾶ the unjust mammon is opposed to the true riches. see note on Mat. 23. f.

c. The λογισμοὶ μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων] here are the practical κοιναὶ ἔννοιαι common notions of good and evil, which are among the generality of men, even heathens, without any light from the Mosaical law, and are called λογισμοὶ reasonings, because reason, when it comes to a maturity, if it be not prætorrupted with false doctrines and prejudices, will be able to conclude that this ought to be done, and not that, and so give us the principles of all moral actions.

Paul's preaching every where, whither he came, is literally to be styled his εὐαγγέλιον or Gospel, and so it seems to signifie here. So in the Epistle of Clemens Romanus (contemporary to that Apostle) ad Corinth: after the mention of Blessed Paul's Epistles, he bids them mark τὸ πρῶτον ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου ἔγραψε, what he hath first written to you (Corinthians) in the beginning of the Gospel, i.e. at the time when the Gospel was by him first preached among them. d. Εὐαγγέλιον

Ἐπονομάζεσθαι] is somewhat more then ὀνομάζεσθαι, it signifies an addition to ones proper name, and so it was here, The Gnosticks assumed to themselves the name of Jewes, professing to be of that religion; great friends to Moses's law, λέγουσιν ἑαυτοὺς Ἰουδαίους εἶναι, Rev. 2.9. they say that they are Jewes, when indeed many of them were not such, either by birth, or observation of the Judaical customes, being not themselves circumcised (see Gal. 6.13. and note on Rev. 2. c.) and those that were, living (not according, but) quite contrary to the Mosaical law. e. Ἐπονομάζεσθαι

That δοκιμάζειν to prove or trie, signifies so to examine and prove as to approve, appears by some other places, where the word is used. So 1 Cor. 11.28. Let a man prove, or examine himself, and so let him eat of that &c. where 'tis certain, that, if upon examination he find himself unworthy, he must not so eat; for if he doe, he eats damnation to himself, v.29. and therefore it must signifie the approving himself to God and his own conscience. So Rom. 14.22. Happy is he who doth not judge or condemn himself, ἐν ᾧ δοκιμάζει (not, in what he examines himself, but) in what, upon deliberation, he so likes, approves, as to think fit to act accordingly, i.e. Happy is he that, when he is resolved of the matter of the action, that it is lawfull, doth it with such care that he hurt not others, that he hath nothing to blame in himself, when he hath done it. So Gal. 6.4. Let every man δοκιμάζειν prove his own work, i.e. so prove, examine his own actions, as to approve them to himself, his own conscience, and to God, and then he shall have glorying or rejoicing (i.e. he shall be able to comfort himself) εἰς ἑαυτὸν μόνον toward himself alone, i.e. by looking on himself absolutely, and not only in conjunction or comparison with other men, which is meant by [καὶ οὐκ εἰς τὸν ἕτερον, and not towards another] to which belongs the reason rendred in the next verse, For every one shall bear his own burthen. So Eph. 5.10. walk as children of light, δοκιμάζοντες τί ἐστιν εὐάρεστον τῷ Κυρίῳ, examining, proving what is acceptable to the Lord, but this so, that they also approve themselves to study and pursue it, or else they doe not walk like children of light, like Christians. The truth is, this is not so familiar a phrase, [the proving what is acceptable to God] as the former is, of [proving and approving himself or his own works,] yet because the examining, and the approving of God's will, is a direct undertaking, and obligation to practise it, and because it is a ridiculous thing, and that which will never stand in any stead, to examine what is well pleasing to f. δοκιμάζειν

God,

God, and, when he hath done ſo, to act or practiſe the contrary, therefore the Apoſtle, that exhorts to this, as to a duty which will ſtand them in ſome ſtead, and as an evidence of their walking as children of light (not as the partial condition, or a means to perform God's will, but as the knowing God's will in the Scripture, when 'tis lookt on as a good thing, is the practiſing of it) muſt be ſuppoſed to contain in this phraſe of proving, the approving alſo, and not onely ſo, but alſo the performing (at leaſt in endevour, and ſtudy) what is acceptable to the Lord, and ſhall to them appear to be ſo, and not onely the examining what is thus acceptable. And then one other place Rom. 12. 2. will by the ſame reaſon be clearly intelligible alſo in this ſenſe, where they are exhorted by all the exceeding mercies and compaſſions of God to preſent themſelves to God a living and well-pleaſing ſacrifice, and in ſtead of conformity with the world, to be transfigured, i.e. eminently and viſibly changed, by, or, in the renovation of their mind, εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν (which notes this to be an effect, if not the end of this renovation of mind) that they may prove what is the will of God, the good, the acceptable, the perfect, which is directly the ſcheme or form of ſpeaking uſed to the Epheſians (onely with the addition of ſome more words, not to alter, but enhanſe this notion of it) ſo to ſearch into the will of God, what is good and acceptable to him in the higheſt degree, as to practiſe and purſue it, and approve themſelves to God and their own ſouls to have done ſo. And by this means the meaning of δοκιμάζειν τὰ διαφέροντα both here and Phil. 1. 10. will be more intelligible alſo, then otherwiſe, if it were not compared with theſe two laſt places, it would be; In that to the Philippians, thus, I pray that your love may abound &c. your great forwardneſſe to the advancing and propagating the Goſpel v. 4. εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν ὑμᾶς (as an effect again of their abundance of Chriſtian charity, or zeal to the Goſpel) that you may examine firſt, and then approve, or like, and then ſee your ſelves to the purſuit of τὰ διαφέροντα the things that excell, that are eminently good, (proportionably to the abounding of their charity going before) i. e. doe as much good as you can poſſibly. And then this will without queſtion belong alſo to the ſame phraſe in this place, where of the Gnoſtick-Judaizers he ſaith, γινώσκεις τὸ θέλημα, καὶ δοκιμάζεις τὰ διαφέροντα, Thou knoweſt (i.e. pretendeſt to know above all others, and therefore art called Gnoſtick, knowing) the will (i.e. the will of God) and proveſt, i. e. examineſt with all acuteneſſe and diligence, and having by examination found out what is moſt excellent, moſt acceptable in the ſight of God, thou likeſt, chooſeſt, approveſt it (i.e. pretendeſt and aſſumeſt to thy ſelf to doe ſo) and practiſeſt accordingly, κατηχούμενος ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, being, firſt for thy foundation, inſtructed in the law of Moſes, as all pious men ought to be, to lay their foundation there, and thus aſſuming to thy ſelf this high perfection above all others, (the orthodox Chriſtians) πέποιθας &c. v. 19. thou haſt confidence to thy ſelf that thou art a guide to the blind &c. that none are ſo fit to be διδάσκαλοι (ſee note on Jam. 3. a.) inſtructers, and to be heeded, as you. Thus in Ignatius Epiſtle to the Smyrneans, ſpeaking of the reverence due to the Biſhop's judgment, ὃν ἂν ἐκεῖνος δοκιμάσῃ, τοῦτο καὶ τῷ Θεῷ εὐάρεστον, what he ſhall, upon examination, approve of, this is alſo well-pleaſing to God.

διαφέροντα the things that excell, that are eminently good, (proportionably to the abounding of their charity going before) i. e. doe as much good as you can poſſibly.

δοκιμάζεις τὰ διαφέροντα, Thou knoweſt (i.e. pretendeſt to know above all others, and therefore art called Gnoſtick, knowing) the will (i.e. the will of God) and proveſt, i. e. examineſt with all acuteneſſe and diligence, and having by examination found out what is moſt excellent, moſt acceptable in the ſight of God, thou likeſt, chooſeſt, approveſt it (i.e. pretendeſt and aſſumeſt to thy ſelf to doe ſo) and practiſeſt accordingly, κατηχούμενος ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, being, firſt for thy foundation, inſtructed in the law of Moſes, as all pious men ought to be, to lay their foundation there, and thus aſſuming to thy ſelf this high perfection above all others, (the orthodox Chriſtians) πέποιθας &c. v. 19. thou haſt confidence to thy ſelf that thou art a guide to the blind &c. that none are ſo fit to be διδάσκαλοι (ſee note on Jam. 3. a.) inſtructers, and to be heeded, as you. Thus in Ignatius Epiſtle to the Smyrneans, ſpeaking of the reverence due to the Biſhop's judgment, ὃν ἂν ἐκεῖνος δοκιμάσῃ, τοῦτο καὶ τῷ Θεῷ εὐάρεστον, what he ſhall, upon examination, approve of, this is alſo well-pleaſing to God.

g. Μόρφωσις, σχηματισμὸς, εἰκὼν, ſaith Phavorinus (out of Heſychius) a ſcheme or image of a whole matter, but this, ſaith he, φάντασμα, εἰκὸς ὂν ἢ, that which is feigned or beleived, or pretends to be ſo, but is not, and for this he cites this place of the Apoſtle, and ſo indeed very pertinently, the Gnoſtick here thinking that he hath a ſcheme, or compleat form of all knowledge, and truth, and myſteries of religion, when he hath it not, but is farre from it.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. WHat advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumciſion?]

1. The former two chapters having been chiefly ſpent on the Gnoſticks (thoſe hæreticks, that, leading villanous, heathen lives, pretended zeal to the legal Moſaical obſervances) in perſwading and fortifying others againſt their pretenſes, not to be ſeduced by them to depart from the Church, or to condemn the uncircumciſed Gentile-Chriſtians, for not having the carnal circumciſion, The Apoſtle now proceeds to the defence of his doctrine, (and withall, of that great Apoſtolical practiſe (ſo heavily objected againſt him by the Jewes and Judaizers,) of preaching to the Gentiles, departing from the unbeleiving, obſtinate Jewes, and of that great diſpoſition of Gods providence in Chriſt, the receiving the Gentiles, and rejecting the Jewes) and that he may vindicate, he firſt propoſes ſome vulgar objections againſt it, As firſt, If this which was ſaid c. 2. 28, 29. be true, (if God reward the cleanneſs of the heart, and inward purity, without any diſcrimination of birth, or regard of circumciſion, i.e. if the Gentiles remaining uncircumciſed may be received into the Church) then it may ſeem that a Jew hath no advantage, or privilege, or prerogative above the Gentiles, no benefit of the promiſes made to Abraham, when he was appointed to be circumciſed, he and all his ſeed: But all this is thus anſwered.

2. Much every way; * [a] chiefly, becauſe that † unto them were committed the [a] oracles of God.]

* As firſt
† they were intruſted with, ἐπιστεύθησαν

2. That, this notwithſtanding, the advantages of the Jewes have been in many reſpects very great; For firſt this is one advantage that they have had above the Gentiles, that they were intruſted with the oracles of God, i.e. received all the revelations of his will, the law (which ch. 2. the Jew ſo much boaſted in) and alſo the prophecies, as the people with whom God thought fit to depoſite all theſe, for the benefit of the whole world.

2. a.

3. For what, if ſome * did not beleive? ſhall their unbeleif † make the faith of God without effect?]

4. God forbid: yea, let God be true, and every man a lier, as it is written, That thou mightſt be [b] juſtified in thy ſayings, and mightſt overcome, when thou * [b] art judged.]

* or, obey'd not, for the King's MS. reads ἠπίστησαν.
† make void the fidelity of God? τὴν πίστιν τοῦ Θεοῦ καταργήσει
* contendeſt

3, 4. Which certainly, though many Jewes dealt unfaithfully in that truſt of theirs, heeded them not ſo farre themſelves

b.

ſelves, as to perform obedience to them, or to render themſelves capable of the benefit of them, were nevertheleſſe real exhibitions of Gods mercy, evidences of his favour, and ſo performances of Gods promiſes, (ſee 2 Tim. 2.13.) ſealed to Abraham at his circumciſion, and ſpecial favours to that people of the Jewes, above what was afforded others; there being no appearance of reaſon that any default of ours, upon which the promiſes, (being conditional) ceaſe to belong to us, ſhould be charged on God, as if his promiſes had not been made good unto us. For whatſoever falſineſſe or unfaithfulneſſe there may be in man, 'twere ſure blaſphemy to think there ſhould be any in God; He is moſt faithfull in performing what he hath promiſed, although every man ſhould be unfaithfull, and faile to perform his duty in making uſe of it, nay the greater and more provoking the ſinnes of men are, the more illuſtrious is his fidelity in making good his part toward thoſe that are ſo unworthy, according to that ſcripture, Pſal. 51. 4. to this ſenſe ſpoken of God by David, That thou mayſt be juſtified &c. i.e. that thou mayſt appear juſt and faithfull in performing all thou ſayeſt, and overcome whenſoever thou art impleaded or queſtion'd by any.

5. But here it will be objected, If Gods way of gracious œconomy under the Goſpel (ſee ch. 1. note b.) may be thus ſet out, and more illuſtriouſly ſeen by the ſinnes of men, why ſhould God then thus puniſh the Jewes (as the Apoſtles ſay he will, every where foretelling their approaching deſtruction) for theſe ſinnes of theirs, which thus tend to his glory? (I recite the objection of ſome men) or if he doe, is it not injuſtice in him to doe ſo?

5. But if our unrighteouſneſſe commend the righteouſneſſe of God, † what ſhall we ſay? * Is God unrighteous, who taketh vengeance? (I ſpeak † as a man.)]

† what ſay we? κατ' ἀνθρωπον; * Is not God unjuſt? μὴ ἀδικος ὁ Θεος; † according to man) κατὰ ἀνθρωπον)

6. God forbid that we ſhould ſay any thing, on which this may be infer'd, for that were to deny him to be God, who, as ſuch, is Judge of all the world. (This ſeems to be here inſerted by way of parentheſis, as a note or expreſſion of averſation, and deteſtation of any ſuch blaſphemous inference, after which he again proceeds in the propoſed objection, v.7. repeating it again in other words, which therefore muſt connect with v.5. and cannot be the reaſon of what is ſaid here in this verſe.)

6. God forbid: for then how ſhall God judge the world?]

c. 7,8. For, ſay they, If the faithfulneſſe, and mercifulneſſe of God in performing his promiſes to Abraham, i.e. of giving the Meſſias, hath appeared more abundantly, and have tended more to his glory, by, or through occaſion of the Jewes ſinnes, or infidelities, there will then be no reaſon, why they that are guilty of ſuch ſinnes, ſo much tending to God's honour, ſhould ſtill be impleaded, or complained of, or proceeded with in judgment, arraign'd and puniſht as ſinners, i.e. that God ſhould ſo complain, and avenge that in the Jewes, which tends to his honour, but, on the other ſide, men might doe well to commit ſuch ſinnes, from which ſo much good (or glory to God) might come. This indeed by ſome is thought to be an objection of great force againſt me, who am falſly accuſed to have delivered this very ſaying, in the caſe of the heathens having the Goſpel preached to them, viz: that the greatneſſe of the heathens ſinnes makes Gods mercy appear the more illuſtriouſly great, in vouchſafing to call them by the preaching of the Goſpel, and that therefore it is lawfull to live heathenish ſinfull lives, by that means the more to illuſtrate and ſet out Gods mercy to us in pardoning ſuch great ſinnes. But as I ſhall ſpeak more to that anon, ch. 6. 1. ſo now, in a word, it is a calumny, a conſequence by miſtakers falſly laid to my charge, and all that is needfull to reply to it at this time, is, to expreſſe deteſtation of it, and my opinion, that 'tis a damnable doctrine in any that ſhould teach it, and ſuch as will render the deſtruction of thoſe Jewes moſt juſt, who thus object. In oppoſition to which I diſtinctly affirm that no one ſinne is to be committed, though it be in order to, and in contemplation of the greateſt good, even the illuſtrating the glory of God.

7. For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my c lie unto his glory; why * yet am I alſo judged as a ſinner?

d. 8. † And d not rather as we be ſlanderouſly reported, and as ſome affirm that we ſay, let us doe evil, that good may come: whoſe damnation is juſt.]

* am I any longer impleaded, ἐτι κρινομαι; † And why ſhould we not &c.

9. Some farther objection there would be againſt what we have ſaid, if indeed the Jewes were much better by having received the law, leſſe ſinfull, more innocent then the Gentiles. For then it might be ſaid, that when the Gentiles are taken in, who were the greater ſinners, and the Jewes, who were better then they, caſt off, there were ſome unequall dealing indeed: But the truth is, we Jewes were not better or more innocent then they, but as we have before charged the Jewes (as they doe the Gentiles) with wilfull damnable ſinning, ſo it is moſt true of them, they were in a very foule courſe of vices, when Chriſt came, and long before, the farre greateſt part of them (where 'the ſinfulneſſe of the Gentiles being ſuppoſed by them to whom he writes, and not needing to be proved, but only that of the Jewes, he inſiſts on the proof of that onely, ſee v. 19.)

9. * What then? are we better then they? No, in no wiſe: for we have before † proved, both Jewes and Gentiles, that they are all under ſinne,]

* What therefore? doe we excell them? Τί οὖν; προεχόμεθα; † accuſed, or charged. προῃτιασάμεθα

10. This may be confirmed by the ſeverall teſtimonies of ſcripture, ſpoken of the Jewes in ſeverall texts of the old Teſtament, all which were too truly appliable to the Jewes at the time of Chriſt's coming. They are univerſally depraved to all iniquity, Pſal. 14. 1. and 53. 1.

10. As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one.]

11. They live all moſt Atheiſtically, Pſal. 14. 2.

11. There is none that underſtandeth, there is none that ſeeketh after God.]

12. They are apoſtatized from all piety, ſo farre from having done God any faithfull ſervice, that they doe the quite contrary, Pſal. 14. 3. (ſee note on ch 1. g. and Lu. 17. a.) men of putrid noyſome converſations, and this ſo generally, that there is not any conſiderable number of pious men diſcernible among them.

12. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable, there is none that doeth good, no not one.]

e. 13. Their e throat is an open ſepulchre, with their tongues they have uſed diſcourſe (of which throat, tongue, lips are the principal inſtruments) is moſt murtherous and malicious, Pſal. 5. 9. like the poyſon of aſpes, incurably mortal, Pſal. 140. 4.

13. Their e throat is an open ſepulchre, with their tongues they have uſed deceit, the poyſon of aſpes is under their lips:

f. 14. They curſe and deceive Pſal. 10. 7. ſpeak contumeliouſly and falſly againſt their brethren.

14. Whoſe mouth is full of curſing and f bitterneſſe:]

15. They are moſt bloodily diſpoſed, delight, and are ready to doe any injury, Iſa. 59 7. to wrong any innocent perſon.

15. Their feet are ſwift to ſhed blood.]

16. Their actions are very oppreſſive and grievous to others, grinding the face of the poor, and afflicting them ſadly.

16. * Deſtruction and miſery are in their waies.]

* Bruiſing συντριμμα

17. But for ought that tends to the good of any, to charity, or peaceable mindedneſſe, they know not what belongs to it, Iſa. 59. 8.

17. And the way of peace have they not known.]

18. There

18. There is no fear of God before their eyes.] 18. They have utterly caſt off all care, or thought of piety, Pſal. 36. 1.

19. Now we know that what things ſoever the law ſaith, it ſaith to them who are * under the law: that every mouth may be ſtopped, and all the world may become guilty before God.] 19. Now this we know, that what the books of the old Teſtament, the Pſalmes and the Prophets, thus ſay, they ſay to, and of the Jewes, and ſo by complaining ſo much of their univerſal defection, and their all manner of wickednesſe, they conclude them (and not only the Gentiles) to be obnoxious to God's vengeance, and moſt juſtly puniſhable by him, without any thing to ſay for themſelves, as they are conſidered barely under the law, having ſo viſibly ſinned againſt that, and incurr'd deſtruction by the rules of it.

* in or

20. Therefore by the deeds of the law, there ſhall no fleſh be juſtified in his ſight: for by the law is the † knowledge of ſinne.] 20. To conclude then, There is no juſtification (ſee note b.) to be had for any Jew, (that hath been guilty of any ſinne) by the legal obſervances, by circumciſion, and the reſt of the Moſaical rites, without remiſſion of ſinnes, through the grace of God in the new Covenant. Not indeed can it be imagined that juſtification and ſalvation can be hoped from thence, from whence comes the acknowledgment of our ſinne and guilt, and ſuch indeed is the law, and ſuch is circumciſion particularly, whoſe nature it is onely to oblige us to purity, and to tell us what we ſhould doe, and, when we offend, to give us knowledge, and to reproach us of that, and to denounce judgment againſt us, and appoint ſacrifices (which are onely the commemorating of our ſinnes before God, Heb. 10. 3. not the expiating of them) but not to help us to juſtification, without the mercies of God in the new Covenant, ſee note on Mat. 5. g.

21. But now the righteouſneſſe of God without the law is manifeſted, being witneſſed by the law and the prophets,
22. Even the righteouſneſſe of God, which is by faith of Jeſus Chriſt, unto all, and upon all them that beleive: for there is no difference.] 21,22. Whereas, on the other ſide, there is now a ſure, clear, new way to bliſſe, ſee note on ch. 1. b. (to wit, that which was in the world before, and ſo doth not depend at all upon the Moſaical law, ſee Mat. 5. o.) manifeſted to men by Chriſt, but mentioned alſo, and obſcurely ſet down in the Old Teſtament, namely, that way of juſtifying men by faith in Chriſt, or by that courſe which is now preſcribed us by Chriſt, which way ſhall belong and extend to all, both Jewes and Gentiles, (circumciſed or uncircumciſed, without any diſcrimination) who ſhall beleive there is mercy to be had for all true penitents through Chriſt, and ſo ſet themſelves to a new life, whatſoever their ſinnes have formerly been.

23. For all have ſinned, and come ſhort of the glory of God,] 23. For Jewes as well as Gentiles are found all to be ſinners, and ſo farre from meriting Gods praiſe or acceptance, and ſo, by any way but by the Goſpel, there is neither juſtification nor ſalvation to be had for them, g.

24. Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt.] 24. And therefore whenſoever they are juſtified, (either one or other) it is freely by his undeſerved favour, (ſee note b.) through that great work which Jeſus Chriſt hath wrought for the redemption of man, i. e. for the obtaining pardon for their paſt ſinnes, and working in them reformation for the future, (ſee note h.)

Which Chriſt, the Meſſias of the world, God from the beginning purpoſed to ſet forth unto men, as the means, to exhibit, and reveal to us his covenant of mercy, on condition of our faith, and conſtant new obedience to him who hath died for us, to make expiation for our ſinnes, and to work reformation in us, hereby demonſtrating the great mercifulneſſe of God now under the Goſpel, in that he forbears to inflict vengeance on ſinners, but gives them ſpace to repent, and promiſes them pardon upon repentance. h. i.

* righteous. † that is of the faith of Jeſus Chriſt πίστεως Ἰησοῦ

26. To declare, I ſay, at this time his righteouſneſſe, that he might be [k] * juſt, and the juſtifier of him † which beleiveth in Jeſus.] 26. To reveal, I ſay, and make known unto us at this time this way of juſtifying ſinners in the Goſpel (by grace, or mercy, and pardon of ſinne) whereby God appears to all to be a moſt gracious and mercifull God, and accordingly to accept and reward all thoſe, which (though they have formerly ſinn'd, doe yet) upon this mercifull promiſe, and tender, and call of Chriſt's, give themſelves up to be ruled by him, to live as he hath commanded in the Goſpel. k.

27. Where is boaſting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? Nay, but by the law of faith.] 27. By this means then all proud reflexions on our ſelves are perfectly excluded (a thing which the Moſaical law was made uſe of to foſter in the Jewes, they thought themſelves thereby diſcriminated from, and dignified above all other men in the world, and that, by being Abraham's ſeed, and circumciſed, and ſuch like externall performances, they were ſecured of the favour of God, whatſoever they did) but by this Evangelical way of Gods dealing in Chriſt accepting and acquitting all, Gentiles as well as Jewes, through grace and mercy, by which their ſinnes are forgiven, and they received into Gods favour, (without any reſpect of perſonal privileges, of being Abraham's ſeed, or of bare outward performances &c.) only upon their return and change of life, upon performance of new faithfull obedience unto Chriſt to which they are called, and to which they are by him enabled; wherein there being ſo little, ſo nothing imputable unto us, all boaſting is utterly excluded.

28. Therefore we [l] conclude, that a man is juſtified by faith without the deeds of the law.] 28. The ſumme or reſult therefore of this diſcourſe is, that by this Evangelical way, the favour of God is to be had for thoſe that never had to doe with the Judaical law, (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) circumciſion &c. ſee v. 21. and note b. l

29. Is he the God of the Jewes onely? is he not alſo of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles alſo.] 29. For otherwiſe it would follow that God had care or conſideration of no other part of the world, but onely of the Jewes, which certainly is not true, for he is the God of the Gentiles alſo, hath a peculiar care and conſideration of them, that come not from Abrahams loynes, as long as they imitate Abrahams faith, or on condition they doe ſo.

30. Seeing

30. And after the ſame manner receives all into his favour, the beleiving Jewes, and the beleiving, though uncircumciſed Gentiles, by this one Evangelical way of pardon and free remiſſion of ſinne to all that ſhall perform new obedience, and fidelity to Chriſt, ſee note b.

30. Seeing it is one God, which ſhall juſtifie the circumciſion by faith, and uncircumciſion through faith.]

31. Which Evangelical way of receiving men into the favour of God is ſo farre from evacuating the law, or making it uſeleſſe, that it is rather a perfecting of it, a requiring that purity of the heart, which was the inward notation of the legal ordinance of circumciſion (and ſo in all other things a bringing in the ſubſtance, where the law had only the ſhadow, the ſufferings of Chriſt, and his interceſſion, in ſtead of the ſacrifices and propitiatory (v.25.) under the Law.)

31. Doe we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we eſtabliſh the law.]

Notes on Chap. III.

a. Πρῶτον

Πρῶτον here clearly denoteth a form of enumeration, anſwerable to our inprimis, and ſignifies that the Apoſtle was about to reckon up all the advantages of the Jew, in this place, and accordingly began with one, reſolving to have proceeded, had not an objection here diverted his purpoſe for many chapters together, not permitting him to return from that digreſſion till c.9. where again he falls to the ſame matter and enumerates the remainder of thoſe privileges, particularly v.4. &c: The onely privilege which here hee begins with, is ὅτι ἐπιστεύθησαν τὰ λόγια τοῦ Θεοῦ their being intruſted with the oracles of God; what is meant by that phraſe, 'twill not be amiſs to explain in both parts of it, and firſt the λόγια, oracles. Beſide the four garments uſed by the Prieſt when he officiated, there were four more proper to the High-prieſt; The firſt of them was called חשן, pectorall, becauſe it was faſtned about the neck and came down, hanging upon the breaſt, חשוש כנגד הלב, ſaith Sol. Jarchi on Exod: 28.4. it hangs before, or, neer the heart: In the Scripture 'tis called the חשן המשפט the pectoral of judgement, becauſe by it the High-prieſt received the reſponſes of God in all matters of difficulty, as when they ſhould make war, or peace, &c: This is called by Joſephus Ἐκτυπὼ, Antiq: l.3. c.8. the very Hebrew word, the ח being not pronounced, and of it hee ſaith, that in the Greek language it ſignifieth λόγιον, (not rationale, I ſuppoſe, but) orationale rather, becauſe the word, or oracle of God was revealed thereby. And from this uſe of the word λόγιον for that pectorall, by which all the reſponſes and oracles of God were received, it comes that the word λόγια in the plurall is uſed to ſignifie thoſe oracles and reſponſes, all the revelations of God's will by this means vouchſafed unto men. (Of the other wayes of Revelations among the Jewes ſee note on Act. 23.a.) If it be demanded how theſe reſponſes or oracles were given and received, the moſt probable way (though there be ſome incertainty among the Jewiſh writers in this matter) and that which is moſt agreed on, is this, The Hebrew names of Abraham Iſaac and Iacob, and the twelve tribes, with this addition כל אלה שבטי ישראל all theſe are the tribes of Irael, were written on the Pectorall, and in theſe words every letter of the Alphabet is to be found, out of which all other words may be compoſed: Then when any reſponſe was to be received, the High-prieſt ſet his face toward the שכינה the ark, the teſtimony of God's preſence, and he that was concern'd in the reponſe, ſet his face toward the High-prieſt; And the letters which were prominent, or which ſhined in the Pectorall, being put together made the reſponſe: And whereas ſome difficulty is conceived to have been in underſtanding the order, wherein the ſhining or prominent letters were to be taken (whereupon ſome of the Rabbines have been fain to ſay that the High-prieſt heard a voyce to direct him in that matter) I ſuppoſe that difficulty will be removed by conceiving that the letters, of which the reſponſe conſiſted, did not ſhine or ſtick out all together, or at once (for ſome of the letters of the Alphabet being but once to be found in all thoſe words, which are ſuppoſed to be written on the Pectorall, tis poſſible the reſponſe might have in it ſome of thoſe letters more then once, and conſequently in that caſe it could not fully be expreſt by the pectorall, if the manner were for all the letters that made up the whole reſponſe to ſhine or ſtick out, at once) but that firſt one, then another letter ſhone or ſtuck out, & ſo on, till the reſponſe were diſtinctly and compleatly delivered; and this ſhining or thruſting out of theſe letters, of which the reſponſe conſiſted, is that which is called Urim and Thummim, אורים ותומים becauſe they perfected the way before them, i.e., ſhewed them the right way wherein they ſhould walk, which therefore is rendred ἀλήθεια truth; And both together, becauſe by this means they were inſtructed in all doubtfull things concerning either knowledge or practiſe, eſpecially whether ſuch a thing ſhould come to paſs or no. As when David askes whether the men of Keilah would deliver him up, or no, and the oracle anſwers that they will, if he intruſt himſelfe to them. And of theſe reſponſes 'tis the obſervation of Gemara Babyl: that 'tis not in the power of repentance to alter what is thus delivered, גזרת נביא תיזרת the decree of a prophet returns, i.e. is reſcinded, and not performed ſometimes, but גזרת אורים ותומים איבה תחזרת the decree of Urim and Thummim never returnes, becauſe it is called the judgement of Urim. This being the notion of the word λόγια oracles here, it will eaſily appear, what is meant by λόγια ζῶντα, living oracles, Act. 7.38. which Moſes is ſaid to have received from God, viz. the ten commandements from mount Sinai, which being ſignifications and revelations of God's wil are by analogie with the reſponſes from Aaron's pectorall, fitly called λόγια oracles, and then ζῶντα living, either becauſe, being written in tables, they were more to the life, and more laſting and durable then thoſe other, which were produced by the temporary ſhining or prominence of the letters in the pectorall, or again, becauſe they were delivered immediatly by the voyce of God, as we call that a living teſtimony, which is received from the mouth of the party, in oppoſition to Records, which are dead witneſſes. So when Heb. 5.12. we finde στοιχεῖα τῆς ἀρχῆς τῶν λογίων τοῦ Θεοῦ the elements of the beginning

Λόγια τὰ Θεοῦ

λόγια ζῶντα

ἀρχὴ τῶν λογίων

ning of the oracles of God, τὰ λόγια τοῦ θεοῦ the oracles of God, signifie God's will, revealed to us, the Christian doctrine, ἀρχὴ τῶν λογίων the beginning of the oracles] is the first part of that Christian doctrin, the things which Christ first revealed and preached to them, c. 6.1. viz: repentance and faith, and the στοιχεῖα elements] may referre to the letters in the pectorall, of which responses there consisted. Then for the ἐπιτέθειται they were intrusted with] that is certainly the due rendring of it, as will appear not only by the plurall number, which is here used, which would not regularly belong to it, if it agreed with the neutrall λόγια oracles, (and therefore it must in the construction be joyned with the Masculine Ἰουδαῖοι Jewes implyed and understood, though not named, here, from the word περιτομὴ the circumcision v. 1.) but also by the clear use of the word in this manner Gal. 2. 7. πεπίστευμαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, I have been intrusted with the Gospell. One thing more may be yet observable of this word, from the nature of it, which denotes being intrusted, for the use, and good of some others, and not onely for theirs, who are so intrusted. Thus it is ordinarily known of feoffees in trust, that they are to imploy that which is deposited with them, for the use of those, to whose advantage their trust was designed, and specified, So in that place, Gal. 2. 7. where Saint Paul is said to be intrusted with the εὐαγγέλιον τῆς ἀκροβυστίας, Gospell of the uncircumcision, and Saint Peter with the εὐαγγέλιον τῆς περιτομῆς Gospel of the circumcision, the meaning is evident, that they were intrusted with that jewell, for the use of others, Saint Paul to preach it to the Gentiles, and Saint Peter to the Iewes. And so here, the Oracles of God were deposited with the Iewes, not to keep them to themselves, but to publish them to all the world besides; And indeed therefore may this place seem to be pitcht on by God, as the heart of the Earth, the middle of the world, that it might be fitter for that turn of dispersing and communicating it to others. Hence is it, that the Temple of Ierusalem is said to be the house of Prayer to all people, and when it was to be readified Hag: 2. 7. it is expreſt by [the desire of all nations shall come] and so wee know many proselytes were attracted by the splendor of Gods actions for, and among this people, to come in, and receive their religion. But because this did not do the work sufficiently of converting, and reforming the Gentile world, it is Christs appointment to his Apostles, that they should disperse themselves unto all Nations, and so bring them to the knowledge of his will; To this sense of the word [ἐπιτέθειται] the words of Athanasius are observable, de incarn: verbi: ὁ διὰ Ἰουδαίους μόνος ὁ νόμος ἦν, οὐδὲ διὰ μόνους οἱ προφῆται ἀπέστειλαν, the Law was not for the Iewes onely, nor were the prophets sent for them alone (the two things meant by the Oracles here) Πάσης δὲ τῆς οἰκουμένης ἦσαν διδασκαλεῖον ἱερὸν τὰ περὶ θεοῦ γνώσεως καὶ ἐπὶ ψυχὴν πολιτείας, but this nation was the sacred school of the whole world, from whence they were to fetch the knowledge of God, and the way of spiritual living. Wherein yet there was an eminent difference betwixt this, and the Evangelicall œconomy: Under the Law they that would learn Gods will, must come up to Palestine to fetch it, but under the Gospell the Law of Christ it self goes out, and takes the journey to all nations, and comes home unto them, which is farre the greater advantage, and makes them more unexcusable, which do not receive, and embrace it.

Ἐπιτιθέναι,

Κρίνομαι, διακρίνομαι, it signifies to have a suit in Law, saith Hesychius, and again, κρινόμεθα, μαχόμεθα. any civill controversie, or contention. The Hebrew in the Psal: 51.4. whence 'tis cited, hath בשפטך in judicando te. when thou judgest, literally, but then that word שפט, though it signifie judicare, to judge, signifies often litigare, to contend also, to plead or manage a cause for one against another. So Ezech: 50. 4. wilt thou judge them? i.e. wilt thou plead for them? so v. 7. and oft in these Epistles 1 Cor: 6. 1. πολμᾷ κρίνεσθαι; dares any wage a suit at Law, implead another? And agreeable to this will be that notion of κρῖμα Rom: 5. 16. for charging of sin upon us, indictement, impleading, after which follows the κατάκριμα or condemnation. From this notion of κρίνεσθαι to contend in the forinsecall sense, for pleading, or managing the suit in Law, will appear also, what is the originall notion of the word δικαιοῦσθαι to be justified] which is so often used in these Epistles; For the phrase ἵνα δικαιωθῇς ἐν τοῖς λόγοις σου, that thou mightest be justified in thy sayings] in the former part of this verse, is visibly of the same importance with [νικήσῃς ἐν τῷ κρίνεσθαί σε, that thou mightest overcome when thou pleadest] in the latter, and then, as λόγοι must signifie pleadings, so must δικαιοῦσθαι] the good success or victory of the pleader, being acquitted by the Iudge, as in that known place of Solomon Pro. 17. 15. justifying is set opposite to condemning. From hence it is justly resolved by Divines, that though Rev: 22. 11. (and perhaps in some other places of the Greek of the Old Testament, as Eccles. 31. 5. and 18. 22.) δικαιοῦσθαι is opposite to ἀδικεῖν, and so signifieth to live, or do righteously, yet there is this other notion, which belongs to the word, and must constantly be affixed to it in almost all the places of the New Testament. For the due understanding of which these three things will be necessary to be remembred, first that the word being juridicall, must alwayes, when it is used in this sense, imply a legall proceeding, and therein a Iudge, a Client, and a Law, or somewhat proportionable to each of these; Thus when a man is said to be justified by the deeds of the Law, or by the faith of Christ in the sight of God, As the man, is the client (supposable to be impleaded by Satan the ἀντίδικος or adversary in δίκῃ in judicature) and God, the Iudge, and the Law of Moses, on one side, or the Christian law, the law of faith, on the other, the rule, or law, by which the judgment is made, so he that is said to be justified, must be supposed to be acquitted by the rules of that law, by which he is tried, and judged, whether it be that given by Moses, or this by Christ. Thus in that eminent place Act. 13. 38, 39. (the summary of the whole Gospel, and from which the notion of this word in the Epistles, may most fitly be taken,) Be it known unto you, that by this person (Christ) remission of sins is declared, or preached unto you, And through him every one that beleiveth is justified (δικαιοῦται) from all those things from which you could not be justified, in, or by the law of Moses. Where, as it is evident, that the law of Christ allowes pardon, and remission for those sinnes, for which which the law of Moſes allowed no mercy, viz: in caſe of repentance, and ſincere returning to the obedience of Chriſt, after one, or more acts of preſumptuous ſinnes, (For which the law of Moſes admitted no ſacrifice, no expiation, but inflicted death without mercy on the offender, were he never ſo penitent, Heb. 10.26,28. and though there were hope of pardon for ſuch in another world, yet this was not by the purport of Moſes, but of Chriſts covenant) ſo the juſtification, which is now declared from Chriſt, and conſiſts in Gods pardoning ſuch ſinnes, acquitting the penitent beleiver, that now comes in to the obedience of Chriſt, whatſoever his paſt ſinnes have been, is a judicial act of Gods, proceeding according to this rule now in force, this law of Chriſt, this Covenant under the Goſpel, Which becauſe it is an act of meer mercy in God through Chriſt, the purchaſe of which coſt Chriſt his blood, but coſt us nothing, (by his ſtripes we were thus healed) and becauſe the condition of new life required of us, to make us capable of this remiſſion, hath nothing of virtue, or merit, of natural or moral efficiency in it, towards the purchaſing remiſſion, therefore it is here affirmed, that we are δικαιούμενοι δωρεὰν &c. v.24. juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption which is by Jeſus Chriſt.

The ſecond thing to be obſerved in this matter, is, that the Goſpel, or the faith of Chriſt being now that rule, by which God either acquits or condemns, juſtifies, or not juſtifies any, whenſoever juſtification is mentioned, it muſt be underſtood with this reference to that rule, which is ſometimes mention'd explicitly, (as when we read of his juſtifying him that is of the faith of Jeſus, ver.26. juſtifying by faith, and through faith, v. 30. i.e. according to that Evangelical rule, the law of faith, which gives place for repentance, and remiſſion upon ſincerity of new life,) and is to be ſuppoſed, and implied, whenſoever it is not mention'd, The promiſes of mercy and pardon in the Goſpel, though general, being yet conditional, and no ground allow'd for any to hope for his part of it, but upon performance of that condition, which again muſt not be confined to any one notion of any one Chriſtian virtue, Faith, or the like, but to ſincere obedience to the whole law of Chriſt, and that comprehends all the particulars required by him, in the retail, or as it is in the groſs ſet down by the moſt comprehenſive words, either of repentance or converſion, without which we ſhall all likewiſe periſh, and we ſhall in no wiſe enter into the kingdome of God, or of holineſſe, without which no man ſhall ſee God. The not obſerving of which is the αἴτιον ψεύδους, the procreative miſtake of the many great, and dangerous errors in this matter.

The third thing is, that as the Hebrew צדקה righteouſneſs ſignifies two things, either a lower, or a more eminent degree of righteouſneſs, theſe two differing one from the other, as juſtice and charity, appear to differ, one ſuperadded to, and ſuperſtructed on the other, and as it is the part of a Judge, to conſider theſe ſeverally, and as well to reward the higher degree of the one, as to acquit the innocence and reward the lower degree of the other, ſo there is a double notion of juſtifying in the ſcripture, the one for acquitting, and pardoning, accepting, and rewarding in a lower degree, which upon repentance and forſaking of ſinne, and converting ſincerely to God, is afforded every one, through the ſatisfaction, and blood-ſhedding of Chriſt, under the Goſpel; Another for an higher degree of approving, and commending, and adjudging to reward, and that proportion'd to ſome eminent act of faith, or obedience, in caſe of extraordinary triall, ſuch was Abraham's beleiving in hope, and above hope, and his obedience to the higheſt commands, leaving his countrey, and ſacrificing his only ſon, and ſuch were the ſeverall acts of faith mention'd Heb. 11. and the ἔργα works, Jam. 2. And thus there ſeems to be a difference betwixt Gods imputing no ſin, and his imputing to righteouſneſſe, the latter being his adjudging to a high reward, the former only the forgiving iniquity, and accepting in a lower degree, the one upon ſome eminent act of faith, or obedience, the other upon undertaking new life, anſwerable to theſe two ſorts of juſtification. And accordingly c. 4. that which is expreſt ver. 4. by [it was accounted for righteouſneſſe,] is v.5. [the reward was reckoned] noting an eminent reward of ſome eminent act, to be comprehended in that phraſe. And ſo ſometimes it is in the word [Juſtified,] and when it is ſo to be interpreted, the context will generally determine.

As ἀλήθεια truth] ſignifies alſo fidelity or faithfulneſſe, ſo ψεῦσμα on the contrary ſignifying a lie, imports alſo infidelity or unfaithfulneſſe, and is here ſet to ſignifie that ſinne of not making good uſe of the oracles of God intruſted to the Jewes, called their ἀπιστία unbeleif, v.3. and ἀδικία, unrighteouſneſſe, v.5. So v. 4. Let God be true, and every man a lyer, i. e. the unfaithfulneſs of men, in neglecting to doe their part, doth no way prejudice, but rather commend the fidelity of God, in allowing them thoſe mercies, which they make ſo ill uſe of. c.

The placing of the words in this verſe hath ſome harſhneſſe, and conſequent obſcurity in it, The learned Hugo Grotius is inclinable to beleive a tranſpoſition of μὴ ὅτι, for ὅτι μὴ, and then renders ὅτι cur why, thus, And why not (the reſt being read in a parentheſis) or why ſhould we not doe evil, that good may come? But, I ſuppoſe, the more obvious and ſimple way ought here to be preferr'd, and the τί why] from the former verſe to be repeated, or elſe the ſenſe ſo to hang, as that the [τί why] there ſhal have an influence here upon the [μὴ not] and be thus rendred, καὶ μὴ and why not, as we are calumniated &c. or, And why ſhould we not ſay, as we are calumniated, and as ſome ſay that we ſay. If this latter be it, then [λέξομεν ſay] is to be underſtood from the λέγειν following. But if the former, then the whole oration, placed ordinarily in a parentheſis (καθὼς βλασφημούμεθα, καὶ καθὼς φασίν τινες ἡμᾶς λέγειν, as we are calumniated, and as ſome ſay that we ſay] is, as it were, the verb to the [τί μὴ why not] Thus, And why ſhould not we ſay, what Paul is affirmed to ſay (but that is calumny, ſaith Paul,) and in either way the ὅτι] that follows, will be taken in the ſenſe that hath been noted of it, Mat. 7. d. for ſcilicet, or videlicet, to wit] only as a form to introduce the ſpeech following, thus, Why ſhould we not ſay, as we are calumniated —— to ſay, to wit, Let us doe evil, that good may come —— And ſo this will be a perſpicuous rendring of the verſe. d.

Theſe

e. Τόπος ἀναμφισβήτητος &c. These three verſes that here follow, are evidently taken out of ſeverall places of the Pſalms, and other ſcriptures, and by the Apoſtle accommodated to his preſent purpoſe. And by occaſion of their being annexed to three verſes taken out of the 14th Pſalme, it hath come to paſſe, that ſome antient Latine copies of that Pſalme have taken them in from hence, and added them to that Pſalme, and accordingly the tranſlation which is uſed in the Liturgie, hath three verſes more to that Pſalme, then the tranſlation in our Bibles doth acknowledge.

f. Πικρία The Hebrew word מרמית ſignifying deceits, was by the Septuagint miſtaken for מרורות, and ſo rendred πικρία bitterneſs, and continued here from thence in this citation: As indeed in moſt citations of Paul, the Apoſtle of the Gentiles (who generally uſed the Septuagint) and of Luke alſo, his companion, (ſee Act. 8. note c.) the Hebrew text is not made uſe of, but the Greek tranſlation retained, even when it differs from the original Hebrew.

g. Δόξα θεοῦ The word δόξα glory or praiſe, being here joyned with θεοῦ, of God, ſignifies not that glory which accrues to God, the glorifying or praiſing of his name, but that which accrues to man from God, and that may be either in this world, or in the next; The approbation, and acceptance of any work here, or the reward of it hereafter. Gods acceptance or approbation here, is called δόξα θεοῦ the praiſe or glory of God, Joh. 12. 44. they loved δόξαν ἀνθρώπων the glory or praiſe of men, more then of God, and ſo God's teſtimony is δόξα παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ, praiſe from God, Joh. 5. 44. And ſo it ſeems to denote here, that reward, which belongs to unſinning obedience, in which boaſting is founded, v. 27. and to which grace, as it ſignifies pardon of ſinnes, is oppoſed, v. 24. and therefore of this all men are ſaid to come ſhort, who are found to be ſinners in the beginning of the verſe. Thus is glorying towards God ſet down as a conſequent of juſtification by works, c. 4. v. 2. δόξα παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ Καύχημα ἔναντι θεοῦ

h. Some difficulty there is in this verſe, which muſt be explained by ſurveying the ſeverall parts of it. The Hebrew כפר ſignifying two things, to cover and to expiate (ſee note on Heb. 9. c.) the noun כפרת which is uſed for the covering of the arke, is indifferently rendred in the Old Teſtament ἱλαστήριον, propitiatory, and ἐξιλαστήριμα covering, And indeed very fitly and properly both, becauſe as that place, where the Cherubim, or Angels of God's preſence were placed, was the covering of the Arke, ſo Exod. 25. 22. God promiſed that in that place he would talke with Moſes, and give reſponſes, and ſhew himſelf propitious to the people. Thus (beſide the many places in the Old Teſtament) it is uſed in the New, Heb. 9. 5. where the Cherubim of glory, i.e. the pictures of the Angels in the manner wherein they were wont to appear, i.e. in the reſemblance of a bright cloud or glory, are ſaid to overſhadow the ἱλαστήριον i.e. the covering of the arke or propitiatory; And in proportion to this, muſt the word here be rendred not propitiation (that is ἱλασμὸς 1 Joh. 2. 2.) but propitiatory, Chriſt being now the antitype (prefigured by that covering of the arke, where God was wont to exhibite himſelf peculiarly) he, by whom God ſpake to us, Heb. 1. 1. in whom the fulneſſe of the Godhead dwelt bodily, and on whom the Angels deſcended with that voice, [This is my beloved ſon, &c.] and by whom God gave his reſponſes to the world, ſhewing himſelf propitious to them (which is the meaning of Ἔνδειξις δικαιοσύνης demonſtrating of his righteouſneſs or mercy that here followes) or ſhewing a way by which he will be propitiated, viz: through faith in his blood (not by any legal performances) the condition required on our part to be performed; This condition is here introduced by the word [διὰ (with a genitive caſe) through] which is the note of a condition (as with an accuſative it is of a cauſe) and it is πίστει ἐν τῷ αὐτοῦ αἵματι, faith in his blood, where the blood being the object of the faith, it muſt ſignifie in concreto, Jeſus Chriſt, who thus ſhed his blood (ſhed it to propitiate and ſatisfie for our ſinnes, and ſhed it to redeem us from all iniquity) in, or on whom we are to beleive, and that is ſtyled ver. 22. (in that ſimpler phraſe, yet to the ſame ſenſe) πίστις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ the faith of Jeſus Chriſt: Beſide this the blood is alſo the foundation or motive of the Chriſtian faith, that which perſwades us to beleive and obey Chriſt, becauſe what he hath taught us, as the will of God, he hath thus confirmed to be ſo, by ſigning it with his blood, and ſo the blood of Chriſt is ſaid by S. John to be one of thoſe, which teſtifie or bear witneſſe on earth, and to induce our faith of the Goſpel, thus teſtified by the effuſion of his blood. And in both theſe notions, this faith is the condition on our part, parallel to Chriſts being propoſed a propitiatory on God's part; for as God exhibits himſelf to us in Chriſt, demonſtrates his righteouſneſſe, or mercifulneſſe, and reveals himſelf propitious to us, in putting us in a way of finding mercy, entring a new covenant with us, ſo muſt we beleive on him thus exhibiting and revealing his Father's will to us, and obſerve thoſe rules, of repentance and new life, upon which he promiſeth to be thus mercifull to us. And accordingly this condition is here immediately ſubjoyned to Gods propoſing Chriſt as a propitiatory, as the condition on our part, on which he ſo propoſeth him. πίστει ἐν τῷ αὐτοῦ αἵματι διὰ Αἷμα

i. Ἔνδειξις δικαιοσύνης] will here beſt be rendred, demonſtration of his righteouſneſs, and accordingly as the method of demonſtrating is wont to be by the cauſe, ſo here followes [διὰ] which, with an accuſative caſe, is a note of a cauſe, διὰ τὴν πάρεσιν becauſe of the paſſing by, (not taking notice) of paſt ſinnes, the ſinnes, whether by Jewes or Gentiles, formerly committed, i. e. before the revealing and manifeſting of God's will unto them by Chriſt, According to that of Act. 17. 30. that God, ὑπεριδὼν τοὺς χρόνους looking over, not taking notice of that time of ignorance, doth now command all men every where to repent; and Wiſd. 11. 23. παρορᾷς ἁμαρτήματα ἀνθρώπων εἰς μετάνοιαν, thou lookeſt another way, and beholdeſt not the ſinnes of men, that they may repent. The ὑπερίδων and παρορῶν] there, is the direct interpretation of God's πάρεσις here, differing from ἄφεσις pardon, as præterition, doth from remiſſion. as paſſing by, not yet laying to their charge for puniſhment, doth from abſolving, acquitting of them. For though in order to their repentance and change, God doth at the preſent ſo paſſe by their forepaſt ſinnes, as not to forſake them, or ſhut up all wales of mercy againſt them, but reveals Chriſt to them, with promiſe of pardon for what Ἔνδειξις δικαιοσύνης διὰ τὴν πάρεσιν τῶν

is past, if they will now obey him (this is the meaning of πίστως) yet unlesse that change be wrought, and for the future approved to him, there is no ἄφεσις remission or pardon to be expected from him. This πίστως then consists ἐν τῇ ἀνοχῇ Θεοῦ, in God's forbearance, or long-suffering (so the word signifies c.2. 4.) in his not proceeding so swiftly, and severely with sinners, as to cut them off, or forsake, and leave them helpless and hopeless in their sinnes, but treating them gently, giving them space to repent, and amend, and using all effectuall means to win them to it, All one with Gods μακροθυμία, slowness to punish, mentioned oft, in the case of Pharaoh, and elswhere, And this being now God's dealing in Christ, is here mention'd as the medium to demonstrate God's righteousness, i.e. that Evangelical way revealed by Christ, wherein it consists, not in the purchase of pardon, and forgiveness absolutely, or for any, but those that doe sincerely return from their wicked lives, and embrace the faith, and obedience of Christ, but to give space, and to admonish, and call to repentance, and use means on God's part effectual, if they be not obstinately resisted, or contemned by us, to bring us to new life. And that is the meaning also of the Ἀπολύτρωσις redemption which is in Christ, v.24. his freeing men from that necessity of perishing in their sinnes, calling them to repentance, using all probable means to redeem and purifie them from all iniquity, which is expresst by λυτροῦς redeeming Tit. 2. 14. and ποιεῖν λύτρωσιν, to work redemption Lu. 1. 68, And so sometimes also [forgiving] signifies, as when Christ saith, Πάτερ ἄφες, Father forgive them, Lu. 23. 24. for there he praies not for final or actual, present, absolute forgiveness to them, but for the giving them space to repent, and means to convince them of their sin, by the coming of the holy Ghost, and the Apostles preaching to them the resurrection of Christ from that death which they had inflicted on him. And so must we understand the remission of sinnes, which in the Creed is proposed to all to beleive.

k. That the word δίκαιος just, or righteous signifies a mercifull, or charitable person hath been shew'd from the Hebrew notation of צדקה righteousness, for ἐλεημοσύνη mercy, note on Mat. 1. g.

And accordingly it may be observed, that the word seldome in these books, if ever, belongs, or is applied to the act of vindicative, or punitive justice, but (as there in the case of Joseph, who would not offer his wife to legal punishment, and therefore is call'd δίκαιος righteous) for the abating of the rigour of exact law, and bringing in ἐπιείκεια moderation, or equity, or mercy in stead of it. Accordingly it is here to be resolved, that this phrase being used of God [εἰς τὸ αὐτὸν δίκαιον, that God may be righteous] must be understood, to denote his mercy, and goodnesse and clemency, in pardoning, and forgiving of sinnes, that being the thing lookt on in the many foregoing expressions, Our being justified freely by his grace v.24. the propitiatory v.25. Gods means of exhibiting, or revealing his covenant of mercy, Gods righteousnesse, i.e. his mercifull dealing with men under this second Covenant, v.25, & 26. and the remission of sinnes, and forbearance, v.25. 'Tis true indeed, that the satisfaction made, and the price paid for our sinnes by Christ, being the meritorious cause of this remission, and justification, may fitly denominate God δίκαιον just in that other respect, and it is most certain that God, to give a great example of his hatred to sin, and his wrath against sinners, was pleased to lay on his own son the iniquities of us all, rather then let sinne go utterly unpunished, But the word δίκαιος righteous being so commonly taken in that notion of mercifulness, and so seldome in this of vindicative justice, there is no reason to interpret it thus in this place.

λόγος signifies ratio or ratiocinium, not onely in the notion of the Logician, but also of the Arithmetician, not only reason, or arguing, but also reckoning or counting, and so you shall find it ch.9. 28. whose art is called thereupon λογιστικὴ, counting or reckoning, whence Phavorinus, λογίζομαι, ψηφίζω τῇ χειρὶ casting account with ψῆφοι, which we therefore call counters, or those by which we cast account. Hence λογίζομαι is to perfect and make up an account, and to conclude or summe up, and so 'tis here used to conclude, not in the Logicians, but Arithmeticians notion of concluding. Of this word λογίζομαι see note on 1 Cor. 13. f.

Paraphrase.

a. 1. What then doe we say? Can it be said, or thought, that Abraham, who is said in scripture to be righteous, or accepted by God as righteous, obtained that testimony by the merit of his own innocence, or performances? (This affirmative interrogation is in effect a negation, and so the meaning is,) This cannot with any reason be affirmed by any.

1. *a What shall we say then, that Abraham our father, † as pertaining to the flesh, hath found?

* What therefore do we say? τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν † found according to the flesh? Εὑρηκέναι κατὰ σάρκα

2. For if he were so justified by any thing in himself, any innocence, or performance of his, he might then be said to have somewhat to glory of, his justification being an effect of his performances, and not of the free grace of God, (see note a. & ch.3.27.) But sure there is no such matter; Or, if toward men, who had nothing to blame in him, he might have any place of boasting, yet sure toward God he hath none, he cannot be able to say to God by way of boast, as of any speciall merit or excellency (which alone is matter of boasting) that he had done any thing, by virtue of which he was justified before God. And therefore certainly, whatsoever privilege or prerogative was, or could be conceived to belong to him, or his posterity, it was from the free mercy of God, a fruit of undeserved promise, and that excludes all boasting, for what hast thou (in this case) which thou hast not received? and why then boastest thou, as if thou hadst not? i.e. as if it were not a meer act of mercy, and bounty to thee.)

2. For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath * whereof to glory, but not † before God.]

* boasting, καύχημα † toward πρὸς

3. And this appears by that way of God's dealing with him, which is in the scripture clearly enough set down; and that the very same by which we teach, and professe that all men are now dealt with by God, i.e. a way that belongs to the Gentiles though sinners, (if they will forsake their heathen waies, and now receive and obey Christ) as well as to the Jewes, viz: that Abraham

3. For what saith the scripture? Abraham beleived God, and it was counted unto him for righteousnesse.]

beleived God, followed his call, and beleived his promise, and thereupon though he had formerly been guilty of many sinnes, and though his obedience being due to Gods commands, could not challenge any such reward from God, yet did God freely justifie him, i.e. upon his forsaking his countrey and the idolatries thereof, and after, upon his depending upon God's promises made to him (and so walking cheerfully in his duty towards God) pardon his past sinnes, receive him into speciall favour, strike a covenant of rich mercies with him.

4. Now to him that worketh, is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt.] 4. By this 'tis clear that 'twas not his innocence, or blamelesnesse, by which he is said to be just in the sight of God, or any meritorious act, that was thus rewarded in him, (see note on c.3. b.) For if it were, then would it not be said, that God did account or reckon his faith unto him for righteousnesse, i.e. freely out of meer mercy justifie him (as v.3. it was, and v.5. is again said, these two phrases [it was reputed to him for righteousnesse] there, and here [it is reputed to him according to grace, or favour] being directly of the same importance) but that upon his perfect innocence and blamelesnesse, God was bound (by lawes of strict justice to reward and crown his innocence, and his vertues, as paying him that which he ought him (a due debt,) and not freely giving it him by way of favour and grace, as is implied in accounting or imputing to him for righteousnesse.

5. But to him that worketh not, but beleiveth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousnesse.] 5. But his way of justification was by beleiving pardon for sinners upon reformation, and thereupon reforming and giving himself up to doe whatsoever God now would have him doe, and so 'twas not any originall innocence of his (which might challenge the reward, as due) but onely Gods acceptation of his faith, which was an act of God's meer mercy, and that may be vouchsafed to Idolatrous Gentiles upon their repentance, as well as to him, and their receiving of the faith, and leaving their former courses of sinne, on Christs command, as he did his countrey, upon Gods, be accepted to their justification.

6. Even as David also describeth the blessednesse of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousnesse without works,] 6. Agreeable to which is that description of blessednesse in David, Psal. 32. that he is blessed, whom the Lord out of his free grace and pardon of sinne accepteth, and accounteth as righteous, and not on any merit of their own performances, i.e. that blessednesse consists in having this Evangelical way of justifying sinners (or those who have been sinners, and now repent and return) vouchsafed to any man, not that of never having lived in sinne (for want of which the Jewes will not admit the Gentiles to any hope of justification) but the other, I say, of mercy and forgivenesse, upon reformation, and forsaking their former evil waies, as appears by the words of the Psalme.

7. Saying, Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sinnes are covered.] 7. Blessed are they, not who never sinn'd at all, that were never in a wicked or wrong course, (as of the Gentiles it is acknowledged that they were) but who having been ill, have reformed, and found place of repentance, and of mercy upon reformation, meerly by the forgivenesse and pardon of God.

8. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sinne.] 8. Blessed is the man, whose sinne (though he have been guilty, as 'tis acknowledg'd the Gentiles have) is not charged on him by God, but freely pardoned and forgiven unto him upon his reformation.

9. Cometh this blessednesse then upon the circumcision onely, or upon the uncircumcision also? for we say that faith was reckoned unto Abraham for righteousnesse.] 9. This then being the nature of the Evangelical course, of Gods gracious way of dealing with sinners, giving them place for repentance, and upon the sincerity of that, justifying, and accepting them, whatsoever their former sinnes have been, we may now further consider, whether this course may not be taken with uncircumcised Gentiles, as well as with the Jewes, and that will best be done, by considering how God dealt with Abraham, and what condition Abraham was in, when God thus reckoned his faith to him for righteousnesse, or justified and approved of him, and rewarded him so richly for beleiving.

10. How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.] 10. And of this the account is easie, if we but observe the time, when Abrahams justification is spoken of, viz. when those words were said of him, Abraham beleived and it was counted to him for righteousnesse. For we find that was Gen. 15.6. before he was circumcised ch.17.24. and therefore it could not be a privilege annext to circumcision, but is a grace and favour of God, whereof the uncircumcised Gentiles are no lesse capable, then the Jewes, who are within the covenant of circumcision: (which is an evidence that receiving of Christ now, and beleiving and obeying of him, as then Abraham obeyed, will be accepted by God, without circumcision)

11. And he received the signe of circumcision, a seal of the righteousnesse of the faith, which he had yet being uncircumcised; that he might be the father of all them that beleive, * though they be not circumcised, that righteousnesse might be imputed unto them also:] 11. And being justified after this Evangelical manner upon his faith, without and before circumcision, he received the sacrament of circumcision, for a seal, on his part, of his performing those commands of God given to him, his walking before him sincerely, Gen.17.1. (upon which the covenant is made to him, and thus sealed v.2.4.10.) and on God's part, for a testification of that faith of his, and obsignation of that præcedent justification; And so by consequence he is the father in a spirituall sense, i.e. an exemplar, or copy (which they that transcribe are called his sonnes) not only of the Jew circumcised, but of every uncircumcised beleiver, who therefore succeeds him, as a son to a father, in that privilege of being justified before God:

* through uncircumcision, δι' ἀκροβυστίας

12. And the father of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision onely, but also † walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised.] 12. And a spirituall father conveying down mercies & the inheritance to the Jewes, as many, as besides circumcision, which they draw down from him, doe also transcribe his copie, follow his example of faith and obedience which were remarkable in him before he was circumcised, and to all others that being Gentiles or uncircumcised leave their Gentile sinnes as he his countrey, beleive all Gods promises, and adhere to him against all temptations to the contrary.

† to those that walk, τοῖς στοιχοῦσι

13. For the promise * that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousnesse of faith.] 13. For the great promise made to

* to Abraham or his seed, that he should be the heir of the world, was not by the law, ἐ γὰρ διὰ νόμου ἡ ἐπαγγελία τῷ Ἀβραὰμ ἢ τῷ σπέρματι αὐτοῦ, τὸ κληρονόμον αὐτὸν εἶναι τοῦ κόσμου

Abraham, and his posterity, that they should possesse so great a part of the world, Idumæa and a great deal more beside Canaan, (under which also heaven was typically promised, and comprehended, Heb. 11, 14. 16.) was not made by the Mosaicall law, or consequently upon condition of performing and observing of that, (see note on Mat. 5. g.) but by this other Evangelicall way of new obedience, without having observed the law of Moses, without being circumcised.

14. For if that inheritance were made over to them upon observation of the Mosaical law, upon the Jews being circumcised, &c: then, as faith, or this Evangelicall way of justifying sinners is vanished on one side, and what is said of Abrahams being justifyed by faith, is concluded to be false, so the promise it selfe, which was shewed to be the thing, by which Abraham was justified, and to belong to all Abrahams seed, not to the Jewes onely, v. 12. is vanished also.

14. For if they, which are of the law, be heires, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect.]

15, 16. This again appears by another argument, for it's evident of the law of Moses, that all, which that doth, is to bring sinne and punishment into the world, as the law of circumcision given to the Jewes, made it a sinne, and punishable in a Jew, if he were not circumcised on the eighth day, but gave him no right of merit, no title to heaven, or to any other reward, in case he did observe that, or the like ordinances, were circumcised, &c: (for these were before the command of circumcision, made over to Abraham and his seed by the promise of God.) And so for other more substantiall duties, the law by commanding them doth but enhanse the contrary sinne, which if it were not for the commandment could not be so high a degree of crime, or contempt of known law, but doth not give a man right to any reward for observing it: From whence it necessarily follows, that it, i. e. the promise of reward, v. 13. justification &c: must have been made in respect to faith, or to beleivers (and not founded upon any merit of any legall performances, on God's giving, or our observing that law of circumcision, &c:) and by that means indeed it becomes an act of promise, and that promise meerly of grace, not depending on Judaicall performances, and so it belongs to all the seed (i. e. to all that do as Abraham did) is made good (see note on 1 Pet: 2.d.) to all sorts of beleivers (not onely to the Jewes) who are spiritually children of Abraham, i. e. beleivers like him, born anew after his example or similitude, though not springing from his loyns, for in this respect it is, that he is said to be the father of us all, i. e. of all the faithfull.

15. * Because the law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgression.

16. Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace, † to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed, not to that onely which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all,]

17. (As is is written, I have made thee a father of many nations) before him, whom he beleived, even God, who quickneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not, as though they were,]

17. (As it is written of him, that hee should be the father of more nations then one, nay (as the word [many] often signifies) of all, i. e. of the Gentile beleivers also) viz: in respect of God's promise and mercy, who justified Abraham without Mosaicall obedience, and so will justifie Gentile Christians, begetting them by the Gospell to a new life, and then upon this change, this reformation, though sinners and Gentiles by birth, yet accounting them children, receiving, and embracing them in Christ; And there is nothing strange in all this, when we remember, who it is that hath made this promise, even that God, who is able to doe all things, even to raise the dead to life again, and so to quicken the Gentiles that are dead in sinnes (as he quickned the womb of Sarah, and enabled old Abraham to beget a sonne) and give them grace to forsake their former deadnes and barrennes, and incapacity of Gods favour, viz. their heathen sinnes, and to deal with those despised heathen, as he doth with the Jewes themselves, that have received most of his favour, and pretend a peculiar title to it, see Lu: 15. 24.

18. Who against hope beleived in hope, that he * might become the father of many nations: according to that which was spoken, so shall thy seed be.]

18. And this is exemplified to us in that which, wee see, befell Abraham, who having no naturall grounds of hope (either in respect of Sarah or himselfe) did yet (upon Gods promise Gen: 15.) hope and beleive, that he should have a Sonne, and so be a stock, from whence (i. e. literally, from his body) many nations should spring, a most numerous progeny, even as many as the stars of heaven for multitude. (And then why may not the Gentiles upon coming into the faith of Christ, and reforming their Gentile lives, be as capable of God's promises, as to all true penitents, whatsoever impossibility seem to be in it, in respect of their former sinnes, and desperatenes of their condition?)

19. And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body † now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadnes of Sarah's womb:]

19. He, we know, by a strong faith overcame all the difficulties in nature, and considered no objections that might be made against the probableness of God's performing the promise:

20. He b * staggered not at the promise of God through unbeleife: but was strong in faith, giving glory to God:]

b. 20. Neither interposed he any question, demurre, or doubt, through any suspicious fearfull passion in himselfe, but, without all dispute to the contrary, depended fully on God for the performance, and how difficult soever, yet he lookt upon God in his glorious attributes, perfectly able to do whatsoever he promised, and most faithfull, and sure never to faile in the performance, collecting nothing else from the difficulty of the matter, but that it was the fitter for an almighty power, and a God that cannot lye, having promised, to magnifie his power in performing it.

21. Having for it all, this one hold, on which he depended most confidently, that as God was able, so he would certainly make good, and perform what hee had freely promised to him. (And then, now that the Gospell is by Christ sent to the Gentiles, and mercy offered them upon reformation, why should the wickednes of their former lives (any more then Sarahs barren womb, and Abrahams old age) keep God from performing his promise to them, of accepting, and justifying penitent Gentiles, whose reformation tends so much to Gods glory, though they be not circumcised?)

21. And being fully perswaded, that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform.]

22. Which stedfast faith of his was a signe of the opinion he had of God's power and fidelity, and was most graciously accepted by God, and rewarded in him with the performance of the promise, and not onely so, but also (and over and above it) was reputed to him as an eminent piece of virtue; And so it will be now in the Gentiles, if upon our preaching to them, they now beleive, and repent.

22. And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousnes.]

23. Now

† that it may be a firm promise, ἵνα τὸ κατὰ χάριν βέβαιον ᾖ τῇ ἐπαγγελίᾳ

* For ὅτι

† grown already dead, νενεκρωμένον

* doubted

* should become εἰς τὸ γενέσθαι

23. Now it was not written for his ſake alone, that it was imputed to him;

24. But for us alſo, to whom it ſhall be imputed, * if we beleive on him that raiſed up Jeſus our Lord from the dead.]

* that beleive his meſſage

23, 24. For this is recorded of him for our inſtruction, to teach us how God will reward us, if we beleive on him, without doubt, or diſpute in other things of the like, or greater difficulty, ſuch is the raiſing Chriſt from the dead, which was wrought by God for us and all mankind, Gentiles as well as Jewes, and our beleif of it is now abſolutely required of us, to fit us to receive and obey him, that is thus wonderfully teſtified to us to be the Meſſias of the world, and that receiving and obeying of him will now be ſufficient to the juſtifying of us, without the obſervations of the Moſaical law, as Abrahams faith was to him, before he was circumciſed.

25. Who was delivered for our offences, and was raiſed again for our juſtification.]

25. For to this end was both the death and reſurrection of Chriſt deſigned; he died as our ſurety, to obtain us releaſe and pardon, to make expiation for our ſinnes paſt, and roſe again from the dead, partly to convince the unbeleiving world by that ſupreme act of power, and ſo to bring them to the faith, that before ſtood out againſt it; partly that he might take us off from the ſinnes of our former lives, bring us to new life, by the example of his riſing, and by the miſſion of the Spirit to us, whereby he was raiſed, and ſo to help us to actual juſtification, which is not had by the death of Chriſt, but upon our coming in to the faith, and performance of the condition required of us, ſincere obedience to the commands of Chriſt.

So that as the faith of Abraham, which was here ſaid to be reputed to him for righteouſneſſe, was the obeying of God in his commands, of walking before him, &c. the beleiving God's promiſe, and without all dubitancy relying on his all-ſufficient power to doe that moſt impoſſible thing in nature, and his veracity and fidelity, that he would certainly doe it, having promiſed it, (which contains under it alſo by analogie a beleif of all other his divine attributes, and affirmations, and promiſes, and a practiſe agreeable to this beleif, going on conſtantly upon thoſe grounds, in deſpight of all reſiſtances, and temptations to the contrary,) ſo the faith that ſhall be reputed to our juſtification, is the beleiving on God in the ſame latitude, that he did, walking uprightly before him, acknowledging his power, his veracity, and all other his attributes, beleiving whatſoever he hath affirmed, or promiſed, or revealed unto us concerning himſelf, particularly his receiving of the greateſt ſinners, the moſt Idolatrous heathens, upon their receiving the faith of Chriſt, and betaking themſelves to a new Chriſtian life, and as an Embleme, and token, and aſſurance of that, that great fundamental work, the baſis of all Chriſtianity, his raiſing Jeſus from the dead, whom by that means he that ſet forth to us to be our Lord, to be obeyed in all his commands, delivered to us, when he was here on earth (the obligingneſſe of which is now ſealed to us by God in his raiſing this Lord of ours from the dead) and this faith not only in our brains, but ſunk down into our hearts, and bringing forth actions in our lives (as it did in Abraham) agreeable and proportionable to our faith. And as this faith is now required to our juſtification, ſo will it be accepted by God to the benefit of all the heathen world, that ſhall thus make uſe of it, without the addition of Moſaical obſervances, circumciſion, &c. as in Abraham it was, before he was circumciſed.

Notes on Chap. IV.

a. The underſtanding of the Apoſtles diſcourſe in this chapter depends much on a right underſtanding of this verſe, which contains the queſtion to which the ſatisfaction is rendred in the following words. And in this verſe four things muſt be obſerved, Firſt that the τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν what ſay we then? is a form of introducing a queſtion, and though not here (in the ordinary printed copies) yet in other places hath a note of interrogation immediatly following it, as c. 6. 1. and 7. 7. This being ſuppoſed, the ſecond thing is, that the remainder of the verſe is the very queſtion thus introduced [that Abraham &c. i.e. Doe we ſay that Abraham found according to the fleſh?] And this interrogation being not here formally anſwer'd, muſt it ſelf be taken for an anſwer to it ſelf, and as interrogations are the ſtrongeſt negations, ſo will this, and muſt thus be made up by addition of theſe or the like words, No certainly he did not. Then for the third difficulty, viz: what is here the meaning of εὑρηκέναι, hath found, that will ſoon be anſwered, 1. that to find, agreeably to the Hebrew מצא ſignifies to gain, obtain, acquire, as to find life, Mat. 16. 25. 2dly, that there muſt be ſome ſubſtantive underſtood, ſomewhat which he may be ſaid to have found, and that is either indefinitely ὃ ἔυρε, that which he did find, or obtain, or elſe more diſtinctly δικαιοσύνην righteouſneſs or juſtification, which had before been named, favour, approbation with God. So we have εὗρες χάριν thou haſt found favour, Lu. 1. 30. and it ſeems to be a proverbial form, and will then be the ſame with being juſtified ver. 2. And ſo the illative particle For, concludes, Doe we ſay he hath found? (or, Certainly he hath not found) For if he were juſtified, i.e. if he had thus found— which notes finding, and being juſtified to be all one. Fourthly then it muſt be examined what is meant by κατὰ σάρκα, according to the fleſh. And firſt it appears to connect with the εὑρηκέναι, for ſo it lies, εὑρηκέναι κατὰ σάρκα, found according to the fleſh, and is not joyned with Abraham our father, as in reaſon it would have been, (and not εὑρηκέναι interpoſed,) if the meaning of it had been, our father according to the fleſh, which being ſuppoſed, it will likewiſe follow that [κατὰ σάρκα, according to the fleſh] muſt ſignifie the ſame with ἐξ ἔργων, by works, v. 2. in like manner as [found] and [juſtified] import the ſame, And this again is evident by the lawes of reaſoning, For this ſecond verſe being by the [For] in the front evidenced to be the proof of what was ſet down in the firſt, and this proof being in form of an hypothetical ſyllogiſme, Thus, [If Abraham were by works juſtified before God, then he hath matter of boaſting before God, but Abraham hath not any matter of boaſting before God, therefore he was not juſtified by works] it muſt follow neceſſarily that this concluſion [Abraham was not juſtified by works] was the ſame with that, which was ſet down in other words, v. 1. or if not of the ſame latitude, and extent with it, was comprehended, as a part, under it. Which it cannot be, unleſſe [κατὰ σάρκα, according to the fleſh] and [ἐξ ἔργων by works] be either of the ſame force directly, or the latter contained in the former, Any greater, (though never ſo ſmall) difference, that ſhould be admitted, being of neceſſity to affix four terms to the Apoſtles ſyllogiſm, and ſo to evacuate all force in his argument. From hence it follows, that the way of diſcerning what is meant by [ἐξ ἔργων by works] will be the moſt probable means of interpreting κατὰ σάρκα according to the fleſh. And this we have from v.4. & 5. in these words, To him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt, But to him that worketh not, but beleiveth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is reckoned for righteousnesse. Where it is evident, that [working] is that to which reward is by debt, or just wages to be adjudged, and that in opposition to Gods reckoning of grace, or favour, and justifying the ungodly; From whence it follows, that [being justified by works] in this place (in S. Paul's, not S. James's dialect) signifies, that innocence of the former life, and those eminent performances wrought by a mans self, that may challenge from God as due unto them, Gods acquittance, and special reward, without any intervening of pardon, as to an offender, or of grace, in giving him any thing, that is not perfectly due to him. Whereas on the contrary, Gods imputing righteousnesse without works] ver. 6. is Gods pardoning graciously the sinner, that the man hath been guilty of, (viz: upon repentance, and reformation,) which he might most justly have punished, v. 7, 8. and rewarding some mean imperfect act, or acts of fidelity, or obedience in him, which could no way challenge impunity, much lesse such a degree of reward, did not God out of meer mercy thus improve, and enhanse the value of them. So that [ἔργα works] are the mans own performances, first blamelesse in not sinning, and then meritorious, as the eminent difficulty of the commands, wherein his obedience is tried, and exercised, is apt to enhanse the value of them, and he that were supposed to be justified by them, must 1. have lived blamelesly all his former life, and then have done eminent, rewardable actions also, at least the former of these, And Abraham having been ἀσεβὴς a sinner v 5. having lived in Idolatry for some time, and all that he did, upon which he was justified, Gen. 15. 6. being but obeying Gods call, Gen. 12. 4. and beleiving his promises, Gen. 15. 5. it is clear he was not, nor could be thus justified, but only by the way mentioned by the Psalmist, Psal. 32. by Gods forgiving, covering, not imputing of sinne. And so this must be the meaning also of his not finding according to the flesh, viz: being not justified by any thing in himself, abstracted from the mercy, and gracious acceptance of God. Thus Rom 9. 8. the children of the flesh are opposed to the children of the promise, and signifie literally Ismael that was begotten by the strength of nature, (as Isaak was a work of Gods promise and special mercy,) and mystically the Jewes considered with their own performances, whereby they expected justification, without any respect to the pardon, and mercy of Christ. And thus Gal. 4 29. Ismael is said to be κατὰ σάρκα γεννηθεὶς, born according to the flesh, and Isaak κατὰ πνεῦμα, according to the spirit, in the same notion, the Spirit, and the promise, signifying the same thing in that place, as appears by v. 28. The words being thus interpreted, are a confutation of one part of the objection of the Jewes against the Apostles practise, of preaching the Gospel to the Gentiles, viz: that taken from the sinnes of the Gentiles, which here by the example of Abraham is proved to be of no force against their justification, they being as justifiable, as Abraham a sinner was, by Gods free pardon of sinnes past, upon forsaking of them, And this is insisted on and proved in the eight first verses. In the ninth verse the Apostle proceeds to the confuting the other part of their objection (see note b. on the Title of the Epistle) viz: that if the heathens would be capable of any part of the benefit of Gods promise, they must then be Proselytes of their Mosaical covenant, or righteousnesse, be circumcised &c. Which again is proved false by the example of Abraham, who was justified, before he was circumcised, and before the giving of the Law, by faith, not by circumcision, by Gods pardon, and mercy, not by any legal performances. The only matter of doubt, and uncertainty is, whether these objections, which are thus in the insuing chapter confuted, were both propoted in the first verse, (for if they were, then ἐξ ἔργων by work] v. 2. will not be of the same latitude with κατὰ σάρκα according to the flesh, but contained under it, as a part under the whole) or whether the first only were there comprehended, and the second severally subjoyned v. 9. The latter of these seems most probable, and accordingly the explication of the Chapter hath proceeded, though if the former were true, it would be of no greater concernment then only this, that κατὰ σάρκα according to the flesh should referre to circumcision, and Mosaical observances, as well as to the blamelesse, and meritorious performances, wrought by a mans own natural strength, abstracted from Gods pardon, and favourable acceptance.

b. Διακρίνεσθαι is ἀμφιβάλλειν, ἀπιστεῖν, saith Phavorinus, to doubt, demurre, dispute, and be incredulous: So is the word used Mat. 21. 21. Act. 10. 20. & 11. 2, 12. Rom. 14. 23. Jam. 1. 6. & 2. 24. Jude 9, & 22. See Paulus Fagius on Pirche Aboth, p. 82.

CHAP. V.

1. By this faith therefore it is, that as many as sincerely embrace the Gospel are freely pardoned, and accepted by God in Christ, and being so, they are reconciled unto God through our Lord Jesus Christ, and though they have formerly been Gentiles, need not become Proselytes of the Jewes, need not any legal performances of circumcision, &c. to give them admission to the Church of Christ, as the Judaizing Gnosticks contend.

1. THerefore being justified by faith, we have peace * with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ:] * toward εἰς

2. Nay by him we have already received, † stand, and * rejoice in hope of the glory of God.] by faith only, (not by virtue of those performances,) reception and admission to those privileges, to this Evangelical estate, wherein now we stand, and have done for some time, and have a confident assurance that God which hath dealt thus graciously with us, will, if we be not wanting on our part, make us hereafter partakers of his glory, and this is matter of present rejoicing to us.

2. By whom also we † have accesse by faith into this * grace, wherein we † have had ἐσχήκαμεν * or joy, for the King's Ms. reads χαρὰν † have stood, ἑστήκαμεν

3. And we not only rejoice in this hope of future glory, but (on this score) also we are infinitely pleased with our present sufferings, (see note on Heb. 3. b.) whatsoever

3. And not onely so, but we glory in tribulations also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience,

* glory, or rejoice exceedingly, καυχώμεθα whatsoever befall us now, knowing, that although our afflictions be in their own nature bitter, yet they are occasions to exercise, and thereby to work in us the habit of many excellent vertues, as first patience, and constancy, which is required of us, and which is most reasonable to be shewed in so precious a cause.

* tryall, δοκιμην

4. And patience, * experience; and experience, hope;] 4. And this patience works another fruit, for without that we could have no way of exploring or trying our selves touching our sincerity, which is only to be judged of by triall, and without this triall and approbation of our sincerity we could have no safe ground of hope (which is only grounded on God's promises, and those made onely to the faithfull sincere, constant Christians.)

† poured out on us, εκκεχυται

5. And hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is † shed abroad in our hearts, by the holy Ghost, which is given unto us. 5. Which hope being thus grounded will be sure never to fail us, 'tis impossible we should ever be ashamed or repent of having thus hoped, and adhered to Christ, An evidence of which we have in Gods having so plentifully expresst his love to us, in testifying the truth of what we beleive, by sending his holy Spirit to that purpose, which assures us that we can never miscarry in depending on him for the performance of his promises, that being the great fundamental one, promised before his death, on which all the others depend.

* weak, ασθενων † at a fit season, κατα καιρον

6. For when we were yet * without strength, † in due time Christ died for the ungodly.] 6. This appears from the very beginning of Christ's dealing with us, for without all respect to any worth in us, Christ, when we were all in a sick, yea a mortal, i.e. damnable estate, (see 1 Cor. 8. note b) came then in a most seasonable opportunity, to rescue us from that certain damnation, which attended us, as impious wicked creatures, vouchsafed to suffer in our stead, himself to die that he might free us from certain eternal death, if we would now reform, and come in to the obedience of the Gospel.

* any one τις † though

7. For scarcely for a righteous man will * one die: † yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die:] 7. And what a degree of love this was, you may judge by this, that among men, though perhaps for a very mercifull person (see note on Mat. 20. b.) some one man would perhaps venture his life, yet for any man else, though he were a righteous and just man, you shall hardly find any man that will be so liberal or friendly as to part with it.

8. But God commendeth his love towards us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.] 8. Whereas God's expression of mercy was infinitely above this proportion of any the most friendly man, for he, when he had nothing in the object to move him to it, when we were so farre from being good or just men, from being mercifull or pious in the highest degree, that we were profane customary sinners, he then sent his Son Christ to die for us, to obtain, by the shedding of his own blood, pardon of sinnes for us upon our reformation, and amendment.

9. Much more then, being now * justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him.] 9. And having thus dyed and done so much for us, when we had nothing (but our sins) to provoke him to, or make us capable of any mercy, much more now being thus far restored to his favour, and by that ransome of his paid for us, redeemed out of that certain ruine that attended us, we shall, if we be not wanting to our selves, in performing the condition required on our parts, be actually delivered from all effects of his displeasure in another world, and for the effecting of this, great advantage we receive from him also, viz. by his resurrection from death, and mission of his spirit, which tends more to our actuall justification, then his death did, (see c. 4. 25.) 2.

10. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Sonne, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life.] 10. For, if God, when men lived, and went on in sinne, and hostility against him, were pleased to have such favourable thoughts toward them (see note on Mat. 5. m.) If by the satisfaction wrought for our sins by Christ, we were then thus farre restored to his favour, that he was pleased to propose unto us free and easie conditions of mercy in the Gospell, If he then used us so friendly, as not to preclude the way of salvation, but called us to repentance, with promise of pardon for all past sinnes, upon our coming penitently in unto him, much more easie will it be, and agreeable to that former essay of his goodness to us, now (after he hath gone so farre with us) to rescue us out of the power and danger of our sins, by his rising from the dead, c. 4. 25. and sending that Spirit by which he was raised, to raise us up to a new life; And this also as far as concerns Gods part, is wrought for us.

* glory, καυχωμενοι † reconciliation, καταλλαγην

11. And not onely so, but we also * joy in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the † atonement.] 11. And yet this is not all, but having received these benefits of reconciliation, (and promises of future salvation, if we be not wanting to our selves) we have now ground even of the greatest joy, and confidence, and dependence on God in all that can befall us in this life (see v. 3.) through this same Christ Jesus, who having made peace between God and us, and tendred us such easie conditions of mercy now under the Gospell, hath also given us a title to all consequent acts of friendship and kindnesse, which can be received from God, so that all that now befalls us, being for our good, is consequently matter of rejoycing to us.

* passed through to, (or, on) διηλθεν εις

12. Wherefore, as by one man sin entred into the world, and death by sinne, and so death * passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.] 12. From all which the conclusion is, that as by Adam's disobedience to that law given to him under the penalty of death, (i.e. by eating the forbidden fruit) sin came into the world, and death, or mortality by sinne, and being come in seized not onely on Adam, to whom 'twas particularly and expressely threatned (In the day that thou eatest thou shalt die the death) but upon all meer men also, that were after born, because all were sinners, i.e. born after the image and likeness of Adam, (that was now a sinner, and had begotten no childe in his innocence.)

† for, was not imputed, while there was, for the King's MS. reads ην λογιζ

13. For untill the law sinne was in the world: but sinne † is not imputed, when there is no law.

14. Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come.] 13, 14. For after Adam's time, before Moses, or the time of giving the law, men sinned; and though it be true, that sinne is not charged to punishment, but when there is a law to forbid it expressly under that penalty, and therefore it might be thought that sinne without the law, would not bring in death into the world, yet by the parity of reason, all men being Adam's posterity, and begotten after the image or similitude of a sinfull parent, v. 12. (and God being supposed to rule the world still, after the manner that he had first explicitely revealed) that death that was once come in, did lay hold on all that posterity of Adam from that time till Moses (when the law was given, and death again denounced denounced expresly) though they sinned not against a law promulgated under that penalty, or in that high presumptuous degree that Adam did. In which thing Adam is in the comparison the opposite member to Christ the Messias to come, for as death, which was the punishment of Adams sin, past on all men, begotten after the similitude of sinfull Adam, though they committed not that particular sin of eating the apple, against which the death was expresly decreed and threatned, i.e. though they sinn'd not so presumptuously against a law promulgated under that penalty, so justification and eternal life belongeth not only to those who were, as Christ, perfectly just, who have never lived in sinne, but cometh upon all others, who having not obeyed after the likenesse of Christ, doe yet return unto him by faith and repentance, and then for the future obey sincerely, though not exactly, and so in some manner and degree resemble Christ, as children doe parents, and as mankind did Adam.

15. In this place there ought to be, in ordinary manner of writing, another member of the period, answerable to the beginning of it v.12. (the 13th and 14th verses being certainly to be read as in a parenthesis) after this manner, For as &c. So &c. But the Apostle having insisted on the first part of the comparison thus farre, and finding that the grace in Christ rose much higher then the condemnation in Adam, he is fain to forsake that comparison, and to rise above a comparison, and conclude not with a [So] but with a [Not only so, but much more] thus, The gift communicated from Christ to beleivers, is farre greater then the punishment communicated from Adam to his posterity as sinners, for as they were begotten after the similitude of lapst Adam, and so were all sinners, as well as Adam, so probably were they as great sinners in other kinds, as Adam was in that, but these to whom the mercy in Christ belongs, are not righteous in such a degree, as well as Christ.

15. But not as the offence, so also is the free gift: for if through the offence of one, many * be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift † by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many.]

* died, ἀπέθανον
† through grace, that grace of one, ἡ χάρις ἡ τοῦ ἑνὸς

16. And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift; for the † judgment was by one to condemnation: but the * free gift is of many offences unto justification.]

16. And as in respect of the likenesse, the advantage is on Christ's side of the comparison, beleivers being not so like Christ in degree of holinesse, as they were like Adam in degree of sinne, so again for the sinne, for which Christ wrought atonement, the advantage is great again, on Christ's side above Adams. And not only as by Adam, so by Christ; But the benefit farre exceeded the hurt, for indeed the charge or enditement (see note on ch. 3. b.) and consequently the sentence that was on occasion of one sinne, did naturally, and by the same reason belong to the condemnation of all others, that were born after his image, sinners as well as he, but the gift that was brought in by Christ, pardon for all new creatures, was upon occasion of many sinnes, and to the justifying of those that were not righteous, as Christ, no nor as Adam, but had been guilty of more then one, even of many sinnes, And this makes the comparison again very uneven, for if as sinne was a means to bring condemnation into the world, so the same or some other one sinne had been the occasion of bringing mercy in, and pardon had been wrought for that one sinne, and no more, or for those that should for the future perfectly and exactly obey, then the comparison had been equall, but the sinnes that occasioned the mercy, and have their parts in the benefit of this justification, are many sinnes, and the persons, that should receive it, not righteous in that degree as Christ was, and that makes the comparison uneven.

* as by one man having sinned, ὡς δι' ἑνὸς ἁμαρτήσαντος † sentence on occasion of one (offence) was to condemnation ἐξ ἑνὸς εἰς κατάκριμα
* mercy was by occasion of χάρισμα ἐκ

17. For if by Adam's sinne in that one kind, death came into the world, and through that one mans loynes, and by the parity of reason, that death was entailed upon all his posterity, as being born after his image, and guilty of other sinnes, though not of that special kind; then in like manner, or rather indeed, much more, they that belcive on Christ, that receive and make use of that (most rich) grace, and righteousnesse of Christ, i.e. are holy, gracious, and righteous too, though not in his degree, and so are, according to this Evangelical way, capable of this justification, shall, by the resurrection of Christ, and by his living and interceding forever for us, be sure to reigne with him.

17. For if by one man's offence death reigned by one, much more they which receive abundance of grace, and of the gift of righteousnes, shall reigne † in life by one Jesus Christ.]

† through his life. ἐν ζωῇ

18. To conclude therefore, as by one Adam's offence v.12. and 16. sentence came on all offenders, i.e. upon all meer sonnes of Adam, to condemnation; so by the righteousnesse of one, God's gift of mercy in Christ v.17. is come on all men, Gentiles as well as Jewes, to justification, i.e. to the accepting them as just (though they formerly lived in never so sinfull a course,) if they imitate the righteousnesse of Christ by sincere renovation.

18. * Therefore, as by the offence of one † judgment came upon all men to condemnation: even so by the righteousnesse of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.]

* Therefore, I say, Ἄρα οὖν
† the sentence was v.16.

19. For as by one Adam's one act of eating the forbidden fruit, against which death was threatned, all his posterity, as such, and (much more) all that sinn'd in any other kind, i.e. all meer men in the world, were subjected to that punishment, death, which was then pronounced only against the eating of that, so by Christ's having performed exact perfect obedience, and then sustered death in our stead, or to make satisfaction for us, all men, even the Gentiles themselves, that shall come in to Christ, and perform sincere, faithfull obedience to him, shall be justified, (though they be not perfectly just) and accepted by him.

19. For as by one man's disobedience * many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall ‖ many be made righteous.]

* the many were constituted, κατεστάθησαν οἱ πολλοὶ
‖ the many be constituted, κατασταθήσονται οἱ πολλοὶ

20. As for the law (that was given by Moses) that came in by the by, as it were, to give men the more convincing clear knowledge of duty and sinne, and so consequently became a means to aggravate, and enhanse sinne (see note on Mat. 1. k.) to render it more exceedingly criminous, by being against a promulgate law, and that again is a means of making the mercy now in the Gospel to be farre a greater mercy to the Jewes, to whom Christ, and the Gospel were first sent,

20. * Moreover the law entred that † the offence might abound: but where sinne * abounded, grace did much more abound,]

* But the law, that came in betwixt, Νόμος δὲ παρεισῆλθεν † sin might be increased, πλεονάσῃ τὸ παράπτωμα
* hath been increased, grace hath more then abounded, ἐπλεόνασεν, ὑπερεπερίσσευσεν ἡ χάρις

21. That as we visibly see the great power and authority of sinne over men, by the punishment it hath brought on them, as is evident by death's seizing upon all, so it may be as visible, what a royall illustrious power there is in the mercy of Christ over sinne, in respect of this new way of justification by Christ, even to take away all its condemning and reigning power from it, by granting pardon and forgivenesse of, and victory over it, through Jesus Christ our Lord, and all this to Gentiles as well as Jewes.

21. That as sinne hath reigned † unto death, even so might grace reigne through righteousnesse unto eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.]

† through death, διὰ τοῦ θανάτου

Δικαιωθέντες Having formerly given the notion at large of δικαιοῦν to justifie, note on c.3.b. all that is here neceſſary to be added, will be by way of enquiry whether the paſſive δικαιωθέντες being juſtified] here, be only a nominal or real paſſive, i.e. whether it only note the action, as farre as concerns Chriſts part, in meriting, and obtaining Gods pardon, and acceptance for us, and God the fathers part, in admitting ſinners to pardon, giving them place of repentance, which is no more, in effect, but the offering pardon, and acceptance on the conditions of the Goſpel, Or whether to this action of the Father, and Chriſt, it farther ſuperadde the reception thereof in the patient, the actual partaking of it. For theſe two (ſomwhat diſtant) notions, the word is capable of, either 1. that we are, as farre as belongs to God's and Chriſt's part, juſtified, (the price being paid by him, and accepted by his Father) and that if we be not now actually ſo, 'tis through our own default, our non-performance of the condition; or Secondly, that we have the benefits of Chriſt's death beſtowed and conferred actually on us, pardon of ſinnes, &c. i.e. are actually juſtified. That the former is the meaning of the word here, may appear 1. by the generall drift of this chapter, which is to ſet out the love of the Father and of Chriſt toward us, v.8.&c. God commendeth his love toward us, &c. where therefore the matter is determined to that which Chriſt doth for us toward our juſtification, i.e. to his death, the ſole meritorious cauſe of it, without looking to that, which is extrinſecall to it, our performance, or non-performance of the condition, which is required on our parts to make us capable of the benefit thereof, that having been formerly (and often) mention'd, v.1. δικαιωθέντες ἐκ πίστεως, being juſtified by faith: 2dly, by that which is ſaid, v.8. we being yet ſinners Chriſt died for us, where 1. his dying for us is all one with our being juſtified by his death, as appears by the circumſtances of the context, the 8,9,10. verſes compared together, and 2dly, by ſinners meaning habituall groſſe ſinners, which is alſo expreſt by ἀσθενῶν, v.6. not weak, but ſick, even to death (ſee 1 *Cor.*8. note b.) 'tis certain that to them, continuing ſuch, actual juſtification belongs not; So again v.10. We, when we were enemies, were reconciled to God by the death of his ſon; where as death is all one with blood, ſo is reconciled to God] with [juſtified] and that belongeth to enemies, while they are ſuch, to whom yet we know by many other places, that actual pardon, and ſo actual juſtification, or reconciliation belongs not: 3dly, by comparing of this juſtification by Chriſt, with the condemnation by Adam, v.16. where Adam's condemnation belonging to all, the juſtification ſpoken of, muſt be that alſo, which belongs to all, and ſo not the actual pardon, which doth not belong to all, or to any, but thoſe who perform the condition. All which being ſuppoſed, 'tis from other places manifeſt, that ſome condition there is required of us to make us capable of this benefit of the death of Chriſt, the non-performance of which, is that which reſtrains, and limits the number of men actually juſtified, to a farre narrower compaſſe, then that which is here ſpoken of, and this condition being to be performed by us, by the means of the reſurrection, and grace of Chriſt, 'tis therefore ſaid c.4.25. that he roſe again for our juſtification, i.e. to make us capable of thoſe fruits and benefits of Chriſt's death, as well as died for our ſinnes; See note on c.3.h.

b. Διὰ τοῦτο] here being an illative form, and moſt fitly rendred [Wherefore,] makes it here neceſſary to enquire, how that which followes, is inferr'd from what went before; and the ſatisfying that enquirie will prepare for a right underſtanding of the remainder of this chapter. The former chapters had maintained the right of the Apoſtles preaching to the Gentiles, by ſhewing that God was an impartial Judge both to puniſh impenitent, foul ſins, and to reward penitence, and good living, without any partiality, whether in Jew, or Gentile, c.1 & 2. but moſt diſcernibly c.2.6. to the end, Then in the third chapter follow objections againſt this, and anſwers to them, and on occaſion of one of them, taken from the ſinfulneſs of the Gentiles, is inſerted a diſcourſe of juſtification under the Goſpel, ſhewing how that is no way prejudiced by paſt ſinnes, if they be ſincerely forſaken, nor hindred by want of circumciſion, and Moſaical obſervances. And this is inſiſted on, and exemplified, in both parts, by the ſtory of Abraham chap. 4. and then brought home to all beleivers in the former part of this chapter, From all which, as ſo many præmiſes, or mediums of probation, the concluſion is here inferr'd, but withall by comparing the juſtification by Chriſt with the condemnation by Adam, farther confirm'd and illuſtrated, in the remainder of this chapter, viz: that the mercy of God under the Goſpel belongs unlimitedly, or indefinitely to all ſorts of men, the Gentiles, as well as Jews; For the diſcerning of which, it will be needfull, that through the remainder of the chapter, an Emphaſis be laid on the univerſal forms of ſpeech, ὁ κόσμος the world, & πᾶσι ἀνθρώποις all men, v.12. ὁ κόσμος in the world, v.13. οἱ πολλοὶ the many, and εἰς τοὺς πολλούς, toward the many, v.15. and again εἰς πάντας ἀνθρώπους toward all men, twice v.18. and οἱ πολλοὶ the many, twice v.19. By all and each of which are meant in the wideſt latitude, without excluſion of any, all mankind, to whom, (Jewes and Gentiles) the mercy, and life, introduced by Chriſt, belongeth, (only on condition of new life, required of them) as the condemnation, or death in Adam, did to all his poſterity; The other difficulties in the chapter, (cauſed by ellipſes, v.15, 16, 18. by a parentheſis of two verſes, 13. 14. by a compariſon, divided one part from the other by that parentheſis, and the ſecond part of it riſing higher, then the former, and ſo neceſſarily changed from the form of a compariſon, or equality, to that of an argument à minori ad majus, from the leſſe to the greater) are explicated in the paraphraſe, and need not here farther be inſiſted on.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. VI.

1,2. Now therefore for that objection (againſt our doctrine of the Gentiles being taken in by God,) intimated ch.3.8. Doe we affirm indeed, what we are accuſed to affirm, that men may live, and continue, and go on in ſin, that by that means, the mercy of God, which we acknowledge is illuſtrated by his looking graciouſly on the Gentile ſinners, may be, in like manner, the more ſet out by pardoning the greater ſinners continued and gone on in by us Chriſtians? God forbid we ſhould make any ſuch concluſion, or make any ſuch uſe of the doctrine of God's mercy to ſinners, which we know was deſigned only to call and draw the Genriles out of their ſinfull courſes to ſincere reformation, upon this promiſe of pardon for what is paſt, Act.17.30. on condition of future amendment, and not to encourage them to continue, or to go on one minute longer in that courſe, or to flatter them with hope of impunity if they did. Certainly our doctrine is of a farre diſtant making from this, and our profeſſion of Chriſtianity moſt ſtrictly obliges us to the contrary, for our baptiſm is a vowed death to ſin, and therefore we that are baptized, muſt not in any reaſon return to, or live any longer in it, our being baptized Chriſtians obligeth us not to return to this mire again, after we are thus waſhed.

1. *What ſhall we ſay then? †ſhall we continue in ſinne, that grace may abound?

2. God forbid: *How ſhall we that are dead to ſin, live any longer therein?]

* What therefore doe we ſay? Τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν; † or, Let us continue, for the King's MS. reads ἐπιμείνωμεν * As many of us as have died to ſin, how ſhall we, Οἵτινες ἀπεθάνομεν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ πῶς

3,4. 'Tis a thing that every Chriſtian knows, that the immerſion in baptiſme referres to the death of Chriſt, the putting the perſon baptized into the water denotes and proclaims the death and buriall of Chriſt, and ſignifies our undertaking in baptiſme, that we will give over all the ſins of our former lives (which is our being buried together with Chriſt, or baptized to his death) that ſo we may live that regenerate new life (anſwerable to Chriſt's reſurrection) which conſiſts in a courſe of all ſanctity, a conſtant Chriſtian walk all our daies.

3. Know ye not that ſo many of us as were baptized into Jeſus Chriſt, were baptized into his death?]

4. Therefore we are buried with him by baptiſme into death, that like as Chriſt was raiſed up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even ſo we alſo ſhould walk in newneſſe of life.]

5. For if we have forſaken ſin, and are dead to the motions of it, and in that have imitated Chriſt's death, and thereby have been ſo graffed into Chriſt, that we are become the ſame tree with him, partaking of the ſame juice with that root, we ſhall then (but not otherwiſe certainly) have the benefits of his death, and be made partakers of his reſurrection, of the joyes and bliſſe that attend that, as the reward promiſed to us Chriſtians.

5. For if we have been planted together in the likeneſſe of his death, we ſhall be alſo in the likeneſſe of his reſurrection.]

2. 6. Reſolving this with our ſelves, that as this was one end of Chriſt's ſuffering for our ſins, and dying upon the croſſe, that he might give us example to doe ſo too, (ſee Tit.2.14.) to crucifie, i.e. forſake our former courſe of life, ſo our forſaking of ſin, and conforming our ſelves to his crucifixion, which in baptiſme we undertake, obliges us to the mortifying of every ſin, ſo farre that we no longer yeild any obedience to it, i.e. neither willingly indulge to any preſumptuous acts, nor ſlaviſhly lie down in any habit or courſe of ſin.

6. Knowing this, that our old man † is crucified with him, that the body of ſinne might be deſtroyed, * that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve ſin.]

† was crucified συνεσταυρώθη * that we ſhould no longer τοῦ μηκέτι

7. For as a man truly dead, is freed from the authority of all thoſe that in life time had power over him, ſo he that is dead to ſin (in this figurative ſenſe, wherein I now ſpeak) is freed from the power of ſin acting formerly in him, and conſequently he that hath, by being baptized into Chriſt, ſo farre undertaken to accompany Chriſt in his death, as really to die unto ſin, muſt demonſtrate himſelf to be freed from the power of it, muſt not permit it to live in him, i.e. himſelf to be acted by it, or elſe he doth quite contrary to his undertaking.

7. For he that is dead, is † freed from ſin.]

† abſolved δεδικαίωται

8. And if we ſincerely perform our part in this, if we imitate Chriſt in his death, i.e. die to ſin, forſake and never return to it again, then indeed the Chriſtian faith promiſes us ſome good, then we have grounds of beleiving that we ſhall together with him, or after his example, have a joyfull reſurrection to eternal life, But upon no other terms but theſe doe we expect or beleive any good from Chriſt.

8. Now if we be dead with Chriſt, we beleive that we ſhall alſo live with him.]

9. This being it for which we have a copie in Chriſt's reſurrection alſo, as well as in his death, viz: So to riſe to new life, as never to return to our old ſins again, as his was a reſurrection that inſtated him on an eternal life, never to come under the power of death again.

9. Knowing that Chriſt being raiſed from the dead, dieth no more, death hath no more dominion over him.]

10,11. For as when he died for our ſins, he died once, never to undergo that death again, but when he roſe from death he was immediately inſtated, not into one ſingle act of life (ſo only, as it might be truly ſaid, he was once alive after death) but no more; but into an immortal endleſſe life, a life co-immortal with the Father, God eternal, So muſt we, after that double example, of his death, and reſurrection, account our ſelves obliged by our baptiſme (which accordingly is not wont to be reiterated) ſo to die, to forſake ſin, as that we need never die any more, die one final death, never reſume our former courſes again, and on the other ſide, for our new Chriſtian life, to take care, that that be eternal, no more to return to our ſins again, then we think Chriſt or God can die again, but perſevere in all virtuous and godly living, according to the example and precepts of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who died and roſe again on purpoſe to raiſe us up to this kind of new life, never to die again.

10. *For in that he died, he died unto ſinne once: † but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

11. Likewiſe reckon ye alſo your ſelves to be dead indeed unto ſinne: but alive unto God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.]

* For that which died, died unto ſin once for all, Ὃ γὰρ ἀπέθανεν, τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ἀπέθανεν ἐφάπαξ † but that which liveth, liveth ὃ δὲ ζῇ, ζῇ

12. And ſo you now ſee what your Chriſtian duty is, whatſoever we are calumniated to affirm, that whereas your fleſh hath many ſinfull deſires, which, if they be obeyed, or obſerved, will ſet up a kingdome or dominion of ſin in you, make you ſervants and ſlaves to ſin, you are moſt ſtrictly obliged to take care, that ſin get not this dominion, that you obey it not in yeilding to, or ſatisfying the luſts or prohibited deſires of your bodies.

12. Let not ſinne reigne therefore in your mortal body, that ye ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof.]

13. Neither

* presēt your members unto sinne, weapons of unrighteousnesse, but presēt-ωσεί παρεστῶτα τὰ μέλη ὑμῶν ὅπλα ἀδικίας τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ἀλλὰ παραστήσατε

13. Neither * yeeld ye your members, as instruments of unrighteousnes unto sin, but yeeld your selves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousnes unto God.] 13. But in stead of offering up, or presenting your members unto sin, as instruments or weapons to do what sin would have done, yee must consecrate your selves unto God, as men that are raised unto new life, and therefore are fit to do him service, and your bodies as active and military instruments of performing to him all the obedience in the world.

14. For sin shall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the law, but under grace.] 14. 'Twere the vilest thing in the world for sin to have dominion over you, who are now no longer under the weak unefficacious pædagogy of the law (which could onely forbid sin, and denounce judgement, but never yeeld any man that hope of mercy on amendment, which is necessary to the working reformation on him, or checking any sin, that men are tempted to) but under a kingdom of grace, where there is pardon for sin upon repentance, and strength from heaven to repent, and so no want of ability or encouragement to amend our lives, (See note on Mat: 5. g.)

15. What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.] 15. From hence again some carnall men are ready to collect matter of security in sin: For, say they, if now under the Gospell there be pardon allowed for sin, and not condemnation (as it was under the law) for every wilfull sin we have committed, why may wee not securely sin? This is the unreasonablest conclusion, and detortion of this doctrine, very distant from the truth of it, which is, that this pardon for sin belongeth not to them that securely go on in sin, but onely to the penitent, and is offered to men that are sinners, on purpose, that, in hope of pardon upon returning, they may timely do so, and not that they may the longer continue in their course, which is the most abhorred use of God's mercy imaginable.

16. Know ye not, that to whom ye † yeeld your selves servants to obey his servants ye are, to whom ye obey, whether of sin, unto death, or of obedience, unto righteousnes?] 16. 'Tis a known thing, that he that delivers himselfe up to any man as a servant or slave, and actually serveth or obeyeth him, is to be accounted his servant, and to receive wages from him: and so it must be among you, if ye give your selves up to any sinne, to serve that, ye are slaves to sin, and must expect the wages of that service, eternal death: as on the other side, if yee deliver your selves up to serve God in obeying his commands, ye will be reputed his servants, and have the wages that belong thereto, eternall life; See 2 Tim. 4. note a.

* unto which ye were delivered up: εἰς ὃν παρεδόθητε † And being freed from sin, yee have been subjected, or made servants to righteousnes. Ἐλευθερωθέντες δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς ἁμαρτίας ἐδουλώθητε τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ * sanctification ἁγιασμὸν

17. But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sinne, but yee have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine * which was delivered to you.] 17. But 'tis a great mercy of God to you, that having been formerly the servants of sin, having lived and gone on so long in the course of sinne, ye have now cordially obey'd that summary of Christian doctrine, to the beleife and practise of which yee were delivered up, and solemnly consecrated in your baptisme, see note on Matt. 9. d.

18. † Being then made free from sin, yee became the servants of righteousnesse.] 18. And having received a manumission from that evill master, ye have given your selves up to a more ingenuous service, obliging your selves to live righteously for ever after.

19. I [b] speak after the manner of men, because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as you have yeelded your members servants to uncleannes & to iniquity unto iniquity, even so now yeeld your members servants to righteousnes unto * holines.] 19. I shall expres this by an ordinary resemblance, or I wil deal with you after the mildest and most easie equitable manner, require no more then any man would in reason require, because of the weaknes of your flesh, which I cannot expect should bear too much severity, or else, too high expressions: All that I shall say, is, that you will but have the same care of sanctity now, be but as diligent to obey the præcepts of Christ, and by that means aspire to sanctification, as you were formerly industrious in the serving of your lusts and unlawfull vile affections, to act all the villany in the world. This in all reason I must require of you, and shall require no more (though according to strict justice I might require greater care to secure your life and salvation, then to ruine and damne your selves, yee had expres't.) b.

† free men to righteousnes, ἐλεύθεροι τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ

20. For when ye were servants of sin, ye were † free from righteousnes.] 20. For (by way of ordinary distributive justice) when ye served sin, righteousnes or piety (ye know) had no whit of your service; Why then should sin now have any of your service, when you have delivered up your selves to righteousnes or Christian life, to be observant followers of that? why should ye not now abstein as strictly from all sin, as then ye did from all good? sure this the rules of justice will oblige you to.

21. What fruit had ye then in those things, whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death.] 21. And this will be much more reasonable, if ye consider the nature of your former sins, in your own experience of them, how little fruit, or benefit, or satisfaction they brought you at the very time of enjoying them, and how nothing but shame at the present remembrance of them, and how certain the conclusion is, that they will bring death upon you, whereas the serving of Christ on the other side will be matter of joy and pleasure at the present, matter of comfort and confidence after, and will bring salvation at the end.

22. But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, * ye have your fruit unto † holines, and the end everlasting life. 22. But now having given over the service of sin, (vowed your selves never to go on farther in that course) and undertaken the service of God, bring forth fruit, such as by which sanctification may daily encrease in you, and as may reap, for it's crown, eternall life.

23. For the wages of sin is death: but the gift of God is eternall life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.] 23. For according to the law, and so itill to every impenitent, the reward or payment of every deliberate sin, all that it brings in to him by way of stipend, is death, but the mercy, that is in the Gospell reacht out to all penitents, is eternall life, as it is now purchased and contrived, by what Christ Jesus our Lord hath done and suffered for us in the Gospell.

2. τὸ σῶμα

The phraſe τὸ σῶμα the body &c. hath a peculiar uſe in S. Paul, when it is joyned with a genitive caſe following, for then it paſſes into the ſignification of that which is joyned with it, and its ſelf loſes its force; The body of ſin ſignifying nothing more then ſin here, and Rom. 7. 24. σῶμα θανάτου τούτου the body of this death, no more then this death, this ſad miſerable kind of death; So σῶμα αὐτῶν, Ecclus. 7. 24. their body ſignifies them, and σῶμα Χριστοῦ Chriſt, Rom. 7. 4. and σῶμά μου me, Gal. 6. 17. and Phil. 1. 20. ſo τὸ σῶμα τῆς ταπεινώσεως ἡμῶν, Phil. 3. 21. and σῶμα δόξης αὐτοῦ, the body of our humiliation, and the body of his glory, is no more then ſimply our humiliation and his glory. So Col. 2. 11. ἀπεκδύσις τοῦ σώματος τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν τῆς σαρκός, the putting off the body of the ſins of the fleſh, is the putting off the ſins of the fleſh, or carnal ſins. And perhaps 1 Cor. 9. 27. ὑπωπιάζω τὸ σῶμά μου, I beat or cuffe my ſelf, for ſo the matter of the diſcourſe before, concerning the uſe of Chriſtian liberty, doth moſt encline us to interpret it. And all this ſeems in S. Paul to be an imitation of the Hebrews form of ſpeech, among whom the word עצם that ſignifies a body, frequently ſignifies no more then being, or identity, ſo that עצמו his body] ſignifies no more, then idem ipſe, the ſame he, So Joſ. 9. עצמכם your body, i.e. your very ſelves, or, as the Targum reads it, קריבכון, your neer kinſman, and Job 2. touch עצמו his body, the Targum reads לגרמיה himſelf, the former touches having been on his family, and goods, &c. And that place of Col. 2. 9. ἐν αὐτῷ κατοικεῖ πᾶν τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς θεότητος σωματικῶς, in him dwelleth the fulneſſe of the Godhead bodily] may ſeem capable of the ſame ſenſe, that the fulneſſe of the Godhead dwells in Chriſt by identity of his very eſſence, and ſo directly in the notion of עצמו. Ἀνθρώπινον λέγειν] here is thought to ſignifie his taking expreſſions out of common life, διὰ ἀδυναμίαν τῆς σαρκὸς ὑμῶν, in reſpect of the weakneſſe of their groſſe or carnal underſtandings, his uſing allegories and figures, and as before he had uſed proofs from ſacred types, the death and reſurrection of Chriſt applied to his purpoſe of mortification, and new life, ſo now proceeding to vulgar known ſimilitudes, taken from maſters, and ſervants, as Gal. 3. 15. And thus it may fitly be interpreted; But it may otherwiſe be rendred alſo, that the weakneſs of their fleſh be taken in reſpect of ſtrength to perform God's will, (and not to underſtand Paul's language) and conſequently the ἀνθρώπινον λέγειν] be, ſpeaking, or requiring from them moſt moderately, by way of condeſcenſion to their infirmities, requiring the leaſt that in any reaſon could be required of them, ſo as ἀνθρώπινον] ſignifies that which hath nothing extraordinary in it, or which is not common among men, and that which followes being a very equitable propoſal, this may very well be the form to introduce it.

CHAP. VII.

2. 1. But to that which is laſt ſaid ch. 6. 23. of eternal life to be had by Chriſtians through the Goſpel, ye are ready to object, Yea, but Chriſtians of your inſtitution doe not obſerve the law of Moſes, and ſo ſin contemptuouſly againſt God, that gave that law to Moſes; nay, not onely the Gentiles, that are converted to Chriſtianity, are by you permitted to neglect circumciſion &c. and not to become Proſelytes of juſtice Act. 15. but, which is more unreaſonable, the converted Jewes are taught by you

1. KNow ye not, brethren, (for I ſpeak to them that know the law) that * the [a] law hath power over a man as long as he liveth?]

* or the law of the Man hath power, or force, ὁ νόμος κυριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου

that that they need not observe the law of Moses (see Act. 21. 21. and note b. on the title of this Epistle) and then how can the Gospel help them to eternall life, thus thus offend against the prescript law of God? To this third head of objections the Apostle in the beginning of this chapter gives a perspicuous answer, affirming (that which was now necessary to be declared, though perhaps formerly it had not been affirmed to the Jewes at Rom.) that they were now no longer obliged to observance of the ceremonies of the Mosaical law; Which being to Paul revealed from heaven Ephes. 3. 3. among the many revelations, which he had received, 2 Cor. 12. 7. he thus declares to them, preparing them first by shewing the reasonablenesse of it, by the similitude of an husband and a wife; My brethren of the stock, of Abraham, ye cannot but know the quality, or nature of those lawes which give one person interest in, or power over another, (for I suppose you instructed therein, by frequent hearing, and reading of the books of Moses) that any such law stands in force, as long as the person, that hath that interest, liveth.

* the living husband, τῷ ζῶντι ἀνδρὶ

2. For the woman, which hath an husband, is bound by the law to * her husband, so long as he liveth: but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of the husband.]

2. For it is known of any married woman that by the conjugal law she is obliged to cleave to the husband as long as he lives, but upon the husband's death the conjugal law, which is founded in his life, is dead also, and so the wife is absolutely free, the law of matrimony hath no force upon her, see Gal. 5 4.

† she be to another γενομένη ἀνδρὶ

3. So then, if, while her husband liveth, † she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteresse: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law, so that she is no adulteresse, though she be married to another man.]

3. And this is so farre from being a nicety, that indeed matters of the greatest importance depend upon it, For if while her husband liveth, she yeild her self to any other, she is acknowledgedly guilty of adultery, But if her husband be dead she may freely marry any other man, and live with him conjugally, and be as innocent in so doing, as if she had never had former husband.

* may be to another γενέσθαι ἑτέρῳ † may

4. Wherefore, my brethren, ye also [b] are become dead to the law by the body of Christ, that ye * should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we † should bring forth fruit unto God.]

4. And thus (my brethren, even those of the Jewes that are beleivers in Christ) the law is through Christ dead to you also, (and not only to the Gentile beleivers, Act 15.) and so ye also are freed, from the obligation of the law, i.e. as it were dead to it, that ye may now according to the laws of marriage, be safely joyned, and espoused to another, viz: to that Christ, whose resurrection from the dead shewes him to be alive, that so ye may live in conjugal affection, and obedience to him, and being made fruitfull by his Spirit, we may, as wives that live with their husbands, bring forth all holy Christian actions to the honour and praise of God.

* affections παθήματα † are by † were wrought ἐνηργεῖτο † so as to bring forth fruit, εἰς τὸ καρποφορῆσαι

c.

5. For when [c] we were in the flesh, the * motions of sins, which † were by the law, * did work in our members † to bring forth fruit unto death.]

5. This, while we lived under the pædagogie of the law, was not done by us, (which is one reason of abolishing it, Christ now giving precepts of inward purity, in stead of those externall ordinances, and giving his Spirit to enable to perform them, over, and above what was under the law;) For when we were under those carnal ordinances, though all sinfull practises were forbidden by that law, and so were rendred more criminous by being prohibited by a promulgate law, yet our sinfull desires and affections, that proposed those objects, which were thus forbidden, that law had no power to mortifie and subdue, and so notwithstanding that law, those sinfull affections were obeyed, and yeilded to in our members, and so brought forth that sad fruit, obligation to punishment eternal, and that was all the good we reapt by the law.

6. But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held, that we should serve in newnesse of spirit, and not in the oldnesse of the letter.]

6. But now we are freed from the law as that (beside the morall precepts) contain'd also those carnal external performances, (see Mat. 5. g.) that obligation being cancelled, by which they were due, so that now in stead of being outwardly circumcised, and in our lives impure, we must think our selves most strictly obliged to set to the performing of that real substantial purity which was signified by the legal observances of circumcision, &c. serving Christ in new life, and Evangelical obedience, (see ch. 8. 1.) in lieu of that external bloody obedience, which the law of Moses (written of old by Gods appointment, and so here called the writing or the letter) did then require of all Jewes. See note on Mat. 5. g.

* say we, see ch. 4. a. † nay but I had not known the sin ἀλλὰ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔγνων * coveting, lusting

d. e.

7. What * shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. † Nay, [d] I had not known sinne but by the law: for I had not known * [e] lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet.]

7. But here again it is objected to us, that by thus arguing we lay charge and blame upon the law, that it is sin, or the cause of sin, contenting it self with that external performance of the ceremony, and not exacting the inward purity of us: To this I answer by way of detestation of that calumny, of which our doctrine is perfectly guiltlesse: No sure, we lay no such thing to the charge of the law, we should be most unjust, if we did. For the law hath done its part, given us knowledge that the very desires of the heart are sins (and that distinctly in the tenth commandement) which I had not known, had not the law distinctly told me that it was so, and set circumcision as an embleme of that duty of mortifying all carnall desires.

† receiving advantage ἀφορμὴν λαβοῦσα * coveting or lusting ἐπιθυμίαν † in

8. But sin † taking occasion by the commandement, wrought in me all * manner of concupiscence: for without the law sin † was dead.]

8. But the law having indeed onely given me the prohibition, and that ceremony to fence it, and no more, and in this particular of covetng, not so much as denouncing any present legal infliction upon the commission of it, The customary sins of men, seeing there was no punishment assigned to this sin (i.e. being only forbid by the law without any annexation of punishment) took an advantage by the lawes only prohibiting, and not punishing this sin, and so perswading me, that the external ceremony of circumcision (which was commanded under penalty of excision) would serve the turn, without any more, invaded me, and wrought in me all inward impurity, which as it would not so probably have been able to doe, if the law, that mentioned this prohibition, had fortified it with denunciation of punishment (as in other cases) or if indeed the trusting on the external performance, the privilege of being circumcised, had not given men some security and confidence, that nothing should be able to doe them hurt, (deprive them of the favour of God, that were thus circumcised) so would it not have been neer so criminous, if it had not been distinctly prohibited by the law, For it is a known truth, that the criminousnesse, and punishablenesse of any act arises from its being prohibited by some law.

* I indeed lived ἐγὼ ἔζων ποτέ

9. For * I was alive without the law once, but when the commandement came, sin revived, and I dyed.]

9. The people indeed of the Jewes lived formerly without the law, (see note d.) i. e. before the promulgation of it, but as soon as the law was given the the ſin of diſobeying a promulgate law, became greater, and ſo their guilt and puniſhment alſo, that ſtill committed what was thus forbidden, and ſo that was all the benefit they made of the law.

10. And the law, which was meant to keep them ſinleſs, and ſo to bring them to life, being not obeyed, did in the iſſue of it bring onely death on them.

10. And the commandement, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death.]

11. For the law præſcribing circumciſion under penalty of excifion, but not præſcribing the inward purity under that threat (nor denouncing any preſent judiciall puniſhment upon the commiſſion of the contrary ſin) but onely prohibiting it, and no more, ſinne took advantage by this impunity of the law, and firſt ſeduced me to inward impurity, and then by occaſion of the commandement which forbad it, and ſo made it criminous, inſnared and wounded me to death.

11. For ſin taking † occaſion by the commandement, deceived me, and by it ſlew me.]

† advantage v. 8.

12. And ſo the objection v. 7. was a groundleſs objection, for though the Moſaicall law were the occaſion of ſin (or were made advantage of by ſin) yet it was not the cauſe, and ſo ſtill that law is holy, (and the Commandement againſt coveting, holy) juſt, and good, firſt holy, or pure from all allowance of impurity, and ſo ſecondly, juſt in allowing no manner of injuſtice, and thirdly, good as requiring charity to others, and ſo no manner of colour or tincture of ill in it; (onely 'twas not ſo highly perfect in any of theſe reſpects, 'twas not fill'd up to ſo high a pitch, as is now by Chriſt required of us.)

12. * Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandement holy, and juſt, and good.]

* So that ἄρα

13. Was therefore this good law guilty of death to me, was it the cauſe of bringing it on me? No, not ſo neither; but ſin was that onely cauſe, which is guilty of all. And ſo (ſee note on Mat. 1. k.) this is a means of ſetting out ſin in it's colours, that it works deſtruction to men by that which is good, and ſo ſin it ſelfe is by this means extremely aggravated, and making this uſe of the law, it becomes extremely or ſuperlatively ſinfull, or, the law ſhewes me what a ſinfull thing ſinne is.

13. † Was that then, which is good, made death unto me? God forbid. But ſinne, that it might appear ſinne, working death * in me by that which is good, that ſin by the commandement might become exceeding ſinfull.]

† Hath then that which is good become to me death? Τὸ οὖν ἀγαθὸν ἐμοὶ γέγονε θάνατος; * to me, μοι

f. 14. And the reaſon why the effect of the law is ſo contrary to what was intended by it, is this, that the law is ſpirituall, and not performable by a carnall man, but the carnality of men (ſold under ſinne, i. e. habituall ſlaves to ſinne, ready to do all that it bids them, though the law never ſo diſtinctly prohibite) that is the cauſe of all.

14. For we know that the law is ſpiritual, but I am carnall, ſold under ſinne.]

15. For ſuch men as I now ſpeak of, carnall men v. 14. though they are taught their duty by the law, yet do they not by the dictate of their underſtanding or conſcience, that which they do, it is not that which in conſent to the law they approve, but that which by their conſcience, directed, and inſtructed by the law, they hate and diſlike, that they do.

15. For that which I do, I † allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I.]

† know γινώσκω

16. And this very thing is an argument, that the law is acknowledg'd to be good, that they diſlike that which they do in diſobedience to the law, they never commit any prohibited evill, but their conſcience accuſes and ſmites them for it.

16. If then I do that which I would not, I conſent unto the law, that it is good.]

17. And ſo 'tis not the whole they that commits ſinne, or they as they are led and inſtructed by the law (and ſo the law ſtill is vindicated from the charge v. 7.) but it is their carnality reſiſting the law, or ſin having gotten power over them, and ſo carrying them in deſpight of the law, and conſcience admoniſhing the contrary.

17. * Now then it is † no more I that do it, but ſinne that dwelleth in me.]

* But now Νυνὶ δὲ
† no longer οὐκέτι

18. For in men whoſe affections are not mortified by the ſpirit of Chriſt, but carnally diſpoſed, or led by their own corrupt cuſtomes, 'tis not the law, or knowing their duty that will do any good on them, To approve indeed, or like that which is good, the law enableth them, but the carnal affections do ſtill ſuggeſt the contrary, and carry them in deſpight of the prohibitions of the law.

18. For I know that in me (that is, in my fleſh) * dwelleth no good thing: for to will is preſent † with me, but * how to perform that which is good I finde not.]

* good dwelleth not οἰκεῖ οὐκ ἀγαθὸν † to me, μοι
* or, not to do that which is good. for the King's MS. readeth τὸ δὲ κατεργάζεσθαι οὐ πάλιν, ὅ,

19. And this is clear by the experiment, for they do not perform that good, which as the law commands, ſo they conſent to be good, but the evill which they conſent not to be good, and which the law tells them they ſhould not do, that they do.

19. For the good that I would, I do not, but the evill which I would not, that I do.]

20. Which plainly argues the truth of that which was ſaid v. 15. and 17. (and is full anſwer to the objection againſt the law, v. 7.) that the law is farre from being guilty of their ſin, and that 'tis not they by the duct and dictate of the law, (or their own conſcience guided by the law, that do evill; but carnality or cuſtome of ſinne, that hath got ſuch a ſway or power over them.

20. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but ſin that dwelleth in me.]

21. By this then you may diſcern the law and the goodneſs, and the energy or force of it, that when carnality moves men to evill, the minde illuminated by the law enclines them to good; or, that evill, when it is repreſented to them, findes them inclined to the contrary.

21. I finde then * a law, that when I would do good, evill is preſent with me.]

† the law that, or, in that τὸν νόμον, ὅτι

22. For according to the underſtanding, or ſuperiour faculty (contrary to the carnal, or bodily part of them) they are pleaſed with all thoſe things, that the law of God is pleaſed with.

22. For I † delight in the law of God, after the inward man.]

* have the ſame delight with, συνήδομαι τῷ

23. But there is another commanding power in the members, which ſets it ſelf in direct oppoſition to thoſe dictates of the law in the mind, which in carnall men, v. 14. gets the better of the day, carries them captive ſlaves, to doe what the fleſh requires to have done by them.

23. But I ſee another law in my members, warring againſt the law of my minde, and bringing me into captivity to the law of ſin, which is in my members.]

24. O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death?] 24. This is a ſad condition, (the very ſtate of a carnal man under the law,) and out of which the law cannot reſcue any man, nor from the deſtruction that attends it.

* the ſame I with my mind, αὐτὸς ἐγὼ τῷ νοΐ 25. I thank God through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. So then * with the mind I my ſelf ſerve the law of God, but with the fleſh the law of ſinne.] 25. (Yet, bleſſed be God, by the grace and ſtrength of Jeſus Chriſt, ch.6.23. there is a way to get out of this curſed eſtate, 1. pardon to every penitent ſinner, which may encourage any to break off this eſtate of ſin, and 2. grace and ſtrength in Chriſt, to perform what God in Chriſt will accept, i. e. ſincere, though not perfect obedience, (the thing affirmed v.6. and reſumed at the beginning of Chap. 8.) So then the concluſion of this digreſſion from v.7. to this place, is, that the bare knowledge of the law of Moſes doth only direct the underſtanding, what is the duty; which notwithſtanding, the carnal man accuſtomed to his own waies of ſin, may think fit ſtill to go on in them, and ſo (though one and the ſame perſon) doth two things at once, with his underſtanding he ſerves the law of God, is delighted and pleaſed with thoſe things, wherewith that is delighted, and yet at the ſame time with the fleſh ſubmits to the ſuggeſtions and cuſtomary actions of the fleſh, and falls into ſins directly contrary to the ſuggeſtions of his conſcience, and the law in it, and this is juſtly rewarded with death, ch.6.23.

Notes on Chap. VII.

2. ὁ νόμος ἀνδρὶ ὑποτέτακται τῇ ζώσῃ

The conſtruction and meaning of theſe words [ὁ νόμος ἀνδρὶ ὑπ' ἔσον χρόνον ζῇ, which are commonly rendred, the law hath power over a man as long as he liveth] is ſomewhat uncertain; and for the determining of it, The firſt thing to be conſidered, is the deſigne, and matter of the diſcourſe in this chapter, Which is diſcernibly this, to vindicate his doctrine (charged on him *Act.*21.21. it is not certain, whether then truly, or no, but without doubt now profeſſedly taught by him,) that the Judaical law was aboliſhed by the death of Chriſt, *Epheſ.*2.15,16. *Col.*2.14. and ſo now was not obligatory to a Jew. This he now thinks fit to declare to the Jewiſh Chriſtians at Rome, as in the former chapters he had vindicated the liberty of the Gentiles from the obligation of it to them, and juſtified his preaching the Goſpel to them, both which together did, by way of interpretation, and neceſſary conſequence, contain under them this of the obligingneſſe of the law to a Jew, For the law of the Jews commanding a ſtrict ſeparation from the Gentiles, all that were not their proſelytes, and circumciſed, and Paul, and other the Apoſtles being Jewes, their converſing with, and preaching to the Gentiles, could not be allow'd upon any ſcore, but that of the abrogation of the Jewiſh law, which accordingly was of neceſſity to be revealed to S. Peter, in a viſion, *Act.*10. (and ſo ſeems to have been to S. Paul, *Epheſ.*3.3.) before he durſt preach to Cornelius, who, though a proſelyte of the Jewes, yet was not a proſelyte of their Covenant, or righteouſneſs, i.e. was not circumciſed. This abolition of the law [to you] i.e. to his brethren, the Jewes v.4. and to the ἡμᾶς τε v.6. i.e. to S. Paul, and thoſe he ſpeaks to, i.e. to them that know the law v.1. and ſo ſtill to the Jew-Chriſtians at Rome, is here evidently proclaimed, ver.4. and 6. And therefore in all probability that muſt be the importance of theſe words, which may moſt directly prepare, and contribute to the inferring of that concluſion. To which end firſt it is neceſſary, that εἰς ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ

[εἰς ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ] muſt be rendred, as long as he the man (not as it) liveth, This appeareth by the inſtance v.2. by which that which is ſaid v.1. is exemplified, ἡ ὑπανδρος γυνὴ τῷ ζῶντι ἀνδρὶ δέδεται νόμῳ, The woman which hath an husband is by

ἀνδρὶ ζῶντι

the (conjugal) law bound to the living husband, where the husband is the perſon, whoſe life is conſidered in this caſe, who, as long as he lives, hath power over his wife, and ſo long the wife by law is bound unto him, but if he die, ſhe is free, &c. By this alſo it is manifeſt in the ſecond place, that the man which is meant in the latter part of this firſt verſe [as long as he liveth] cannot be the perſon, on whom the law hath power, or force, but ſome other, who by law hath power and authority veſted in him, For it is apparent, v.2, and 3. that the life, or death of the perſon under ſubjection, is not the thing taken into conſideration, and if it were, it would not tend to the inferring of the deſigned concluſion, for the Jewes could not be ſuppoſed to be dead, but the law, that had power over them, and though v.4. the word [ἐθανατώθητε you are put to death] may make that ſeem poſſible to be here meant, yet the contrary being ſo evident by the whole drift of the diſcourſe, it is certain that [ἀπεθάνετε τῷ νόμῳ there, you are put to death to the law] muſt be interpreted, as a figurative ſpeech, to ſignifie [the law is put to death to you, As when καταργεῖσθαι ſignifies to be made of no void, to be evacuated, or cancelled, and ſo is all one with being put to death, (and is ſo uſed *Epheſ.*2.15. καταργήσας νόμον, having cancell'd the law, all one with ἐξαλείψας having blotted it out, *Col.*2.14. & προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ having nayled it to the croſſe) we read of the woman v.2. κατήργηται ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου τοῦ ἀνδρός, which would literally be rendred, ſhe is cancell'd from the law of the husband, but indeed ſignifies, the law of the husband is cancell'd, or ceaſeth to be in force to her, and ſo v.6. κατηργήμεθα τῷ νόμῳ, we are cancelled to the law, ſignifies, the law is cancelled to us. Which being thus farre deduced, it remaineth in the third place, that the former part of the words, [ὁ νόμος κυριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου] muſt either thus be rendred [the law of the man hath power, or force, or remains valid] (joyning [τοῦ ἀνθρώπου of the man] to [νόμος law] not to κυριεύει hath power,) Or elſe, (becauſe the word [ἀνθρώπου] is otherwiſe placed, being affixt to κυριεύει] and indeed κυριεύει] properly governs a genitive caſe, and is uſed with one, *Lu.*22.25. juſt as here it will be, if τοῦ ἀνθρώπου be governed by it) it is poſſible that the word [man] which is the [he] in the latter part, may be implied and underſtood (though not ſpecified) in the word ὁ νόμος law] thereby ſignifying not law in generall, but more ſpecially any law, which conveyeth a right, or giveth power, or dominion to one man over another; according to the primitive notion of νόμος law, from νέμω diſtribuo, noting an aſſignation, or diſtribution of every mans right unto him, (and ſo νόμος ver.2. evidently ſignifies the conjugal law, which ſubjects, and binds the wife to the husband) for of ſuch a law it will be truly ſaid, that κυριεύει

† no longer οὐκέτι

18. For in men whoſe affections are not mortified by the ſpirit of Chriſt, but carnally diſpoſed, or led by their own corrupt cuſtomes, 'tis not the law, or knowing their duty that will do any good on them, To approve indeed, or like that which is good, the law enableth them, but the carnal affections do ſtill ſuggeſt the contrary, and carry them in deſpight of the prohibitions of the law.

18. For I know that in me (that is, in my fleſh) * dwelleth no good thing: for to will is preſent † with me, but * how to perform that which is good I finde not.]

* good dwelleth not οὐκ οἰκεῖ ἀγαθὸν † to me, μοι
* or, not to do that which is good, for the King's MS. reades τὸ δὲ κατεργάζεσθαι οὐ καλὸν, ὅ,

19. And this is clear by the experiment, for they do not perform that good, which as the law commands, ſo they conſent to be good, but the evill which they conſent not to be good, and which the law tells them they ſhould not do, that they do.

20. Which plainly argues the truth of that which was ſaid v. 15. and 17. (and is full anſwer to the objection againſt the law, v. 7.) that the law is farre from being guilty of their ſin, and that 'tis not they by the duct and dictate of the law, for their own conſcience guided by the law, that do evill; but carnality or cuſtome of ſinne, that hath got ſuch a ſway or power over them.

20. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but ſin that dwelleth in me.]

21. By this then you may diſcern the law and the goodneſs, and the energy or force of it, that when carnality moves men to evill, the minde illuminated by the law enclines them to good; or, that evill, when it is repreſented to them, findes them inclined to the contrary.

21. I finde then * a law, that when I would do good, evill is preſent with me.]

† the law that, or, in that τὸν νόμον, ὅτι

22. For according to the underſtanding, or ſuperiour faculty (contrary to the carnal, or bodily part of them) they are pleaſed with all thoſe things, that the law of God is pleaſed with.

22. For I † delight in the law of God, after the inward man.]

* have the ſame delight with, συνήδομαι τῷ

23. But there is another commanding power in the members, which ſets it ſelf in direct oppoſition to thoſe dictates of the law in the mind, which in carnall men, v. 14. gets the better of the day, carries them captive ſlaves, to doe what the fleſh requires to have done by them.

23. But I ſee another law in my members, warring againſt the law of my minde, and bringing me into captivity to the law of ſin, which is in my members.]

24. O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death?] 24. This is a ſad condition, (the very ſtate of a carnal man under the law,) and out of which the law cannot reſcue any man, nor from the deſtruction that attends it.

* the ſame I with my mind, αὐτὸς ἐγὼ τῷ νοΐ 25. I thank God through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. So then * with the mind I my ſelf ſerve the law of God, but with the fleſh the law of ſinne.] 25. (Yet, bleſſed be God, by the grace and ſtrength of Jeſus Chriſt, ch.6.23. there is a way to get out of this curſed eſtate, 1. pardon to every penitent ſinner, which may encourage any to break off this eſtate of ſin, and 2. grace and ſtrength in Chriſt, to perform what God in Chriſt will accept, i.e. ſincere, though not perfect obedience, (the thing affirmed v.6. and reſumed at the beginning of Chap. 8.) So then the concluſion of this digreſſion from v.7. to this place, is, that the bare knowledge of the law of Moſes doth only direct the underſtanding, what is the duty; which notwithſtanding, the carnal man accuſtomed to his own waies of ſin, may think fit ſtill to go on in them, and ſo (though one and the ſame perſon) doth two things at once, with his underſtanding he ſerves the law of God, is delighted and pleaſed with thoſe things, wherewith that is delighted, and yet at the ſame time with the fleſh ſubmits to the ſuggeſtions and cuſtomary actions of the fleſh, and falls into ſins directly contrary to the ſuggeſtions of his conſcience, and the law in it, and this is juſtly rewarded with death, ch.6.23.

Notes on Chap. VII.

2. ὁ νόμος κυριεύει τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ

The conſtruction and meaning of theſe words [ὁ νόμος κυριεύει ἀνθρώπου ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ, which are commonly rendred, the law hath power over a man as long as he liveth] is ſomewhat uncertain; and for the determining of it, The firſt thing to be conſidered, is the deſigne, and matter of the diſcourſe in this chapter, Which is diſcernibly this, to vindicate his doctrine (charged on him *Act.*21.21. it is not certain, whether then truly, or no, but without doubt now profeſſedly taught by him,) that the Judaical law was aboliſhed by the death of Chriſt, *Epheſ.*2.15,16. *Col.*2.14. and ſo now was not obligatory to a Jew. This he now thinks fit to declare to the Jewiſh Chriſtians at Rome, as in the former chapters he had vindicated the liberty of the Gentiles from the obligation of it to them, and juſtified his preaching the Goſpel to them, both which together did, by way of interpretation, and neceſſary conſequence, contain under them this of the obligingneſſe of the law to a Jew, For the law of the Jews commanding a ſtrict ſeparation from the Gentiles, all that were not their proſelytes, and circumciſed, and Paul, and other the Apoſtles being Jewes, their converſing with, and preaching to the Gentiles, could not be allow'd upon any ſcore, but that of the abrogation of the Jewiſh law, which accordingly was of neceſſity to be revealed to S.Peter, in a viſion, *Act.*10. (and ſo ſeems to have been to S.Paul, *Epheſ.*3.3.) before he durſt preach to Cornelius, who, though a proſelyte of the Jewes, yet was not a proſelyte of their Covenant, or righteouſneſs, i.e. was not circumciſed. This abolition of the law [to you] i.e. to his brethren, the Jewes v.4. and to the ἡμᾶς τοὺς v.6. i.e. to S. Paul, and thoſe he ſpeaks to, i.e. to them that know the law v.1. and ſo ſtill to the Jew-Chriſtians at Rome, is here evidently proclaimed, ver.4. and 6. And therefore in all probability that muſt be the importance of theſe words, which may moſt directly prepare, and contribute to the inferring of that concluſion. To which end firſt it is neceſſary, that ἐπὶ ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ

[εἰς ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ] muſt be rendred, as long as he the man (not as it) liveth, This appeareth by the inſtance v.2. by which that which is ſaid v.1. is exemplified, ἡ ὑπανδρος γυνὴ τῷ ζῶντι ἀνδρὶ δέδεται νόμῳ, The woman which hath an husband is by

ἀνδρὶ ζῶντι

the (conjugal) law bound to the living husband, where the husband is the perſon, whoſe life is conſidered in this caſe, who, as long as he lives, hath power over his wife, and ſo long the wife by law is bound unto him, but if he die, ſhe is free, &c. By this alſo it is manifeſt in the ſecond place, that the man which is meant in the latter part of this firſt verſe [as long as he liveth] cannot be the perſon, on whom the law hath power, or force, but ſome other, who by law hath power and authority veſted in him, For it is apparent, v.2, and 3. that the life, or death of the perſon under ſubjection, is not the thing taken into conſideration, and if it were, it would not tend to the inferring of the deſigned concluſion, for the Jewes could not be ſuppoſed to be dead, but the law, that had power over them, and though v.4. the word [ἐθανατώθητε you are put to death] may make that ſeem poſſible to be here meant, yet the contrary being ſo evident by the whole driſt of the diſcourſe, it is certain that [ἀπεθάνετε τῷ νόμῳ there, you are put to death to the law] muſt be interpreted, as a figurative ſpeech, to ſignifie [the law is put to death to you, As when καταργεῖσθαι ſignifies to be made ἀργὸν void, to be evacuated, or cancelled, and ſo is all one with being put to death, (and is ſo uſed *Epheſ.*2.15. καταργήσας νόμον, having cancell'd the law, all one with ἐξαλείψας having blotted it out, *Col.*2.14. & προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ having nayled it to the croſſe) we read of the woman v.2. κατήργηται ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου τοῦ ἀνδρός, which would literally be rendred, ſhe is cancell'd from the law of the husband, but indeed ſignifies, the law of the husband is cancell'd, or ceaſeth to be in force to her, and ſo v.6. κατηργήμεθα τῷ νόμῳ, we are cancelled to the law, ſignifies, the law is cancelled to us. Which being thus farre deduced, it remaineth in the third place, that the former part of the words, [ὁ νόμος κυριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου] muſt either thus be rendred [the law of the man hath power, or force, or remains valid] (joyning [τοῦ ἀνθρώπου of the man] to [νόμος law] not to κυριεύει hath power,) Or elſe, (becauſe the word [ἀνθρώπου] is otherwiſe placed, being affixt to κυριεύει] and indeed κυριεύει] properly governs a genitive caſe, and is uſed with one, *Lu.*22.25. juſt as here it will be, if τοῦ ἀνθρώπου be governed by it) it is poſſible that the word [man] which is the [he] in the latter part, may be implied and underſtood (though not ſpecified) in the word ὁ νόμος law] thereby ſignifying not law in generall, but more ſpecially any law, which conveyeth a right, or giveth power, or dominion to one man over another; according to the primitive notion of νόμος law, from νέμω diſtribuo, noting an aſſignation, or diſtribution of every mans right unto him, (and ſo νόμος ver.2. evidently ſignifies the conjugal law, which ſubjects, and binds the wife to the husband) for of ſuch a law it will be truly ſaid, that κυριεύει τῆς

ἐθανατώθητε τῷ νόμῳ

καταργεῖσθαι

τῦ ἀνδρός, it is in validity, or force over the man, (meaning the subject,) as long as he, i.e. the owner, or the Lord liveth. That this is the true sense and aime of the words is unquestionable, and the latter way of expressing it seems to be the most cõmodious and easie, though the former may possibly be it, (by an easie, and ordinary ἀνάκολουθον) and then [νόμῳ τῦ ἀνδρός the law of the man] will be a fit phrase to signifie any such law, wherein mens interests are concerned, municipall, or humane laws, which are in force till they be abolished legally.

Νομῷ τῦ ἀνδρός

b. That [ἀπεθανετε τῷ νόμῳ you are dead to the law] signifies the laws being dead to them, being abolished, having no power over them, hath been said, (note a.) and may farther appear by v.6. where the ground of their freedome from the law is expresst, by ἀποθανόντες ἐν ᾧ κατειχόμεθα that being dead by which we were held] where the law being by an ordinary prosopopœia (as when sin is said to reigne c.6.12.) used for a person, is said to be dead, (and to be nayl'd to Christ's crosse, *Col.*2.14) and so under the fiction of a person, is more fitly answerable to the husband, whose death frees the wife from all obligation to him, that she may lawfully marry, and subject her self to any other, and so in like manner may Jewes to Christ. upon the abolition of their law. As for the [διὰ τῦ σώματος τῦ Χριστῦ, by the body of Christ] by which the Judaical law is abolished, that sure notes the crucified body, the death of Christ, and is accordingly expresst in this very matter Ephes. 2. both ἐν τῷ σαρκὶ αὐτῦ by his flesh, v.15. and διὰ τῦ σταυρῦ by the crosse, ver.16. and so *Col.*2.14. by προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ nayling to the crosse.

Ἐθανατώθη τῷ νόμῳ

Διὰ σώματος τῦ Χριστῦ

c. That ὅτε ἦμεν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, when we were in the flesh] signifies the Judaical state, under the law, appears by the whole discourse in this chapter, which is of the state of men considered under the law (see note d.) and particularly by the opposition here betwixt this, and κατηργήθημεν ἀπὸ τῦ νόμου, we are freed from the law, For so 'tis manifest the opposition stands, For when wee were in the flesh—— But now we are freed from the law,—— And it is thus styled, in opposition to ἐν πνεύματι ὄντι, being in the spirit, used for them that have received the Gospel, and are partakers of the grace, which is afforded there, to which they that have not attained, but are only under the pædagogie of the law, they are only in the flesh, have no other but that weak, and corrupt principle of their own nature (which is so prone to carnality) abiding in them; And thus it is used c.8.8. They that are in the flesh, cannot please God, but you are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, if so be the spirit of God dwelleth in you, i. e. if, as ye are outwardly professors of the faith, baptized Christians, so ye are sincerely so, such as in whom the holy Spirit of God may vouchsafe to inhabit, which will not abide when unrighteousnesse cometh in. And accordingly Christianity is call'd the law of the Spirit of life, ch.8.2. and here v.6. the newnesse of the Spirit, in opposition to the oldnesse of the letter, the Mosaical law. And a peculiar propriety there is in this phrase for this matter in many respects, 1. in respect of the nature of the Mosaical precepts, which were external, washings. circumcision, bodily rests, &c. (all which are seated in the flesh) and so proportionably carnal promises, and threats, whereas the precepts of Christ go deeper to the mind, and spirit, require the purity of that, and accordingly are backt with spiritual promises and terrors, Secondly in respect of the assistance, that Christ affords toward his obedience, by giving of his spirit, to assist (if it be not grieved, and resisted) our spirits, in opposition to which the state under the law having none of that strength joyned with it, may justly be called the being in the flesh. To which may be added, that one eminent effect of the Spirits descending, was the commissionating of the Apostles for their office of preaching to the Gentile world remission of sinnes upon repentance, and in opposition to that, the law allowing no place for repentance for any presumptuous sin, but inflicting present punishment on the offender, that state may be fitly styled being in the flesh. Mean while as there is a difference betwixt the weakness of the natural estate considered without any other aid, then what the law affordeth, and the sinfulness of carnal acts, and habits continued, and indulged to, and on the other side, betwixt the state of a baptized Christian, afforded the grace, and strength of Christ, and of him that makes use of that grace, and leads a pure Christian life. So the being ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, in the flesh, differs from living, or walking κατὰ σάρκα, after, or according to the flesh, and on the other side, being in the Spirit, or being in Christ, from walking after the Spirit; All which phrases are to be met with here, and in the next chapter. Here and ch.8.9. we have [being in the flesh,] and κατὰ σάρκα ὄντες, they that are after the flesh, v.5. i.e. under the law, not elevated above the flesh, or rescued out of the power of it by Christ, and c.8.1. walking after the flesh, (and so v.4.& 12. all in the same sense) for going on in a carnal course, obeying and following the flesh in the lusts thereof. And so c.8.9 being in the Spirit, or having the Spirit of Christ, and being in Christ Jesus, v.2. all to the same sense, of having the Spirit of Christ bestowed on us, which as it enableth, so it obligeth us to walk, and lead a Christian life, and if we doe so, then that is περιπατεῖν κατὰ πνεῦμα walking after the Spirit, v.1.& 4. All which must thus nicely be distinguished, or else they will be apt to betray to some mistake.

Ὅτε ἦμεν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ

d. It is an ordinary figure to speak of other men in the first person, but most frequent in blaming, or noting any fault in others, For then by the putting it in this disguise, fastning it on ones own person, it is more likely to be well taken by them, to whom it belongs. So saith S. Chrysostome of this Apostle, Αἰ τὰ φορτικὰ δεῖ τῦ ἰδιώτου σχηματίζει, when he mentions things that are any way grievous, or likely to be ill taken, he doth it in his own person. And S. Hierome on Daniel, Peccata populi enumerat personâ suâ, quod & Apostolum in Epistolâ ad Romanos facere legimus, Confessing the sins of the people, he doth it in his own person, which we read practised by the Apostle in the Epistle to the Romans, that is, most probably, in this place. Thus when 1 *Cor.*4.4. S. Paul had spoken in his own person, I know nothing by my self, but hereby I am not justified, he tells them plainly v.6. that he had in a figure transferred these things unto himself for their sakes, that they might not be puffe up, as counting such schemes, and figures, as these, the most profitable and efficacious on the Reader. Thus the same Apostle, 1 *Cor.*6.12. All things are lawfull to me, but all things are not expedient, i. e. those things which are by you look'd on as indifferent, if they be yeilded to, may be very hurtfull in you, and 1 *Cor.*13.2. If I have all faith, and have not charity, i.e. if ye want charity to your other gifts, So *Gal.*2. 18. If what I have destroyed I build the same again, I make my self a transgressor, i.e. Whosoever doth so, or, whensoever ye doe so, it must needs be a fault in you. Thus *Rom.*3.7. If the truth of God have abounded by my lie unto his glory, why am I also judged as a sinner? Which words are certainly the personating of an impious objecter, which speaks, or disputes thus not of the Apostle himself. And the same scheme or fashion of speaking, or writing is very frequent among all Authors; And that it must be so taken here may appear by these evidences, 1. by v.9. ἔζων ποτὲ. Ἐγὼ δὲ ζῶν ποτὲ, I indeed once lived without the law, which can with no appearance of truth be affirmed of Paul's person, who was born, and brought up a Jew in the knowledge of the Mosaical law and must therefore be the personating of a man first considered without, then with the law, to whom because the law is given in the second person, μὴ ἐπιθυμήσεις, Thou shalt not covet, v.7. therefore he, to whom it is given, is in the following verses fitly set down in the first person, [I,] being relative to the [thou] antecedent. 2^dly. By the severalls affirmed in this chapter which cannot belong to S. Paul, For that Paul was at the writing of this, a reformed, regenerate person there is no doubt, and they which would have it spoken by him in his own person, make that advantage of this chapter, by reconciling those things, which are here mention'd, to a regenerate state; But if we compare the severals which are here mention'd, with the parts of a regenerate mans character, given by the same Apostle in other places, we shall find them directly contrary, Here in the 8^th verse, he saith, that sin had wrought in him all manner of concupiscence, whereas of the regentrate man it is affirmed, Gal. 5. 24. they that are Christs have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. Here in the 9^th verse, 'tis said, sinne revived, and I died, whereas of the regenerate man 'tis said c.6. 2. how shall we that are dead to sinne, live any longer therein? Here in the 14^th verse, 'tis said, I am carnal, whereas of the regenerate man 'tis affirmed c.8.1. that he walks not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. Here again in that 14^th verse 'tis said, I am sold under sinne, (of which see note f.) whereas of the regenerate 'tis affirmed c.6. 18. that he becomes free from sinne, and becomes the servant of righteousness. Here v.20. sinne dwelleth in me, and κατεργάζεται accomplisheth, worketh that, which I will not, like not with my mind, or conscience, and so 'tis said ver. 23, 24. that the law in the members carries him into captivity to the law of sinne, and who shall deliver him from this body of death? and so that he is under the power of the law of sinne and death, that he obeyes the law of sinne ver.25. whereas c 8.2. of the regenerate 'tis affirmed, that the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, hath made him free from the law of sin and death. Nothing can be more contrary, and unreconcileable to a regenerate state in these so many particulars, then what is here affirmed of the [ἐγὼ I] the person here thus represented. And indeed unlesse sinning against conscience be the only way of alleviating (and not aggravating) sinne, it is impossible that the doing that ill he would not, and the not doing that good he would, v.19, 20. can be deemed a fit ingredient in the character of a regenerate man, 'Tis certain this was, in the person of Medea, made, by the heathens, the highest pitch of villany, to see and like that which was good, and doe the direct contrary (see note f.) and therefore cannot in any reason be thought to be the Apostles description of a regenerate man, or good Christian.

That by ἐπιθυμία coveting] here is meant the sin forbidden in the tenth commandement of the decalogue, appears by the end of the verse; But how the Apostle can truly say, that he had not known it had been a sin, if the law had not told him it was, will be all the difficulty. To which may be answer'd, 1. that the Apostle doth not speak particularly of himself (see note d.) but in the person of a Jew, or man in generall, and then it is not only true of this, but of all other the commandements (of which this one may be set as the instance) that the knowledge of sin is by the promulgation of the law, that forbids it; But then there may from the Jewish doctrine appeare some reason, why the Apostle should rather instance in this commandement, then any other For the Jewes before and under Christ's time, seeing that there was no punishment judicially appointed for thoughts or desires, whether nuclean, or of getting any thing from their neighbours, had resolved this to be no sin, and consequently that the tenth commandement was but a moral proverbial essay or counsel, like that of Menanders

e. Ἐπιθυμία

——— οὐκ βούλου,
Δαιμόνι, ἐπιθυμεῖν ἀλλοτρίας τινί,

Not to covet so much as a pin of anothers, but not any precept of God, or of nature, Affirming, that, unlesse it be in case of the worship of false Gods, no sin is committed by the bare will, without some actual commission following it. Thus saith Aben-Ezra in the beginning of the Decalogue, Kimchi on Psal. 66. 18. and Josephus concerning Antiochus's designed sacrilege, Τὸ δὲ μυεῖν πώποτε τὰ ἔργα βουλευσάμενον, οὐκ ἐᾷ τῶν τιμωρίας ἄξιον, to have consulted only, and not acted, did not deserve punishment. According to which S. Paul might well say of any Jew brought up under such Masters, that he had not beleived coveting to be a sin, had not the more exact consideration of the direct words of the law assured him that it was.

The phrase [sold under sin] signifies as it doth, when 'tis said of Ahab, that he was sold to work wickedness, or of the revolting Jewes 1 *Mac.*1.15. as a slave or captive sold from one Master, one sin, to another; and so here 'tis joyned with σάρκινος a carnal man, and is farther expresst by the character of him, following, that the evil that he would not, that he doth, and the good that he would, that he doth not, just like that which the Poets say by way of aggravation of that wicked condition of Medea, the witch, that 'tis an evil that falls on men from God, to doe evil, when they see their duty, he corrects it thus, Θηριῶδες μόνον καὶ ἄλογον καὶ οἰκτρὸν εἰδότα τὸ βέλτιστον ὑπὸ τῶ χείρονος ὠθεῖσθαι καὶ μαλακίας ἄγαν, 'tis the most bestial, irrational, miserable condition for a man that knowes what is best, to be led by inconstinency and effeminacy from it. And so Simplicius upon Epictetus c.11. p.74. upon occasion of those verses of Medea, resolves, χρῆ τὰ μὲ δοξάζειν μόνον ὀρθῶς, καὶ ὁρμᾶσθαι, καὶ ἐκκλίνειν δεῖ πολὺ, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ ἔργα σύμφωνα ταῖς ὀρθαῖς δόξαις ἀποδίδοναι, we ought not onely to think right, and be affected accordingly, but to conform our works to our right opinions. And till we doe so, the best that he can say of us is, that perhaps we are ἀρχόμενοι παιδεύεσθαι beginning to learn, are come as farre as the knowing of the law, which notwithstanding ἁμαρτάνειν, καὶ ἑαυτῶν ἐγκαλεῖν, men sin and accuse themselves for sinning, οὐκ ἐυθὺς γὰρ τὰ ἄλογα πάθη μετρεῖται καὶ ῥυθμίζεται καὶ ὑπείκει τῷ λόγῳ, for irrational affections are not presently brought within measure and proportion, nor suddainly subjected to reason.

CHAP. VIII.

1. There is therefore now no obligation lying on a Christian, to observe those ceremonies of Moses's law, circumcision &c. ch. 7. 4. 6. (from whence to the end of that chapter the Apostle had made a digression to answer an objection ver. 7.) nor consequently danger of damnation to him for that neglect, supposing that he forsake those carnal sins that the circumcised Jewes yet indulged themselves to, and perform that Evangelical obedience (in doing what the mind illuminated by Christ directs us to) that inward true purity (which that circumcision of the flesh was set to signifie) that is now required by Christ under the Gospel, (see note on c.7. c.)

1. THere is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, * who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.] * not walking μὴ περιπατοῦσιν

2. For the Gospel which deales not in commanding of carnal outward performances, but of spiritual inward purity, the substance of those legal shadowes, and that which was meant by them, and so is proper to quicken us to new life in or through the grace and assistance of Christ, who brought this new law into the world, hath freed us Christians from that law, that brought nothing with it but sin and death, sin by prohibiting, and so making those commissions more criminous, which were against a promulgate law, and yet not fortifying us sufficiently against those commissions c.7.9,10. and death, the wages of sin, from which the law is not able to relcue any guilty person.

2. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the law of sin and death.]

2. 3. For when through the fleshly desires of men, carrying them headlong into all sin, in despite of the prohibitions of the law, c.7.14. the law of Moses was by this means weak, and unable to reform, and amend mens lives, then most seasonably God sent his own Son in the likenesse of flesh, i.e. in a mortal body, which was like sinfull flesh (and differed nothing from it, save onely in innocence) and that on purpose that he might be a sacrifice for sin, and by laying our sins on him shew'd a great example of his wrath against all carnal sins by punishing sin in his flesh, that so men might be perswaded by love, or wrought on by terrors to forsake their sinfull courses,

3. For † what the law could not doe, for that it was weak through the [a] flesh, God sending his own Son in the likenesse of sinfull flesh, and * for sin condemned sin in the flesh,] † as to that which was impossible to the law τὸ ἀδυνατὸν τοῦ νόμου * a sacrifice for sin, περὶ ἁμαρτίας, see note on 2 Cor 5. c.

b. 4. That so all those ordinances of the law, circumcision &c. which were given the Jewes, to instruct them in their duties, might in an higher manner more perfectly be performed by us (see note on Mat. 5.g.) which think our selves strictly obliged to abstain from all that carnality, that that outward ceremony was meant to forbid them, and now to perform the Evangelical obedience, that he requires, and will accept from us, without being circumcised.

4. That [b] † righteousnesse of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.] † ordinance

5. For they that are carried by their own carnal inclinations, or by customes and habits of sin, and the carnal affections consequent thereto, doe generally mind and meditate on carnal things; but they that are led by the Spirit of Christ, the duct of the Gospel, study and mind those things wherein inward purity and sanctity doth consist.

5. For they that are after the flesh, doe mind the things of the flesh, but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit.]

6. And as the Gospel is of force to free from sin, more then the law was, so to free from death too, v.2. For that study or appetite or desire of the carnal man bringeth death, ch.7.5. but that will or desire, that the Spirit or Gospel infuses into us, brings life and peace, i.e. a vital state of soul under God here, and eternall salvation hereafter.

6. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace.]

7. For the carnal appetite is a downright opposition to the law of God, too unruly to obey the commands of God, neither indeed can it be brought to that obedience by a bare prohibition of the law, for the swinge of passions and lusts are much more violent then so.

7. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.]

8. And so these men, carnall Jewes, though they know the law, are very farre from pleasing God (see note on Mat. 12.c.) from being acceptable to him, the law doth nothing to the justifying of them, that are thus farre from obeying the true meaning of the law,

8. So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.]

9. But ye Christians under the Gospel if ye have any of that spiritual divine temper which Christ came to infuse by his doctrine and example, are thereby

9. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.

engaged engaged to all manner of sincere inward purity, to mortifie the flesh with the affections and lusts, and if ye doe not so, ye live not according to the Gospel, and if not so, ye may thereby know that ye are no Christians, Christ will not own you for his, however ye have received the faith, and are admitted into that number.

* the body indeed may be a dead body, τὸ μὲν σῶμα νεκρὸν

10. And if Christ be in you, * the body is dead, because of sin: but the Spirit is life, because of righteousnesse.] 10. But if ye be Christians indeed, translated and raised above the pretensions of the Jew, to the purity of the Gospel of Christ, and your lives be answerable thereto, then, though being sinners, the punishment of sin, i.e. death befall you, and so your bodies die, and return to dust, which is the punishment of sin, yet your souls shall live forever an happy and a blessed life, as the reward of your return to Christ in the sincerity of a new and righteous life, to which the Evangelical justification belongs.

11. But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead, dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies, by the Spirit that dwelleth in you.] 11. And then even for your dead bodies, they shall not finally perish neither, they shall be sure to be raised again; For the Spirit of God, by which you are to be guided and led, is that divine omnipotent Spirit, that raised Christ's dead body out of the grave, and if ye be guided by that, animated and quickned by that, live a pious and holy life, there is no doubt, but God will raise your mortal bodies out of the graves also, by the power of that same Spirit, that raised Christ's.

12. Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh.] 12. By these so many obligations therefore, and interests of yours, the eternall well being both of soules and bodies, ye are engaged to give over all care of satisfying or gratifying your flesh in its prohibited demands, to live no longer in your former habits of sin, now ye have received the faith of Christ.

13. For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit doe mortifie the deeds of the body, ye shall live.] 13. For if contenting your selves with the external performances of the Mosaical law, circumcision &c. ye still continue to commit those sins which that was set to prohibite, this will bring all destruction upon you, 'tis not the Mosaical law will keep you from ruine. But if by the faith and example, and withall the grace and assistance of Christ, ye shall actually mortifie all the polluted desires of the flesh, and live spiritually, according to what Christ now requires, ye shall certainly rise to the life immortal, or live eternally.

14. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.] 14. For this being led by the Spirit of Christ, living after Christs example, and doing what he commands and enables us to doe, is an evidence that we, and not only the Jewes, who challenge it as their peculiar, are (not onely the servants, but) the children of God, and consequently that God will deale with us as with children, bestow the inheritance upon us.

15. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear, but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we [c] crie, Abba, Father.] 15. Nay the truth is, the condition of a Jew (see note on Lu. 9. 10.) is so farre from making men sons of God, that at the best it is but a slavish condition, to be obliged to those performances, which being external, (as circumcision &c.) and having nothing of goodnesse in them, are done meerly for fear of disobeying, and being punished; Which is just the condition of servants, who must doe what the master commands, or be beaten if they doe them not, (as circumcision &c.) (and so was fittest for the Jewes, an hard stubborn people, and accordingly had effect among them, they observed, what came so backt, but what did not, they observed not, which is it that denominates the law weak through the flesh, v. 3.) But our Christ now hath engaged and drawn us with more liberall bands, the cords of a man, the bands of love, ingenuous commands, such as of our selves we cannot but judge best to be done, and most agreeable to our reasonable natures, and to them added, as to children, the promise of an eternal inheritance, upon our obeying of him, And so his dealing with us is (as with children adopted, and received into the family) paternal and gracious, by which we are allow'd to come unto God, as to a father, to expect all fatherly usage from him, grace and assistance to doe what he now commands us to doe, and the reward of eternal blisse, able infinitely to outweigh all the carnal pleasures and delights of sin, that can sollicite us to the contrary; And so this is infinitely an happier condition, then that servile condition of the Jewes, of being bound to doe things which had no goodnesse in them, but as they were commanded, and had no promise of heaven upon the performing them, but punishments upon the non-performance. c.

†That same Spirit αὐτὸ τὸ πνεῦμα

16. † The Spirit it self beareth witnesse with our spirit, that we are the children of God.] 16. And this condition, and manner of Gods dealing with us, under the Gospel, (see Lu. 9. note d.) is on Gods part a sure evidence to our consciences, if our filial obedience, and being wrought on by these means be the like evidence on our parts, that we are more then servants, which was the highest that that kind of legall obedience could pretend to, even sons of God.

17. And if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joynt heirs with Christ: if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.] 17. And if sons, then (according to the customes of all nations, see note c.) heirs of heaven, heirs indeed of God the Father, and coheirs with Christ, coming to the inheritance after the same manner that Christ did, to wit, by sufferings v. 29. which are proper for sons also, to suffer first with Christ, and then to reigne with him.

* season καιρὸς † ready to be μέλλουσα
* on us, εἰς ἡμᾶς

18. For I reckon, that the sufferings of this present * time, are not worthy to be compared with the glory † which shall be revealed * in us.] 18. And when I mention sufferings, (which as filial chastisements, must be expected by us from our father) the sufferings which at this time lie upon us Christians, I must not be thought to look upon them with any sadnesse, even in respect of this present life, for whatever our sufferings are, the deliverance is likely to be so much the more eminent, and illustrious, and glorious toward us, that firmly adhere to Christ, (perhaps in this life, in rescuing us, while the Jewes that persecute us, and all others that joyn with them are destroyed, but most certainly in another) that our sufferings will not be thought to bear any the slightest proportion with them.

† attends the revelation

19. For the earnest expectation of the [d] creature † [e] waiteth for the [f] manifestation of the sons of God.] 19. For all the Gentile world are now attending or waiting as it were, to see what you Jewes will doe, who of you be true sons of God, who not, i.e. who will now accept and embrace the faith of Christ, who will not, Their happinesse depending punctually upon the issue of this. d. e. f.

20. For the creature was [g] made subject to [h] vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him, who hath subjected the same, in hope.] 20. For the heathen world hath for g. h.

theſe many years been (for the generality of them) enſlaved to Satan, and, by him, to that wretched miſerable eſtate of ignorance and Idolatry, and all thoſe vain and unclean beſtiall worſhips, and ſo as many as have gone on in thoſe vile courſes have been involved alſo under that deſperate impoſſibility (as to the eye of man) of recovering to the leaſt degree of bliſs, And all this, not (abſolutely) willingly, or upon their own free choiſe, but by the devils impoſing it on them, as an act of religion, a concomitant, and effect of their Idol-worſhips (ſee note g.) in which he commanded all theſe villanies. This makes it reaſonable to ſuppoſe of theſe heathens, that they are willing to be reſcued from lying any longer under theſe ſlaveries, and the Goſpell was the onely means to do that.

* Thus much of the verſe ſeemes to be beſt put in a parentheſis, that ſo that which followes may connect the 19th with the 20th verſe, thus, The creature attends the revelation of the Sons of God, In hope,

21. That they alſo (the very heathens) i ſhall by the Goſpell and grace of Chriſt be reſcued from thoſe courſes of ſinne, to which they have been ſo long inſlaved, into that glorious condition, not onely of free men redeem'd by Chriſt out of that bondage to Satan, to live and amend their lives, but even of Sonnes of God, to have right to his favour, and that immarceſcible inheritance attending it.

21 † Becauſe the creature it ſelfe alſo ſhall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.]

† That in

22. For this is viſible enough every where in our preaching, that the Gentiles are very forward to receive the Goſpell, when they hear it, while ye Jewes generally reject it, and ſo the Gentile world is as it were in pangs of travaile, ever ſince Chriſts time, till now, ready to bring forth the Sonnes of God, the true children of faithfull Abraham, when the Apoſtles, who muſt midwive out this birth, ſhall but preach unto them, Act: 28. 28.

22. For we know that the whole creation groaneth, and * travaileth in pain together untill now.]

* is in pangs of child-birth συνωδίνει

23. And as the Gentile world do k earneſtly expect this l diſcovery (v. 19.) who of you Jewes will receive Chriſt, who not, that they may reap their advantage by it, have the Goſpell freely preached to them, ſo they that have received the faith, that are already converted, and ſo have not that want of the preaching or revealing of it, have yet another advantage of this revelation, viz: to have their perſecutions at an end, which ſhall be according to Chriſt's promiſe as ſoon as Chriſt hath been preached over all the Cities of Jewry, Mat: 10. 23. and ſo even we our ſelves waite for this ſeaſon, and groan in the mean while under the perſecutions, expecting one kinde of adoption, deliverance from ſervitude and oppreſſions, the reſcuing our outward man out of the afflictions which encompaſs us at the preſent (ſee v. 18.) (and deliverance from which, 'tis clear, we have not yet attained to) and alſo from death it ſelfe by the reſurrection of the body.

23. † And not onely they, but our ſelves alſo which have the firſt fruits of the ſpirit, even we our ſelves groan within our ſelves, waiting for k adoption, to wit * the l redemption of our body.]

† And not onely ſo, but they alſo αὐτοὶ δὲ, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἡμεῖς αὐτοὶ * the deliverance ἀπολύτρωσιν

24. For though by the promiſe of Chriſt we certainly expect this reſcue in Gods time, yet this we have as yet no poſſeſſion of, ſave onely in hope, which, according to the nature of it, is of things not preſently enjoyed, for viſion or poſſeſſion excludeth hope.

24. † For we are ſaved by hope: but hope that is ſeen is not hope; for what a man ſeeth * why doth hee yet hope for?]

† For in hope we are ſaved, Τῇ γὰρ ἐλπίδι ἐσώθημεν * why doth he alſo hope? τί καὶ ἐλπίζει

25. All that hope doth is to provide us patience of what hardſhips at preſent lye upon us, being confident that in God's time we ſhall be, though yet we are not, reſcued out of them.

25. But if we hope for that we ſee not, then do wee with patience waite for it.]

m. 26. And for the fortifying and confirming of this hope, and this patience in us, even in the time of our greateſt preſent preſſures, we have this advantage from Chriſt now in the Goſpell. his ſpirit that raiſed him from the dead, and will raiſe us v. 11. intercedes and prayes for us at the right hand of his father, where he alwayes maketh interceſſion for us, that not what is moſt eaſie, but moſt advantageous, may be ſent us; And ſo though according to the notion of things under the law, temporall felicity was a very conſiderable thing, and affliction in this world an expreſſion of Gods wrath, Now under the Goſpell there is a ſpeciall kinde of proviſion made, by aſſuring us that God knowes beſt what is for our turns, and conſequently that when we pray, but know not our ſelves what is beſt, nor conſequently what we ought to pray for particularly, health, or wealth, or honour, then Chriſt joynes his helping hand to ours, joynes his prayers (for that which he knowes we moſt want) to our prayers, and ſo helps to relieve us in all our diſtreſſes, interceding, yea more then interceding for us, even powerfully beſtowing thoſe things which are truly beſt for us, though oft times they bee leaſt for our palates at the preſent.

26. Likewiſe the ſpirit alſo † helpeth our m * infirmities: for we know not what we ſhould pray for as we ought: but the † ſpirit it ſelf * maketh interceſſion for us with † groanings, which cannot be uttered.]

† joynes in relieving συναντιλαμβάνεται. See note on Luk 10. b. * diſtreſſes † ſame ſpirit ἀυτὸ τὸ πνεῦμα * doth more then intercede ὑπερεντυγχάνει † unuttered groans στεναγμοῖς ἀλαλήτοις

27. And then God, that by being a ſearcher of hearts knoweth our wants exactly, underſtands alſo the deſire and intention of the ſpirit of Chriſt, without any need of its being articulately formed in words, viz: that interceding for all holy men, it aſkes for them all thoſe things, that tend to the making them better, whatſoever God likes, and thinks beſt for them, not what they like themſelves (and this immediately God grants to us, whatſoever it is, ſometimes tribulations and afflictions, as the moſt proper and agreeable for us.)

27. And he that ſearcheth the heart, knoweth what is the minde of the ſpirit, * becauſe hee maketh interceſſion † for the Saints * according to the will of God.]

* that ὅτι † perhaps, for holy things ὑπὲρ ἁγίων * according to God κατὰ θεὸν

28. And accordingly this wee know and finde, that all things that do come to paſs, or befall them that ſincerely love God, thoſe that cordially adhere to him, or that according to the purport of the Goſpell are received and favoured by him (ſee Rom: 1. 6. and note on Matt: 20. c.) do by the gracious diſpoſition of God concurre and cooperate to their advantage, which ſure is a ſigne that the ſpirit of Chriſt by its interceſſion obteines for all ſuch thoſe things that are beſt for them v. 27. though not at preſent ſo pleaſing for themſelves.

28. And we know that † all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called * according * to his purpoſe.]

† or, God cooperates all to good, for the Kings MS. reades πάντα συνεργεῖ ὁ θεὸς εἰς τὸ ἀγαθὸν. * to purpoſe πρόθεσιν

29. For whom he did foreknow, he alſo † did prædeſtinate to bee conformed to the image of his Sonne, that he might be the firſt born amongſt many brethren.]

† hath prædained προώρισεν

29. For indeed whatſoever thus befals us is not to bee look'd on as the act of man, by ſome generall permiſſion onely of God, but as his ſpeciall decree and choice for us. For all whom God hath foreapproved and acknowledged for his, according to the purport of the Goſpell, whom hee knew as a ſhepheard doth his flock, Joh. 10. 14. (i. e. the lovers of God, ſo favoured by him, v. 28. and c. 11. 2.)

thoſe he hath alſo foreappointed to ſuffer, 2 Theſſ. 3.3. after the manner of Chriſt, Phil. 3. 10. that they might be like unto him as younger brothers unto the elder, Heb: 2. 10. and 12. 2. that he might have a Church of perſecuted Chriſtians attaining to deliverances, and to glory v. 18. juſt as he himſelfe hath done before them.

30. Moreover whom he did prædeſtinate, them he alſo called; and whom he called, them he alſo juſtified, and whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified.] 30. And thoſe whom hee hath thus prædetermined to ſufferings, thoſe he hath accordingly called to ſuffer actually, 1 Pet: 2. 21. and thoſe whom, hee hath thus called to ſuffer, thoſe upon ſuch tryals ſincerely paſt, hee juſtifieth, or approveth of, commendeth, and pronounceth them ſincere, and thoſe again he either hath, or certainly will reward with eternall glory.

* What ſay we then c. 6.1. † who ſhall

31. * What ſhall we then ſay to theſe things? If God be for us † who can be againſt us?] 31. What difficulty then can there bee in all this, what matter of doubt but that it will go wel with us? For if God bee a friend, all tends to our good (which was the thing to be proved v. 28. and is proved convincingly v. 29, 30. by an argument called by Logicians Sorites.)

32. He that ſpared not his own Sonne, but delivered him up for us all, how ſhall he not with him alſo freely give us all things?] 32. For hee that parted with his own Son in his boſome, and delivered him up to dye for our ſakes, how is it poſſible that hee ſhould not complete that gift by beſtowing all other things that are profitable for us? and either afflictions or deliverances from preſent pr dures, as he ſees them moſt for our reall advantage.

33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? it is God that juſtifieth.] 33. Who ſhall produce any accuſation againſt thoſe whom God doth approve of? (This the Jewes did moſt bitterly againſt the Chriſtians, and eſpecially againſt Saint Paul the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, judging them for breakers of the law &c. c. 2. 1. and c. 7. 2.) 'Tis certain that God hath acquitted them.

34. Who is he that condemneth? It is Chriſt that dyed, yea, rather that is riſen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who alſo maketh interceſſion for us.] 34. And then who dares be ſo bold as to condemne them? As for us whatever we ſuffer here, our comfort and ſure ground of hope and rejoycing is, that Chriſt our Lord and Captain hath ſuffered before us, and, which is more for our advantage, to aſſure us of delivery either here, or hereafter, our crucified Lord is riſen again, is aſcended to the greateſt dignity, and now reignes in heaven, and is perfectly able to defend and protect his, and hath that advantage to intercede for us to his father, (which he really doth v. 26.) to help us to that conſtantly, which is moſt for the ſupply of our wants.

35. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? ſhall tribulation, or diſtreſs, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſs, or perill, or ſword? 35. And then 'tis not in the power of any perſecutor on earth to put us out of the favour of God, or to deprive us of the benefits of his love to us, when Chriſt hath thus fortified us, and ordered even afflictions themſelves to tend to our good, we may now challenge all preſent or poſſible evills to doe their worſt, all preſſures, diſtreſſes, perſecutions, wants, ſhame, the utmoſt fear, and force, the ſharpeſt encounters.

36. (As it is written, For thy ſake we are killed all the day long, wee are accounted as ſheep for the ſlaughter.)] 36. (As indeed 'tis the portion of a Chriſtian to meet with all theſe things in the diſcharge of his duty, and to have never a part of his life free from them, our Chriſtianity being but as it were the paſſage to our ſlaughter according to that of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 44. 22. ſpoken of himſelfe, but moſt punctually appliable to us at this time, For thy ſake &c:)

† But 'Αλλὰ

37. † Nay in all theſe things we are more then conquerors, through him that loved us.] 37. No certainly we have had experience of all theſe, and finde theſe have no power to put us out of God's favour, they are on the contrary the ſureſt meanes to ſecure us in it, to exerciſe our Chriſtian vertues, and to encreaſe our reward, and ſo the moſt fatherly acts of grace that could be beſtowed on us, through the aſſiſtance of that ſtrength of Chriſt enabling us to bear all theſe, and be the better for them.

* nor the preſent things nor thoſe that are to come, οὔτε ἐνεστῶτα οὔτε μέλλοντα

38. For I am perſwaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, * nor things preſent, nor things to come,] 38. For I am reſolved that neither fear of death, nor hope of life, nor evill angels, nor perſecuting Princes or potentates, nor the preſſures that are already upon us, nor thoſe that are now ready to come,

39. Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God, which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord.] 39. Nor ſublimity of honours, nor depth of ignominy, nor any thing elſe ſhall be able to evacuate the promiſes of the Goſpell, or deprive us of thoſe advantages which belong to Chriſtians (according to God's faithfull promiſes) immutably, irreverſibly.

Notes on Chap. VIII.

2. Σαρξ

Σαρξ the fleſh] in this place cannot ſo fitly be ſaid to ſignifie the ſtate, or condition of men under the law (mention'd c. 7. note c.) but that which is the means, by which occaſionally (as the διὰ notes) the law became ſo weak and unable to reſtrain men, viz: the carnall or fleſhly appetite, which is ſo contrary to the propoſals, and preſcriptions of the law. So c. 7. v. 18. I know that in me, that is in my fleſh, i. e. the carnall part of a man, (ſuch eſpecially as is there repreſented, and defined v. 14. to be carnall, and ſold under ſinne) dwelleth no good thing, ſo here v. 1. They that walk after the fleſh, are oppoſed to thoſe that walk after the ſpirit, and that are in Chriſt Jeſus, and ſo v. 4. 5, 6, 7. where the φρόνημα σαρκὸς, minde or deſire of the fleſh is enmity to God, direct oppoſition to him (viz: that law in the members warring againſt the Law in the minde c. 7. 23.) and v. 8. 9. 12. 13. And ſo in this verſe, viz: that the carnality of men's hearts, was too ſtrong for the Moſaicall law to do any good upon them. And ſo the law was weak, not abſolutely, but διὰ τῆς σαρκὸς, through the fleſh, i. e. The Moſaicall diſpenſation by the promiſes, and terrors which it propoſed, was not able to ſubdue carnall affections, to mortifie luſts, to bring men to inward purity, which to the fleſh was more ingrateſull, then that temporall promiſes ſhould perſwade any man to undertake it, when when there were not temporal punishments to drive them to it, as in case of concupiscence, opposed to that inward purity there were not, (see note on ch.7. c.) And so 'twas not possible for the law to bring them to any good, Christ's reformation was necessary thus to call carnal sinners to repentance.

b. δικαίωμα

The word δικαίωμα] is any thing that God hath thought meet to appoint or command his people (see c.2.26.) from δίκαιον meet or right, as ἄριστον, or δόγμα, an ordinance, or decree, are from ἀρίσκω and δόκεω, being pleased, or thinking good. It is answerable to the Hebrew חקים Num. 30. 17. *Deut.*4.14.40.45. *Ps.*119.12. and denotes those lawes which God had given to the Jewes beside the moral law, or law of nature to all, the peculiar ordinances of circumcision &c. So Heb. 9.1. The first covenant had δικαιώματα, ordinances, as also λατρείας worships, and ἅγιον κοσμικόν, meaning the tabernacle, all which were peculiar to the first covenant, the Mosaical œconomy, so *Lu.*1.6. where to ἐντολαὶ the commandements or moral law, is subjoyned δικαιώματα ordinances, or Jewish observances. And so here δικαίωμα τῦ νόμυ is the ordinances of the law, or statute-law, as it were, as that of circumcision &c. which being designed by God to teach them abstinence from all impurity, but not so made use of by the carnal Jewes, is said here to be perfected and compleated by Christ by his plain precepts of inward purity. By this perhaps may be explained *Rev.*19.8. where of the βύσσινον καθαρὸν λαμπρὸν, fine linen pure and white] it is affirmed, that it is δικαιώματα ἁγίων, which may be rendred the ordinances of the sanctuary (for so ἅγια signifies Heb. 9. 2. 8. i.e. the garment that the Priest, when he entred into the sanctuary, was to wear, by the Levitical law. See note on *Rev.*19.2.

c. κράζομεν ἀββᾶ ὁ πατὴρ

The phrase [κράζομεν ἀββᾶ ὁ πατὴρ] may perhaps best be rendred [crying Abba, that is, Father] so as the ὁ be the neuter, not masculine gender, and the abbreviate of ὅ ἐστι μεθερμηνευόμενον, or ὅ ἐστι which is by interpretation, or, which is. If that be not it, both here and *Gal.*4.6. then, as *Mar.*14.36. (when it is used by Christ, who spake Syriack, 'tis certain that it was but the same word twice repeated) so must it be here, and no more then a form of compellation, wherein a son expresseth his confidence and dependence on his fathers kindnesse and goodnesse to him, or else a form of petitioning, as in Christ it was, Abba, Father, all things are possible to thee, remove this cup from me. And so it signifies no more then to look upon God, as children on a father, as on one that means all good to us, if we be not wanting to our selves; referring to his rich Evangelical promises, in opposition to the more servile affections of the Jewes, which performed those external obediences onely, that were commanded under penalties, but had no care of purity and uprightness of actions, as slaves, and not as sons. That this should be taken from a Roman form of haeredipetæ, suing to a rich man for his inheritance, is but a fancy, sufficiently confuted by this, that the crying Abba here supposes having received the Spirit of adoption, and doth not prepare for it. And so *Gal.*4. Because ye are (not, that ye may be) sons, God hath sent the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba Father, where first they are sons, and have the Spirit of Christ in their hearts, that filial spirit, and because they are such, God hath sent &c. As for that that follows [And if sons, then heires] that is not peculiar to the Romans neither, for though among them the children of both sexes were admitted to inherit, but among the Jewes the females were not admitted, save in defect of males, yet speaking here of sons, he may very fitly referre to sons among the Jewes, and from the law of their inheriting the fathers goods, conclude of all children of God, and not only of males (for that difference is not at all considered here) that they shall doe so too, i.e. be heires also: Besides it was a law among the Jewes, as well as the Romans, that adopted sons, in respect of inheriting, were equall with natural, and that is the thing that is chiefly here meant by [If sons, then heirs] i.e. this adoption into sonship is as sure to bring us the inheritance, as if we were the natural sons of God. κληρονομία

d. Κτίσις

The word κτίσις, the creation or creature] being a general word, without a restraint (and likewise with [πᾶσα all] joyned to it v. 22.) is here set to comprehend all mankind, the Gentiles, as well as the Jewes, and (having before spoken of the Jewes) here the Gentiles peculiarly. Thus κτίσις and κόσμος are all one, the creature and the world, and πᾶσα κτίσις, all the creation, (as the same is expresst here v.22.) and πᾶς ὁ κόσμος, all the world, *Mar.*16.15. which is in S. Matthew in the parallel place, Mat. 28.19. πάντα τὰ ἔθνη all nations, and so *Col.*1.15. and so also κόσμος the world simply, as κτίσις creature here, for the heathen world 2 *Pet.*1.4. and elsewhere. And that this is the meaning of πᾶσα ἀνθρωπίνη κτίσις 1 Pet. 2. 13. every humane creature, i.e. the heathens peculiarly (as farre as the relative ὑποτάγητε, subjection will extend it, i.e. to all heathen magistrates in authority over them, which is the importance of all v. 17. not all men absolutely, but all superiors, as it follows, εἴτε βασιλεῖ, εἴτε ἡγεμόσι) will appear, 1. by the doctrine which he is there confuting, that of the Gnosticks, which taught liberty and manumission of Christian servants from heathen masters, and proportionably of Christian subjects from heathen kings; and 2dly by the particularity of his care v. 12. that their conversation should be good among the Gentiles, that they might not speak ill of them as of evil doers, which they would be most apt to doe, in case they should withdraw their obedience from their lawful Princes, as soon as they were become Christians: and 3dly by the use of the phrase πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις all men in the same sense for the Gentiles, among whom they lived, Rom. 12. 17, 18. with whom they are there required to live peaceably, and to doe nothing but what might be καλὸν good before them. From which generall precept the Apostle there immediatly proceeds to (the same particular, which is the matter of S. Peters command) obedience to the supreme power (then heathen) ch. 13. 1. (see note on Col. 1. 6.) πάντες ἄνθρωποι

e. ἀποκαραδοκία

What is here said of the ἀποκαραδοκία τῆς κτίσεως, the expectation of the creature, i.e. of the Gentile world, must be understood according to the sacred prophetick dialect, wherein men are said to desire, and seek, and hope, and expect that, (sometimes) wch they doe not distinctly know or think of; Upon this score, that it is the general, indefinite, though not the particular, determinate object of their desires, that, supposing men to desire, that which is best

beſt for them, moſt for their preſent turn, this being moſt eminently ſo, is the only true matter of ſatisfaction to thoſe their appetites. Thus all men being ſuppoſed to deſire felicity, are ſaid to expect and deſire Chriſt, becauſe he is the onely true way to that: As on the other ſide, the wicked, that purſue an evil courſe, are by the wiſe man ſaid to ſeek death, though 'tis ſure they have no particular deſigne upon it, and ſo *Prov.*8.36. to love death. Thus when Jacob Gen. 49. calls Shiloh, or the Meſſias, ἐκδοχὴ ἐθνῶν the expectation of the Gentiles, and on whom the Gentiles ſhall truſt, and ſo Hag. 2. 7. The deſire of all nations ſhall come, i. e. literally the Temple (that ſhould then be reædified) and under that ſhadow, Chriſt, he in whoſe coming was contained a full ſatisfaction to all the wants, and deſires, and thirſts of all the heathens in the world. And ſo here it is not at all neceſſary to the verifying of this ſpeech of the Apoſtle, that the Gentile world all this while, (or even at that time, wherein he ſpake) ſhould either know Chriſt, or what 'twas, to be the ſons of God, or that the revelation of this by the preaching of the Goſpel to the Jewes, tended ſo particularly to their advantage; But, as the Goſpel of Chriſt was the collection of all thoſe advantages that they aſpired to, and as being the ſons of God] was the beleiving on Chriſt, when he was preached, ſo the Apoſtle, that knew, that upon the having preacht over all the cities of Jewry (and ſo made diſcovery, who of them would repent and beleive the Goſpel, who would be finally contumacious) the Goſpel ſhould immediately be preached to the Gentiles, and ſo the bleſſedſt thing in the world befall them, the ſatisfaction to all their deſires and groanings, may truly ſay, that the expectation of the Gentile world attended and waited for this. Which interpretation will be more perſpicuous, when it is conſidered, that both ἀποκαραδοκία] lifting up the head to look for, and the ἀπεκδέχ.] waiting or attending, that followes, are but phraſes noting the approach of any thing, and not their explicit knowledge, that it doth ſo, as when Chriſt bids them, when ſuch and ſuch things come to paſſe, lift up their heads, for their redemption draweth nigh, *Lu.*21.28. i. e. then your deliverance approacheth, though perhaps many of them that ſhould have their parts in it, knew nothing of it; And indeed ἀπεκδέχ.] being beſt rendred [attendeth, waiteth] notes onely this period to be it, before which the Goſpel was not to be ſo freely preached to the Gentiles, and after which it was, and is not to be reſtrained to their looking, or expecting of it.

f. ἀποκάλυψις

The word ἀποκάλυψις Revelation] ſignifies the explaining or diſplaying ſomewhat, that was before obſcure and covered, and ſo [the revelation of the ſons of God,] will be the diſcovering who are truly ſuch, This was to be done among the Jewes, who all pretended to that title, by the Apoſtles preaching the Goſpel to them, in the power of Chriſt's reſurrection, and they that did not now receive him ſo teſtified, 'tis evident they were baſtards and not ſons, though before, they might have the excuſe of ignorance to extenuate their fact, Lu. 23.34. 1 *Cor.*2.8. Thus it is ſaid by old Simeon of Chriſt (which ſhould prove for the falling, and raiſing of many in Iſrael, Lu. 2. 34. a ſtumbling block to the proud obſtinate Phariſee, but a means of raiſing the humble ſinner to new life, and a ſigne that ſhould be matter of contradiction, a ſtrange perſon, that ſhould be matter of great diſpute and diviſion among the Jewes, ſome beleiving and others rejecting him) that by this means the thoughts, or machinations or deſigns of many ſhould be revealed, i. e. by their dealing with Chriſt it ſhould be diſcovered, what kind of men they were, truly pious, or no, thoſe obedient children of God, which they pretended to be, or elſe the quite contrary. Now becauſe by the Apoſtles preaching of Chriſt to the Jews, this diſcovery was to be made, and ſo the Goſpel firſt preached to them, before they went to the Gentiles, and upon the Jewes rejecting Chriſt, the Apoſtles were then to depart and goe to the Gentiles, therefore the creature, or Gentile world are ſaid earneſtly to expect, or wait for this diſcovery, as a thing by which they were to receive this great advantage, ἐπ' ἐλπίδι (in the end of ver. 20. which muſt connect with this, the former part of that verſe ſo farre, being but in a parentheſis) in hope that they alſo ver. 21. i. e. the Gentiles, that ſhall receive the Goſpel, as well as the beleiving Jewes, ſhall be redeemed from their cuſtomes of ſin, which made them ſuch ſlaves, and become partakers of that glorious title of ſons of God alſo.

The only difficulty here, is, by whom the heathen world was ſubjected to that which is here called vanity, and after φθορᾶς corruption, ver. 21. For though here the paſſive [ὑπετάγη was ſubjected] might be ſo rendred, as to referre to no other agent but themſelves, that δυσαρεστῶ δαίμων, the ſpontaneous devil, that moſt of our miſchief and ſin is imputable to, yet here follows, in this verſe, mention of the ὑποτάξας, he that hath ſubjected them, and 'tis alſo affirmed of the creature, i. e. the Gentile world, that it was thus ſubjected, οὐχ ἑκοῦσα, not willingly, but διὰ τὸν ὑποτάξαντα, becauſe of him, whoſoever it is, that ſubjected them. The place is generally interpreted of God, that he is the ὁ ὑποτάξας, and if ſo, it muſt then be ſaid that he ſubjected the heathen not by any poſitive act, but (as he is ſaid to harden) by deſertion, and leaving to themſelves, to which this ſlavery to their cuſtomes of ſin is conſequent. But it may alſo be interpreted of the devil, who by God's permiſſion (in juſt puniſhment for their Idolatries) had, and exerciſed ſuch power among the heathens, and engaged them in all wickedneſſe. And this is perfectly agreeable with the truth of the fact. For the devil being worſhipt by the heathens, did by that means infuſe into their worſhips all the villany in the world, made all unnatural ſins part of their devotions, in their myſteries, Eleuſinia ſacra, Venus and Flora's feaſts, &c. and ſo what they did in that kind they did not willingly, as 'tis here ſaid, but in obedience to this ὁ ὑποτάξας, i. e. the Devil that had gotten ſuch authority among them, and kept them in this δουλεία φθορᾶς ſlavery or ſervitude of corruption, doing it in obedience to his commands. Thus doth Euſebius l. 4. c. ζ'. tell us of Carpocrates, that it was his avow'd doctrine, that there was no other way of eſcaping or appeaſing the κοσμικὰς ἀρχοντας, worldly princes, as they called them, but by paying them their dues by all their ἀῤῥητουργία unnatural filthineſſe. And we know 'twas moſt ordinary among the heathen to have ſacrificing of men and devoting them, preſcribed ad pacanda numina, to appeaſe

g. ὑποτάξας

δουλεία τῆς φθορᾶς

appeale thoſe falſe Gods. Thus are men ſaid to bee caught, and held in the ſnare of the Devill, and ἐζωγρημένοι taken alive or captive by him, 2 Tim: 2. 26. which concludes them in the ſtate of ſlaves and ſervants forever after, till by repentance and reformation they get out of it. And there is no circumſtance in the whole context, that renders this improbable to be the meaning of it, but on the contrary this ſubjection, from whence they hope to be delivered is oppoſed to that freedome which Chriſt gives, and that is, from the hands of enemies, Lu: 1. 74. i. e. from Satan &c. who may therefore bee reſolved to bee the ὁ ὑποτάξας he that ſubjected them. That which hath enclined interpreters to apply it to God, is firſt, the ἐπ' ἐλπίδι in hope, which followes, it being not imaginable that the devill ſhould ſubject them thus, in hope &c: But that ἐπ' ἐλπίδι ſeems to be a miſtake, the [ἐπ' ἐλπίδι in hope] belonging to the end of the former verſe, ἀπεκδέχεται ἐπ' ἐλπίδι, waites in hope, all the reſt of the 20th v. being read in a parenthеſis, as the reaſon of their waiting, v. 19. Secondly, the reſolving that κτίσις creature ſignifies the other creatures of God, beſide man; but that hath been ſhewed to bee a miſtake alſo, note d.

h. Ματαιότης vanity hath a double notion, one as it referres to the heathen Idols, which being אלילים nothings, are called ματαια vaine, or vanities, Act. 14. 14. and ſo vanity here is all their ignorant filthy Idol-worſhip, and ſo 'tis Eph. 4. 17. where hee warneth them not to walk, as the reſt of the Gentiles do, in the vanity of their own minde, and ſo ἐματαιώθησαν they grew vain, Rom: 1. 21. and φύσει ματαιοι, vaine by nature, in the Book of Wiſdome, ſpeaking of that popular cuſtome of Idolatry, that had generally over-run them all, and ſo 2 Pet: 2. 18. Another notion of the word there is as it is rendred by Heſychius, ματαιος πάλαι, wretched, miſerable, and both theſe may ſeem to be here put together, as the courſe of the Gentiles was an idolatrous, villainous, and withall an unhappy wretched courſe (to which the devill had brought them, and God in his juſt judgements had delivered them up, for their deſpiſing the light of nature) of which ſome of them were ſo ſenſible, viz: thoſe that by ſtudy of Philoſophy, or travaile into Ægypt (where they might hear of the worſhip of the true God) came to any knowledge of the truth, that they expreſt their diſlike of their own wayes and their deſires to be rid of theſe ſo great burthens, that thus preſt down their Soules. Thus did Porphyrie, and others lament the impurities of their natures, which they found within themſelves, and ſet up a ſpeciall project and purſuit of καθαρσιὰ, purgatives, and, when other helps failed, made uſe of γοητεία and θεουργία, magick and ſorcery to that end, conſulted with the Devill to help to make them pure; and this, as diſcerning this want of purity to be utterly deſtructive of that true happineſs, which, as rationall creatures, they could not but ſeek after. And in this reſpect it is, that here 'tis ſaid of theſe heathens, that they were thus ſubjected not willingly, but through Satan's malice, and God's juſt judgements upon them: and yet had ſome kinde of dark hope, that they ſhould have ſome means allow'd of reſcuing them and ſo did in a manner expect Chriſt, and waite for a reverſion of the Goſpell, when the Jewes had done with it, and ſo (as 'tis obſervable in the Acts) when he was preacht unto them and the Jewes together, did more readily and univerſally receive him, then the Jewes did.

φθορὰ ſignifies ſometimes thoſe abominable unnaturall uncleanneſſes which the Gentiles were guilty of, τὸ τῆς ἐν κόσμῳ ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ φθορᾶς 2 Pet: 1. 4. the corruption through luſt which was in the world, the unnaturall luſts among the Gentiles and Gnoſticks. So again 2 Pet: 2. 12. γεγεννημένα εἰς φθορὰν, made to corrupt, or good for nothing but to corrupt others, an expreſſion of ἄλογα ζῶα φυσικὰ, unnaturall irrational creatures, and again in the end of the verſe ἐν τῇ φθορᾷ αὐτῶν, in their corruption, which what it ſignifies may be gueſs'd by the luxury and licentiouſneſs that followes v. 13 and ἡδυπαθοῦντες ἐν ταῖς ἀπάταις αὐτῶν living luxuriouſly in their deceits, or hereticall Gnoſtick practiſes, ſo again δοῦλοι τῆς φθορᾶς v. 19. ſervants of corruption, anſwerable to δουλεία φθορᾶς here, the ſervitude of corruption in the ſame ſenſe clearly, and this very agreeable to Deut: 4. 16. leſt you corrupt your ſelves &c: So Wiſd. 14. 12. having ſaid that the deviſing of Idols is the beginning of fornication, he adds that the invention of them is φθορὰ ζωῆς the corrupting of life. And in Philo de ſpecial: leg: prac: 7. we have φθορὰ περιεία, μοιχεία, corruption, fornication, adultery, ſeverall branches of ſinne againſt that law. (See note on 2 Pet: 1. 2. and c. 2. 2. and Col. 2. 1.) i. φθορὰ

'Υιοθεσία adoption] ſignifies the aſſuming thoſe into the number of children, which are not ſo naturally. In the 15. v. it is ſet oppoſite to δουλεία ſervitude, and v. 21. it is called ἐλευθερία the liberty of the Sonnes of God; For they that are adopted, if they were ſervants before, are made free men and ſonnes together, and ſo here it may ſignifie the change of ſtate from ſervitude to ſon-ſhip, and becauſe it is ſpoken of in this verſe as a thing not yet had, but expected by Saint Paul and ſuch as hee, thoſe that had the firſt fruits of the ſpirit, i. e. had received the Goſpell, and beleived in Chriſt, and ſo were already Sonnes of God, received into his family by adoption, therefore it muſt here be taken in ſome other notion, different from that, which is ordinary, and in oppoſition to ſome other ſervitude, and the ἀπολύτρωσις τοῦ σώματος that followes, will incline to interpret it an aſſumption and delivery out of that, that then lay upon the body, the perſecutions (a kinde of Ægyptian ſervitude) which lay then ſharply upon the Orthodox Chriſtians, and that partly by reſcue here out of them, granting them Halcyonian dayes, as, upon the deſtruction of the Jewes, their perſecutors, they had and partly by the reſurrection of the body, for thoſe that were not thus reſcued in this life. k. Υιοθεσία

'Απολύτρωσις ſignifies deliverance generally, and that from preſſure or calamity, preſent or approaching, ἀπορυγὴ, ἄπλους, eſcaping, releaſe, and ſo ἀπολύτρωσις τοῦ σώματος] may well be the bodie's eſcaping from thoſe preſſures and perils that lye upon that, and make it groan alſo (though in another ſenſe, then that, wherein the word is uſed v. 22. according to the uſe of Scripture ſtyle and the figure ἀντανάκλασις, of uſing a word, that had been uſed before, in a different ſenſe) Thus Lu: 21. 28. your ἀπολύτρωσις redemption, deliverance from perſecutions, draweth nigh, and ſo it ſeems to be uſed here, l. Ἀπολύτρωσις. Ἀντανάκλασις.

of which he ſaith v. 24. that in hope they are eſcaped, and in the mean time with patience expect, v. 25. and of theſe diſtreſſes, and the advantages of, and deliverance from them he continues the diſcourſe from hence to the end of the Chapter, (as hee had begun it v. 17, 18.) as that wherein our conformity with our elder brother conſiſted, to ſuffer as he did, and wherein their delivery, ſo glorious and remarkable, would be a firſt preparative conformity to his reſurrection; But this not to exclude, but include alſo the farther deliverance of the body from death it ſelfe, by the reſurrection, which is anſwerable to Chriſt's reſurrection alſo, and promiſed as the onely means to ſupport their faith, and patience, who ſhould not be delivered here, but loſe their lives for the faith of Chriſt, Thus the word is uſed 1 Cor. 1. 30.

m. ἀσθένεια

The word [ἀσθένεια, and ἀσθενία, weakneſſe, weak, and being weak,] in the New Teſtament, oft ſignifies diſeaſes, diſtreſſe, miſeries, afflictions, that befall our humane ſtate, ſo Mat: 8. 17. it ſignifies the diſeaſe that Chriſt cured, and ſo Lu: 13. 11. 12. Joh: 5. 5. and 11. 4. Act: 28. 9. and ſo ἀσθενὴς ſick, Mat: 25. 39. Luk: 10. 9. Act: 4. 9. and 5. 15, 16. 1 Cor: 11. 30. (as on the contrary, ἰσχύων the ſtrong, Mat. 9. 12. ſignifies the healthy) and ἀσθενία Mat: 10. 8. 25. 36. Mar: 6. 56. Lu: 4. 40. 7. 10. 9, 2. Joh: 4. 40. 5. 3. and 7. ſo c. 6. 2. 11. 1, 2, 3, 6. Act: 9. 37. 19. 12. Phil: 2. 26. 27. 2 Tim: 4. 20. Jam: 5. 14. (and very oft for ſin the diſeaſe of the ſoul.) And ſo it ſignifies here, even all the ſad particulars mention'd v. 35. and which, if the context be obſerved, will appear to belong unto this place, and will be agreeable to the notion of חלי, which ſignifying miſer, ἀσθένεια, labour, ſorrow, is frequently uſed for diſeaſe, diſtreſs, and rendred, by the word here uſed, ἀσθένειαι weakneſſes, ſo is the word uſed 1 Cor: 2. 3. referring to the perſecutions, and dangers, that Paul at Corinth had met with in his preaching, ſee note on 1 Cor: 8. b. and on Gal. 4. a.

n. κατὰ πρόθεσιν * in Præfat. Cat. p. 1.

The phraſe [κατ' πρόθεσιν according to purpoſe] is by * Cyril of Hieruſalem thus interpreted, that it ſignifies γνησίαν προαίρεσιν every mans genuine choice, and reſolution of mind, that love of God that caſts out feare, that courage that is not daunted with ſufferings, (not, as Grodecius interprets it, cujuſlibet propriam voluntatem, in oppoſition to Gods, but, I ſay) every man's genuine, i. e. ſincere choiſe or purpoſe, in oppoſition to the hypocritical, temporary, outward profeſſion of ſome that enter into Chriſtianity. For, as in him it followes, κἂν σῶμα σὸν ἔνδον ἔχῃς, ἡ δὲ διάνοια οὐκ ἔνεστιν, οὐδὲν ὠφελῇ, if thy body be preſent among the diſciples of Chriſt, or the illuminate, but thy mind go not along with thy body, it profits thee nothing, Thus, ſaith he, Simon had his body baptized with water, but not his heart illuminated by the Spirit, his body deſcended into, and aſcended out of the water, but his ſoule was not buried with Chriſt, nor raiſed again with him. And ſo he concludes, ἡ πρόθεσις γνησία ὅταν καλῶς ᾖ πᾶσι, the purpoſe of mind when it is genuine, or intire, all one with προθέσει καρδίας purpoſe of heart Act. 11. 23. (not, as the interpreter reads, propoſitum cùm adeſt proprium) renders thee called, i.e. puts thee in number of thoſe who are ſtyled, the called of God, i.e. ſincere diſciples of his, to whom this Goſpel-privilege here belongs, that all things tend to their good from tribulation to death it ſelf. So in the ſame author a little before, προθέσεις ἀγαθὰς, a good purpoſe and reſolution (conſequent to the ἐγγραφὴ and φάλαγξ καθ' ἡμᾶς having their names enrolled, and their perſons entred into the military calling) is uſed as a phraſe to expreſſe them to be Chriſtians that had reſolvedly taken that calling upon them. And ſo indeed κλητὸς is oft taken in the Old Teſtament for a follower, adherent, ſubject, ſervant, eſpecially in an army 1 Kin. 1. 41, 49. 2 Sam. 14. 11. This is clearly the interpretation of that very antient father, making our ſincere embracing of Chriſt's diſcipleſhip (or the being called, i.e. wrought upon by Chriſt's call effectually, and not bringing onely the body to Chriſt, and leaving the mind behind, the condition without which the promiſes and advantages of the Goſpel doe not belong to any. But if the word πρόθεσις purpoſe be applied to God, which calls (and not to them which are obedient to the call) then the meaning muſt be, thoſe that are called according to purpoſe, i. e. thoſe that according to God's counſels revealed in the Goſpel, are the men to whom God's favour, and ſo his promiſes belong. That the former of theſe is rather to be imbraced in this place, may be conjectured by the nature of the ſubject, which this phraſe [called according to purpoſe] is ſet to expreſſe, viz: thoſe that love God, which are Chriſtians, endued with that grace of charity, or love of God which will fit them to ſuffer for, or with Chriſt, and if it doth ſo, doth by that appear to be cordial and ſincere, not hypocritical. And of ſuch conſtant reſolute lovers of Chriſt it is here ſaid, that it is one of the privileges of the Goſpel, that all things (how ſharp ſoever) that befall them, doe tend to their good. And ſo κατ' πρόθεσιν κλητοὶ οὖσι] here, one that is called according to purpoſe, one that ſtedfaſtly and cordially adheres to God, will be directly all one with ὁ τῇ προθέσει τῆς καρδίας προσμένων τῷ Κυρίῳ, Act. 11. 23. one that with purpoſe of heart adheres to the Lord. And though Rom. 9. 10 πρόθεσις purpoſe be clearly applied to God, and that in the matter of election without conſideration of works, onely ἐκ τῆς κλήσεως, in reſpect of God that calls the Gentile Idolaters to Chriſt, when the perverſe Jewes are left to themſelves, yet that which determines it there to God, is not onely the matter, which makes it neceſſary, but the very word [Θεοῦ of God] joyned with [πρόθεσις purpoſe] the purpoſe of God to call the Gentile world to the knowledge of Chriſt. And in other places, as there is [πρόθεσις αἰώνων, Epheſ. 3. 11. the eternal purpoſe (of God again) or God's promiſe concerning the ſeverall ages of the world, ſo there is alſo πρόθεσις purpoſe 2 Tim. 3. 10. which demonſtratively ſignifies a grace or virtue among Chriſtians, being joyned with πίστις faith, μακροθυμία long-ſuffering, ἀγάπη charity, ὑπομονὴ patience, and ſure ſignifies a generall good reſolution, and purpoſe of mind, having an influence on the whole Chriſtian life, and ſo fit to follow ἀναγνῶθι, the whole converſation next before it.

CHAP. IX.

2. 1. Theſe things being ſo, that there is no true purity or conſequent juſtification to be had by the law of Moſes, nor any way but by Chriſt, Whatſoever ye think of me, (looking on me, I know, with an evil eye, as if I were your enemy) I proteſt before Chriſt, and teſtifie to you, my brethren of the Jewiſh nation, that truth, of which mine own conſcience in the preſence of the holy Ghoſt (that is privie to, and ſearcher of hearts) is witneſſe to me,

1. I ſay the truth in Chriſt, I lie not, my conſcience alſo bearing me witneſſe in the [a] holy Ghoſt,]

2. That the thought of my brethren the Jewes, that depend upon the law, and confide in their own righteouſneſſe, and will not be brought to look after Chriſt, and that inward purity by him preſcribed, in ſtead of the external circumciſion, &c. is matter of great grief and inceſſant torment to my ſoul.

2. That I have great heavineſſe and continuall ſorrow in my heart.]

b. 3. So farre am I from deſerving to be thought (as I am) their enemy, that I could be content that I were ſeparate, or excommunicate from Chriſts Church, not onely to want the honour of Apoſtleſhip, but to be the moſt abject creature, ſeparate from the body of Chriſt, the communion of Saints, and ſo delivered up to Satan, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. c.) Or that, as Chriſt being not accurſed, or worthy of any ill, became a curſe for us, ſo, after his example, any the ſaddeſt condition might fall on me. Or, if it were poſſible, and if it might any way tend to this end, I could, me thinks, be content to part with all mine own hopes and intereſts in Chriſt, even mine eternall heaven and bliſſe, on condition my brethren and conſanguineans, the Jewes, would leave their truſt in the law, and in their being Abraham's ſeed, and come in to the Goſpel, and make uſe of the privileges that are allowed them there. So paſſionate is my love toward them, that I could endure any loſſe by way of expiation for them, to reſcue them from their infidelity, and the deſtruction that attends them.

3. For I could wiſh that my ſelf were [b] accurſed from Chriſt, for my brethren, my kinſmen according to the fleſh.]

c. 4. They being the people to whō Chriſt was primarily & principally ſent, the poſterity of Abraham, and Iſaac, and Jacob (and favoured by God for their fathers ſakes) and honoured with the privilege of being acknowledged as ſons, or people of God, the privilege of having God preſent among them, his majeſty ſhining, as it did in the ark, 1 Sam. 2. 12. Pſal. 83. 3. the covenants, i.e. both the word of the covenant, and the ſacrament of the covenant, circumciſion and ſprinkling of blood, Gen. 17. 10. Exod. 24. 8. the giving of the law to them in tables, the preſcript manner of worſhip appointed by God himſelf, and the promiſes of the Meſſias, &c.

4. Who are Iſraelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the [c] glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and † the ſervice of God, and the promiſes,]

† the worſhip, ἡ λατρεία

d. 5. They coming from the Patriarchs, and Chriſt the (incarnate) Son of God coming from them, taking his fleſh, and being born of a Jewiſh woman, though he were above and over all creatures in the world, God bleſſed forever, the title by which the one ſupreme God was known and expreſt among the Jewes.

5. Whoſe are the fathers, and out of whom as concerning the fleſh, Chriſt came, who is over all, [d] God bleſſed for ever. Amen.

6. But whatſoever becomes of theſe children of Abraham according to the fleſh, yet for all this the promiſe of God made to him doth no way miſcarry, the ſins of Abraham's carnal ſeed cannot make God's promiſe to be fruſtrated, ch. 3. 3. (From which place to this, the diſcourſe begun ch. 3. 2. had been interrupted, and not reſumed again till now, and here reſumed and purſued) for the promiſe was not made to his carnal but ſpiritual ſeed, to believers begotten after the image of his faith, the privileges made to Iſraelites, doe not belong to all that are of the ſtock of Jacob.

6. * Not as though the word of God † hath taken none effect: for they are not all Iſrael, which are of Iſrael.]

* But it is not poſſible that, οὐχ οἷον δὲ ὅτι

† ſhould have miſcarried ἐκπέπτωκεν

7. Nor doth the adoption (the ſecond privilege v. 4.) or the privilege of being received in by God as his peculiar people, belong to all that are come from Abraham, for it was once ſaid to Sarah, Gen. 21. 12. that the promiſed ſeed ſhould be confined to Iſaac's line (or, from Iſaac ſhall come the bleſſed ſeed, or, that ſhall be the bleſſed ſeed that comes from Iſaac, ſee note on Mat. 1. k.) and Iſmael, though he were Abraham's child, ſhould not inherit, nor have any part in it.

7. Neither becauſe they are the ſeed of Abraham, are all children: but in Iſaac ſhall * thy ſeed be called.]

* the ſeed be called to thee, κλη-θήσεταί σοι σπέρμα

8. Which ſignifies that the privilege of adoption belongs not to all Jewes, or to men, as being born of that ſtock, but, being made over by promiſe, it belongs to thoſe, to whom the promiſe was made, i.e. not to thoſe that expect juſtification by obſervation of the Moſaical law of circumciſion &c. or depend upon their abſolute election, as Abraham's ſeed, and ſo live negligently and ſecurely, but to the faithfull regenerate Chriſtians, which are the ſeed adumbrated in Iſaac, and called the children of promiſe here, and heirs according to promiſe, Gal. 3. 29. the men to whom the promiſe belongs which was made to the faithfull Abraham, and ſuch as he was, begotten ſpiritually after the ſimilitude of his faith, though they ſprang not from his loynes.

8. That is, they which are the children of the fleſh, theſe are not the children of God: but the children of the promiſe are counted for the ſeed.]

e. 9. For the birth of Iſaac was an act meerly of God's free mercy, a work of extraordinary providence, for which neither Abraham nor Sarah had any ground to hope, but onely that promiſe made Gen. 17. 21. & 18. 10. in theſe words, According to this time, (i.e. the time of bearing children after conception) I will viſit thee and give thee a ſon, by which 'tis clear, that the birth of Iſaac was an effect of God's promiſe, and nothing elſe, and ſo that they to whom the promiſe belongs, i.e. not the natural ſons of Abraham, but the ſpiritual ſons, not they that deſcend from his loynes, but they that follow the example of his faith, whoſoever they be, Jewes, or Gentiles, may, (upon obedience to the faith) and ſhall be accepted for his children, as Abraham was.

9. For this † is the word of promiſe, * At [e] this time will I come, and Sarah ſhall have a ſon.]

or evil (which notes the Jewes and Gentiles, the one conſidered without any reſpect of their legal ſervices, the other of their Idolatries,) that the intention and reſolution of God to preferre one before the other might appear to be not on conſideration of their (nor conſequently of the Jewes and Gentiles) performances, but as an act of his own free diſpoſal, in diſpenſing that greater meaſure of his favours, as ſeemed beſt to him (for that is meant by calling, ſee note on Matt.20. c.) even to the Gentiles which had done a great deal of ill, and not to the Jewes when they rejected Chriſt, even though they performed ſome external obediences,

12. It was ſaid unto her, The elder ſhall ſerve the younger,] 12. It was revealed to her by God, that the elder of the twins ſhould be inferiour to the younger (which ſignifies by way of accommodation, that the Jewes the elder people, who had the privilege as it were of primogeniture, ſhould forfeit and loſe thoſe privileges, which the Gentile Chriſtians attained to, whom God after begat to himſelf)

13. As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Eſau have I hated.] 13. According to the prediction of the elder's ſerving the younger, Mal.1.2.3. which though it had been true in their perſons, Jacob getting away the birthright firſt, then the prime bleſſing from Eſau, yet it had not its primary completion in their perſons (it no way appearing probable, that Eſau did in his perſon forſake the true God, and fall off to Idols) but had its principal and full accompliſhment in their poſterities, of whom Malachi hath delivered it from God, long after the death of both their perſons, that God preferred the Iſraelites before the Edomites, though indeed their progenitors Jacob and Eſau were brothers, and Eſau the elder of them, By both which typical ſtories it is plain, that as God binds not himſelf to obſerve privileges, to give Ismael inheritance with Iſaac, only becauſe he was born of Abraham as well as he, nor to preferre Eſau before Jacob, and the Edomites before the Iſraelites, only becauſe they were of the elder houſe or line, ſo neither doth he beſtow the promiſes made in Chriſt either as a prærogative of Iſraelites, or a reward of legal obedience, but leaves himſelf free to receive Gentiles as well as Jewes, nay to call Gentiles, and reject the Jewes, and to accept of the Chriſtian faith in ſtead of the Moſaical obſervances, the internal, ſincere, Evangelical, in ſtead of the external, legal obedience.

* What ſay we then? ch.6.1. 14. *What ſhall we ſay then? Is there unrighteouſneſſe with God? God forbid.] 14. But doe we not by ſaying this make God unjuſt? Is it not injuſtice in him to accept theſe, to have mercy on beleiving Gentiles, and to caſt off Jewes, that are Abraham's ſeed, which perform the ordinances of the law, circumciſion &c. No certainly, we charge nothing on God by this, that which we ſay is agreeable to his own words, Exod. 33. 19.

15. For he ſaith unto Moſes, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compaſſion on whom I will have compaſſion.] 15. For there, upon Moſes's deſire to ſee his glory, he tells him his name, by which he will be proclaimed, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious &c. and ſo again Exod.34.6.i.e. In ſhewing mercy I will doe what I think good, without giving thee, or any man any further account of it, thenmine own moſt gracious will and pleaſure, (not that I have not reaſons to doe it, but that I need not, in diſtributing of mercies, which have no foundation in the merits of men render any other reaſon, or motive, but mine own will, whereby I may doe what I will with mine own;) And accordingly God cannot now be reſtrained in reaſon, or juſtice from ſhewing mercy to the heathen world, ſo farre, as to appoint Chriſt to be preached to them, For what ſhould oblige or lay any neceſſity on him to damne, or reject eternally every one that deſerved it? From which declaration of God's it follows, that therefore God may moſt juſtly call, and accept, and have mercy on Gentiles, invite them to Chriſtianity, though never ſo Idolatrous, and then ſave them upon Chriſtian, without legal, performances.

16. So then it is not of him that willeth, or of him that runneth, but of God, that ſheweth mercy.] 16. From which teſtimony it is plain, that this mercy is not the merit or due peculiarly of them that moſt violently pretend to have it ſo, and ſtrive moſt for it, (i.e. of the Jewes, as is implied v.31. though they ſtrive not as they ought to doe,) and again that 'tis not any thing of merit in the Gentile, for which God calls him to Chriſtianity, (now the Jew hath rejected it) as 'twas not all that Iſaac could doe by willing to beſtow the bleſſing on Eſau, nor that Eſau could doe by running to obtain it, when he came running and crying, Haſt thou but one bleſſing &c. (ſee Chryſoſt: t.5. p.775.) but only the free mercy of God to undeſerving Gentiles, (when the Jewes have firſt had, and contemned this mercy.)

17. For the ſcripture ſaith unto Pharaoh, Even for this ſame purpoſe have I † raiſed thee raiſed thee up, that I might ſhew my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.] 17. And for the other part of the doctrine, againſt which injuſtice was objected, viz: that of the rejecting of the Jewes, and not juſtifying them, upon obſervation of Moſaical external performances, without inward purity preacht by Chriſt, there is as plain a teſtimony again of God's, concerning his dealing in the like caſe, viz: ſhewing exemplary puniſhments on impenitent ſinners (and ſuch were the Jewes that would not beleive on Chriſt, but depended on the prerogative of their birth and legal performances) And this is in the caſe of Pharaoh Exod.9.10. when after the ſixt judgment, Pharaoh having hardned his own heart ſo long, and over and above fruſtrated Moſes's ſpecial laſt warning, Exod. 8. 29. and hardned his heart that time alſo, v.32. (anſwerable to which was the Jewes reſiſting of Chriſt alſo after all the reſt of the prophets, ſtoning the ſon after the ſervants, in the parable, and moreover reſiſting of the Apoſtles preaching through all their cities, after Chriſt's reſurrection, upon which God gave them up to obduration, and the Apoſtles departed to the Gentiles,) God takes Pharaoh in hand, and ſaith he will harden his heart (v. 12) this time, though not before v.14. and adds that he had or would have cut him off with the peſtilence (ſee note i.) and utterly deſtroyed him from the earth, ſee v.15. in the præter, not future tenſe, but that he preſerved him alive beyond his time, raiſed him out of that great danger, or peſtilential diſeaſe, that had been upon the land, for no other end, but to make the divine power more illuſtriouſly viſible in him, and make all the earth hear of the exemplary puniſhments of God, in this life, upon one, that had thus often hardned his heart againſt God. h.

* ſo then Aor. 2. 18. *Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he wil he i hardneth. 18. From which ſpeech of God's to Pharaoh 'tis evident, that as God in ſhewing mercy is not bound to render any reaſon of it beyond his own will, v.15. ſo when he delivers up an obdurate ſinner to the obduration of his heart, this he may juſtly doe, if he pleaſe, eſpecially when all that is done in this, is not by infuſing any quality into him, but by leaving him now to himſelf, who had ſo often held out againſt God, and by inflicting that judgment on him on earth, which had otherwiſe been at this time his portion in hell; and this for ends formerly mentioned ver.17. Whereas to many others, not ſo farre advanced in obduration, he continueth his admonitions and chaſtiſements, and by that means brings them to reformation. (And as this was moſt viſibly true on one ſide in Pharaoh, and on many other men on the other ſide, to whom God ſhewes himſelf thus merciful, infinitely beyond their merit, of which no account can be given by us, but only God's free mercy, So in the caſe in hand of the Jewes and Gentiles, 'tis moſt obſervable, God's free undeſerved grace is his only motive to ſhew mercy to the Gentiles, to call them to the Goſpel, and his free pleaſure to deal thus i.

with the incredulous obdurate Jewes, to leave them at laſt to themſelves (upon their hardning themſelves ſo oft, deſpiſing the prophets, crucifying the Son of God, and at laſt rejecting the Apoſtles, and in them the holy Ghoſt coming to them, fortified with that great teſtimony (as of Jonas out of the whales belly, which converted ſinfull Ninive) the reſurrection of Chriſt from the dead) and ſo by hiding from their eyes the things that belong to their peace, by withdrawing the Goſpel from them, to harden their hearts, Mat.13.14. Mar.4.12. Lu.8.10. Joh.12.40. Act. 28.26. Rom. 11.8.

19. But upon this paſſage of Pharaoh 19. Thou wilt ſay then unto me, Why doth he yet find fault? For who hath reſiſted his will?]

'tis, or may be objected, If God after the ſixt judgment hardned Pharaoh's heart, why doth he then expoſtulate or chide with him after that, as 'tis clear he doth, Exod.9.17. [As yet exalteſt thou thy ſelf?] for then God might be ſaid to will his obduration, which he had inflicted on him, as a puniſhment, and then what poſſibility was there for him to reſiſt his will, that God ſhould ſtill find fault? (Parallel to this it may perhaps be objected in reſpect of the Jewes, who after God's delivering up the Jewes to that obduration, foretold Mat.13.14. and intimated (though not yet, at the ſpeaking of thoſe words, come to paſſe) Lu. 19.42. that after the Apoſtles departing from them, and preaching to the Gentiles, Act.13 46. he yet by himſelf, and his Apoſtles reproves and chides them, when now the prædiction of their ſubverſion and total deſtruction is irreverſibly gone out againſt them, Lu.23.44. To this objection moſt clearly and punctually propoſed (as it concerns Pharaoh at that time of his life, when God ſaid [As yet exalteſt thou thy ſelf?] and by intimation and analogie, as it concerns the Jewes, his parallel) and indeed to the whole matter before ſet down, the Apoſtle anſwers, 1. by way of indignation againſt the objecter, to repell the force of his argument, thus,

20. In matters that thus belong to the wiſdome of God, and his diſpenſations, what man ſhall dare object any thing againſt his proceedings? ſhall the creature diſpute with the creator, or queſtion him, to what end he hath thus and thus dealt with him? Is there any reaſon to find fault with God (or ſo much as to make any reply to him) for asking that queſtion of Pharaoh after that time, or for admoniſhing the Jewes after judgment was gone out againſt them? In matters of juſt and equall God is willing to appeal and to be judged by us, Iſa.5.3. Ezech.18.25. but in matters of wiſdome, whether he hath done wiſely, or no, in expoſtulating with Pharaoh, and the Jewes, when he hath deſerted and delivered them up irreverſibly to the hardneſſe of their own hearts, there is no reaſon in the world, that what God hath done ſhould be diſputed againſt by us, or that he ſhould be bound to render, or we be ſuppoſed to diſcern a reaſon of it.

20. Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliеſt * againſt God? ſhall the thing formed ſay to him that formed it, Why haſt thou made me thus?] * to God n' God

21. Nay we give that liberty to an ordinary tradeſman, a potter by name (God uſing that reſemblance in this matter Jer. 18.3.) of the ſame lump of clay to make one veſſel for an honourable uſe, to be employed at the table &c. and while the wheel runs, or the ſtuffe growes worſe, or miſcarries in the hand of the potter, Jer.18.4. and ſo proves unfit for ſo good an employment, to make another for an inferior leſſe honourable uſe, as it ſeems good to him; and why may we not give God leave to have mercy upon one, who, according to the condition of things laid down in the Goſpel, is capable of mercy, and ſo to bring ſome Jewes (a tithe of them Iſa. 16. 14.) and a multitude of heathens to Chriſtianity, and to life, by their performance of thoſe conditions, on which God hath promiſed reception, and on the other ſide to reject all obſtinate contemners of them, to leave them in their obduration, nay to deal with them, as he did with Pharaoh, by withdrawing all grace, by hiding from their eyes the things that belonged to their peace, after they have ſo long ſhut their eyes wilfully and reſolvedly againſt the Goſpel, to harden them irreverſibly, to make another kind of veſſel of them, to ſome, though not an honourable uſe; Jer. 18.4. and ſo to fulfill that prophecie Iſa.6.10. Make their hearts fat &c. and that till their land be utterly deſolate, v. 11. and all this upon their former obdurating their own hearts, Mat.13.15. which is meant by the veſſels miſcarrying in the hand of the potter, i.e. while he was doing that toward them, which belonged to their peace. This being præmiſed for the repelling of the diſputer, he now proceeds to a more punctual, clear, ſatisfactory anſwer, by way of queſtion alſo or interrogation, which may be eaſily diſſolved into this poſitive concluſion.

21. Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the ſame lump to make one veſſel to honour, and another unto diſhonour?]

22. God on purpoſe to expreſſe his wrath viſibly in this life upon Pharaoh (and in like manner on the rebellious Jewes) and to make other nations to take notice, what God is able to doe in the puniſhing of ſinners (an effect of which you may ſee clearly in the Philiſtims, who took warning by this ſtory of Pharaoh, 1 Sam.6.6.) ſuffered this man to live, when he was fit for nothing but hell (having filled up the meaſure of his iniquities) by his continuing alive, to ſhew ſome exemplary judgments upon him; Wherein yet there was longanimity expreſt, and mercy to him, this eſtate on earth being more tolerable, then it had been to have been thrown into hell preſently, As alſo to the Jewes it was, in not cutting them off preſently upon their direfull rebellions (as moſt juſtly he might,) but ſuffering them to continue a people ſome time after the crucifying of Chriſt, and the Apoſtles preaching his reſurrection to them, nay ſending them ſtill to preach over every city of Jewry, as Moſes was ſent to Pharaoh after God's hardning his heart; All which being an act of long-ſuffering to them, was deſigned by God to this end of magnifying his judgments on thoſe who ſhould perſiſt in their obſtinacy, and ſhewing forth his power moſt illuſtrioufly in their deſtruction. Well then, this on Pharaoh and on the Jewes was done firſt to ſhew God's wrath in puniſhing of obdurate ſinners, but that is not all.

22. † What if God, willing to ſhew his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much long-ſuffering the veſſels of wrath fitted to deſtruction?] † But if or ſ

23. There was another more remote end of it, (ſee ch.11.11,12.) by this means of diſcernible ſeverity on them, to illuſtrate and ſet forth more notably his abundant goodneſſe to others, to afford the Goſpel, and the benefits of the coming of Chriſt, and his preſence here on earth (for that ſeems to be the meaning of the word [glory] as that notes the preſence of God among the Jewes, ſee note c. & on John 1. c.) on ſome others, whom he had prepared and fitted before-hand, for theſe more honourable purpoſes, beleiving in Chriſt here, and reigning with him hereafter. (And thus that is true alſo, which was ſaid in the other part of v.18. He decreed to ſhew mercy on the Gentiles and others beleiving in Chriſt, as he hardned the veſſels of wrath, the obdurate contumacious Jewes.)

23. And that he might make known the riches of his glory on the veſſels of mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory?]

26. And according to that other saying of Hosea, c. 1. 10. which is thus to be rendred out of the originall, And it shall come to passe in stead of that which was said to them, Ye are not my people, it shall be said to them, Yee are the Sonnes of the living God, which place seems to belong to the Jewes (not Gentiles) those of them that should beleive at the preaching of the Gospell, (for so the next verse Hos. 1. 11. seems to import, and the place which here follows of Isaiah) now after they had been carryed captive so oft, and so severely punisht by God for their sins.

27. Esaias also cryeth concerning Israel, Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the Sea, a remnant shall † be saved.]

27. Whereupon Isaiah also prophecies, and proclaimes concerning the Jewes, Isa. 10. 22, 23. thus, Though the number of the people of the Jewes bee as the sand of the Sea, the number of carnall Israelites never so great, yet a very few of them shall believe in Christ, (see Act: 2. 47.) or, as it is in the originall, return, i. e. convert from their rebellions to Christ.

28. For the Lord shall deal in justice with, or upon the land of Judæa (the people of the Jewes) as one that perfects or makes up an account, and casts off, i. e. which in making up an account of a stewardship, having ballanced the disbursements with the receipts, leaves some small sum behinde, be there never so many of that people, there shall but few be left, the farre greater part being involved in infidelity first, and then in destruction. k.

29. And as Esaias said before, Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been as Sodome, and been made like unto Gomorrha.]

29. And as Isaiah saith again, c. 1. 9. of the same people, Unlesse the Lord of the hosts of Angels and starres in heaven, and of the whole frame of the world, had left to us Jewes a seed, (in which, as other things, when they are dead, use to revive, so that people, almost utterly destroyed, might have some possibility of springing up again) or, as the originall in Isaiah hath it, a very small remnant, we had been as utterly destroyed, as Sodome and Gomorrha were.

30. What † shall we say then? that the Gentiles which followed not after righteousnesse, have l attained to righteousnesse, even the righteousnesse which is of faith.]

30. To conclude therefore, that which all this while hath been a proving (and to the proving of which all that hath been said in this Chapter must be referr'd, as præmises to infer this conclusion and no other) is this, That the Gentiles that strove not for justification, that did not so zealously pretend that they were the favourites of God, did attain to it by receiving the faith of Christ, upon which, though they had formerly been Idolaters, they were justified. l.

* came not foremost, ἔφθασεν

31. But Israel, which followed after the law of righteousnesse, * hath not attained to the law of righteousnesse.]

31. But the Jewes that did most diligently contend to be justified by the law, did not yet outrun the Gentiles, attain the goale, or get justification before them, but on the contrary, the Gentiles have gotten the advantage of them very much.

† the τῷ

32. Wherefore? because they sought it not by faith, but, as it were, by the workes of the law: for they stumbled at † that stumbling stone,]

32. And why not? why, because they sought it not by Christ, or by the Evangelicall way, nay could not endure that, when it was revealed to them, but onely by the privileges of being Jewes, and performance of externall, legal observances, and so fell down in the midst of their race, being not patient to beleive that their law should bee abolished (or that Christ that was born, lived, and dyed in a mean condition, should be the Messias of the world, 1 Cor: 1. 23.) but upon that one prejudice, casting off all Christianity,

* a stone of offence and a stone of scandall, λίθον προσκόμματος καὶ πέτραν σκανδάλου,

33 As it is written, Behold I lay in Sion* a stumbling stone, and a rock of offence: and whosoever beleiveth on him, m shall not be ashamed.]

33. According to that which is written Isa: 28. 16. Behold I lay in Sion a stone tryed and precious (see note on Mat: 10. b.) but such an one, as the Jewes should stumble at, thinking it contrary to the Mosaicall way, and so falling off from, and persecuting Christianity; which notwithstanding, the true orthodoxe faithfull Christian will still adhere, and hold fast, and never forsake, or deny Christ (see c. 10, 11. and 1 Pet: 2. 6.) nor consequently shall he ever bee denyed, or forsaken by him. m.

The summe then of this whole chapter will be reduced to these five heads, first, the privileges of the Jewes, and among them especially Christ's being born of that stock; secondly, that those of them, which resisted and beleived not in Christ, were delivered up to obduration by God, and the Gentiles taken in in their stead; thirdly, that 'twas most just in God to deal thus with them; fourthly, that some of the Jewes at that time beleived in Christ; fifthly, that the cause that the rest beleived not was, that after a Pharisaicall manner they sought justification by the works of the law, circumcision &c: despising the faith and doctrine of Christ, and that Evangelicall way of justification, and so stumbled at the Christian doctrine, which they should have beleived, were the worse for him and the preaching of the Apostles, by whom they should have been so much the better.

Notes on Chap. IX.

2. ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ

This speciall expression of [God] in, or by the holy Ghost, which in stead of [ὁ θεὸς God] c. 1. 9. is used in this, and some other places, doth denote the speciall office, and prærogative of that holy Spirit, as to plant purity and sincerity in the heart, contrary to all kinde of pollution and mixture, especially that of deceit, and hypocrisie, so to be privy to the secrets, to take notice of the motions of the heart. And this in proportion with the spirit of a man, of which, as Solomon saith, that it is the candle of the Lord, searching the inner parts of the belly, so saith the Apostle 1 Cor: 2. 11. The Spirit of a man knoweth the things of a man, so as no man else knowes them: by analogy to which he infers, that there is no other way of knowing the things of God, but by his Spirit's revealing them to us. For the Spirit searcheth all things, even the depths of God, v. 10. in which respect the spirit of the world, v. 12.

is set to denote the meanes, which the world hath to instruct us in any thing, the wisedome of the world, v. 13. which is there set opposite to the spirit of God. Thus Act: 5. Ananias, that had in heart and resolution consecrated his estate to the service of Christ, and broke this resolution, or promise of his heart, is said to ly to, or to have deceived the holy Ghost peculiarly, v. 3. because he had done contrary to the vow of his heart, which (though not under man's, yet) was under the Holy Ghost's privity. And so here beside the witnesse of the conscience, the Holy Ghost is appealed to, as hee that knowes the inmost secrecies, and consequently, that that is the testimony of his conscience, which hee pretends to be so.

b. Ἀνάθεμα εἶναι

The phrase ἀνάθεμα εἶναι, to be a curse, in this place, is capable of many significations, each of which may be applyable to the matter in hand to expresse the Apostles fervent affection towards his countrymen, First, it may signifie, to be excommunicate, and cast out of the Church, Ἀνάθεμα ἀκοινώνητος, it signifies excommunicate, saith Hesychius. Thus ἤτω ἀνάθεμα 1 Cor. 16. 22. Let him be anathema, is, let him be removed from the Christian assemblies, deprived of those privileges of Christians, which there are afforded them, & so Gal: 1. 8. 9. ἀνάθεμα ἔστω, let him be excommunicated, turned out with the greatest aversation, out of the Church of God, avoided, separated from, whosoever shall teach any other doctrine, though hee were an Apostle, or an Angel of God, that did it. If this bee the notion, then ἀπὸ Χριστοῦ from Christ must signifie from the body of Christ, as by a synecdoche, the word [Christ] is used, 1 Cor: 12. 12. Gal: 3. 27. or as it is manifest, that Christ being the head of the Church, he that is cut off from the body, may truly be said to be cut off from Christ. And then he that was by the Jewes accused, and persecuted for having made a defection, and departure from the Mosaicall law, and setting up Christian assemblies, in opposition to their Judaicall service, may here fitly expresse his kindnes to them, (& how little pleasure he took in departing from them) in wishing himself ejected from the participation of those most valuable privileges, on condition they might be made capable of them; Secondly, it is known that in those Primitive times this anathematizing, or excommunicating was attended with the delivering up to Satan, and that with the ὄλεθρος σαρκὸς, very sharp, severe inflictions on the flesh, diseases, afflictions &c: And therefore anathema in this notion, may be taken, with this improvement, and so contain all temporall calamities, that he was willing to endure, or undergoe, for their good. That this is the meaning of the place, may seem probable by comparing it with a like phrase of Ignatius the holy Martyr in his Epistle to the Romans, where in an expression of his zeale to Christ, he hath this phrase, Κόλασις τοῦ διαβόλου ἐπ' ἐμὲ ἐρχέσθω, μόνον ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω, Let the punishment of the divell come upon me, onely that I may obtain Christ, where the punishment of the divell cannot bee the punishments of hell, which are no way ordinable to the obtaining of Christ, but any the greatest torments, or inflictions in this life, or even death it selfe, that ὄλεθρος σαρκὸς the destruction of the flesh, As when Moses in an expression of the like zeale, and kindnesse to his brethren, wisheth that God would blot him out of his book, i. e. I suppose, out of the book of the living, in the Psalmists phrase, so as not to be written among the righteous, in that roll, wherein the names of all the people of God are supposed to be inscribed, and to be capable of being blotted out, not noting the state of life, and bliss in heaven, for out of that there is no possibility of blotting, but that, which belongs to this life, i. e. either life simply, or living among the people of God, (answerable to excommunication, before mention'd) And accordingly the Arabicke translation is, that my body were מחרמא an anathema from Christ, And it is an ordinary form of speech among the Jewes, אני כפרתו, may I be his expiation, see Aruch, and Cod: Sanhedrin, c. 2. אנו כפרתך bee wee thy expiation, which saith Maimonides, is used to expresse רוב אהבותו the excesse of love, or kindnesse to any. The other notions of the phrase, of which it is capable, and have therefore been mention'd in the paraphrase, may be seen at large in Photius, Epist: 216.

That the ark of God, where he was pleased to exhibit himselfe, is the thing expressed by [ὁ δόξα the glory] is clear by that known place in the old Testament [The glory is departed from Israel, for the ark of God is taken] And the reason of the appellation is as clear, because the Cherubims being placed in the ark on the ἱλαστήριον, or covering, God was said to be present there, in the same manner, as on Mount Sinai, (i. e. by the visible apparition of Angels there) Act: 7. 53. Gal: 3. 19. Heb: 2. 2. And this presence of his by Angels is ordinarily called δόξα glory in the New Testament, answerable to שְׁכִינָה among the Rabbins (from Exod: 24. 16. the glory of the Lord יִשְׁכֹּן dwelt, or, abode upon the Mount, To which the Apostle refers 2 Cor. 3. 9. where the giving of the law was said to bee δόξα glory) as may appeare by many places, Thus when Isa: 6. 1. we read, after the Lord's sitting on the throne, that his train filled the Temple, The Septuagint have, πλήρης ὁ οἶκος δόξης αὐτοῦ, the house was full of his glory, and then follows immediately, καὶ Σεραφὶμ εἱστήκεισαν κυκλῷ αὐτοῦ, the Seraphim stood about him, and Saint John retaines the Septuagints reading, Joh: 12. 41. these things spake Isaiah, when he saw his glory (see note on Joh: 1. b. and Mat: 3. h.) so Mat: 16. 27. where ἔρχεσθαι ἐν δόξῃ τοῦ πατρὸς to come in the glory of the father is explained presently by μετ' ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ with his angels, and so Mat: 25. 31. in his glory, and all his Angels with him, and so Mar: 8. 38. the glory of the Father, with his holy Angels, and c. 13. 26. where his coming in the clouds (which that it belongs to the appearance of Angels, which was wont to be in a bright shining cloud, which we ordinarily call a glory) is said to be in power and great glory, and it follows immediately v. 27. and then shall he send his Angels, and so Luc: 21. 27. So Luc: 2. 9. the Angel of the Lord appeared, and the glory shone round about, So Joh: 1. 19. when he had said of Christ incarnate, ἐσκήνωσεν, hee dwelt among us (that Greek word being of the same Hebrew origination with the שכינה) it follows, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the onely begotten of the Father, viz: in the descent of the Holy Ghost (with that satellitium of Angels) upon him after his baptism, the like to which 2 Pet: 1. 17. is called a voyce from heaven, from the excellent glory, See also

c. δόξα.

ſo 2 Pet: 1. 3. and 1 Pet: 4. e. So Act: 7. 55. when tis ſaid of Stephen, that hee ſaw the glory of God, that is ſure the guard of Angels about God, ſo theſe very Angels in the arke are called the Cherubims of glory, Heb: 9. 5. Agreeable to this is the ναὸς κατασκηνώσεως τῆ ὑψίστε, Job: 1. 5. the temple of the inhabitation or שכינה appearance, or glory of the moſt high, and ſo 2 Cor: 12. 9. [ἵνα ἐπισκηνώσῃ ἐπ' ἐμὲ ἡ δύναμις τῦ Χριστῦ, that the power of Chriſt may inhabit upon me] referres to the uſe of the word σκηνόω from שכן, to this ſenſe, that the power of Chriſt ſhould ſo ſhew it ſelfe upon him, as God was wont to exhibit himſelf in the שכינה, or glorious appearance in the arke. And thus in the Gemara Babylonica, ſpeaking of the High-prieſt, when he enquires any thing of the Urim and Thummim, פניו כלפי שכינה, he turnes his face toward Schechinah i. e, toward the arke, where God is ſaid to inhabit.

d. Chriſt luculenter hic divinat. This place is ſo clear a proof of the divinity of Chriſt, that Proclus de Fide p. 53. ſaith of it, that it convinces all the hæreſies concerning Chriſt, ᾗ πᾶσιν ἀναντίρρητα ἀποτυχίζει τὰς φιλαλήθεις, and it ſhuts and walls up all paſſages for calumny from them that love contumely, or railing at Chriſt. This will more appear, if it be remembred, that it was a cuſtome among the Jewes ſolemnely obſerved, that when ever the Prieſt in the Sanctuary delivered the name of God, the people uſed ſome words of bleſſing or praiſing him, ſuch as theſe ברוך שם כבוד מלכותו לעולם ועד benedictum ſit nomen gloria regni ejus in ſecula ſeculorum, bleſſed be the name of the glory of his kingdome for ever and ever. So in Gemara Babylonica, Rabbi ſaid כי שם ה׳ אקרא &c: when I call on the name of Jehovah, doe you magnifie our Lord, ſo ſaid Moſes to Iſrael, (Deut: 32. 3.) when I mention the name of the bleſſed God, doe you magnifie. So ſaith Solomon Iarchi on Deut: 32. 3. From that command of Moſes it is, that after the benediction in the Sanctuary the people anſwer ברוך שם &c: Bleſſed be the glorious name of his kingdome. To theſe forms were after added the words לעולם ועד for ever and ever, or, to age and age, i. e. εἰς αἰῶνας, to ages, here, becauſe (ſay the Rabbins) of the hæreſie of the Sadducees, who ſaid there was but one age. So Cod: Berachoth c. 9. In all the concluſions of the ברכות benedictions, which were in the Sanctuary, they ſaid מן העולם from age, but after that the Sadducees had perverted that, and ſaid there was but one age, they decreed that they ſhould ſay, from age to age. Many evidences of this cuſtome there are in the Old Teſtament, eſpecially in the Pſalms. And the abbreviate of all theſe forms was (the words uſed Rom: 1. 25.) ὃς ἐστιν εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, Ἀμήν, Who is bleſſed for ever, Amen: and here ſomewhat more largely, ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων θεὸς &c: who is above all, God bleſſed for ever and ever, Amen. Parallel to this are thoſe other, the doxology at the end of the Lord's Prayer, Mat: 6. and in this Epiſtle, αὐτῷ ἡ δόξα εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, Ἀμήν, to him be glory for ever, Amen. c. 11. 36. and c. 16. 7. and Gal: 1. 5. and Eph: 3. 21. Phil: 4. 20. 1 Tim: 1. 17. 2 Tim: 4. 18. and Hebr: 13. 21. 1 Pet: 4. 11. and 5. 11. and 2 Pet: 3. 18. Jude 25. Rev: 1. 6. and 7. 12. In all which places this giving of glory being an acknowledgement of the eternall God, and in ſeverall of them being applyed peculiarly to Chriſt (who is diſtinctly called God, Act: 20. 28. 1 Tim: 3. 16. Tit: 2. 13.) as here, and Heb: 13. 21. and in all the places in Saint Peter, and Revel: 1. 6. this is a moſt convincing proofe of the Godhead of Chriſt teſtified in all theſe places. And of this cuſtome of the Jewes applyed to Chriſt, the Chriſtian Church hath continued two imitations, one in bowing at the name of Jeſus, the other in that Eulogie [Glory be to thee, ô Lord] when the Goſpell of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt is named.

e. Κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τῦτον. What is meant by κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τῦτον, according to this ſeaſon] will beſt appear by Gen: 17. 21. and 18. 10. in the former of which tis rendred in the Greek εἰς τὸν καιρὸν τῦτον ἐν τῷ ἐνιαυτῷ ἑτέρῳ according to this time in another year, In the latter κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τῦτον εἰς ὥρας according to this ſeaſon for times, which, I ſuppoſe, is corruptly ſet out for τῆς ὥρας of time, ὥρα being a ſeaſon, or time of yeare, and ſo the meaning will be, [according to this time of the year.] The Hebrew reads it c. 17. למועד הזה literally κατὰ καιρὸν τῦτον according to this ſeaſon, the word rendred καιρὸς ſignifying indifferently time, (though (coming from a root that ſignifies conſtituit) it be ordinarily rendred. appointed time) and in c. 18. 'tis כעת חיה we render it, according to the time of life, the Jeruſalem Targum, quaſi hoc tempore, quo vos vivitis, as it were at this time, wherein ye live (unleſſe perhaps that be capable of an emendation, and ſhould bee והוה, or הזאת according to this time, for ſo Rabbi Solomon כעת הזאת &c: ſecundum hoc tempus anni futuri, according to this time of the future year, and Aben Ezra כעת הזאת, juxta tempus hoc in anno ſequenti, cum Sara herit viva, about this time in the year following, when Sarah ſhall be alive, taking in the reading of חוה alſo) All this ſeems to denote, not that time twelve moneth, but the next year at the time of childbirth, reckoning from that time, wherein the promiſe was made (ſee Paulus Fagius in Collat:) And ſo 2 Kin: 4. 16. the like phraſe [about this ſeaſon according to the time of life thou ſhalt embrace a Son,] is by the Hebrewes interpreted, after the time wherein the fruit ſhall be quickened in the wombe, and come to a perfect firmneſs of parts, and ſo come to birth, thou ſhalt embrace, or have a ſon. So that [according to the time of life] may moſt fitly ſignifie [according to the manner, or courſe of childrens being formed in the wombe, quickened and born.]

f. ἐξ ἑνὸς Some other waies of rendring theſe words [ἐξ ἑνὸς of one] have been thought of by learned men, which it will not be unfit to mention, As that ἑνὸς ſhould be all one with μονογενῦς, for ſo יחיד unigenitus, was the title of Iſaac among the Jewes, Gen. 22. 2. Heb. 11. 17. and from thence Ιαὼδ in Philo Biblius by the Tyrian dialect, for Ισὰκ, and then the ſenſe will be, Rebecca having conceived by the only begotten, to wit, Iſaac, our father, or, by Iſaac the only begotten of our father. But ἐξ ἑνὸς ſeems rather to be taken adverbially to ſignifie at once, (there being no priority in their conception, on which to ground any favour to one above another) and beſt agrees with the deſigne or argument which that is brought to confirm here. As for κατὰ τὸ λέγειν, that is but a modeſt circumlocution to expreſſe that, which is not wont to be plainly ſpoken, as we find κοίτη a bed] uſed ch. 13. 13. and Heb. 13. 4. Κατὰ τὸ λέγειν

g. The Hebrew בחר signifies both to chuſe, and to preferre, and is therefore rendred not only ἐκλέγειν to chuſe, but alſo προαιρεῖν to preferre, Deut. 7.6. and 10.15. Prov. 1.29. and agreeably to that ἐκλογὴ election here ſignifies prælation, and ἡ κατ' ἐκλογὴν Θεῦ προθέσεως is God's purpoſe in reſpect of this (or, for the) preferring one before the other, (ſee note on 1 Pet. 2. c.)

h. The word ἐξεγείρειν] ſignifies not here the raiſing up, as that notes bringing into the world, but the raiſing out of ſome low condition, yet not the grave neither, (though to that the word may properly be applied, where the matter requires it) but diſeaſe or danger, as it is often uſed, but eſpecially Jam. 5. 15. the prayer of faith ſhall ſave, i.e. deliver, recover the ſick, and the Lord ſhall raiſe him up, i. e. reſtore him from that ſickneſſe. For the notion of it here, it will appear by the Hebrew word Exod. 9. 16. הֶעֱמַדְתִּיךָ I have made thee ſtand, which the Chaldee renders קַיֵּמְתָּךְ raiſed thee (from the danger before ſpoken of, the peſtilential diſeaſe, or murrein that had lately been upon the land) and the ancient Latine, ſuſtentavi te, I have ſuſtained thee, but the Septuagint expreſly. διετηρήθης, thou wert kept, guarded, not ſuffered to fall into it, preſerved and kept alive, ſo Iſa. 49. 8. to raiſe up or make ſtand (the word uſed there) is an expreſſion of preſerving, reſcuing from danger, delivering (ſee note on Mat. 22.d.) And ſo this ſpeech muſt neceſſarily belong to that part of Pharaoh's life peculiarly, wherein the murrein fell on Ægypt, Exod. 9. 3. at which time he for his many repeated obdurations of his own heart, was fit to have been delivered up to inſtant ruine, had not God for the illuſtrating of his glory in this veſſel of wrath, (thus fitted by himſelfe for deſtruction) kept him alive a little longer.

Ἐξεγείρω

i. God's hardning of Pharaoh's heart in this place, is that which befell Pharaoh, Exod. 10. 1. when God ſaith of him, I have hardned his heart; This was indeed foretold by God from the firſt of his ſending Moſes to him, c. 4. 21. Doe all the wonders before Pharaoh, which I have put into thine hand, but I will harden his heart, that he ſhall not let the people goe; and again c. 7. 3. I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply my ſignes, and &c. But this foretelling it ſo early, is no argument that it was immediately done, but on the contrary, his own hardning his own heart is alſo foretold Exod. 3. 19. I am ſure that the king of Ægypt will not let you goe, no not by a mighty hand, And accordingly ſo the ſtory proceeds, God ſhewes miracles and ſignes before Pharaoh, Exod. 7. 10. and becauſe the Magicians of Ægypt did the like with their inchantments, it follows, Pharaoh's heart was hardned (not, he (as if it were God) hardned Pharaoh's heart, but) וַיֶּחֱזַק לֵב פַּרְעֹה Pharaoh's heart waxed hard, or ſtrong, was hardned, or, by an ordinary acception of Kal for Hithpahel, Pharaoh's heart hardned it ſelf, And, ſo it followes, v. 14. the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, Pharaoh's heart is waxen hard, he refuſeth &c. (and ſo the very ſame words are rendred by our Engliſh ch. 7. 22. and ch. 8. 19. was hardned, in the paſſive, or, hardned its ſelf in the reciprocal (not actively, he hardned) and he hearkned not unto them.) After his hardning his heart thus againſt this firſt ſigne and command, God proceeds to a judgment of turning their water into blood, Exod. 7. 16, 17. and this as a ſufficient conviction to Pharaoh, for ſo ſaith God, Hitherto thou wouldſt not hear, but in this thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord, behold I will ſmite &c. And yet after this, Pharaoh's heart was hardned, or hardned it ſelf, v. 22. neither did he ſet his heart to this alſo, v. 23. becauſe the Magicians did the ſame things alſo by their enchantments. Then comes the plague of the frogges on him, Exod. 8. 4. and into the King's chamber, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, and to deliver him from them he calls for Moſes and promiſes fair, v. 8. and Moſes to work ſome good upon him, bids him chuſe his time, when, v. 9. and it ſhould be done for him, that thou mayſt know that there is none like unto the Lord our God v. 10. but this had no effect on him neither, for when he ſaw there was reſpite, not yet diſcerning God's purpoſe of vengeance on him for his contumacy, he hardned his heart, Whereupon ſaith * Kimchi, that God hardens hearts by concealing his counſels of judgment from them, as in Pharaoh and Sihon; and it is * S. Baſils obſervation, that Θεῦ μακροθυμία σωτηρίας δοτὴρ, God's long-ſuffering, giving him reſpite, was the cauſe, or occaſion of his obduration of heart, He hardned his heart, and hearkned not, v. 15. and this was a third wilfull act of his own obduration, agreeable to what God had foretold of him, c. 3. 19. as the Lord had ſaid. Then comes the plague of lice v. 17. and the Magicians are poſed with that, and confeſſe the finger of God, and yet for all this his heart was hardned, or hardned its ſelf v. 19. and he hearkned not, as the Lord had ſaid. Then 5ly, comes a ſwarm of flies, and with it a ſigne, as well as a miraculous puniſhment, no flies ſwarming in Goſhen, but in all the land of Ægypt beſides, by the diviſion and particularity of the puniſhment, to make him ſenſible of his ſinne, to the end that he might know, v. 22. on purpoſe to ſoften his heart. By this Pharaoh was wrought on a little, and gives leave 1. that they ſhould ſacrifice, then that they ſhould go into the wilderneſs, only not very farre away Exod. 10. 28. and upon this promiſe Moſes will intreat for him, v. 29. But ſeeing Pharaoh had already hardned his heart four times, and at one of thoſe times over and above dealt falſly, promiſed fair ch. 8. 8. and brake his promiſe, therefore now after this fift judgment though Moſes promiſe to pray upon his promiſe to mend, yet he doth it with a particular admonition or warning, more then any time before, But let not Pharaoh deal deceitfully any more, v. 29. intimating that if he did, it would be worſe with him then before, and yet v. 32. as ſoon as the judgment was removed, Pharaoh hardned his heart, בַּפַּעַם הַזֹּאת this turn, this time alſo. Upon this God ſends the ſixt plague, that of murrein upon all the cattel of Ægypt, c. 9. 6. and the heart of Pharaoh was hardned v. 7. and ſo ſtill, all this while, for theſe ſix judgments together, though Pharaoh were obdurate, yet this was not God's hardning his heart, but Pharaoh hardens his own heart, and will not let Iſrael goe, as the Lord commanded. Upon this God ſends another judgment, that of boyles and blaines v. 10. and then 'tis ſaid in a new ſtyle, The Lord hardned Pharaoh's heart v. 12. wch as it was the very time at firſt referred to by the prædiction of God to Moſes, c. 4. 21. ſo was it the judgment implicitly implicitly threatned in that ſpeciall warning, c. 8. 29. and this God never did till then, and therefore as after that warning 'twas ſaid, that Pharaoh hardned his heart this time alſo, So 'tis here ſaid v.14. that this time, this turn, now, though not before, God would pour out all his plagues upon his heart, viz: this obduration, or the effects of it. Upon which follows that paſſage wherein our common tranſlation hath ſo much miſtaken c.9.14,15. not, as we read, [For now I will ſtretch out my hand that I may ſmite thee and thy people with the peſtilence] for the event proves there was no ſuch matter, Pharaoh was not ſmitten with the peſtilence, nor cut off by that means, but drowned in the red ſea, ſome time after, But thus [And, or, For now I had ſent, or ſtretcht out my hand, and I had ſmitten thee and thy people with the peſtilence, and thou hadſt been cut off from the earth] It is שלחתי in the prater tenſe, ſent, or, had ſent, as M^r Aynſworth confeſſes, and the learned Paulus Fagius out of the Chaldee Paraphraſe, Nunc prope erat coram me, ut miſiſſem plagam, & percuſſiſſem te, & deletus eſſes, I was neer ſtretching out my hand to have ſent the plague, and have ſtruck thee, and thou hadſt been blotted out; referring probably to the plague of the murrein at the beginning of the chapter, (called דבר both here, and v.3. and that falling on the cattel, might have fallen on him, and the people alſo,) or elſe to the boyles ver. 12. which might be plague-ſwellings, and ſo proper enough to have cut him off. But (not, And) in very deed for this cauſe I have made thee ſtand, kept thee alive, to ſhew, or, make to be ſeen (ſo והראיך literally ſignifies) my power in thee, as when, ſaith * Chryſoſtome, a man condemned to death, is cut up, and anatomized alive, that others may be inſtructed, and benefited by that diſſection. By this then 'tis viſible, what was the point of time, wherein 'tis truly ſaid of God, that he hardned Pharaoh's heart, then when 'tis ſaid he kept him alive, i.e. after the ſixt judgment, and a ſpeciall warning before that, both contemned by Pharaoh, when he had filled up the meaſure of his obduration, and in ordinary courſe was to be cut off by death, and ſo 'tis here added in reference to this example of Pharaoh v. 22. God willing to ſhew his wrath, and make his power to be known (to other men that might ſee or hear of this) endured with much long-ſuffering the veſſels of wrath fitted to deſtruction, which notes that he was by himſelf fitted to deſtruction, when God thus reprieved him, at which time alſo 'tis ſaid that he, i.e. God hardned his heart. By this obſervation of the time when God hardned Pharaoh, not till after his hardning his own heart ſix times againſt God's ſignes and judgments, will appear what this hardning ſignifies, the total withdrawing of God's grace of repentance from him, in the ſame manner, as when one is caſt into hell, which Pharaoh at that time had been, had it not been more for God's glory to continue him alive a while, in that deſperate irreverſible condition, which ſure was no whit worſe to him, but ſomewhat better and more deſirable, then to have been adjudged to thoſe flames all that time. To this may be added what the Greek Fathers obſerve, that God's giving him reſpite, removing his puniſhments, was all that God poſitively did toward the hardning of him, as on the other ſide the great mercy of reforming ſinners lives, is moſt effectually wrought by chaſtiſements. See Origen, Philocal: c. 26. This was a notable, and withall (as farre as we find in Scripture) a ſingular example of God's dealing with an impenitent, that had filled up his meaſure, keeping him alive, but without all grace, and conſequent poſſibility of amending. And by this example appears, how juſtly God might now doe the like to the Jewes of that age, (if ſo he pleaſed) thoſe who, contrary to all his mercies, and long-ſuffering, continued obſtinate, reſiſted all God's methods by prophets, by Chriſt himſelf, by the Apoſtles, teſtifying the reſurrection (and giving them a ſpecial warning, what would befall them if they now continued obſtinate, *Act.*28 28.) and now are juſtly left to themſelves, the Goſpel taken from them, and preacht to the Gentiles, and this upon ends of infinite wiſdome firſt in mercy to them (above the proportion of that to Pharaoh) that the Gentiles coming in might ſtirre them up to emulation, and ſo, if 'twere poſſible, work upon them, and 2^dly that if this alſo prevailed not, God might be glorified in their deſtruction, that as Pharaoh by purſuing the Iſraelites after this, came to that moſt remarkable, illuſtrious deſtruction in the Red-ſea, ſo theſe hardned Jewes (perſecuting the orthodox Chriſtians) and all the falſe impious profeſſors joyning with them herein, might be involved in one common deſtruction, viz: that by Titus and the Roman Eaglet, the moſt eminent and notable, that ever was in the world.

This verſe is cited out of Iſaiah c.10.22. where the Greek reads it, juſt as 'tis in the ordinary copies here, only leaving out the כי for, and in ſtead of כלה ואחרצה on the land, ἐν τῇ οἰκουμένῃ ὅλῃ, on the whole world. As for the [כי] that is here, it cannot well accord with the כי following, unleſſe the כי be taken in another ſenſe, for an expletive, or ſcilicet, not a cauſal. But the truth is, the ordinary reading here, beginning with λόγον συ] ſeems to be the true one ſo farre, but in the proceſſe of it to have ſome words put in out of the Septuagint, viz: ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ ὅτι λόγον συντελῶν συντέμνων. For without thoſe the King's MS. reads it perſpicuouſly, thus, λόγον γὰρ συντελῶν καὶ συντέμνων ποιήσει Κύριος ὅλῃ τῇ γῇ, For the Lord ſhall doe upon the land, perfecting and cutting ſhort the account (i.e. ſhall perfect and cut ſhort) or, the Lord ſhall make up an account, perfecting and cutting it ſhort upon the land. Where the uſe of λόγος for an account, is agreeable to what was obſerved c.3. g. and συντελεῖν and συντέμνειν λόγον is upon the ballancing of accounts, (receits on one ſide, and expenſes on the other,) to cut off one from the other, and to ſet down the remainder, which is ordinarily (in a ſtewards account) a very contemptible low ſumme, and ſo is it, that the Prophets call שאר a remnant, ὑπολειπόμενα, that which remains of a farre greater ſumme, and ſo is fit to denote that ſmall number of the Jewes which received the faith of Chriſt (at the preaching of the Goſpel then unto them) in proportion to, and compariſon with the farre greater number, that ſtood out againſt it. So c.11.4. out of 1 Kin. 19.18. κατάλειπον ἐμαυτῷ I have left, or reſerved to my ſelf 7000 men &c. And accordingly here v. 27. they that thus beleive are called κατάλειμμα a remainder, and generally in the prophets are are expreſt by that, and the like words, fetcht from this metaphor of accounts.

1. Three words there are here together, διώκειν, καταλαμβάνειν, φθάνειν, to follow after, to attain, to be foremoſt, which are all agoniſtical, referring to the cuſtomes of the Grecian exerciſes in their Olympian, Nemean, Iſthmian, Pythian games, which are often alluded to in theſe Epiſtles. Five of theſe games there were, cuffing, wreſtling, running, coiting, and leaping, That of running δρόμῳ or ποδωκείη (in reference to which in Homer, Achilles is ſo conſtantly called πόδας ὠκὺς, ſwift-footed, to denote his excellence above all in that kind of exerciſe) is here ſpecified by διώκειν purſuing, or ſtriving to overtake, as any did in that exerciſe, when he was behind another. In this, as in the other, there was an ἆθλον or βραβεῖον, a reward or prize propoſed to the racers, which he that came firſt to the goale, was by the βραβεῦς or judge adjudged to have, and it was ordinarily a crown of leaves, called therefore στέφανον φθαρτὸν, a fading crown, 1 Cor. 9. 25. and this generally ſet over the goale, that he that came thither foremoſt might catch it off, and carry it away with him, but ſo, as that the judgment of the Ἑλλανοδίκαι judges of the game did firſt intervene, for ſo ſaith Ælian, Var: Hiſt: l.9. c.31. of the conqueror, ἀπὸν πρὸς τοὺς ἑλλανοδίκας ἵνα λάβῃ τὸ στέφανον, going to the judges of the game that he might receive the crown. And this is called here καταλαμβάνειν to attain, 1 Tim. 2. 12. ἐπιλαμβάνειν and λαμβάνειν to apprehend and receive 1 *Cor.*9.24. which Plutarch calls καθιέναι τὸ στέφανον κρεμάμενον, to catch the crown that hangs over the goale, from whence the conquerours are called ἀθλοφόροι that bear away the reward. Then for φθάνειν to be foremoſt] that is to conquer in this race, to come foremoſt thither. according to that of Plutarch τὸ νικᾶν τῷ φθάνοντι ἐστί, the victory is his that comes firſt, So is the word uſed *Phil.*1.16. and is to get before other men, ſo that (as to the victory,) the prize ſhall belong to him. Juſtification then, the approbation and mercy of God, was the prize or βραβεῖον, that all ran for, Jewes and Gentiles, ver. 30, 31. but the Jewes running for it, or purſuing it by a wrong rule or νόμῳ, viz: by that of the external, legal performances, did not get foremoſt thither, nor conſequently had the reward, but the Gentiles had the advantage of them, and ſo got it. Where of the Jewes 'tis ſaid particularly, that they met with a block in the way, ſtumbled and fell at that, as racers ſometimes doe, and by that means utterly miſcarried.

The Hebrew in Iſa. 28. 16. read יחיש make haſte, but the Greek, it ſeems, read it יבוש, and from thence the Apoſtle here, and c.10.11. (and ſo 1 Pet. 2. 6.) καταισχυνθῇ aſhamed, and this is capable of a double ſenſe, either as ſhame ſignifies baſhfulneſs, inconfidence, which keeps us from confeſſing of Chriſt, and ſo ὁ καταισχυνθεὶς is, he will never be cowardly or baſhfull, he will boldly and confidently confeſs Chriſt, or elſe it may ſignifie being put to ſhame, as any man is that finds himſelf deceived, that hath miſcarried in a matter, on which he hath depended, and ſo it belongs to Chriſts not forſaking him, ὁ καταισχυνθεὶς) he ſhall never be deſtituted by Chriſt, never miſcarry in that hope, which he hath repoſed in him, and ſo it will moſt fitly be rendred in all the three places, here in oppoſition to the fate of unbeleivers, they ſhall bruiſe themſelves at this ſtone, be the worſe for Chriſt, but the beleiver ſhall be ſure never to be fruſtrated in his expectation of all good from him, So c.10.11. as a proof that a man is juſtified by faith, v.10. this teſtimony is produced, he that beleiveth ſhall not be aſhamed. And ſo the word ſignifies c.5.5. Hope maketh not aſhamed, the Chriſtians hope will never miſcarry, he ſhall never be in danger to faile in his truſt repoſed in Chriſt, and ſo in S. Peter, it is as a demonſtration of the pretiouſneſs of that ſtone, that whoſoever depends on it, it will never faile him, he ſhall never miſcarry that laies all his weight on that foundation.

CHAP X.

a. 1. And as before c.9.1. ſo now again I muſt confeſſe to you, (my brethren, the Chriſtian Jewes) that whatever the Jewes beleive of me, as though I were their enemy, there is none more paſſionately, and tenderly affected to them, then I am; From this it is, and nothing elſe, that I doe ſo heartily deſire and pray to God for all that people, that they may timely beleive and turn unto Chriſt, that ſo they may be delivered at this time and eſcape (and not be involv'd in the fatal deſtruction that attends that people) and withall be ſaved eternally by ſo doing.

1. BRethren, * My heart's deſire and prayer to God for Iſrael is, that they might † be [a] ſaved.]

* the good pleaſure of my heart

a εὐδοκία τῆς ἐμῆς καρδίας

† eſcape

2. For I muſt teſtifie this of them, that they are, very many of them, great zelots for their law, as that which is commanded them by God, and ſo in their way zealous to have God obeyed, but for want of true knowledge, which the Goſpel offers them, and they will not receive, they are miſtaken in their zeale, are not ſuch zelots as they ought to be.

2. For I bear them record, that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.]

3. For they being not ſatisfied in the truth of what wee teach them, particularly of God's way of juſtifying men under the Goſpel, and deſiring and intending to be juſtified by the law, their external legal obſervances, they will not part with them, and thereupon have refuſed that Evangelical way of juſtification, which is ſo much better then that.

3. For they being ignorant of Gods righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the righteouſneſs of God.]

4. For Chriſt hath conſummated and reformed the law of Moſes, requiring internal, in ſtead of external obediences, and hath ſet up a new way of juſtification, which belongeth to all thoſe, that beleive and obey him, though they doe not perform the law.

4. For Chriſt is the end of the law for righteouſneſſe to every one that beleiveth.]

b. 5. For Lev:18.5. the way of being juſtified

5. For Moſes deſcribeth the righteouſneſſe which is of the law, that the man which doth [b] thoſe things ſhall live by them.]

under

under the law is set down by Moses, to be a task of strict performances, required of us, that he that will be justified by that, must never offend against any part of it, for upon those terms onely justification is promised there, and he that offends once is guilty of all, (i. e. hath lost all pretense of justication by that) and this every man doth, and so this is not so excellent, and happy a course, that ye should be so fond of it, and withall it consisteth of a great burthen of ceremonies, and externall performances, all required to justifie a Jew, before the coming of Christ; and Christ that requires the substantiall duties requir'd by those shadowes, hath done you no injury to free you from them.

6. But the righteousnesse which is of faith, speaketh on this wise: Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? that is to [c] bring Christ down from above.

6,7. But that justification, which is to be had by the Gospell is not on such strict, difficult terms, above the reach of our c.

7. Or, Who shall descend into the deep? that is to bring up Christ again from the dead.]

knowledge or our strength; That description of the perspicuity and intelligiblenesse of Gods commands (given then by Moses to the people, and setting life and death before them) Deut. 30. 12. being very fitly appliable to the Gospell, viz: that it is neither obscure, nor such as depends on any difficult performances of ours, but on that which Christ hath done for us; The Christ by which we are to be justified, is not by any paines of ours to be fetcht down from heaven, he came down himselfe and dyed for us, nor is he to be fetcht out of the abysse by us, hee is risen again of himselfe for our justification (to obtain pardon for our past sins, upon our reformation for the future, and to give us grace to doe so) and these two being the two main parts of our faith, signifie this truth, that all that is required of us, is by him made very plain to be known, and possible to be performed, all the difficult part is performed by himselfe, and the easie required of us.

8. But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that is, the word of faith which we preach.] d.

8. But thus the Evangelicall justification is described, That which is required of us toward it, is within the reach of any ordinary understanding to conceive, being proclaimed by us to all that will beleive, and within the compasse of a Christian to perform through Christ that strengthens him. A sort of precepts so agreeable to humane nature, and so familiar to our knowledge, that thou maist without much paines learn them thy self, and teach them others, and (for thy practise) with pleasure and felicity perform them, which character cannot so fitly belong to any thing, as to the way of faith and new obedience set down in the Gospell, which wee now preach unto you in opposition to that other of legall performances, which had so much of unprofitable weight, and even impossibility in it.

9. That if thou shalt confesse with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt beleive in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt bee saved.]

9. And this but of two parts, as it were, one for thy mouth, the other for thy heart, v. 8. For thy mouth, that if in spight of all persecution and danger, that shall attend the profession of the Christian faith, thou shalt yet venture all, and make profession of it, and in thine heart, as the principle of Christian practise, beleive the resurrection of Christ, and conform thy practise to that beliefe in forsaking of sin, and arising to new life, in imitation of Christ's rising from the grave, thou shalt escape this huge judgement impendent on the Jewes, and withall be justified and saved eternally.

10. For with the heart man beleiveth unto righteousnes, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.]

10. For the justifying faith is onely that practicall of the heart, which must have confession of the mouth go along with it, and that shall give you your part in that great delivery (see v. 13.) and in that eternall rest hereafter.

11. For the Scripture saith, Whosoever beleiveth on him shall not bee ashamed.]

11. For to that is appliable that of Isa: 28. 16. made use of here c. 9. 33. and 1 Pet: 2. that whosoever believeth on him shall be certainly owned and saved by him. See note on c. 9. 1.

12. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek, for * the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him.]

* he is the same Lord of all, rich ὁ αὐτὸς πάντων κύριος, πλουτῶν

12. And in this 'tis not being circumcised, or of the stock of Abraham, that will doe any man any good, or the wanting of it, that will hurt any, There is no difference of Jew or Greek, so that one should be more acceptable to God then the other, for hee is the common Lord and father of both, abundantly mercifull unto all both Jew and Gentile, that give up their names unto Christ sincerely, live obediently and faithfully in his family.

13. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.]

13. For to these times peculiarly belongs that promise in Joel 2. 32. (see Act: 2. 21.) that when the great calamity befals the Jewish nation, and all other confidences fail, and prove treacherous, they that should constantly confesse, pray, and adhere to Christ, should be delivered from it, and this a pledge of eternall deliverance, or salvation.

14. How then shall they call on him, in whom they have not beleived? and how shall they beleive in him, of whom they have not heard? and how shall they heare without a preacher?

15. And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautifull are the feet of them that preach the Gospell of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things?]

14, 15. But here the Christian Jew objects against Saint Paul, in the name of the unbeleivers, that bee the condition of Evangelicall justification never so easie (but the acknowledging of Christ, giving up their names to him) yet how is that beleiving possible for those that hear not of him, which 'tis cleer they cannot doe, except they be preacht to, and when the Apostles have left the Jewes and gone to the Gentiles, and yet there is no preaching to be had, but by them, either personally, or by some sent by them, how now shall the Jewes doe? how is it possible for them to beleive? or well done of the Apostles thus to leave them?

16. But they have not all obeyed the Gospell: for Esaias saith, Lord, who hath beleived our report?]

16. This objection may easily be answered, that if all to whom the Gospell hath been preached, had received and obey'd it, there would have been no place for this objection of the Jewes. For the Gospell hath been preached through all the cities of Jewry before the Apostles left them, but the onely fault is, they have not beleived it, nay not any considerable number of them, and that was foretold by Isaiah, that when the Jewes should have the Gospell preacht to them, they should generally give no heed to it.

17. So

17. * So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.]

17, 18. And therefore although it bee
c. moſt willingly granted, that preaching is neceſſary to receive the faith, and that none can preach, but he that is ſent, and appointed by God, (ſee note on Joh: 10. 34.) that mediately or immediately hath received commiſſion from heaven, Yet this objection is of no force, for the Jewes through all their cities have certainly had the Goſpell preacht to them by the Apoſtles, according to Chriſt's command, that they ſhould go over all the cities of Jewry, Act. 1. 8. before they went to the Gentiles, and to this may be accommodated that of Pſal: 19. 4. as if by that were foretold, firſt, that their preaching ſhould be afforded to all the land of Judæa, and then that they ſhould proceed and preach alſo to the whole world beſide.

18. But I ſay, Have they not heard? yes verily. Their † c ſound went out into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.]

* Faith indeed, Ἀμὲν γὰρ † voice is gone out into all the land

19. On the other ſide can the Jewes be ignorant, that upon their provoking God, God will caſt them off, and preferre even the heathen before them? 'Tis impoſſible they ſhould be ignorant, if Moſes or the prophets writings be heeded by them: For of them, firſt Moſes ſaith, Deut: 32. 21. by way of prædiction of theſe (as ſtory of thoſe) times, they have moved me to jealouſie with that which is not God, angred and provoked me by preferring Idols before me, and I will make them jealous with a no-nation, give the Philiſtine victory over them then, and now take the Gentiles, and preferre them before them, and make them angry (as now they are) to ſee them taken in their ſtead, more favoured by God then they.

19. But I ſay, Did not Iſrael know? Firſt Moſes ſaith, I will provoke you to jealouſie by them that are no people, and by a fooliſh nation will I anger you.]

20. Then by Iſaiah:
f. 65. 1. who ſaith in plain words that the heathen world, that was farre from thinking of ſuch a dignity, ſhould have the Goſpell preacht to them, and receive it.

20. But Iſaias is very bold, and ſaith, I was found of them that ſought me not: I was made manifeſt to them that f * asked not after me.]

* inquired not of me.

21. Whereas v. 2. he ſaith to the Jewes,

21. But to Iſrael he ſaith, All day long I have ſtretched forth my hands unto a diſobedient and gain-ſaying people.]

that though he ſhall moſt diligently have called and ſent Apoſtles unto them, never giving over, til their meaſure of iniquities being filled up, their deſtruction was now at the dore, as a night at the end of a long day, yet they will continue refractary, and not beleive the Goſpell of Chriſt, which ſure is a teſtimony both that the Jewes have had, and rejected it, and that this dealing of the Apoſtles was in all reaſon to be expected by them.

Notes on Chap. X.

a. Σωτηρία

According to the notion of σώζεσθαι, to be ſaved, or delivered, Lu. 13. 23. note b. σωτηρία may here moſt probably ſignifie the Jewes converting to the faith of Chriſt, eſcaping out of that deluge of unbeleif and obduration, which had overwhelmed that people, for ſo it ſeems to be interpreted v. 3. by the contrary of not ſubmitting to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt. So c. 11. 11. ἡ σωτηρία τοῖς ἔθνεσι ſalvation to the Gentiles, is the Gentiles coming in and beleiving on Chriſt, as σώζειν v. 14. So καταρτίζεσθε σωτηρίαν Phil. 2. 12. is to complete, or perfect their Chriſtian courſe, in reſolving, and acting accordingly, (proportionably to Gods giving them to will and to doe v. 13.) So Rom. 1. 17. where the Goſpel is ſaid to be the power of God unto ſalvation to Jew and Gentile, and that proved by that ſaying of Habakkuk, the juſt ſhall live by faith, i. e. returne from captivity, and live peaceably, and that as an embleme of his returning from ſinne and living an holy life, it will be moſt reaſonable ſo to interpret ſalvation, as may beſt agree with that notion of life, i. e. for repentance and reformation. So perhaps μετάνοια εἰς σωτηρίαν, 2 Cor. 7. 10. will denote ſuch a repentance or change, that proceeds to eſcaping out of, and forſaking the ſins of the former life. So 2 Pet. 3. 15. where he bids them count that the longanimity of God is σωτηρία ſalvation, i. e. that God's deferring the puniſhment of the Jews ſo long after the crucifying of Chriſt was on purpoſe that by the preaching of the Apoſtles over all the cities of Jewry, they might yet timely return, and repent, and beleive on him, and ſo eſcape in that great approaching deſtruction. Yet this ſtill not excluding but including alſo the reward of our faith, the eternall bliſſe in heaven. Of another acception of σωτηρία, ſee note on c. 13. b.

Theſe things] ſignifie the ſeverall branches of the Judaicall law, which being required by Moſes under ſevere penalties of exciſion to thoſe that contemned, or deſpiſed them, and all the promiſes of long life in Canaan depending on the obſervance of them, and the law affording no place of repentance, or pardon for any præſumptuous ſinne, committed againſt that law, It is from thence conſequent, that he that lives not in all thoſe commands to doe them, could not have life by them, even that temporall life, or what ever elſe were typically contained, or included in that: And accordingly Saint Paul concludes Gal: 3. 10. that there was no life to be had by the law, and indeed nothing but a curſe, for that it was alſo written, Deut: 27. 26. Curſed is every one that continues not in all things that are written in the book of the law to doe them, and only he that doth them ſhall live in them, v. 12. All this while ſuppoſing that no man did all his life thus doe, or continue, ſo as not to incurre this curſe; And herein doth the difference of the Law and the Goſpell conſiſt, that the Law promiſes life onely upon doing all, that was required of them to doe, and pronounced a curſe to them that did not continue in all, he that wilfully offended in one, was guilty of all, i. e. was involved as irreverſibly under the curſe for that one breach, according to that covenant, as if hee had broken all, and repentance, or reformation would not relieve him, But now under the Goſpell the condition was changed, firſt, many things were not required at all now, which were then enacted under the higheſt penalty, as circumciſion &c: onely the inward purity is now called for, which had been alwayes typified by that; ſecondly, place was allowed for repentance, and, by the ſatisfaction of Chriſt, ſure mercy and pardon for the ſinner, whatſoever his ſinnes were, upon his return to new life; and for frailties and weakneſſes, for which onely there were ſacrifices admitted under the law, now there was without thoſe ſacrifices, free pardon to bee had for all thoſe that ſincerely obey'd Chriſt, and laid hold on his ſacrifice for their expiation: And ſo faith is ſaid to be the condition of our juſtification and not [the doing theſe things things] the law of faith, not of works, that by which the Chriſtian muſt live.

c. Τὸν Ἀναβιβασμὸν εἰς τ. ὑπερῶν

The two phraſes here uſed of [going up to heaven] or deſcending into the deep, or abyſſe] are certainly proverbial phraſes to ſignifie the doing, or attempting to doe ſome hard, impoſſible thing, And conſequently [to ſay in the heart, Who ſhal do this?] is to be preſcribed ſome hard, impoſſible task, that neither by our ſelves, nor by any body elſe we know how to ſet about, as they that are at their wits end, (know not which way to turn themſelves) are wont to crie out, or ſay within themſelves, Who ſhall doe it for them? Theſe phraſes had been of old uſed by Moſes, in this ſenſe, Deut. 30. 12. For this commandment which I command thee this day is not hidden from thee, neither is it farre off. It is not in heaven, that thou ſhouldſt ſay, Who ſhall goe up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may ſee it and doe it? Neither is it beyond the ſea, that thou ſhouldſt ſay, Who ſhall goe over the ſea for us, and bring it unto us, &c. Which words being uſed by Moſes to expreſſe the eaſineſs and readineſs of the way, which the Jewes had to know their duty, and to perform it, are here by the Apoſtle accommodated to expreſs the eaſineſs of the Goſpel-condition above that of the Moſaical law. The righteouſneſs which is of faith ſaith thus, i.e. this is the ſtyle, or language of the Evangelical law, the law of faith v. 8. Say not in thy heart, i.e. the Chriſtian hath no need to ſay, or think within himſelf, Who ſhall go up to heaven? i. e. that he hath any weighty, impoſſible condition required of him; This part of the words of Moſes, the Apoſtle, as in a parentheſis, applies to one of the moſt difficult things, on which our ſalvation depends, viz: Chriſt's coming down from heaven to earth, This indeed, if it were required of us to contribute any thing toward it, would be a weighty task for us, but when Chriſt hath himſelf done it for us, without any contribution of ours, this is an evidence of the eaſineſs of the Chriſtians task. As for the ſecond part of the words in Moſes, the Apoſtle reads them with ſome change, not πέραν τ θαλάσσης, over the ſea, as the Septuagint now read it, but τίς καταβήσεται εἰς τὴν ἄβυσσον, who ſhall goe down into the abyſſe, which variety of readings may poſſibly be reconciled by the various ſignification, and uſe of the Hebrew prepoſitions, And accordingly that which is here uſed by S. Paul, will be found to agree to the paraphraſe, which we have in the Jeruſalem-Targum, in theſe words, Utinam eſſet nobis aliquis Propheta, Jona ſimilis, qui in profundum maris magni deſcenderet, would we had ſome prophet, like Jonas, that might deſcend into the deep of the great ſea, and bring it up to us, And this ſeems to be the ground of S. Paul's application, which here followes, [that is to bring Chriſt from the dead] that deſcending of Jonah into the deep (being devoured firſt, and then vomited up by the whale on drie land) being by Chriſt himſelf made the præſignification of his death and reſurrection; And ſo this again will be the meaning of the ſecond part of the ſpeech, the ſtyle, or language of the Goſpel, The reſurrection of Chriſt from the dead, the great ingredient in our Chriſtian religion, and which tends ſo much to our juſtification, c. 4. 25. is that, to which we contributed nothing our ſelves, but was wrought for us by the power of Chriſt, And, as it followes here v. 9. our believing it now it is done, and abundantly juſtified to us, is the great fundamental act of faith required of us, and that is no very weighty taske to be required of us.

Τὸν Καθαιρέσιν Χριστοῦ

Τὸν Καθαιρέσιν τ τῶν ἀβύσσων

'Αναγωγὴν Χριστοῦ

The word [ἐγγὺς nigh] is beſt to be underſtood by the oppoſition of it, to hidden, and farre off, Deut. 3. 11. Where the Hebrew for hidden] is by the Septuagint rendred ὑπερογκον & over-weighty and heavy, and in other places ἀδύνατον impoſſible. So Gen. 18. 14. (and from thence tranſcribed Lu. 1. 37.) οὐκ ἀδυνατήσει τι ῥῆμα, no word, or thing ſhall be impoſſible, this word is uſed in the original. This is there farther expreſſed by thoſe proverbial ſpeeches of being in heaven, or (beyond, or) in the bottome of the ſea, and being fetche from thence, all noting ſome ſpecial difficulty or impoſſibility, above our knowledge, farre off, removed out of our reach, and ſo the ἐγγὺς nigh, muſt be feaſible and eaſie, to be known firſt, and then to be practiſed, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, (the Septuagint adds, καὶ ἐν χερσί σου, and in thine hands) that thou mayſt doe it. d. Ἐγγὺς ὁ ῥῆμα

This place is cited out of the Pſalmiſt Pſal. 19. 4. but ſo as it lies in the Greek tranſlation, not as in the original; For in ſtead of [their voice] here, 'tis rendred out of the Hebrew [their line] or rule or direction, for ſo the word קום there ſignifies. The Pſalmiſt there ſpeaks of the heavens v. 1. The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament ſheweth his handy work, and ſo on, v. 2, 3. and then v. 4. their line is gone out through the land, and their words unto the end of the world, i.e. in a poetical ſtyle, (wherein the Pſalmes are written) though the heavens ſtand in one place, keeping one conſtant motion, æquidiſtant from the earth, yet the commands and words thereof are heard every where, i.e. their virtue and efficacy are underſtood and admired by all. Here the Septuagint, it ſeems, read קולם their voice, for קום their line, and ſo render it ὁ φθόγγος αὐτῶν, nothing different from the meaning of it, as appears by the τὰ ῥήματα αὐτῶν their words, that immediately follow, for by that 'tis plain that קום ſignifies commands, (as it were,) or rule, or direction delivered by them, ſuch as may agree with words, and that is all one with קולם their voice. And S. Paul according to his manner writing to thoſe that uſed the Greek Bible in their aſſemblies, recites it as he finds it there, and applies it by accommodation (frequent in theſe writers) to the Goſpel, that voice or doctrine of heaven, i.e. of God himſelf, and when he ſaith it was gone out εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν into all the land] that ſeems (as frequently it doth) to belong to the land of Judea, as the τὰ πέρατα τ γῆς, the bounds, or extreme parts of the earth] may well be the Gentile world, and this to convince the Jewes (and repell their abrellion, ſuppoſed v. 14. and now anſwered) that the Goſpel was amply revealed to the Jewes, both within and without Judea, whereſoever they were in the Gentile cities, for being by the Apoſtles preached not only in Jeruſalem, and over all the cities of Jewry, but alſo in Caſarea, Joppa, Antioch, Epheſus, Corinth, Philippi, Theſſalonica, Galatia, Laodicea, and Rome it ſelf, and firſt to the Jewes in every of theſe places, it muſt needs, as the influences of the heavens, to which the compariſon is here made, be dilated, and extended to all other parts, wherever the Jewes were diſperſed, ſo that the Apoſtle may e. Κατὰ τ & πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν

(as he doth) appeal to their own conſciences (but I ſay, Have they not heard?) whether they did not beleive that the Jewes had univerſally heard of it, and conſequently did out of obſtinacy reject, and not remain ignorant of it, which was a full anſwer to their objection of [how ſhall they hear without a preacher?] and an account of the reaſonableneſſe of the Apoſtles dealings in forſaking of them, that had been thus obdurate. But withall it may denote, that having begun, and ſo fully performed their duty to them, it is now by conſequence to be expected from them, that they ſhould lift up their voices to the Gentile people themſelves, and preach the Goſpel to them alſo over all the world.

f. Ἐπερωτῶ

That ἐπερωτῶν muſt here be rendred [enquiring of] not after, making God the terminus, or perſon, to whom the addreſs is made, and not the matter of their queſtion, whom they asked, not concerning whom, appeareth 1. by the nature of the word, which literally denotes it, and 2dly by the uſe of it in all other places, as *Mat.*12.10. ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτὸν they asked him, ſaying, Is it lawfull &c. and ch. 16. 1. ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτὸν σημεῖον they asked him a ſigne, and *Mar.*11.29. ἐπερωτήσω ὑμᾶς I will aske you a queſtion, and ἐπερωτηθεὶς being asked, Lu. 17.20.and *Joh.*18.21.Τί με ἐπερωτᾷς; ἐπερώτησον τοὺς ἀκηκοότας, Why askeſt thou me? Aske them that heard: and alſo 3dly, by the Hebrew, which from *Iſa.*65.1. is rendred by it, for that is דרשתי from דרש quæſivit, conſuluit, as when one conſulteth the oracle, asks counſel of God; Agreeable to which is that of Heſychius, ἐπηρώτησα, πυθόμην, rendring it by that word which is ordinarily uſed for conſulting the oracle, and from which Apollo, that gave the oracles, is called Pytho. For ſo the place belonged in that Prophet to thoſe, that were delivered out of Antiochus's hands, at a time when they deſpaired, and hoped not for ſuch a mercy, and that deſpairing, or not hoping of theirs, is there expreſt by not ſeeking of God, nor conſulting him, nor applying themſelves to him at all for that purpoſe. So *Hoſ.*4.12. where we read, my people aske counſel of their ſtocks, the Greek hath ἐν συμβόλοις αὐτῶν ἐπηρώτων, they asked at their images. By this, I conceive, may be diſcerned the meaning of that phraſe, 1 Pet. 3. 21. where baptiſme is ſaid to be [ἡ ἀγαθῆς συνειδήσεως ἐπερώτημα εἰς Θεὸν] which is ordinarily rendred, the anſwer of a good conſcience toward God, and otherwiſe, a promiſe, or ſtipulation, or bargain, becauſe thoſe were wont to be made in this form, by way of anſwer to a queſtion, thus. Spondes? Spondeo. Dabis? Dabo. Doſt thou promiſe? I doe promiſe. Wilt thou give? I will: and ſo to the Catechumenus, Doſt thou forſake the devil &c? I doe forſake. Πιστεύεις; Πιστεύω, Doſt thou beleive? I doe beleive. This interpretation of ſome learned men depends upon a preſumption, that ἐπερώτημα is an anſwer, not a queſtion, the pretenſe of which is, becauſe ἐπερωτῶμαι is rendred by the Gloſſary, promitto, ſpondeo, and ἐπερωτῶ ſtipulor, which indeed will reaſonably be admitted by a metonymie, becauſe he that thus comes to God or any to deſire directions or counſel from him, is preſumed to promiſe on his part to performe what ſhall be required of him. But then ſtill this ſponſio is not an anſwer, but rather a queſtion, the anſwer being reſponſio, a return to this ſponſio, i. e. an agreement between parties, whereas ἐρώτημα and ἐπερώτημα is generally the queſtion, and it is not any more according to analogie, that it ſhould be the anſwer, then that the Latine inquiro or interrogo, ſhould be the anſwering of a queſtion, which we know is only the asking of it. It may, I ſuppoſe, more regularly be rendred, the queſtion, or addreſſe of a good conſcience to God, as enquiring] ſignifies, in our preſent notion, conſulting with, ſeeking to, asking counſel of God, when the true penitent beleiver comes to God, as to the oracle, to enquire of him for the whole future life, with a [Lord, what wilt thou have me to doe?] or, [Good maſter, what ſhall I doe to inherit eternal life?] applying himſelf to God for his directions of all his future actions, and that with a ſincere, upright conſcience, reſolving firmly to doe what is there required of him, which reſolution of univerſal ſincere obedience, is that, which is there ſet oppoſite to the ῥύπισμα σαρκὸς, the waſhing of the fleſh, ἀποθέσις ῥύπου, the rinſing of ſullages with the water, which is but the ceremony that ſignified that other, and was not to be thought to avail any, but thoſe that performed what was ſignified by it, any more then the circumciſion of a Jew, without the inward purity. According to this it is, that, as Tertullian calls baptiſme, ſponſio ſalutis, an undertaking of ſalvation, i.e. of the way laid down by God to it, l. de Bapt: and l. de Reſurr: Carnis, Animam non lavatione ſed reſponſione (I ſuppoſe again it ſhould be read ſponſione) ſancitur, the ſoule receives its ſanction, not by waſhing, but by undertaking (for that is the meaning of ſponſio, and accordingly ſponſores and ſuſceptores are all one) ſo Cyprian expreſly calls it interrogatio baptiſmi, Ep: 76. & 80. the asking or inquiring of baptiſme. And this is indeed the peculiar nature of baptiſme, the ceremony of the Chriſtians Proſelytiſme (his initiation and admiſſion into Chriſt's family) which is (according to the nature of the word μαθητεύω) his coming unto God as a diſciple, and accordingly it is μαθητεύσατε βαπτίζοντες, Mat. 28. 19. make diſciples baptizing. Baptiſme is the ceremony of their entrance on diſcipleſhip.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XI.

1. Here it will be objected again, that by this it ſeems to be concluded, that then God hath utterly caſt off the Jewes his antient people, having caſt them off from the preaching of the Goſpel. To this I anſwer that the objection is utterly cauſleſſe and groundleſſe, for that the Jewes are not utterly caſt off, I my ſelf am a viſible example, who had not only the Goſpel revealed to me from heaven by Chriſt, but am employed as an Apoſtle to preach to others, who yet am an Iſraelite, as lineally deſcended from Abraham by Benjamin, as any can be ſuppoſed to be.

1. I Say then, Hath God caſt away his people? God forbid. For I alſo am an Iſraelite of the ſeed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.]

2. God hath according to his threats. Deut.29.28.

2. God hath not caſt away his people, which he foreknew. Wot ye not what the Scripture ſaith of Elias? how he * maketh interceſſion to God againſt Iſrael, ſaying,

* brings a charge

3. Lord

3. Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars, and I am left alone, and they ſeek my life.]

the rebellious Iſraelites, but thoſe whom he did foreſee to be ſuch, whom he might according to the rules which in the Goſpel he hath preſcribed, approve, and love, his honeſt faithfull ſervants that have any kind of probity in them, thoſe ſheep that beare his voice he hath not now caſt off, or paſt any decree againſt them; Of which kind, though they ſeem but few, yet are they not ſo few: In like manner, as in the ſtory of Elias, 1 Kin. 19. 10. when he comes to God, and complains of the wickedneſſe of that people, their murthering God's prophets, and throwing down his altars (then built by pious men of the ten Tribes to ſerve God with, when they were not permitted to go to Jeruſalem, in which caſe the prohibition of building private altars is by the learned Jewes ſaid to have ceaſed,) and doing it in ſo univerſal a ſtyle, as if he were the one only pious man left in the land, and that that was the reaſon, that they now plotted, and attempted to kill him alſo.

4. But what ſaith the anſwer of God unto him? I have reſerved to my ſelf ſeven thouſand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal.]

4. To this complaint he receives anſwer by the voice from heaven, 1 Kin. 19. 12. in theſe words, I have reſerved, or left for my ſelf out of that deluge of ſin, wherein the ten Tribes are involved, or, (as the Hebrew may be rendred) I will reſerve a remnant of ſeven thouſand men, which have not, or ſhall not bow the knee to Baal, (as there were ſome that obſerved the law, and ſo were exempt from the deſtruction wrought on the Jewes by Nebuchadnezzar, Ezek. 9 4.)

* hath been γέγονεν

5. Even ſo then at this preſent time alſo there * is a remnant according to the election of grace.]

5. So at this ſeaſon ſome, though a few in proportion, have been preſerved, ſuch as, according to the rules of the Goſpel, God hath determined to receive, humble obedient ſervants of his, which have readily received the faith of Chriſt (anſwerable to thoſe v. 4. that bowed not the knee to Baal) and from their former ſins did now, on Chriſts call, turn to him, and ſo were capable of that juſtification, brought in by Chriſt, which conſiſting in pardon of ſinnes to all penitent beleivers, and not in rewarding of works, belongs to thoſe which thus return to him. See note on 1 Pet. 2. 6.

† the Kings MS. omits theſe words to the end of the verſe, and ſo doth the antient Lat. Tranſlation, & Origen, Chryſoſtome, and Ambroſe.

6. And if by grace, then it is no more of works; otherwiſe grace is no more grace,] † But if it be of works, then it is no more grace, otherwiſe work is no more work.

6. And if this means of reſerving of them, and of their eſcaping out of that deluge were by the mercies of God in Chriſt and their embracing the Goſpel, the only condition required on their part to make them capable of it, then ſure is it not by adhering to the Moſaical performances, nor by ſpeciall merit of their own, imputable to themſelves, for then the Goſpel were not the Goſpel.

7. What then? Iſrael hath not obtained that which he ſeeketh for, but the election hath obtained it, and the reſt were blinded.

7, 8. The ſhort then is, that the generality of that people have not attained that juſtification, that God will crown, but the election, the remnant (ſee note on Lu. 13. 2. and 1 Pet. 2. b.) that being called by Chriſt did not neglect to make uſe of it, theſe have attained it; but all the reſt, that made not uſe of that grace (reſiſted Chriſt, when he was preached to them) theſe have grown obſtinately blind, and in them is performed what Iſaiah ch. 29 10. ſpoke of thoſe, who had firſt hardned their hearts againſt God, God gave them up to abſolute obduration, and blindneſſe, and deafneſſe, and ſo they continue unto this day.

8. According as it is written, God hath given them the ſpirit * of [b] ſlumber; eyes that they ſhould not ſee, and eares that they ſhould not hear untill this day.]

* of ſenſleſneſſe, eyes not to ſee. κατάνυξιν ὀφθαλμοὺς τοῦ μὴ βλέπειν

b.

9. And David ſaith, Let their table be made a ſnare, and a † trap, and a ſtumbling block, and a recompenſe unto them.

10. Let their eyes be darkned that they may not ſee, and * bow down their back alway.]

† ginne and trap. Θήραν καὶ σκάνδαλον

* bow thou down συγκαμψον

9, 10. And ſo what David ſaid prophetically of ſome in his time, Pſal. 69. 22. (by way of retribution to their ſinnes) that the things that were for their good, their very neceſſary food and refreſhment, ſhould turn to their miſchief, ſo doth the preaching of the Goſpel now to their obduration, As he ſaid that they ſhould be blinded and go ſtooping, not able to look up to heaven, the like is now fallen on the Jewes, the preaching of the Goſpel hath been their obduration, they are the worſe, not the better for it, they are blinded, and able to ſee nothing of heavenly things.

† Doe I ſay then, Have they not ſtumbled that they might fall? Λέγω οὖν, μὴ ἔπταισαν ἵνα πέσωσι;

11. †I ſay then, Have they ſtumbled that they ſhould [c] fall? God forbid. But rather through their fall ſalvation is come to the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealouſie.]

c.

11. But here 'tis again objected, that this doctrine of ours concludes us to think that the Jewes are utterly caſt off, by this their not receiving the Goſpel, and that now they are paſt all hope of recovering; To this I anſwer again that this is not our doctrine, or duely concluded from it, but this only, that, as by their obſtinacy the Gentiles have received an huge advantage, the Goſpel preacht to them by us, when we were driven away by the Jewes, ſo the Gentiles receiving the Goſpel hath been made uſe of by the infinite wiſdome of God, to make the Jewes jealous and emulous, and troubled to ſee themſelves ſo outſtript by thoſe whom they ſo contemned, ſo to make that emulation an inſtrument to bring them in to Chriſt alſo.

* their poſterity τὸ πλήρωμα αὐτῶν

12. Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and * the diminiſhing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their [d] fulneſſe?]

d.

12. And if by thus puniſhing of their unbeleif and obduration, ſo much advantage have accrued to the Gentiles, and ſo the multitude of the Jewiſh unbeleivers hath been the means of converting many heathens, how much more ſhall the addition of the multitude of Jewiſh beleivers, if they ſhall yet repent and come in, be matter of confirmation of the faith to the Gentiles, and a means to bring them all to receive it, to convert the Gentiles over all the world?

13. For I ſpeak to the Gentiles, in as much as I am the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, I magnifie mine office,]

13. This of the multitude of the converted Gentiles I ſpeak with ſome reflexion on my ſelf, and therein I proclaim the ſucceſſe I have had in preaching to the Gentiles (many of whom have been converted by me.)

14. If by any means I might provoke to emulation them which are my fleſh, and might ſave ſome of them.]

14. To this end, that I may work ſome emulation, or jealouſie in my brethren the Jewes, and bring ſome of them to repentance and beleif in Chriſt.

15. For if the caſting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what ſhall the receiving of them be but life from the dead?]

15. For if the caſting off the contumacious Jewes be a means of ſending and ſpreading the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and ſo of bringing them into the Church, and obtaining pardon for them upon their repentance, what a miracle of mercy will it be for theſe Jewes now now to repent, and to be actually reassumed into God's favour, and to receive the faith of Christ? Even as great a miracle, as fit to work upon the Gentiles (both to make them all beleive on Christ, when his crucifiers doe so, and rejoyce at this happy turn) as if they should see them raised from the dead again.

16. And sure they are not yet so totally rejected, the whole nation of them, but that God hath still some respect unto them, if more of them will beleive, and come in to Christ also, as some have done; for as when the cake of the first of the dough is offered up for a heave-offering, Num: 15. 20. the whole lump or mass of dough is by that means hallowed, so if the Patriarchs, Abraham &c: were persons so favourably lookt on by God, then there is no doubt of it, but that the rest of the whole nation, that sprang from them, are so lookt on also, if they be beleivers, and so capable of God's mercy, as Abraham was, or if now they shall return, and repent, and come in to Christ: And therefore in the mean time they ought not to look on themselves with desperation, nor to be lookt on with despising and censure by the Gentiles.

16. † For if the first fruits be holy, the lump is also holy, and if the root bee holy, so are the branches.] † And if the first

17. But on the contrary if God in his just judgments on the Jewes have broken off some of them, as branches from a tree, and ingraffed thee (the Gentiles) as a Cien is wont to be, in that place where the branch was cut off, and so made thee partaker of the juice of the root, and the fatnesse of the good Olive-tree, i. e. of Abraham, made thee partaker of the promises to his seed, remission of sinnes, and justification (see v. 24.)

17. But if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being * a wilde olive tree, art graffed in amongst them, and with them partakest of the root and fatnesse of the olive tree.] * wild Olive branch, ἀγριέλαιος

18. Doe not thou triumph over them, and for those of them that have received the faith, but stand zealously for their ceremonies of the Moisaicall law, doe not thou despise or reject them for that; Or, if thou be apt to doe so, then, for thy humiliation, remember that Abraham being the root from which the Jewes naturally spring, and the Gentiles onely graffed in, you being now but branches at most, and not the naturall seed of Abraham, must not think higher of your selves then of Abraham, and that naturall seed of his, all Christian Jewes, that lineally descend from him, and by being beleivers partake of his faith also as well as of his flesh. See c. 14. 1.

18. Boast not against the branches: but if thou boast, thou beareſt not the root, but the root thee.]

19. Or if thou that art a Gentile shalt for the magnifying thy selfe, and despising the Jew, think fit to pretend that the Jewes were rejected on purpose that the Gentiles might be taken in in their stead.

19. Thou wilt say then, The branches were taken off, that I might be graffed in.]

20. The answer to such is ready, that if this be true, yet there is little matter of security or boasting for them, for 'twas their pride, and contumacy, and infidelity, that provoked God (v. 21.) to break them off, and 'tis thy faith, by which thou wert received, and still continueſt in, and if thou become guilty of the same sins, thou art to expect the like fate, with them, and therefore art not to boast of thy condition, (which is quite contrary to the nature of justification by faith, for that is not founded in any merit of thine, but onely upon the promise of God through Christ to accept thee upon thy repentance and sincere reformation, and practise of Christian virtues, of which humility and charity are the chiefe, and those most contrary to boasting over, and despicing of other men) but with all humility to work out thine own salvation.

20. Well, because of unbeleife they were broken off, and thou † standeſt by faith, Be not high-minded, but fear.] † hast stood

21. For if God proceeded with so much severity against his own people the Jewes, ye are in reason to expect no lesse severity to you Gentiles, if ye doe not obey the Gospell, and live regularly, according to the dictates of Christ.

21. For if God spared not the naturall branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.]

22. Two things then there are in this matter most visible and remarkable, the abundant kindnesse of God, and withall his severity; severity on the Jewes that stand out contumaciously against the faith of Christ, but infinite mercy on the Gentiles, if they make that use of his mercy afforded them, which is fit, if having received they obey the Gospell, and walk worthy of it, for otherwise they must expect severity also.

22. Behold therefore the goodnesse and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but towards thee, goodnesse, if thou continue in his goodnesse, otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.]

23. And so likewise nothing can keep the Jewes in this state of rejection or excision, but their wilfull continuing in unbeleife, which when they break off, God can, and certainly will, receive them in again.

23. And they also, if they abide not still in unbeleife, shall bee graffed in: for God is able to graffe them in again.]

24. For if ye Gentiles, which were a kind of wilde Olive branch, were taken off from the wildnesse naturall to you, & ingraffed into the stock of Abraham, received into the Church, graffed into the stock of a good Olive tree, from which the Jews were cut off, which is not onely against the custome (see note on 1 Cor: 11. f.) of the Jews, grounded on Lev: 19. 19. who use not to graffe one tree upon another of another kinde, but more generally against what could be expected in reason, and against all lawes of graffing (for, they never graffe a wilde fruit into a good one,) how much more shall the Jewes, which are branches of this stock, and of the same kinde, branches of that very tree, into which you Gentiles are now ingraffed, be now, if they shall yet beleive, graffed in also, according to that custome of graffing most ordinary among the Jewes, to graffe one tree upon another of the same kinde.

24. For if thou wert * cut out of the Olive tree, which is wilde by nature, and wert graffed, † contrary to nature, into a good Olive tree; how much more shall * these, which be the naturall branches, be graffed into their own Olive tree? * cut off from the wilde Olive tree which was naturall to thee, ἐκ τῆς κατὰ φύσιν ἐξαγρίου ἐλαίας. † beside nature παρὰ φύσιν * these which are according to nature, τοῦτοι κατὰ φύσιν

25. For I would not, brethren, that yee should bee ignorant of this mysterie (lest ye should bee wise in your own conceits) that † blindnesse in part is happened to Israel, * untill the fulnesse of the Gentiles be come in.] † obduration is in part befallen, πώρωσις ἀπὸ μέρους γέγονε

27. For I shall declare this mysterie to you, this great secret of God's providence, (which may keep the Gentiles from being proud, v. 18. 20.) viz: that a great part of the people of the Jews are now at this present become blinde, and that that is made use of by God, that, by occasion of that, the Gospell may (by departing a while from them) be preached to, and received by the generality of the Gentiles,

* so long till the fulnesse of the Gentiles dot come in, ἄχρις οὗ πλήρωμα τῶν

and and they compacted into Christian Churches (and this in very mercy to those Jews, that they by seeing the Gentiles beleive, might at length be provoked to doe so too by way of emulation, v. 11. and 31.)

* escape ἀποστρέψει

26. And so all Israel shall * be saved, as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the deliverer, and shall * turn away ungodlinesse from Jacob.] 26. And so all the true children of Abraham, Jewes and heathens both, but particularly the remnant of the Jewes, shall come in, and repent, and beleive in Christ: and this agreeably to that prophecy, Isa: 59. 20. There shall come to Sion a redeemer, some powerfull means shall be used, to bring the Jewes to repentance, and reformation of their impieties, or a deliverer to them that turn from iniquities in Jacob, who shall rescue all the penitent beleiving Jewes from the approaching evills. e.

† And καὶ

27. † For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.] 27. And so by this means God's covenant shall be made good to them, in bringing them to reformation and amendment, and then accepting, and pardoning as many as shall come in, after all this.

28. As concerning the Gospell, they are enemies for your sakes; but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers sakes.] 28. Tis true indeed, and observable to you Gentiles, that in respect of the present preaching of the Gospell, they are now laid aside as persons utterly rejected, on purpose that ye may receive the benefit of it, The Apostles having preacht through all their cities and succeeded so ill among them, are now departed to you Gentiles, and have given them over, but yet for as many of them, as any means will bring in, in respect of the promises made to that people for Abraham's sake (see note on 1 Pet: 2. b.) and the speciall favour of God to them, they are still so farre loved by God, that if they will come in, and be capable, they shall be received by him, and to that end this dispensation of mercy and providence, the calling and converting the Gentiles is now made use of, as the last and onely probable means to work on the Jewes. v. 11. 14.

29. For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.] 29. For God's speciall favours allowed to this people, and his promises made to their fathers are such, as that he will never change, or repent of them v. 1. and consequently will still make them good to them upon their repentance, and to that end doth, in his providence, use a most excellent way to bring the obdurate Jewes to repentance, by shewing them the issue of the Gospell among the Gentiles, that that may provoke them by way of emulation, not to fall short of such heathens, whom they have so long despised.

* formerly were disobedient ποτε ἀπειθήσαντες

30. For as yee * in times past have not beleived God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbeleife,] 30. For as yee Gentiles having gone on in a long course of Idolatry, have now, upon the Jewes rejecting the Gospell, had the Gospell preacht to you,

† to the shewing mercy upon you, that they also τῷ ὑμετέρῳ ἐλέει, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ

31. Even so have these also now not beleived, † that through your mercy they also might attain mercy.] 31. So the Jewes of this age having been contumacious, and from whose disobedience it is that this mercy hath come to the Gentiles, shall by this very means (this mercy upon you in suffering the Gospell to be preacht to you) reap some considerable benefit also, viz: bee stirr'd by emulation to look after the Gospell, thus beleived on by the Gentiles, and count it a shame to them, a people so favoured by God, if they be not as wise, or pious as the Gentiles, which from their Idolatry they now behold to come in, and beleive on God.

32. For God hath concluded them all under unbeleife, that hee might have mercy upon all.] 32. All this serves to illustrate the grace and mercy of God both to Jewes and Gentiles, that both may attain salvation by his grace, without which neither of them can be saved, For God hath permitted the Gentiles first, and now the Jewes, and all sorts of men, to wallow in disobedience and contumacy, that by that means he might reduce both; The Gentiles being Idolaters had Christ preached to them, which was occasion'd by the Jewes rejecting of him, for thereupon the Apostles left them, and preached to the Gentiles: The Jewes thus contumacious see the Gentiles beleive in Christ, and receive the Holy Ghost, Act: 10. and are in any reason by that means to be stirr'd up to emulation, not to be behinde them in piety; that so, many of them may come in, and beleive on Christ, and so (by this means thus wisely disposed by God) God hath fulfill'd his great counsell of goodnesse toward all, in shewing undeserved mercy upon each of them, Jewes as well as Gentiles.

* not to be traced ἀνεξιχνίαστοι

33. O the depth of the riches both of the wisdome and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgements, and his wayes * past finding out!] 33. O the depth of the abundant goodnesse of God (in bearing the contumacy of the Gentiles first, and then of the Jewes) and of his wisedome in making the desertion of the Jewes a means of calling the Gentiles, and of his knowledge, in knowing how (probably) to work upon the most obstinate Jewes, viz: by envy and emulation toward the Gentiles (as also by those heavy calamities, that, according to Christs prediction, fell upon them, see note c.) how unsearchable are his determinations, and how admirable his wayes of bringing them to passe!

34. For who hath known the minde of the Lord, or who hath been his counsellor?] 34. According to that of Isa: 40. 13. that his wayes are in wisedome so much above ours, that no thoughts of ours are fit in any degree to be taken into counsell with him, It is impossible all the men upon the earth could have foreseen these methods, or ever have thought to have advised them.

35. Or who hath first given to him, and it shall bee recompensed to him again?] 35. And the justice is such also, that no man can speak any thing against the equality of his proceedings herein, for first, tis a matter of meer bounty and goodnesse, and every man may with his own doe what he lists, no man can claim any thing that hath not been allow'd him, and therefore there can be nothing of injustice objected to him, if others have been more bountifully treated; and yet farther secondly, the Jewes themselves thus deserted of God, have their wayes of mercy also, if they doe observe it.

36. For of him, and through him and to him are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen.] 36. For the whole dispensation of grace, calling, and salvation both of Jewes, and Gentiles, is to be imputed to God's free undeserved mercy, the mercy of the call is from him, all good is received by him, and the honour of all belongs unto him, and therefore to him bee ascribed all the glory of this and all other things for ever and ever. Amen.

The ſumme then of this Chapter being the ſetting forth the great mercy and wiſdome of God toward Jewes and Gentiles, but particularly toward the Jewes, (who though for their crucifying of Chriſt, and contumacy againſt the Spirit in the preaching of the Apoſtles, they were ſo farre forſaken, as that, leaving them, the Apoſtles departed to the Gentiles, yet were, by way of rebound, benefitted by this preaching to the Gentiles, provoked to emulation by the multitude of the converted Gentiles, and ſo themſelves brought to beleive alſo, great multitudes of them)is ſaid to be a great myſtery v.25. and ſo intimated again v.33.&c.and ſeems to be the very doctrine, to which S.Peter refers 2Pet.3.15. concerning God's longanimity, deferring and delaying his execution on his enemies (foretold Mat.24.) on purpoſe, that as many Jewes as poſſibly might, ſhould, before that, be brought in to beleive, and ſo eſcape their parts in that judgment. This is the plain meaning of what S. Peter expreſſes by [account the long ſuffering of our Lord,deliverance :] to which he ſaith that Paul had written parallel in many places, and withall tells us that what he had written on that ſubject, was much miſtaken, and wreſted to very diſtant doctrines in thoſe firſt times,and ſo hath been ever ſince, as to that of the Millenaries of both ſorts, and ſome other matters.

a. Ἐντυγχάνειν κατὰ τινος is to commence an accuſation againſt any man, 1 *Mac.*8.32. and c.10. 61,63. & c.11.31.

b. The Hebrew רדם ſignifies to nod, as that is an effect either of ſleepineſſe, or of old age, or again of ſtupor, lethargie, ſenſleſneſs, and is accordingly rendred κατάνυξις deep ſleep, Iſa. 29.10. (from whence this place is cited) but otherwhere it ſignifies not only a deep ſleep (deeper then that which is noted by שנה) and from thence alſo, ſtupor, lethargie, among the Rabbines, but alſo aſtoniſhment, and is by the Septuagint rendred ὄκνος φόβος 1*Sam.* 26.12. (where yet it ſhould be a deep ſleep, and ſo the Targum reads שנא תקיפא a ſtrong ſleep) and again a trance or extaſie,and ſo Gen. 2. 21. 'tis rendred ἔκστασις extaſie : and ſo Act. 10. 10. ἔκστασις extaſie is ſet for a deep ſleep or trance, wherein viſions are received, Aquila renders it in Iſaiah καλαφορᾷ tranſportation, Theodoſius extaſie, ἔκστασις, Pſal. 68. 29. the Septuagint have θάμβος amazement. By all which it appears, that the word in its latitude ſignifies ſuch a ſupine habit of mind, as is uſuall in the ſtate of lethargie or ſtupidity, a ſtate of ſenſleſneſs, however acquired, whether from a ſleepy lethargick humour (and ſo it follows here, Eyes that ſee not &c.) or elſe from a trance. Of which ſecond notion, ſee note on *Act.*10. b.

c. The Hebrew נפל which is rendred by πίπτω to fall, often ſignifies to lie along in the poſture of one that is fallen, and accordingly *Exod.*21. 18. is rendred καλαλίνδῃ to lie along, and ſo verbs are often taken in a ſenſe noting continuance or duration, as to be born of God, is to live a regenerate or new life. And ſo the context here inclines it, where it cannot be denied that they did fall, and that that was the effect (he ſpeaks not of the intention or deſigne) of their ſtumbling. All that can be denied therefore is, that this fall of theirs is to continue forever, and accordingly he adds, that this their ſtumbling and falling was, if made uſe of, a very proper means as yet to recover them ; for the Gentiles being preached to by this means,might very fitly move the Jewes to emulation, and ſo recover them from their fall, and this God foreſaw, and had that, among other reaſons, in his wiſdome why he did permit them to deny Chriſt, and reject the Goſpel.

d. The word πλήρωμα fulneſs is a known famous word, uſed by the antients for the whole body of the congregation, or Church compacted together, in oppoſition to ſchiſmes and breaches in it. And accordingly [being admitted into the Church] is by S.Baſil, *Ep:*197. ad Diodor: and the fathers expreſt by εἰς ἐκκλησιαστικὸν πλήρωμα διαδέχεσθαι to be receiv'd into the Eccleſiaſtick fulneſs, according as Mat. 9.16. πλήρωμα is the piece, that being put into the garment, the garment, which was before torn, is made whole again. In this ſenſe, I conceive the word is here to be taken, for the Jewes being added to the Church, their coming in, and laying hold on the faith (being provoked thereto by ſeeing the Gentiles beleive) and ſo filling up the vacuity, as it were, which was formerly in the Church, by their ſtanding out impenitently : That this ſhould now ſtill belong to any (yet future) return of the Jewes in a viſible remarkable manner, is no way neceſſary, the circumſtances of the context applying it to thoſe firſt times, wherein the Epiſtle was written : And therefore Origen againſt Celſus, ſpeaking of the Jewes, ſaith diſtinctly, θαῤῥοῦμεν δ' ἐρρῶσθαι, ὅτι οὐδὲ ἀποκαλασθήσονται, We affirm confidently that they ſhall not be reſtored: And S. Chryſoſtome in his diſcourſe againſt the Jewes, denies that they ſhall ever be returned to their countrey, and cites Joſephus for that opinion , that their ἐρημωσις or deſolation ſhall be perpetual. And the Jewiſh writing , called Seder-Olam , affirms the ſame, viz: that after their ſecond ejection out of Canaan, the Jewes ſhall never return thither again. Others indeed have been of another opinion, that there ſhall be a viſible calling of the Jewes, and ſome of the antients have joyned thereto the thouſand years reign of Chriſt upon the earth, and pretended Apoſtolical tradition for it, but have not by the Church of God been judged to have any juſt plea to it, Undoubtedly cannot deduce it from this place, any farther then this, that if they ſhall repent and beleive in Chriſt, they ſhall yet be received into mercy. And as πλήρωμα Ἰουδαίων the Jewes fulneſſe is their coming in to the faith, or the Church of Chriſt, ſo likewiſe πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν the fulneſſe of the Gentiles,v.25. is the Gentiles coming into the Church, receiving the faith, they then becoming one part of the body of the viſible Church, as the Jewes another, ſee note on *Lu.*21. c. And ſo Eph. 1. 23. the Church, as the body of Chriſt, is called τὸ πλήρωμα his fulneſs in the ſame kind as ἴδιον μεγέθους or ἴδιον σωμάτων the Churches greatneſſe and body, is uſed by Ignatius in Epiſt: ad Smyrnenſes, of the reſtoring the aſſemblies of the Church, by a calme, which had befaln the Chriſtians in Syria.

Πλήρωμα

The Hebrew, *Iſa.*59.20. read ולשבי i.e. and to them that turn, or even to them, the ו being often expletive e.

expletive, or noting apposition. In stead of this the Septuagint read, it seems, וְשָׁב and so render it ἀποστρέψει ἀσεβείας ἀπὸ Ἰακώβ, and shall turn iniquities from Jacob, and S. Paul, as his manner is, cites the words of their translation, wherein they have a sense very commodious, and most agreeable to the context here, that many of the Jewes shall by God's grace, and wise methods used toward them, be reformed and converted. But beside this, it will be most reasonable to enlarge them also, and interpret them according to the original notation of the Hebrew, that God will take care for the delivering of them that thus return and repent. As for the truth of that which is here concluded from this citation, that as yet many more Jewes should repent, and receive the Gospel, that hath been demonstrated by the event, 1. When the Jewes saw Christ's prædictions Mat. 24. manifestly fulfilled in the Roman armies sitting down before the city, For then many turned Christians, and went out of the city, and were delivered from the following evils; and 2dly, after that, when the Temple and the city were destroyed, and they brought in subjection by the Romans, then many were humbled and turned Christians; and 3dly, after that also, in Justin Martyr's daies, γινόμενον ἐπ' αὐτῶν ἡμέρας τινὰς μαθητευόμενοι εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Χριστοῦ. Every day there were some that came in to be Christs disciples, which is the cause of the sealing so many of every tribe, Revel. 7. 4. CHAP. XII.

* I beseech you by the compassions, παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς διὰ τῶν οἰκτιρμῶν

1. * I Beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your a reasonable service.]

1. Seeing then the Gospel, without any addition of legal performances, is the only way to salvation (which is the thing on the proving of which all the former part of the Epistle was spent) and that the Gospel is the spiritualizing and perfecting of the law, (which he shews by going ethically through the severall parts of it, the ritual or ceremonial in this chapter, the judicial Chap. 13. 1. the moral v. 8. &c.) I doe therefore exhort you, brethren, by the bowels or exceeding great mercies of God, that (in stead of the impure Gnostick practises that are so rife among you, and which pretend to be grounded on their mystical understanding of the law and scriptures of the old Testament,) you preserve your selves in all purity and holiness, and so offer up unto God (as a kind of heave-offering) your bodies (the work-houses and shops of action and practise) a living sacrifice (in opposition to their dead ones under the law) an holy pure one (in opposition to those external, carnal, legal ones, which had no kind of intrinsecal goodnesse in them, but only as they were commanded them for a time by God) acceptable to God (whereas the other were not so, whensoever they were not joyned with holy life, nor are now any longer so, having been abolished by Christ) your rational worship of him, in opposition to that wherein the irrational creatures, the cattel &c. were offered up to God in his worship.

2. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renuing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, that acceptable, and perfect will of God.]

2. And suffer not your selves to be ensnared with the filthy sensual practises of the Gnosticks of this age, that by joyning with the Jewes against the orthodox Christians, avoid persecution themselves, and bring it upon others, and by that means seduce many, But by undertaking the Christian faith, and that renovation of mind and actions, wherein repentance (required of you at your baptisme) consists, let your Christianity appear in the new form and shape of your lives, that ye may be able to discern and approve and practise (see note on ch. 2. f.) what 'tis that God now commands us Christians, even those Evangelical commands of his, (which are good (as all the Judaical law cannot be said to be, there being many things permitted for the hardnesse of their hearts, which must not be permitted now) and well pleasing (as now their ceremonial performances, sacrifice &c. are not, nor ever were, but when joyned with good lives) and perfect (as, even the moral part, as it was understood by the Jewes, was not till it was enlarged, or at least interpreted by Christ Mat. 5 and as the practises of the Gnosticks certainly are not, which yet pretend to the highest perfection.)

3. For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly then he ought to think, but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith.]

3. For I, in respect of that Apostolical authority, which, by the favour and commission of Christ, is given unto me, take upon me to admonish every person among you, that he doe not exalt himself above that which belongs to him, (as the Gnosticks doe, who pretend to such heights of knowledge and perfection, as to despise the Governors of the Church (see Jude 8. b.) and consequently run into such extravagances) but every man in sobriety to possesse the graces which God hath given him, to the benefit of the Church, and not the despising of others, especially those that are placed over him by Christ.

4. For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office;]

4. For as in the body of man, where there are many members, they have not all offices or places of the same esteem or dignity, which some have;

5. So we being many are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.]

5. So all we Christians make up one body, of which Christ is the head, and are fellow-members in respect of one another, but yet have severall functions and offices in his Church.

6. Having then gifts, differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecie, let us prophecie according to the proportion of faith:]

6. And having such peculiar functions to which we are designed, differing one from another, according to our severall designations, let us exercise them to the edification of one another: If a man be designed to the office of expounding the scripture, let him take care that he doe it according to that form of faith, or wholsome doctrine, by which every man, which is sent out to preach the Gospel, is appointed to regulate his preaching, according to those heads and principles of faith and good life, which are known among you:

7. Or ministry, let us wait on our ministring: or he that teacheth, on teaching:]

7. If to the office of a Deacon, one designed to doe some inferiour services in the Church, let him set himself to the discharge of that: The Doctor, or he that teacheth the doctrine of the Gospel where it is already planted, let him busie himself about that:

8. He that, when the doctrine of the Goſpel is taught and planted, is appointed to preach to them the practical uſe of it, and exhort them to live accordingly, let him employ himſelf thus: he that diſtributes his goods, or perhaps the goods of the Church to the poor, let him doe it liberally: he that is to govern in the Church, let him be very carefull and diligent in government: he that gives almes (which is the duty of every private Chriſtian, that is able) let him doe it merrily, not fearing or doubting that he ſhal impoverish himſelf or his poſterity by that means.

8. Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him doe it with * ſimplicity: he that ruleth, with diligence: he that ſheweth mercy, with cheerfulneſſe.]

* liberality in distribut. ſee Mat. 6 k.

9. Let your love of God appear to be ſincere, and ſuch as will abide the triall, Ephes. 2. 4. (ſee note on Lu. 2. b.) and ſo alſo your love to one another let it be unfeigned, deteſting and flying from every impious practiſe, ſuch as are obſervable among the Gnoſticks, and, for the true Chriſtian courſe both toward God and men, cleave faſt and zealouſly to it.

9. Let love be without diſſimulation: abhorre that which is evil, cleave to that which is good.]

10. Made up of nothing but perfect kindneſſe to one another, contrary to the envying &c. ch. 1. 29. in the Gnoſticks; humble, contrary to their faſtidiouſneſſe and pride, ch. 1. 30.

10. Be kindly affectioned one to another in brotherly love, in honour preferring one another.]

b. 11. Induſtrious and nimble to doe any thing that belongs to your calling, and having that earneſt affection to God's ſervice, that ſhall inflame and ſet you moſt ardently about it, and accordingly doing thoſe things that in reſpect of the circumſtances of time and place, wherein now you are, may moſt tend to the honour of God, and building up of the Church.

11. † Not ſlothfull in buſineſſe: fervent in ſpirit: * ſerving the [b] Lord.]

† in reſpect of diligence not ſlothfull: τῷ σπουδῇ μὴ ὀκνηροὶ

* or, ſerving the ſeaſon, ſo other copies read.

12. In the midſt of thoſe afflictions that now fall upon you, rejoicing in reſpect of that bliſſe which we hope for in another world, and conſequently never renouncing the faith (as the Gnoſticks profeſſe to doe) in time of perſecution, but perſevering conſtant to the end, and in order to that obſerving your ſet times of prayer with all zeal and importunity.

12. Rejoicing in hope: patient in tribulation, continuing inſtant in prayer:]

13. Shewing liberality to all that want, as earneſt in it, as in any thing that brings in moſt advantage to your ſelves, or in ſtead of purſuing others v. 14. doing them as much kindneſſe as you can.

13. Diſtributing to the neceſſity of ſaints: † given to hoſpitality.]

† purſuing διώκοντες

14. Repay nothing to contumelies, but friendly and kind uſage.

14. Bleſſe them which perſecute you; bleſſe, and curſe not.]

c. 15. Comply with the condition and ſtate of other men, affected with all the good and evil that belongs to them.

15. Rejoice with them that doe [c] rejoice, and weep with them that weep.]

16. Very affectionate and compaſſionate in your kindneſſe one to another, pretending not to myſterious knowledge, as the Gnoſticks doe, but behaving your ſelves as the modeſteſt ſort of Chriſtians doe, not perſwading or conceiting your ſelves that you are wiſer then the reſt of your brethren.

16. Be of the ſame mind one towards another. Mind not high things, but * condeſcend to men of low eſtate. Be not wiſe in your own conceits.]

* following along with the lowly τοῖς ταπεινοῖς συναπαγόμενοι

17. Never acting any revenges upon them which you think have done you injuries, taking care before-hand that whatſoever you doe, it be that which is fit for you to doe before the heathens, and which may not diſgrace the Chriſtian profeſſion before them, or aliene them from it, by ſeeing your lives and actions vile.

17. Recompenſe to no man evil for evil. Provide things honeſt in the ſight of all men.]

18. And particularly (as farre as lyeth in you, and is poſſible for you by all actions of meekneſſe and charity to procure) living peaceably among them.

18. If it be poſſible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men.]

19. To that end (as ver. 17. ſo again) not taking the matter of avenging the injuries done to you, into your own hands, but referring it to the puniſhment of God, or the magiſtrate under him, to whom, as he himſelf ſaith Deut. 32. 25. it belongs to puniſh offences.

19. Dearly beloved, avenge not your ſelves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine, I will repay, ſaith the Lord.]

20. It being the Chriſtian's duty, and his only prudent method of overcoming enemies, to doe them all acts of kindneſſe and charity, whereby thou ſhalt melt them at length, be they never ſo hardhearted (as when an artificer that deals in metals cannot melt any metall by putting fire under it, he poures live coals on the top of it, and by that means melts any thing that is hardeſt to melt. This figure muſt be made uſe of to interpret this place, which, if it were literally underſtood, might ſeem to command that foule crime of wiſhing miſchief, ſaith S. Auguſtine de Doct: Chriſt: l. 3. c. 6.)

20. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him: if he thirſt, give him drink: for in ſo doing thou ſhalt heap coals of fire upon his head.]

21. Let not another man's injuſtice to thee bring thee to that vilenеſſe of doing the like to him, for then hath he conquered the moſt divine pretious part of thee, enſlaved thy ſoul to ſo vile a ſinne, but let thy way be (that, which of all others is moſt likely to thrive) by doing good to him, by fair words and deeds to overcome him.

21. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.]

Notes on Chap. XII.

2. Λογικὴ λατρεία.

What notion of λογικὴ λατρεία,] which we have rendred rational ſervice, is here to be faſtned on, is not eaſie to determine: It may poſſibly be ſuch, as will be agreeable to the notion of ὁ λόγος the word, as it ſignifies Chriſt, and then 'tis the Chriſtian ſervice: It may be as λόγος ſignifies the word or ſcripture, and then 'twill be that worſhip, which is preſcribed us in the ſcripture, and ſo the Syriack ſeems to underſtand it, ſetting down for לפי דבר ſecundum os verbi, according to the mouth of the word, i. e. ſuch as the word preſcribes: It may be alſo as λόγος word is oppoſed to νόμος law, and then 'twill be the Evangelical worſhip. And once more, it may note ſuch a worſhip of God as is moſt agreeable to reaſon, & ſuch as a rational man will reſolve to be moſt agreeable to ſo excellent and pure a deity. But the circumſtances of the place, and oppoſition to the ſacrifices of the law, the the beasts that were offered there, seem to restrain it to the vulgar and ordinary notion of λογικὰ rational, in opposition to the irrational sacrifices under the law, as ζῶσα living before, to the dead bodies among them. Thus is the table of Christ called by Theodoret λογικὴ τράπεζα rationalis mensa, Serm: 6. de Provid: i. e. the table or altar, where we offer up our selves, our souls, and bodies to be a reasonable, holy, and lively sacrifice unto God, in stead of those tables or altars on which the beasts were offered. Thus in Hermes in Pæmandro, in the Hymne or ὑμνάριον, which closes the book, this prayer is to be found, Δέξαι λογικὰς θυσίας receive these rational sacrifices. Thus, I conceive, may λογικὸν γάλα rational milk 1 Pet. 2. 2. be rendred also, not that milk of cattel, which men's bodies are wont to be fed with, but this rationall milk, by which men's soules are improved, to wit instruction, or Christian doctrine. And thus the ancient Latine translation hath rendred it in both places.

b. Καιρὸν ἐκλείπων

The authority of those copies is great which read καιρῷ δουλεύοντες in this place, serving the time, or the season, which being written short thus, κῷ, might easily be mistaken for κυρίῳ. One argument, that it is here to be retain'd, is Ignatius's Epistle to Polycarpe, where hee joynes two precepts together, Πλέον σπουδαῖος γίνου, ἢ οἱ, τοὺς καιροὺς κατανόησον. Become more diligent then thou art, observe or consider the seasons or times, i. e. the times being times of great corruption first, and then of persecution also (both mention'd in the former part of the period ἑτεροδιδασκαλοῦντας μή σε καταπλανήσωσιν, let not the heterodoxe or false teachers move thee, or terrifie thee, σὺ δὲ ἑδραῖος stand firm, and μάλιστα δὲ ὑπὲρ πάντα ὑπομένων ὑμᾶς δεῖ, we must, beyond all, persevere and endure all for God's sake) he must not be slothfull but very diligent to defend his flock against all false infusions, and sustain them constant in sufferings. And this is exactly agreeable and parallel to this exhortation here thus set, and may well seem an imitation of it. In respect of diligence, not slothfull: zealous in spirit, serving the time, or season, which was in like manner a season of great corruption from the Gnosticks, and of persecution also from the Jewes, with whom these Gnosticks comply'd, and stirr'd them up against the Orthodox Christians. See note on Eph: 5 d.

c. χαίρων μετὰ χαίροντος

This verse seems to referre to the two gates of the Temple, one called, The gate of the Bridegroome, and the other, of the mourners, into which two sorts of men all kindes of persons are divided: under the first are contained all those that continue unblemisht members of the Church, under no kinde of censure, under the other are the excommunicate of any the loweſt kinde, those under Nidui, which though they might come into the Temple, yet were to come in at that dore of mourners, with some difference upon them, and discrimination from other men, that they that saw them might pray for them in this form, Qui inhabitat domum hanc consoletur te, indatque animo tuo ut obtemperes. Hee that dwels in this house comfort thee, and give thee a heart to obey. See 1 Cor: 5. 2. note c. and 7. 30. and 2 Cor: 2. 1. and 7. 8. and 12. 21. And accordingly the exhortation is to have affections Christianly disposed toward all men, to be very much afflicted, which 2 Cor. 12. 21. is called πενθῆσαι mourning, or bewailing such as are (for their faults) justly fallen under the censures of the Church, and to doe the utmost wee can toward their recovery; and on the other side to rejoyce at the spirituall good and proficiency of all others.

CHAP. XIII.

* supreme † from ἀπὸ * by ὑπὸ

1. LEt every soul be subject unto the * [a] higher powers: for there is no power, but † of God. The powers that be are ordained * of God.] 1. Then for the judiciall lawes, that great supreme one ought to be taken into speciall care of all Christians, that of obedience to the supreme powers rightly established and constituted, although they be not Jewes but Romans. Nothing in Christianity ought to be pretended or made use of, to give any man immunity from obedience, which from all subjects, of what quality soever, Apostles, teachers &c: is due to those, to whom allegiance belongs, (contrary to the Gnosticks doctrine and practise Jude 8.) but on the contrary, every person under government, of what rank soever he be, is to yeeld subjection to the supreme governour legally placed in that kingdome, as to him which hath commission from God, as every supreme magistrate must be resolved to have, though he be an heathen. 2.

2. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God, and they that resist, shall receive to themselves [b] damnation.] 2. From which divine commission it is directly consequent, that he that makes any violent resistance or opposition to the supreme magistrate, opposes that violence to God's commission, and shall accordingly receive that punishment which belongs to so sacrilegious a contumacy, The wrath and judgement of God belongs to him. b.

3. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evill. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? Doe that which is good, and thou shalt have praise † from it εἰς † of the same.] 3. And certainly if thou hast not some wicked purposes in thine heart, thou wilt never be tempted to doe this, for they that do not design any ill, have little reason to be afraid of magistrates; or consequently to desire to prevent their ill usage of them by taking up armes against them. For though it be possible Governours may be tyrants, yet this possible fear is not in any reason to move any to certain sin; but on the other side every one is to look on the magistrate as God's officer, and to trust himselfe in God's protection, and count that Princes doe not use to punish men for doing well, but for doing ill, for seditions, conspiracies &c: and therefore if thou wouldst make a prudent provision for thy selfe, if thou dost desire to be secure from being punished by the magistrate, doe not offend against his lawes, and thou shalt, in all probability, receive nothing but reward for it from him.

* for wrath εἰς ὀργὴν

4. For hee is the minister of God to thee for good: but if thou doe that which is evill, be afraid: for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger * to execute wrath on him that doth evill.] 4. For that is so considerable a part of the magistrate's office fice (to which he is deſigned by God, and for which thou art to count thy ſelfe happy in him, to aſſiſt, and not reſiſt him) that God hath ſet him over thee, to ſecure and defend thee, and help thee to a peaceable poſſeſſion of all God's other benefits, which are all worth nothing to thee, if thou maiſt not enjoy them peaceably: And that is a reaſonable conſideration to move thee to adventure the hazard of being injured by magiſtrates, and not to caſt off their yoke on every remoter fear of it, but to take the poſſible dangers, and certain benefits together, and from thence to conclude, that tis for the ſubjects good, that Princes are ſet over them. And generally tis our own fault if there be any thing formidable in them, In that caſe indeed the Magiſtrate hath a ſword put in his hands by God, and 'tis his office to be God's executioner of puniſhment on malefactors, and he is obliged to doe ſo by conſcience toward God, whoſe officer and commiſſioner he is.

5. And conſequently our obedience is due to him, not onely for fear of puniſhment from the magiſtrate, for tis poſſible a cunning or a proſperous offender or rebell may avoid that, but in obedience to the conſtitution of God, whoſe officer he is, and to the command of honouring and paying ſubjection &c: to him.

5. Wherefore yee † muſt needs be ſubject, not onely for wrath, but alſo for conſcience ſake.] † ought to be ſo

6. For this is the diſtinct reaſon why tributes and cuſtomes are paid to Kings, viz: becauſe they are commiſſioners ſent from God, who, having full power over all we have, as the free donor of all, may aſſign his commiſſioners, what proportion he pleaſe, and that a liberall one, as he did the double portion to the elder brother; And this but very reaſonable, ſeeing, in the diſcharge of their office, they ſpend themſelves, with an unwearyed patience and conſtancy, attending on it, as the hardeſt and heavyeſt task that any man in a kingdom undergoes, and is therefore in proportion the moſt richly to be rewarded of any.

6. For, for this cauſe pay you tribute alſo: for they are God's miniſters attending continually upon this very thing.]

7. This therefore layes all obligation on you to render to Princes (as a debt due from ſubjects) all extraordinary or ordinary payments, as alſo that reverence and honour, which by the law of God belongs to them, as well as obedience and diligent ſubjection v. 1.

7. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute, to whom tribute is due; cuſtome, to whom cuſtome; fear, to whom fear; honour, to whom honour.]

8. For yee Chriſtians muſt not think that your Chriſtian liberty will free or diſoblige you from the diſcharge of any debt or duty to any man, inferior, or ſuperior, i. e. either of juſtice to ordinary men, or ſubjection to thoſe, whom God hath ſet over you: One debt onely ye muſt owe all (and yet pay that too, as oft as occaſions are preſented) that of charity, which muſt be ſo paid that it be alwayes owing, and if this be diſcharged, as Chriſt requires, not onely to friends, but to all, even thoſe that have behaved themſelves as enemies to us, the perſecuting heathen Emperors, &c: this is that perfection of the law, which Chriſt requires, Mat: 9. 48.

8. Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath * fulfilled the law.] * filled up

9. For all the ſix commandements of the ſecond table, the five here named, and the ſixt, that hath all this while been inſiſted on, that of Honour thy parents, Kings &c: v. 1. all theſe, I ſay, are but parts of that great duty of charity, or loving thy neighbour &c: ſo ſtrictly now commanded by Chriſt, and ſo farre from being now evacuated or abrogated, that it is rather heightened in each branch, and improved by the Goſpell, and conſequently every of thoſe ſix, and particularly that of duty to Kings, is ſtill required under Chriſtianity, let the Gnoſticks advocates, and patrons of liberty (or rather licentiouſneſſe) under that pretence, teach what they pleaſe to the contrary.

9. For this, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery; Thou ſhalt not kill; Thou ſhalt not ſteal; Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſſe; Thou ſhalt not covet; and if there be any other commandement, it is briefly comprehended in this ſaying, namely, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf.]

10. That charity, that is required of us Chriſtians, is ſo farre from depriving any other of his right, that it gives rules of all abundance of mercy and goodneſſe to all, for in that conſiſts that perfection of the law, which Chriſt requires, Mat: 5. ſee note on Mat: 12. e.

10. Love worketh no ill to his neighbour, therefore love is the † fulfilling of the law.] † filling up

11. And that exhortation to keep cloſe to all Chriſts precepts, to diſcharge to all men, that duty which Chriſt requires by preſcribing us charity v. 18. is now the rather to be preſt, becauſe of the particularity of time, which ſhould make us watchfull to the performance of all duties, the time of our deliverance, or eſcaping, by Chriſt promiſed, and by us ſo long expected (ſee note on Mat: 10. 9. and 24. 13. 1 Pet: 1. 5. and 2 Pet: 1. 3.) being now nigher at hand (which may encourage us to be diligent and perſevere to the end) then it was, when we firſt received the faith. c.

12. The preſent dark ſtate of perſecution of the pure Chriſtians by the unbeleiving Jewes, and the Gnoſticks among you, is now well over, and the more joyfull lightſome ſtate of quiet and calm is now, as the day, approaching, (ſee 2 Pet: 1. 19. 1 Joh: 2. 8.) which is a mighty obligation to us to perform the deeds of the day, all actions of Chriſtian purity, caſting off the doctrines and practiſes of the Gnoſticks, and all the corruptions crept in among you. d.

13. And particularly let chaſtity and all manner of purity, contrary to the night works or deeds of darkneſſe and ſecrecy, be moſt carefully preſerved in all kinds; And think it not tolerable to goe on (as they would have you, and tell you it may lawfully be done by you) either in ſinnes of luxury and exceſſe, apt to hinder your watchfulneſſe (ſee Lu: 21. 34.) or in venery, men with women in unlawfull embraces, or in laſciviouſneſſe againſt the lewes, and difference of ſexes (ſee note on 1 Pet: 4. d.) or any of thoſe other ſins ſo familiar among the Gnoſticks, or finally in factions, diviſions, contentions, hating and perſecuting your fellow Chriſtians, as the Gnoſticks and Judaizers doe.

of all Chriſtian purity, and doe not entertain your ſelves with carnall ſenſuall deſignes, ſuch as the divinity of the Gnoſticks is too full of, which tends to the advancing of luſts of all kindes, and nothing elſe.

2. Ἐξουσία — What ἐξουσία power] here ſignifies, will appear ſufficiently by the οἱ γὰρ ἄρχοντες, for the Rulers &c: v. 3. for the [γὰρ for] being a rationall or cauſall particle, applies the ſpeech to that, which had gone before, and ſo expreſſes the ἐξουσίαι powers v. 1. to be the ἄρχοντες rulers, v. 3. and ſo again the annexing of ἐξουσίαν power v. 3. doth confirm the ſame. Nor indeed can the power, abſtracted from the perſon of the magiſtrate, be able to doe what is here ſaid of ἐξουσία, viz: commend, or encourage v. 3. avenge and puniſh v. 4. And the matter is clear, for v. 3. [φοβητοὶ ἐξουσίαι the powers being feared] is all one with [ἄρχοντες εἰσὶ φόβος the rulers are a fear, or terror] in the beginning of the verſe, and v. 4. immediatly upon the mention of the power, and the praiſe, which they that doe well, ſhall have ἐξ αὐτῆς v. 3. from the power, it is added, Θεοῦ γὰρ διάκονός ἐστί σοι, For he (that muſt needs be the perſon of the magiſtrate) is a miniſter of God to thee for good, and, He bears not the ſword in vain, or, for no end, for he is the miniſter of God and avenger of wrath, &c. Thus is ἐξουσίαι and Ἀρχαὶ ἀρχαὶ uſed Lu. 12. 11. when the diſciples are ſaid to be brought before principalities and powers, i.e. without queſtion, princes and men in authority, and ſo are Κυριότητες κυριότητες dominions 2 Pet. 2. 10. all that are in authority, and ſo in this Epiſt: c. 8. 38. ἀρχαὶ and ἐξουσίαι principalities and powers, are certainly perſons (heathen magiſtrates) who perſecute Chriſtians, and ſo Epheſ. 3. 11. ἀρχαὶ and ἐξουσίαι are perſons to whom ſomewhat was to be made known. And ſo Col. 1. 16. 2. 15. 22. where ἐξουσίαι and δυνάμεις are joyned with Angels, and all ſaid to be made ſubject to Chriſt. And that it may not ſeem ſtrange that the word ἐξουσία power ſhould be ſet to note a perſon, it will be worth obſerving, not onely that the Latine, magiſtratus, which ſignifies magiſtracy, ſignifies the perſon of the magiſtrate alſo, and is moſt commonly ſo uſed, not for the power, but for the perſon inveſted with that power; but, which is punctually for the point in hand, that the Latine, Poteſtas, which is directly anſwerable to the Greek ἐξουσία, ſignifies a ruler or Governour in good and antient authors, as in Juvenal Sat: 10. ſpeaking of the unfortunate end of Sejanus, after all his greatneſſe, he asks,

Hujus, qui trahitur, prætextam ſumere mavis,
An Fidenorum Gabiorúmque eſſe Poteſtas?

which had you rather chuſe? to ſucceed Sejanus, that was thus uſed, i.e. have that great preferment and dignity of his (aſſumed by the Emperor of Rome into the participation of his ſupremacy) and pay ſo dear for it, or elſe to be quietly and peaceably the power, i.e. ruler or governour of thoſe mean people, the Fideni or Gabii? Then for the Ὑπερέχουσι word which is here added to ἐξουσίαι, [ὑπερέχουσαι,] that that is to be rendred, the ſupreme (not the higher) powers, will appear, not onely by comparing it with 1 Pet. 2. 13. where the βασιλεὺς King, or Emperor is the ὑπερέχων ſupreme, and all others ſaid to be ſent by him, he having his commiſſion from God (as here alſo 'tis ſaid in the end of this v. 1.) and all others are not from God immediately, but from him; but alſo by the nature and uſe of the word; the nature of it, confining it to thoſe that are over, and not under others, and ſo in Simplicius upon Epictetus p. 2. 14. αἴτια ἀεῖται τῷ ὑπερέχοντα, the firſt cauſes, and ὑπερέχοντα, which muſt therefore be rendred ſupreme, are joyned together, and ſaid to be all one with ἐξῃρημένα αἴτια, the exempt, abſolute, independent principles, viz: the Gods, ſaith he, or, in his ſtyle, the κρείττονες, to whom worſhip is due; and ſo in proportion ſpeaking here of men, it muſt belong to the ſupreme in any kingdome, who, as he is ἀρχὴ firſt, ſo is he ἐξῃρημένος exempt, and ἀνυπεύθυνος not accountable to any man or men upon earth; and for the uſe of it, beſide that which hath already been ſaid, it may be obſerved, that Gen. 49. 3. in the deſcription of that condition which had belonged to Reuben (if he had not forfeited it) by his primogeniture, viz: that he ſhould have been the King (as, upon his ſinne, Judah was) it is ſaid of him, that he was יתר שאת ויתר עז the excellence of principality, and the excellence of power, i.e. the excellent principality and excellent power, which ſeems to me to be the very phraſe, here uſed, of ὑπερέχουσα ἐξουσία, and is there ſpoken perſonally of that elder brother.

The word κρῖμα] according to its literal importance, ſignifies judgment, and no more, and is applied to humane judgments ſometimes, either going to law, contentiones in foro 1 Cor. 6. 7. or elſe ſentences of temporal puniſhments on malefactors. So Lu. 23. 40. where one theif ſaith to the other οὐδὲ ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ κρίματι εἶ, thou art in the ſame judgment, or ſentence of death, capital puniſhment, called κρῖμα θανάτου c. 24. 20. judgment of death temporal. Otherwhere it as clearly ſignifies divine, and that eternal puniſhment, as Act. 24. 25. Περὶ κρίματος τοῦ μέλλοντος ἔσεσθαι, judgment to come, i.e. certainly at the end of the world, at the day of doom, and ſo Rom. 2. 2. κρῖμα Θεοῦ the judgment of God, and ſo again v. 3. which v. 5. is explained to be wrath or puniſhment againſt the day of wrath, ſo Heb. 6. 2. αἰώνιον κρῖμα eternal judgment joyned with the reſurrection of the dead. So Mat. 23. 14. and Mar. 12. 40. Lu. 20. 47. περισσότερον κρῖμα more abundant judgment, which they ſhould receive in another world (when this world affords none) for their hypocriſies, and Rom. 3. 8. ὧν τὸ κρῖμα ἔνδικόν ἐστιν, whoſe judgment (or puniſhment eternal) is juſt, and 2 Pet. 2. 3. οἷς τὸ κρῖμα ἔκπαλαι οὐκ ἀργεῖ whoſe judgment i.e. deſtruction (temporal here by the hand of God, preparatory and prœmial to) eternal lingreth not, as appears by the next words, whoſe deſtruction ſleepeth not, So 1 Tim. 3. 6. κρῖμα διαβόλου the condemnation of the devil, that ſentence that befell Lucifer for his pride preſently after his creation, and ſo may befall the novice lifted up with pride there. And therefore Heſychius, from the more general uſage, renders it, ἀνταπόδοσιν Θεοῦ, God's retribution, or payment, or rendring according to works, which is, ſure, his eternal puniſhment. Three places there are, which belong certainly to this ſenſe, which yet have been queſtion'd by ſome men, and denied to doe ſo. Firſt this in this place, They that reſiſt, i.e. by force or violence oppoſe the ſupreme power, ἑαυτοῖς κρῖμα λήψονται, ſhall receive judgment to themſelves, That this ſignifies temporal puniſhment, which the magiſtrate may inflict, and no more, they think appears by the following words, for rulers are a terror to evil works. But if that argument were of force, it would conclude alſo, that no more but temporal puniſhment belonged to any other crime, which was puniſhable by the magiſtrate, for of him it is ſaid, that he is Θεοῦ διάκονος ἔκδικος εἰς ὀργὴν τῷ τὸ κακὸν πράσσοντι the miniſter or officer of God, his executioner for wrath, i.e. puniſhment temporal, to him indefinitly that doth evil, i.e. every viſible malefactor. And ſo if this would conclude for the reſiſter or rebell, it would alſo be privilege or protection to all other ſins, which the magiſtrate is wont to puniſh, the thief, the murtherer &c. he that were hanged ſhould not for that be damned, whatever his crime were. And 2^dly, if that reſiſter ſhould eſcape the hand of juſtice here by flight &c. or if he ſhould proſper in his rebellion, ſo that the magiſtrate ſhould not be able to puniſh him, or yet farther, ſo as to get into the throne, what judgment or puniſhment is that man likely to receive, if the κρῖμα or judgment here ſignifie none but the magiſtrates wrath or puniſhment? 3^dly, 'tis here v.5. concluded from hence, Wherefore ye muſt be ſubject, not onely for wrath, but alſo for conſcience ſake, where wrath ſignifying temporal puniſhment v.4. if that were all, that were meant by κρῖμα, then could it not be true, much leſſe concluded from hence, that men muſt be ſubject, not onely for wrath. Certainly he that reſiſts is not ſubject (ἀντιτάσσεσθαι is all one with ἀντιτασσόμενος, and both directly contrary to ὑποτασσόμενος, being ſubject, v.3. 5.) and therefore if we muſt be ſubject, not onely for wrath, as that ſignifies temporal puniſhment, then he that reſiſts ſhall receive more then wrath, as that ſignifies temporal puniſhment, viz: κρῖμα eternal judgment or condemnation, which muſt be the importance of ἀλλὰ καὶ διὰ συνείδησιν, but alſo for conſcience, viz: that if he doe it not, it will be ſinne to him, wound his conſcience, and ſo bind over to that puniſhment that belongs to an accuſing conſcience, or the breach of that divine law, (which is the rule of conſcience) the command of obedience v.1. to a damning ſinne, if it be not timely repented of. The ſecond place thus doubted of is 1 Cor. 11.29. He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh κρῖμα judgment to himſelf. That it doth not there ſignifie damnation is attempted to be proved by 3 arguments, 1. by that which followes v.30. For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and many ſleep, which belonging onely to temporal puniſhment, is conceived to be the periphraſis of κρῖμα judgment precedent, and conſequently that that is ſo alſo: 2^dly, becauſe the Apoſtle ſpeaks there of any one ſingle act of this ſin, which being not an habite or cuſtome, the objectors conceive not to be actually damning under the ſecond covenant: 3^dly, becauſe v.32. 'tis ſaid, When wee are judged, wee are chaſtened of the Lord, that we ſhould not be condemned &c. To the firſt of theſe the anſwer is clear, 1. that ſickneſſe and death though they be temporal puniſhments, are yet divine, inflicted by the hand of God, not of the magiſtrate, and 'tis acknowledged that it doth ſeldome ſignifie eternal puniſhment, excluſively to God's temporal puniſhments, but eternal, and ſometimes temporal too (as was ſaid of 2 Pet. 2.3.) or eternal, if he repent not, and perhaps temporal, if he doe, or to bring him to repentance; 2^dly, that theſe temporal doe not exclude eternal puniſhments, they may be ſick, and die, and be damn'd alſo, or elſe ſome being reformed by theſe temporal chaſtiſements, others may be damn'd alſo, that doe not reform; and that this is juſt with God, and the meaning of κρῖμα there, appears v.27. which is parallel to v. 29. whoſoever ſhall eat or drink unworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, i. e. ſhall be thought guilty of the greateſt violation of Chriſt, to profane and tread under feet his body and blood. To the ſecond, it need not here be diſputed whether one act of mortal or wilful ſinne bring damnation, it being as much to the preſent purpoſe, that cuſtomary or frequent ſinning doth, for whatever mercy may belong to him that commits only one act, yet, if he that cuſtomarily or frequently doth it, incurre damnation, this will be the Apoſtles meaning by κρῖμα there, who ſpeaks indefinitely of the ſinne (as when he ſaith, the drunkard or adulterer ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God,) and deſcends not to that minuter conſideration, what tis that contracts the guilt of that ſin. As for the 3^d objection, 'tis an evident confirmation of this rendring, for if thoſe that were ſick &c. were chaſtned of the Lord, that they ſhould not be condemned, then ſure if they had not been ſo chaſtned, or not reformed by that chaſtning, they ſhould have been condemned with the world, which is no argument that eternal judgments are not due to them on their impenitence, but an evident intimation that they are. The third place thus doubted of (and brought to countenance the former interpretations of theſe two) is 1 Pet. 4.17. Ὁ καιρὸς τοῦ ἄρξασθαι τὸ κρῖμα ἀπὸ τοῦ οἴκου τοῦ Θεοῦ, It is the ſeaſon of judgment's beginning from the houſe of God, where that that befalls the houſe of God cannot be condemnation. To which I anſwer by granting the objection, and conſequently that κρῖμα in its latitude muſt not there be applied to the houſe of God, but onely one part of it. For of κρῖμα in that verſe there are ſpecified two parts, τὸ ἀρξάμενον and τὸ τέλος, the firſt part, and the end or laſt part of it; The firſt part of God's revenge on ſinne may be in this life, and befall the godly, who hath ſinne to be puniſhed alſo, and ſo μόλις σώζεται hardly eſcapes v.18. or (as that phraſe is in the original Prov. 11.31.) is recompenſed on the earth, but the ſecond ſadder part is τῶν ἀπειθούντων of the contumacious, that obey not the Goſpel of Chriſt, and it ſeizeth on them here, and ſweeps them away, and then continues to them eternally, and ſo ſtill κρῖμα is ἀνταπόδοσις Θεοῦ, God's puniſhment and retribution to ſinne, wherever it is, both here, and in another world.

What σωτηρία ſalvation or deliverance] here ſignifies (ſomewhat different from the notion of it ch.10.a.) may be gueſs'd by what hath been oft mention'd of the word σώζεσθαι and σώζειν in the Goſpels, *Mat.*10.g. *Lu.*13.a. &c. the deliverance of the beleiving Jewes or Chriſtians out of perſecutions, which (after the example of Chriſt) befell them in the firſt age, and from which they were delivered partly by the great act of vengeance from Chriſt upon the Jewes the crucifiers of him, and perſecuters of his followers (ſee *Lu.*21.28.) and partly by their departing generally out of Judæa, before that deſtruction befell the Jewes (ſee Rev. 7.d.e.) and partly by the Halcyonian daies, which under Veſpaſian were allowed the Chriſtians after this time in all places. The approaching of this is every where uſed, as an antidote or cordiall conſi- c.

deration, to arm them in time of affliction, & ſo here the conſidering that this is now nearer then when they firſt embraced the faith, and that therefore now 'twere unreaſonable to fall off, and loſe all their paſt faith and ſufferings, when now a little while more will land them ſafe at their expected haven, the deliverance ſo promiſed. This probably is the meaning of the phraſe 1 Pet. 1. 5. σωτηρία ἑτοίμη ἀποκαλυφθῆναι ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ, deliverance ready to be revealed in the laſt time, and perhaps σωτηρία ψυχῶν v. 9. the ſaving of their lives, (antecedent to that of their ſoules) the delivering them from thoſe imminent dangers that the Chriſtians were under, from the Jewes, till that their deſtruction, (for that that is the meaning of σῶζειν ψυχὴν Mat. 16. 15. Mar. 8. 35. Lu. 9. 24. ſaving or finding his life; ſee thoſe places, and note on 2 Pet. 1. e.) That 'tis there to be thus underſtood may be probable by v. 10. where, ſaith he, the prophets enquired concerning this σωτηρία ſalvation, or deliverance, what time it was likely to come v. 11. which ſeems to confine it to ſome eminent event or paſſage in this world, and that, it ſeems, now ready to fall out in that preſent age, v. 12. So 2 Pet. 3. 15. where he bids them count the longanimity of God (i. e. his ſparing or deferring the puniſhment of the Jewes ſo long) σωτηρίαν deliverance, viz: that the Jewes might come in to the faith, and all the beleiving Jewes might have time to goe out of Hieruſalem (ſee note on Mat. 24. 8.) and ſo be reſcued out of that common deſtruction. To this, I conceive, belong theſe words in the Epiſtle of Barnabas p. 227. ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ αὐτοῦ ἡμέραι πονηραὶ καὶ σκανδαλώδεις, ἐν αἷς ἡμεῖς σωθησόμεθα, In his (i. e. Chriſt's) kingdome there ſhall be evil and foule daies, in which we ſhall be ſaved or eſcape, and that which follows ἡδυπάθεια ἡμῶν δὲ φανεῖ, ἐκείνοις δὲ σκοτεινά, to us there ſhall be lightſome, but to them dark black events. This is ſet down moſt plainly 2 Pet. 2. 6, 7, 9. by the example of Sodome and Lot; Sodome deſtroyed, and Lot and his family preſerved; and ſo alſo of the old world v. 5. when Noah and ſeven more were preſerved, where ῥύεσθαι is all one with σώζεσθαι. And 'tis obſervable that this very word σώζω is uſed in this ſtory in Geneſis, when the Angel bids Lot eſcape and flie for his life, or ſave and deliver his life, σῶζειν ψυχήν. And becauſe this is the prime matter of S. Jude's Epiſtle, as well as of that of S. Peter's to the diſperſed Jewes, that alſo may probably be the meaning of κοινὴ σωτηρία, common ſalvation or deliverance, Jude 3. that deliverance that the beleivers ſhould generally meet with. This uſe of this word, how agreeable it is to the ſcripture ſtyle, may yet farther appear by the notion of a Saviour in the Old Teſtament, for a deliverer, ſuch as Joſhua was ſaid to be, of whom there is a notable place to this purpoſe, Eccleſiaſticus 46. 1. Jeſus &c. according to his name, was made great εἰς σωτηρίαν ἐκλεκτῶν, for the ſaving, or delivering the elect of God, and taking vengeance on the enemies, &c. And ſo Obad. 21. the Saviours ſhall come to judge the mount of Eſau, the kingdome &c. and ſo all thoſe others, of whom 'tis ſaid in generall, Thou haſt ſent us Saviours, i. e. the Judges, which were ſent or raiſed up by God to fight the battails of God's people againſt their enemies; in which two reſpects 1. of avenging them on their enemies; 2. of delivering them, thoſe two titles of Judges and Saviours are beſtowed on them. And agreeable to this, this act of Chriſt's ſo remarkable on the Jewes, is called both the kingdome of God, and σωτηρία deliverance or ſalvation: kingdome in both reſpects, as a king is an avenger and protector both; and deliverance in the ſecond only. Other like words we find to the ſame ſenſe, ſee note on Act. 3. 2.

CHAP. XIV.

Paraphraſe.

* receive to you, εἰς προσλαμβάνεσθε † to the judging of thoughts

1. HIM that is weak in the faith, * receive ye; but not † to doubtfull [a] diſputations.] 1. And for the preſerving of that Chriſtian charity among all, mention'd ſolemnly c. 13. 8, 9, 10. I ſhall enlarge to give theſe rules. Great diſſenſions and diviſions are already a growing in the Church between the Jewiſh and Gentile beleivers; The Jewiſh beleiver is zealous for the Moſaical obſervances of circumciſion and meats, &c. and will not come near an heathen, that will not, as a proſelyte of juſtice, obſerve all theſe: On the other ſide the Gentile beleivers, ſeeing the Jewiſh ſtand upon ſuch things as theſe, that had nothing of real goodneſſe or virtue in them, are apt to deſpiſe and contemn them, and reſolving to maintain that liberty purchaſed by Chriſt to the Jew himſelf, that of freedome from ſuch obligations, are apt to ſeparate from the Jewes, ch. 11. 18. and ſo betwixt one and other, the communion is like to be broken. To both theſe therefore, I apply my ſelf at this time. The ſcrupulous or erroneous Judaizer, that thinks himſelf bound to obſerve thoſe lawes of abſtaining from many meats, of being circumciſed &c. doe ye Gentile beleivers not reject, but receive to your communion, yet not ſo, that he thereby think himſelf encouraged or authorized to quarrel with other mens reſolutions for the directing their own lives, what is lawfull or unlawfull for them, and to condemn others that doe not think themſelves ſo obliged. 2.

2. For one beleiveth that he may eat all things; another, who is weak, eateth herbs.] 2. The Gentile-Chriſtian makes no ſcruple of eating any thing, thinks not himſelf obliged to be circumciſed &c. makes uſe of his Chriſtian liberty to that purpoſe: the Jewiſh, being not ſufficiently inſtructed in the nature of the liberty allow'd him by Chriſt and remaining ing in that error concerning the obligingneſſe of the Moſaical law, abſtaineth (from all fleſh perhaps, for ſo ſome did, or elſe) from ſome ſorts of meats, as unclean, and forbidden.

3. Now to begin with the latter firſt (ſee note on Mat. 7. b.) the Gentile, that eateth all meats indifferently, muſt not deſpiſe the ſcrupulous erroneous Jewiſh beleiver: and on the other ſide the ſcrupulous Judaizer muſt not reject and caſt out of his communion the Gentile Chriſtian, who being inſtructed in the nature of his Chriſtian liberty doth not think himſelf obliged to abſtain from all thoſe meats, from which he religiouſly and Judaically abſtains, for God hath admitted him into the Church, (without laying that yoke upon him,) as a ſervant into his family, and he is not to be excluded by the Judaizer for ſuch things as theſe.

3. Let not him that eateth, * deſpiſe him that eateth not: and let not him, which eateth not, judge him that eateth: for God hath received him.] * ſet at nought ἐξουθενείτω

4. What cómiſſion haſt thou, O Jewiſh Chriſtian, to judge God's ſervant, received and owned by him, v.3. to exclude him out of the Church? (ſee ch.2. 1. and note a.) To his own Lord he ſtands or falls, i.e. he, by his (not thy) ſentence or judgment, is either cleared (judged to have done nothing amiſſe) or condemn'd. But he certainly ſhall be cleared, for God is able to clear him, if he pleaſe, and he certainly will, having, by receiving him into his family, given him this liberty.

4. Who art thou that judgeſt another man's ſervant? to his own maſter he ſtandeth or falleth: yea, he ſhall be holden up, for God is able to make him ſtand.]

5. The Judaical Chriſtian preferres one day before another, the ſabbath, or other Jewiſh feſtivals; but the Gentile beleiver makes not that difference of daies that Moſes requires, and in ſuch things every man muſt act by his own, not by another man's judgment or conſcience (ſee note on Lu. 1. a.) what he is verily perſwaded he ought to doe, (and therefore unity and charity ought not to be broken by you for ſuch things.)

5. One man † eſteemeth one day above another: another eſteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully perſwaded * in his own mind.] † maketh a difference of one day fro another. διακρίνει ἡμέραν παρ' ἡμέραν * by, for the King's MS. reads πρὸ without παρά

6,7. He that makes a difference betwixt daies, thinks it is God's will he ſhould doe ſo; and he that doth not make that difference, thinks it

6. He that regardeth a day, regardeth it unto the Lord: and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks: and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

7. For none of us liveth to himſelf, and no man dieth to himſelf.]

God's pleaſure that he ſhould not make any difference. He that makes no difference of meats thinks it acceptable to God that he ſhould do ſo, and in teſtimony that he thinks ſo, conſtantly bleſſeth God, when he eats, for giving him that food, to the eating of which he conceives God hath alſo given him liberty; and the Jewiſh Chriſtian thinks it obligation of conſcience to abſtain, and for that command of reſtraint, and for the grace of doing ſuch an act of ſelf-deniall, he giveth God thanks alſo. And this ſure is well done on both ſides; for no man of us is to doe what he himſelf likes beſt, but what he thinks is moſt acceptable to God.

8. For our life and death are very conſiderable, but as by them we may ſerve God; and therefore much more all other things.

8. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lords.]

9. And all the fruit of Chriſts death, and ſuffering, and reſurrection, which accrues to him, is onely this, that he may have power and dominion over us all, to command or give what liberty he pleaſeth.

9. For to this end Chriſt both died, and roſe, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.]

10. But why doſt thou Jewiſh condemn the Gentile Chriſtian, or exclude him from thy communion, becauſe he uſes his Chriſtian liberty &c. or thou Gentile Chriſtian, why doſt thou think it a piece of ſenſleſſe ſtupidity in the Jew to abſtain, and thereupon deſpiſe v.3. and vilifie him, which is alſo a kind of judging him, whereas indeed neither of you is to be the judge of the other, but Chriſt of you both, ſee note a. on Jam. 3.

10. But why doſt thou judge thy brother? or why doeſt thou ſet at nought thy brother? we ſhall all † ſtand before the judgment ſeat of Chriſt.] † be ſet παρασταθησόμεθα

11,12. According to that of the prophet, Iſa.45. 23. that God is the one ſupreme judge of all, to whoſe judicature every one muſt ſubmit, and give account for his own actions, and conſequently that 'tis moſt unreaſonable, that any man, but he, to whom God hath committed that power, the Apoſtles and Governours of the Church, endowed with the power of the Keyes and Cenſures, ſhould thus cenſure, and reject others from their communion.

11. For it is written, As I live, ſaith the Lord, every knee ſhall bow to me, and every tongue ſhall confeſſe to God.

12. So then every one of us ſhall give account of himſelf to God.]

13. And therefore let this fault be mended by you, doe not any longer cenſure and ſeparate from one another's communion, for ſuch things as theſe; but rather conſider the danger that may befall you, and the ſinne, and ſo reſolve it your duty to be moſt carefull, not to injure any Chriſtian ſo, as to put in his way a ſtumbling block to hinder his coming to Chriſtianity or a gall-trap to wound him, and make him goe back, both which the Jewiſh Chriſtians did, binding all to the Moſaical law, and ſo by that yoke deterring the Gentiles from Chriſtianity, and ſo did the Gentile Chriſtians too, ſcoffing at, and repelling the ſcrupulous doubting Jewes, ver. 20.

13. Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a ſtumbling block, or * an occaſion to fall, in his brother's way.] * a ſcandal σκάνδαλον

14. I am confident, and make no queſtion, but that Chriſt hath ſo removed that yoke of the Moſaical law, that to a Chriſtian no meat is unlawfull to be eaten; but yet for all that, it is unlawfull to him that eſteems it to be ſtill prohibited. The perſwaſion of its being forbidden him, is, as long as he is ſo perſwaded, ſufficient to make it to him unlawfull to uſe that liberty, which otherwiſe were lawfull-

15. But if for a matter of this nature, his not daring to eat what thou eateſt, thou deſpiſe and caſt off a Jewiſh Chriſtian, and by ſo doing diſcourage or aliene him from going on in Chriſtianity, v.13. ſure this is contrary to the rule of Chriſtian charity, of drawing all to piety, and driving none away, Mat. 18.6. and it will be a great fault in thee, for ſo light a thing as meat is, to drive from Chriſtianity, and conſequently to deſtroy him, for the ſaving of whom Chriſt was content to lay down his life, ſee v. 20.

16. Let not your good be evil ſpoken of.] 16. Ye may uſe your Chriſtian liberty, but ſhall not doe well ſo to uſe it, as that it may tend to others hurt, for that will be the defaming of that, which is in it ſelf indifferent or innocent.

17. For the kingdome of God is not meat and drink, but righteouſneſſe, and peace, and [c] joy in the holy Ghoſt.] 17. For Chriſtianity conſiſts not in c.

ſuch external matters, eating, or not eating ſuch or ſuch meats, but in the practiſe of Chriſtian virtues, ſuch are mercifulneſſe and peaceableneſſe and delight to doe good one to another, to build up and advance one another in piety, not dividing and hating, and excommunicating one another, v.19.

18. For he that in theſe things ſerveth Chriſt, is acceptable to God, and approved of men.] 18. Theſe indeed are acts of obedience to Chriſt, that are ſure to be accepted by God (without Judaical performances) and to be of good report among all men.

19. Let us therefore follow after the things that make for peace, and things wherewith one may edifie another.] 19. And therefore let us moſt zealouſly attend to thoſe things, which may thus preſerve peace between all ſorts of Chriſtians though of different perſwaſions, Jewiſh and Gentile, and which tend to the drawing men to Chriſtianity, not alienating them from it.

* diſſolve καταλυε † but the evil is to κακον τῳ 20. For meat * deſtroy not the work of God: all things indeed are pure; † but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence.] 20. Doe not thou for ſo unconſiderable a matter as eating is, or becauſe another will not, or dares not make uſe of that Chriſtian liberty, which thou doſt moſt innocently uſe, diſturb that peace, that unity, which God hath wrought betwixt Jew and Gentile. 'Tis true a man may eat any thing ſimply conſidered; but if by eating he aliene others from the Goſpel, by deſpiſing and avoiding them, v.3. that dare not doe ſo, this is a ſinne in him.

* ſcandalized, or is ſick, σκανδαλιζεται ἢ ἀσθενει 21. It is good neither to eat fleſh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother ſtumbleth, or is * offended, or is made weak.] 21. 'Tis not charitable to make uſe of any part of Chriſtian liberty, when by thy ſo doing, any other man is kept from receiving the faith, and ſo falls by ſomewhat which thou haſt laid in his way (as the Gentiles by the Jewes inſiſting on the Moſaical obſervances) or gall'd, and diſcouraged, and driven from the profeſſion, (as the Jewiſh beleiver is by being deſpiſed by the Gentile Chriſtian) or any way wounded, or hurt, i.e. brought to any kind of ſinne (ſee note on 1 Cor.8. b.)

†by thy ſelf κατα σεαυτον * judgeth not himſelf in that which he approves, μη κρινων ἑαυτον εν ᾧ δοκιμαζει † it is not of faith, οὐκ ἐκ πιστεως 22. Haſt thou faith? Have it † to thy ſelf before God. Happy is he that * condemneth not himſelf in that thing which he alloweth.] 22. If thou haſt a clear underſtanding of thy Chriſtian liberty, it is well for thee, and thou mayſt uſe it betwixt God and thy ſelf, but not alwaies before men, as when it may be in danger to hurt them, and when 'tis not neceſſary to reveal thy practiſe in ſuch matters. He is an happy man, that, when he knows a thing lawfull, doth ſo manage the practiſe of it, the uſe of his liberty, that he hath therein no reaſon to accuſe or condemn himſelf, ſee note on c.2. f.

23. And he that doubteth is damned if he eat, becauſe † he eateth not of faith: for whatſoever is not of faith, is ſinne.] 23. And indeed for the ſcrupulous Jew, there is little reaſon he ſhould be ſo ill uſed for his not daring to eat, when he thinks himſelf otherwiſe obliged; for it were a damning ſinne, for which his own conſcience already condemns him, ſhould he eat, or doe any indifferent thing, as long as he thinks in conſcience that it is not ſo, becauſe it is contrary to perſwaſion or aſſurance of the lawfulneſſe of his action, and whoſoevever doth any thing without that perſwaſion (call'd faith here, and knowledge 1 Cor.8.7.) ſo farre at leaſt as to judge that, which he doth, lawfull for him, he certainly ſinnes in ſo doing.

which they reſolve and determine what they may and may not doe, and accordingly regulate the actions of their lives, That ſpecial act of their judicium practicum, which hath the governing of their practiſe, and conſequently διάκρισις διαλογισμῶν μέσ] is, the judging or condemning of other mens courſes; Which practiſe was not to be approved of, or encouraged in the Jew on one ſide, as on the other ſide the Gentile was not to reject, but receive him to his communion, though he were erroneouſly, and unneceſſarily ſcrupulous in point of the Moſaical obſervances. And ſo this firſt verſe is the breviate of the whole chapter, which is all on theſe two heads, that the Gentile muſt not deſpiſe and reject the Jewiſh beleiver, and that the Jewiſh muſt not judge or condemn the Gentile, ſee v.3.&c. & c.2.1. note a.

διάκρισις διαλογισμῶν

b. Λυπεῖς here ſignifies to be grieved, as that notes being wounded, or galled in his courſe, and by that means driven off from the profeſſion of Chriſtianity. That it ſignifies ſo, appears by the context, comparing this verſe with v.13. where the brother's having a ſcandal, i.e. gall-trap (ſee note on Mat. 11. c.) put in his way, is all one with the [λυπῆται being grieved] here, anſwerable to both which together, is σκανδαλίζεται ἢ ἀσθενεῖ, is ſcandalized (or galled) and made weak, or ſick, or faint, or wounded, v.21. For it is to be obſerved that λύπη grief or ſorrow, is oft taken for the cauſe of ſorrow, diſeaſe, or wound, or gall, as ὀδύνη ψυχῆς, Eccluſ. 30. 12. is one that cauſeth grief to the ſoul, and as πένθος mourning is by Heſychius rendred συμφορὰ calamity, which is the cauſe of mourning; and as φόβος fear ſignifies (the cauſe of fear) danger; according to an Hebraiſme obſervable in theſe writers, where for want of the conjugation Hiphil, which in Hebrew ſignifies [to cauſe to doe any thing] the Greek language is faine to uſe the active [to doe.] So the Hebrew חולה, which ſignifies infirm or ſick, *Lam.*1.22. is by the Greek rendred λυπῆ, where we read [is faint] as Iſa. 1. 15. πᾶσα καρδία εἰς λύπην the whole heart is faint, i.e. very ſick, which is the cauſe of grief, and therefore the ſame word is in other places rendred ὀδύνη and νόσος, *Deut.*7.15. pain or diſeaſe. So אבד, which ſignifies deſtruction, and is frequently rendred ἀπώλεια, is Prov. 31.6. rendred λύπη, οἱ ἐν λύπαις men in ſorrow, for which our Engliſh have, ready to periſh, agreeably to which S. Paul here joynes (as the interpretation of grieving the brother) deſtroying him. This is farre diſtant from that notion, which is ordinarily had of this phraſe, as if it ſignified ſorrow or trouble, or grief for the other man, or rather anger or diſpleaſure againſt him; which being (in this matter) without cauſe (for 'tis ſaid ver.14. that that which the brother eats, is not unclean in its ſelf. and therefore he may lawfully eat it in that reſpect) is wholly to be charged on him that is ſo cauſleſly diſpleaſed or angry, and would not devolve that guilt of ſcandal on him that eats, that here lies on him by the brothers being grieved or wounded.

Λυπεῖς

c. That χαρὰ joy, Gal. 5.22. ſignifies not the natural paſſion, but the Chriſtian virtue, and that again moſt probably that which is exerciſed toward our brethren, appears by the ἀγάπη charity before, and εἰρήνη peace &c. after it, and therefore it muſt be underſtood in that notion, which ſhall be agreeable thereto, either to ſignifie the rejoicing at any good that befalls another, but eſpecially at the virtuous actions performed by him (which 1 Cor. 13.6. is rejoicing in the truth, i.e. integrity and ſincerity of another, oppoſite to his ἀδικία doing amiſſe præcedent) or elſe the deſire or delight of doing good to others, which as a thing very pleaſant to him that hath it, and as the cauſe of joy to them that receive benefit from it, may perhaps be called joy. And though the former of theſe notions is the more eaſie and prompt, yet that this latter is the more proper to that place may appear probable, by comparing it with the like phraſe here, χαρὰ ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ, joy in the holy Ghoſt, which is here alſo joyned with righteouſneſs and peace, (and all of them, by the matter in hand, the care of not offending the weak brother, appear to be branches of duty to the neighbour) and ſeems contrary to the grieving and wounding the brother, v. 15. i.e. the betraying him to any ſinne, and is expounded v.19. by τὰ τῆς οἰκοδομῆς τῆς εἰς ἀλλήλους διώκτε, purſuing thoſe things that belong to edification toward one another, i.e. building up in piety, bettering one another, which is here joyned with purſuing τὰ τῆς εἰρήνης the things that belong to peace (as there the joy is with peace it ſelf) and ch.15. 2. by τῷ πλησίον ἀρέσκειν εἰς τὸ ἀγαθὸν πρὸς οἰκοδομήν pleaſing the neighbour to his good for edification, i.e. gratifying or cauſing joy and pleaſure to him in improving his ſpiritual weale, and ſo 1 Cor. 10. the not giving ſcandal to others, v. 32. is exemplified by his pleaſing of all men in all things, not ſeeking his own profit, but the profit of many, v.33. and ſo not to ſeek his own, but that which is anothers, v.24. as it is ſaid of charity that it ſeeketh not her own, 1 *Cor.*13.5. i.e. takes care of others ſafety, not onely of her own, doth nothing that may ſcandalize another, and rather then doe ſo, abſtains from that which the man himſelf approves of. So Phil. 2. 4. τὰ ἑτέρων σκοπεῖν, to conſider or mind the things of others, i.e. what may tend to their good as well as ours. By all which it ſeems probable that χαρὰ joy, and joy in the holy Ghoſt, that grace of the Chriſtian, flowing from the ſanctifying Spirit of God, or which is according to the will of God, a holy Chriſtian joy (as rejoicing in the Lord, Phil. 4. is rejoicing in thoſe things (afflictions there) which God would have us rejoice in) is the ſeeking, and advancing the ſpiritual weale, and good of others, as the grieving of them is the contrary, the wounding of their conſciences, and occaſioning their ſinne. 'Tis true the joy of the holy Ghoſt 1 Theſſ. 1.6. is the rejoicing in afflictions, contrary to the joy of the world, and ſo rejoicing in hope, *Rom.*12. 12. but that hinders not but theſe phraſes, being otherwiſe inclined by the context, may ſignifie otherwiſe.

CHAP. XV.

Paraphraſe.

1. WE then that are ſtrong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to pleaſe our ſelves.]

1. They that know the nature and extent of Chriſtian liberty, ought to help and relieve thoſe that doe not underſtand it, to be watchfull to keep them from falling into ſinne, and not pleaſe themſelves too much in reflexion on their own ſtrength and knowledge, and neglect or deſpiſe others that have not ſo much.

2. Let every one of us pleaſe his neighbour for his good to edification.

3. For even Chriſt pleaſed not himſelf, but as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee, fell on me.]

2, 3. Let us rather doe what good we can to the edification of other men, after Chriſt's example, who did not conſider the pleaſing of himſelf, but had the ſame common concernments with the father, that whatſoever befell God, fell on him, was as tender of Gods honour, as if it were done to himſelf. Pſal. 69. 9. ſee Joh. 2. 17.

4. For whatſoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning; that we through patience and comfort of the ſcriptures might have hope.]

4. And if ye think or pretend that thoſe words ſpoken by the Pſalmiſt, belong not to you, ye muſt know, that generally ſuch ſayings in the old Teſtament, were meant to be our inſtructions and documents, and one principall uſe of them is, that by the examples which we find there of the patience of pious men, and of God's relieving and comforting thoſe that want relief, we might be confident that God will relieve us alſo in due time.

5. Now the God of patience and conſolation grant you to * be like minded one towards another, according to Chriſt Jeſus,]

* mind the ſame thing among one another, vi de ſupra ὁμόνοιαν

5. And that God, for whom we ought to ſuffer, and who will give you that relief, give you alſo the grace of unity and charity, ſuch as Chriſt commanded and expects from you,

6. That ye may with one mind, and one mouth glorifie † God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

† the God and father ὁ θεὸς καὶ πατὴρ

6. That ye may joyne unanimouſly, Jewes and Gentiles, into one, and aſſembling together worſhip and ſerve the Lord, who is both the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, (Eph. 1. 3. 17.) in all unity of affections and form of words.

7. Wherefore receive ye one another, as Chriſt alſo received us to the glory of God.]

7. Wherefore in all humility of condeſcenſion and kindneſſe, embrace and ſuccour one another, help them up, when they are fallen, in ſtead of deſpiſing and driving them from your communion, after the example of Chriſt's uſage toward men, who came from heaven, and laid down his life to relieve us, and there is nothing by which God is more glorified, then this.

8. Now I ſay that Jeſus Chriſt was a miniſter of the circumciſion for the truth of God, to confirm the promiſes made unto the fathers:]

8. And that ye may not think fit to deſpiſe the Jewiſh beleivers, let me tell you, that Chriſt came to them, was by God conſtituted a means or inſtrument of good to the Jewes in preaching to them the truth of God, calling them to repentance, and ſo exhibiting and making good to them the promiſes made of old to that people beyond all others.

9. And that the Gentiles might glorifie God for his mercy, as it is written, For this cauſe I will confeſſe to thee among the Gentiles, and ſing unto thy name.]

9. And on the other ſide, that the Jew may not condemn & reject the Gentile Chriſtian, let him know, that God hath been moſt wonderfully mercifull to the Gentiles, and ſo hath given them occaſion to magnifie his name, according to that of Pſal. 18. 49. I will praiſe thee, and ſing unto thee among the Gentiles, ſignifying thereby, that the Gentiles have cauſe to give thanks, and praiſe him.

10. And again he ſaith, Rejoice ye Gentiles, with his people]

10. And ſo Deut. 32. 43. the Gentiles are bid to joyn with the Jewes in rejoicing and praiſing God.

11. And again, Praiſe the Lord all ye Gentiles, and laud him all ye people.]

11. And ſo Pſal. 117. 1. they are called to praiſe God, Gentiles and Jewes together.

12. And again Eſaias ſaith. There ſhall be a root of Jeſſe, and he that ſhall riſe to [a] reigne over the Gentiles, in him ſhall the Gentiles truſt.]

12. And Iſaiah propheſying of Chriſt, ch. 11. 10. that ſhould come from David's family (under the type of Hezekiah a king of Judah lineally deſcending from David) ſaith that he ſhall be for a ſtandard to the Gentiles, to whom they may, and ſhall come, and truſt, and relie on him.

13. Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in beleiving, that ye may abound in hope through the power of the holy Ghoſt.]

13. Now that God, in whom all our truſt is repoſed, and from whom all good things are to be received, beſtow on you that cheerfull quiet (in ſtead of the contentions that have been among you) and that union & concord in the Chriſtian faith, (or without any receding from it) that thereby ye may have that hope, (which the Goſpel beſtowes on you on condition of charity &c.) encreaſed unto you into all abundance, through the working of the holy Ghoſt in you.

14. And I my ſelf alſo am perſwaded of you, my brethren, that ye alſo are full of goodneſſe, filled with all knowledge, able alſo to admoniſh one another.]

14. And though I doubt not but ye, that are full of virtue and charity, and perfectly know what your Chriſtian duty is, are alſo without my help able to adviſe one another to doe what I now ſay, i.e. to abſtain from contemning and condemning one another,

15. Nevertheleſſe, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you, in ſome ſort, as putting you in mind, becauſe of the grace that is given to me of God,]

15. Yet I have thought good to write freely to you, to ſtirre you up to the practiſe of that which you know already, this being a branch of my office and authority Apoſtolical, as well as that of making known the Goſpel,

* that there might be an offering of the Gentiles accepted ἵνα γένηται ἡ προσφορὰ τῶν ἐθνῶν εὐπρόσδεκτος

16. That I ſhould be the miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt to the Gentiles, miniſtring the Goſpel of God, * that the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt.]

16. That office, I ſay, to which I was ſent by Chriſt Act. 9. 15.

9.15. to preach the Goſpel to the Gentiles, as well as the Jewes, that the Gentiles might be preſented and offered up unto God as a ſacrifice moſt acceptable unto him, ſanctified, not as other ſacrifices, by any prieſt on earth, but even by the holy Ghoſt, i. e. that they might be brought to obey the Goſpel.

17. And for my ſucceſſe herein I have ground or matter of great rejoicing, not in my ſelf, but in order to God the author of this ſucceſſe.

17. I have therefore * whereof I may glory through Jeſus Chriſt in thoſe things which pertain to God.]

* glorying in Jeſus Chriſt as belonging to God, καυχησιν εν Χριστῳ Ιησου τα προς τον Θεον

18. And herein I ſhall not need to be ſo vain as to mention any thing that can be queſtionable, wherein, as an inſtrument in Chriſt's hands, I have wrought, and had this ſucceſſe to my work, in bringing the Gentiles to receive and obey the Goſpel, A work which hath been done by miracles, and preaching,

18. For I will not dare to ſpeak of any of thoſe things which Chriſt hath not wrought by me, † to make the Gentiles obedient by word and deed,]

† towards the obedience of the Gentiles, εις υπακοην εθνων

19. Proving and manifeſting my commiſſion, and the truth of what I ſhould ſay by greater evidences, then any prophet of old, by doing all kinds of miracles, as alſo by ſpeaking of ſtrange languages, 1 Cor. 14. 18 and receiving and making known revelations from heaven 2 Cor. 12. 3. And after this manner beginning at Jeruſalem, and taking a circuit through Phœnice, and Syria, and Arabia, Act. 19. 20. &c. I have diſcharged this my office, and preacht the Goſpel to the Macedonians which joyn upon Illyricum.

19. * Through mighty ſignes and wonders by the power of the Spirit of God, ſo that from Jeruſalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have † fully preached the Goſpel of Chriſt.]

* By the power of ſignes Εν δυναμει σημειων

† fulfilled πεπληροφορηκεναι

20. By which courſe it appears that I have not onely been careſull not to preach where ſome other had been before me, upon which it might be ſaid that I did only ſuperſtruct where others had laid the foundation, but I had a kind of ambition in it to make known the Goſpel to them that had never heard of Chriſt,

20. * Yea, ſo have I ſtrived to preach the Goſpel, not where Chriſt was named, leſt I ſhould build upon another man's foundation,]

* And ſuch an ambition have I had to Ουτω δε φιλοτιμουμενον με

21. To fulfil that glorious prophecie Iſ. 52.15. that they ſhould be brought home to God, that were never preached to before, as the events of Jeremies prophecies ſhould be made good to them, to whom the prophecies had not come.

21. But as it is written, To whom he was not ſpoken of, they ſhall ſee: and they that have not heard, ſhall underſtand.]

22. By this means of preaching to ſome new people or other, I have been hindred unexpectedly from coming to you, when I have ſeverall times deſigned it.

22. For which cauſe alſo I have been much hindred from coming to you.]

23. But now having no more occaſion to detain me in theſe parts, that I yet foreſee, and having for many years had an earneſt deſire to viſit you,

23. But now having no more place in theſe parts, and having a great deſire theſe many years to come unto you,]

24. In my journey to Spain I am reſolved to doe it, taking you in my paſſage, and expecting that you will accompany me ſome part of my way thither, after I have ſtayed a while, and ſatisfied my ſelf with the pleaſure of being among you.

24. Whenſoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you, for I truſt to ſee you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, † if firſt I be ſomewhat filled with your company.]

† if I may firſt in ſome meaſure have my fill of you, εαν υμων πρωτον απο μερους εμπλησθω

25. But now I am a going to Judæa to diſtribute to the poor Chriſtians there the collection that hath been made for them

25. But now I goe unto Jeruſalem, to miniſter unto the ſaints.]

26. By the Chriſtians of Macedonia and Achaia.

26. For it hath pleaſed them of Macedonia and Achaia, to make a certain contribution for the * poor ſaints, which are at Jeruſalem.]

* poor of the ſaints πτωχους των αγιων

27. This they have done, and 'twas but due from them, for conſidering that theſe Gentile provinces have been beholden in an higher reſpect to the Jewes, have received the Goſpel from them, as indeed from Judæa it was that 'twas firſt preached to Macedonia and Achaia, 'tis but reaſonable they ſhould make them thoſe poor returns, contribution to their wants.

27. It hath pleaſed them verily, and their debtors they are: for if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their ſpirituall things, their duty is alſo to miniſter unto them in carnal things.]

28 When therefore this buſineſſe is diſpatcht, and I have delivered to them ſafely this fruit of the Gentiles liberality, I intend then to begin my journey to Spain, and take you in my way thither.

28. When therefore I have performed this, and have ſealed to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spain.]

29. And I am confident, when I come, I ſhall give you ſuch evidences of the great mercy, and glorious diſpenſations of God, and the good ſucceſſes which I have had, that you will be much confirmed in the Chriſtian faith by my coming and telling you what I have been able to doe, and conſequently that I ſhall bring as much bleſſedneſſe to you, and be cauſe of as much Chriſtian joy, as is poſſible.

29. And I am ſure that when I come unto you, I ſhall come in the fulneſſe of the † bleſſing of the Goſpel of Chriſt.]

† or bleſſing of Chriſt, for the Kgs MS. reads ευλογιας Χριστου, and ſo Origen. and Ambroſe and the Latine.

30. And now I beſeech you for our Lord Chriſt Jeſus ſake, and upon that obligation of Chriſtian love, which he requires, and his Spirit works in your hearts, that you will with great earneſtneſſe and intention joyn your prayers with mine to beſeech God,

30. Now I beſeech you, brethren, for the Lord Jeſus Chriſt's ſake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye ſtrive together with me in your prayers to God for me,]

31. That I may be deliver'd from that danger which I foreſee in Judæa, from ſome refractary men, that, though they have received the faith, are violently bent againſt me, as an oppoſer of the Moſaical law, and that the relief, which I bring to the poor Chriſtians at Hieruſalem and Judæa, may be taken by them in good part, though it come from thoſe Gentile provinces.

31. That I may be delivered from them that doe not beleive in Judæa, and that my ſervice which I have for Jeruſalem, may be accepted of the ſaints,]

32. This would be a means to make me come cheerfully to you, if it pleaſe God to grant it to our prayers, and to have a cheerfull being with you,

32. That I may come unto you with joy by the will of God, and may with you be refreſhed.]

33. Now

33. Now the God of peace be with you all. Amen.] 33. And the God of all unity and concord bleſſe you, and preſerve unity among you all. Amen.

25. Now to him that is of power to eſtabliſh you, according to my Goſpel, and the preaching of Jeſus Chriſt, according to the revelation of the myſterie, which was kept ſecret ſince the world began,

26. But now is made manifeſt, and by the ſcriptures of the prophets, according to the commandement of the everlaſting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith:]

a. διάκονος

What διακονεῖν, to miniſter, ſignifies in the New Teſtament hath formerly been noted at large (ſee Lu. 8. a.) viz: to relieve the poor, either out of the ſtock of the Church as adminiſtrators, and diſpenſers of others liberality and almes, or, as hoſpitable charitable perſons, out of their own ſubſtance: So the women that adminiſtred to Chriſt ἐξ ὑπαρχόντων αὐτῶν out of their own eſtates, and ſo Phœbe here, who is therefore called προστάτις πολλῶν, a reliever or patroneſs of many, and of Paul himſelf, ver. 2. and in all probability is the γυνὴ ἀδελφὴ 1 Cor. 9. 5. the ſiſter or beleiving Chriſtian woman, which either did, or, if Paul would have accepted it, would have helpt him and Barnabas to eat and drink, ver. 4. without labouring with their hands v. 6. Such as ſhe accompanying the Apoſtles in their journies to preach the Goſpel (as of her it appears by S. Paul's ſending this Epiſtle from Corinth to Rome by her, as 'tis in the ſubſcription) and furniſhing them with all things which they wanted, from whence they are ſaid κοπιᾶν ἐν κυρίῳ to labour in the Lord, v. 6, and 12. whereupon ſaith the Scholiaſt, that the Apoſtles carried about with them ſome matrons of good report εἰς τὰς ἀναγκαίας αὐτῶν χρείας χορηγούσας, that made proviſion for their neceſſary uſes, ὡς ἀνευ λοιπὸν ὕλης περὶ τοῦτο ἀμερίμνους, μόνῳ τῷ κηρύγματι ἀπεχολεῖσθαι, that the Apoſtles being free from thoſe cares might be at leiſure for preaching only, and Theophylact, αἱ ὑπηρετοῦσαι γυναῖκας ἱκανὰς ἔθηκεν τοῖς ἀποστόλοις χορηγοῦσαι αὐτοῖς τὰ ἀναγκαῖα, ἢ πᾶσ' ἀμεριμνίαν ἔσῃ τοῖς ἀποστόλοις, rich women ſollowed the Apoſtles, and provided them neceſſaries, and eaſed them of all that care &c. b. Ἀπόστολος Ἀπόστολος Apoſtle ſignifies primarily that office whereunto the Twelve were ſet apart by Chriſt immediately, and ſo that of S. Paul and Barnabas, ſent immediately by appointment of the holy Ghoſt, Act. 13. 2. Secondarily it belongs to ſome others after, that received the like Commiſſion from the twelve, or from S. Paul; Thus is James the Biſhop of Hieruſalem often called an Apoſtle. And ſo ſaith Theodoret of thoſe firſt times, that thoſe which were after called Biſhops, were then called Apoſtles: So, ſaith he, Epaphroditus is called Apoſtle of the Philippians, Phil. 2. 5. becauſe he was their Biſhop. So Clemens Romanus is by Clemens Alexandrinus, Strom: l. 4. called Ἀποστολικὸς Κλήμης, Clemens the Apoſtle, So Ignatius is by S. Chryſoſtome called ἀποστολικὸς καὶ ἐπίσκοπος Apoſtle and Biſhop. So of Timothy ὁ ἀποστολικὸς Τιμόθεος the Apoſtle Timotheus was made Biſhop of Epheſus, ſaith an anonymous writer in * Photius. So that Thaddæus, that was ſent by Thomas to the King of Edeſſa, is ſtyled in Euſebius l. 1. c. 13. ἀποστολικὸς Θαδδαῖος, the Apoſtle Thaddæus. So Mark in Epiphanius, Her: 51. and in Euſebius l. 2. c. 24. So Luke alſo by Epiphanius Her: 51. And if it be he, which is mention'd 2 Cor. 8. 18. in the ſtyle of [who is praiſed for the Goſpel, or for preaching through all the Churches] (as Ignatius affirms, Ep: to the Epheſ: and 'tis generally conceived to be he, being a conſtant companion of S. Paul in all his travails, as farre as the book of the Acts reaches, and therefore is ſaid by * Euſebius to have written the Goſpel from other mens teſtimonies, but the Acts αὐτόπτης from his own ſight) and not only ſo, but, as it follows v. 19. ordained by the Churches συνέκδημος καὶ ὁμότροπος Paul's fellow-travailer. Then there will be little queſtion, but that title might belong to him, and that he was one of thoſe, which are called there v. 23. Ἀπόστολοι ἐκκλησιῶν, Apoſtles of

* Bibliothec. num: 250.

* τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ἐξ ἑτέρων μαρτυριῶν ἔγραψεν ἀλλ' ὡς ἐκείνου ἐφορῶντος καὶ ὑποβάλλοντος ταῦτα δὲ ἐκείνου ἐστὶν ἀποφθεγματικῶς καὶ ἡγεμονικῶς εἰρημένα. l. 3. c. 24.

of the Churches. Whether this ſenſe doe belong to the word in this place, it will be yet uncertain, becauſe though it be granted that in thoſe other places the ſecondary Apoſtles were certainly meant (and beſide this there is no other unnamed, but thoſe which confeſſedly belong to the twelve Apoſtles, &c.) yet 'tis poſſible that theſe here, Andronicus and Junias, may not be called Apoſtles, but onely ἐπίσημοι noted, known men ἐν Ἀποστόλοις among the Apoſtles, i.e. among the twelve Apoſtles, as well they might be, having been Chriſtians more anciently then S. Paul, and ſo converted either by the Apoſtles probably, or by Chriſt himſelf. 'Tis true after all this, that in the Conſtitutions of the Emperors we find Apoſtoli Synagogarum, Apoſtles of the Synagogues, whoſe office it was among the Jewes to gather up the dues of the Patriarch that lived in Palaſtine, And proportionably to thoſe the word Apoſtles might ſignifie no more then meſſengers of the Churches, ſent about Eccleſiaſtick affairs, ſuch as are, in Ignatius his Epiſtles, called διάκονοι or ἱερουργοὶ θεοῦ ſacred or divine officers or meſſengers. But it appears not, that, in any place of the New Teſtament, the word is uſed in this ſenſe. See note on Luk. 6. c. & on Joh. 20. 21.

The cloſe of all the Chriſtians prayers was wont to be in form of benediction, and that benediction the wiſhing all charity and unity among them (after the example of the love of God toward them) in the known form, The grace, or charity of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the communication, or bounty of the holy Ghoſt be with, or among you alwaies, i. e. be continued among you, as it is from every perſon of the Trinity toward you. And this being the form of diſmiſſing the aſſembly, it was ceremoniouſly obſerved among them to part with the kiſſing one another. So ſaith Juſtin Martyr Apol: 2. deſcribing the Church meetings, ἀλλήλους φιλήμασι ἀσπαζόμεθα παυσάμενοι τῆς εὐχῆς, when we make an end of prayers, we ſalute one another with a kiſſe, which is therefore called the kiſſe of peace: and Tertullian de Or: Oſculum pacis eſt ſignaculum orationis, the kiſſe of peace is the ſeal of prayer. This therefore is here called the holy kiſſe, and S. Paul's bidding them [ſalute one another with it,] is in effect all one as his pronouncing that benediction, which was wont to be attended with it. b. φίλημα ἁγιον

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE 2. 2CORINTHIANS.

OF the Epiſtles to the Corinthians theſe few things may be fit to be præmiſed,

a. Καθ'ήτιν

1. That this city being in its ſelf an eminent city, grown rich, and populous by trade, and merchandiſe, and luxurious and libidinous to a proverb, was the place, where the Proconſul of Achaia fixt his ſeat, and after its converſion to the faith, the Metropolis, or mother city of all Achaia, or Greece, and ſo is not, in the inſcription of this Epiſtle, to be lookt on as the Church in that one city, but as containing under it all the Chriſtians of all Achaia, which having been firſt converted by S. Paul, this Epiſtle is now addreſt to them all, under their Governours, or Biſhops through that whole region. This is diſtinctly ſet down 2 Cor. 1. 1. where to the Church of God which is at Corinth] is added, and to all the Saints which are in all Achaia; and that probably is the importance of the phraſe, 1 Cor. 1. 2. to all that have the name of Chriſt called on them (i. e. to all Chriſtians) ἐν πάντι τόπῳ in every place, i. e. in all that region, and not onely in that one city, but ἐν πᾶσιν κλίμασι τῆς Ἀχαΐας in all the coaſts of Achaia. Accordingly what S. Paul ſaith to them of Apollos, that he water'd them 1 Cor. 3. 6. is in the ſtory affirm'd of all Achaia, as well as of that city, Act. 18. 27. when he was willing to paſſe into Achaia, the brethren wrote to the diſciples (through all Achaia, not onely at Corinth) that they ſhould receive him, and when he came (i. e. whither he purpoſed to paſſe, into Achaia) he contributed much aſſiſtance to the beleivers there. So when he ſpeaks of the forwardneſſe of their (i. e. the Corinthians) liberality, 2 Cor. 9. 2. Achaia, ſaith he, was ready a year agoe, and ſo Rom. 15. 26. Macedonia and Achaia thought good to make a collection &c. and ſo it appears again by another paſſage 2 Cor. 11. 9, 10. And hence it is that Rom. 16. 16. he tells them that the Churches of Chriſt (in the plural) ſalute them, and v. 1. mentions the Church in Cenchrea a maritime city in Achaia, from whence S. Paul took ſhipping Act. 18. 18. when he departed from thence to Syria.

ἄχρι τῆς Ἀχαΐας

ἐν πᾶσι τόπῳ

2dly, For the time, and manner of planting Chriſtianity among theſe Corinthians, and the reſt of Achaia, or Greece, the ſtory in the Acts may be conſulted, c. 18. 1. where about the fiftieth year of Chriſt, Paul comes from Athens to Corinth, and meets Aquila and Priſcilla there, ſoon after Claudius his baniſhing the Jewes from Rome; with them Paul wrought in his trade of tent-making, and at the ſame time he preacht the Goſpel to them through that Region, to which he oft referres in theſe Epiſtles, telling them how freely, (without making gain of them, or putting them to any charge) he had preacht the Goſpel to them. Soon after Silvanus and Timotheus came to him out of Macedonia and for the ſpace of eighteen months he abode in thoſe parts, wrought many miracles, 2 Cor. 12. 12. and converted many, though, as it appears, he was oppoſed by the incredulous Jewes, and brought before Gallio, Proconſul of Achaia, and accuſed by them, Act. 18. When Paul went from thence, he left Priſcilla and Aquila by the way at Epheſus Act. 18. 19. and they meeting with Apollos there, and inſtructing him more perfectly in the doctrine of the Goſpel, fitted him for his journey to Achaia, whither he ſoon went, and confirm'd them in the faith, which Paul had planted among them, being much too hard for the Jewes, who were his chief oppoſers there, Act. 18. 28.

3dly, For the time of writing this firſt Epiſtle two circumſtances will aſſiſt us to diſcern it, Firſt c. 15. 32. there is a touch, or intimation of his danger at Epheſus, fighting with the beaſts there, which will appear (ſee note on ch. 15. c.) to be that which was occaſion'd by Demetrius, Act. 19. This therefore was now paſt at the writing of this Epiſtle, and though the next thing which in the Acts is mention'd after that, is his departing to Macedonia, Act. 20 1. yet by the date of it from Epheſus, which we find in many copies of the ſubſcription of the Epiſtle, we have reaſon to beleive, that his remove was not ſo ſuddain, but that this Epiſtle was written firſt, and ſent from thence. And accordingly we may interpret his words, c. 16. 8. (which contain a ſecond circumſtance) that he will tarry at Epheſus till Pentecoſt, i. e till the time of his going up to Jeruſalem. which he had determined to doe that year at Pentecoſt; For that after this he ſhould come again to Epheſus, or to any other part of Aſia, and write from thence, (as by the ſalutations of the Aſiaticks 'tis apparent he did, ch. 16. 18.) before his going to Jeruſalem, is not reconcileable with the paſſages in the Acts, ſet down ch. 20. where in his journey from Epheſus v. 1. we find him at Eaſter at Philippi, and after that at Troas, and though he paſſe through Aſia yet his haſt was ſo great, to reach Jeruſalem before Pentecoſt. that he could not put in at Epheſus v. 16. but was fain to tranſact that buſineſſe at Miletus, that would have call'd him to Epheſus. ver. 17. If this be thus rightly concluded for the place of writing this Epiſtle, then the time will be concluded alſo, at the end of his three years ſtay in Aſia, *Act.*20. 31. i.e. An. Chr. 54. Before which time, through the Gnoſticks, and Judaizers, great ſchiſmes, and diviſions had broken out at Corinth, and in other cities of that Province, and many other foule corruptions had crept in (by falſe, heretical teachers, and even the denying of the reſurrection by ſome of the Chriſtians there) which cauſed the writing of this Epiſtle. And upon the ſame occaſions, and ſubjects was Clemens's Epiſtle, ſome years after, written unto them, which as it uſes all arguments to reproach the unreaſonableneſſe of their ſchiſme, and commotion againſt their preſent Governours, ſo it inſiſts at large on the proving the reſurrection.

to the faith of Paul, that I never did baptize above two of you, Criſpus and Gaius, and the houſhold of Stephanas, as I remember.

17. For Chriſt ſent me not to baptize, but to preach the Goſpel: not with wiſdome of words, leſt the croſſe of Chriſt ſhould be made of none effect.] me to baptize, which others may doe as well, but to publiſh the Goſpel to them that never heard it; yet not this, that I am more eloquent then others, and ſo fitter for the work, For this is not my way of publiſhing it, to attract men to the faith, by any perſwaſion of humane eloquence, but onely by doing as Chriſt hath done before me, by venturing my life in doing it, This was the great means by which Chriſt meant to obtain beleif, ſealing his doctrine with his blood, and if I ſhould let eloquence endevour to ſupply that place, I ſhould diſparage Chriſts way.

18. For the preaching a crucified Saviour, requiring beleif to him, obedience to him who was ſhamefully put to death, and beleiving on whom may probably bring the ſame on us, may ſeem a ridiculous thing to impenitent unbeleivers, but to us which have come in to Chriſt by repentance and faith, 'tis the moſt glorious evidence of the power of God.

c. 19. And thereby is fulfilled that ſaying of Iſaiah ch. 29. 14. that God will diſpoſe of things quite contrary to what the wiſe men of the world would expect.
19. For it is written, I will deſtroy the c wiſdome of the wiſe, and will bring to nothing the underſtanding of the prudent.]

f. 20. Let all the Philoſophers and learned or ſearching men, the Jewiſh interpreters of ſcripture, ſhew me ſo many men brought to reformation and virtuous living by their precepts, as we have done by this ridiculous way, as 'tis beleived, of preaching the crucified Saviour, or the doctrine of that Chriſt which was put to death by the Jewes. Doth it not appear, that all the deep wiſdome of the world is become abſolute folly in compariſon with it?
20. Where is the wiſe? where is the ſcribe? where is the f * diſputer of this world? Hath not God made fooliſh the wiſdome of this world?] * ſearcher

21. For when the heathen world with all their ſtudy of philoſophy, which is the conſideration of God's infinite wiſdome in the creation and government of the world, did not come to the true knowledge of God, and when the Jewiſh world, depending on their knowledge of the Moſaical law, did not diſcern or acknowledge God in the miracles and ſufferings, and doctrines of Chriſt, God was then pleaſed to ſend us Apoſtles to preach (without any flouriſh of rhetorick) this Goſpel of Chriſt, ſo ſcorned by the wiſe men of the world, and by that means to reduce and reſcue out of the wales of the wicked, all thoſe that will beleive and embrace it.
21. † For after that in the wiſdome of God, the world by wiſdome knew not God, it pleaſed God by the fooliſhneſſe of preaching to ſave them that beleive.] † For when, or, ſeeing that, ἐπειδὴ γὰρ

22. For as the Jewes require ſome ſigne, or prodigie from heaven to be ſhewed them, to perſwade them the truth of the Goſpel, ſo the Greeks look for profound philoſophy in the Goſpel, and ſcorn it, becauſe they think they find not that there.
22. For the Jewes require a ſigne, and the Greeks ſeek after wiſedome,]

23. And yet are not we diſcouraged from going on in our courſe, profeſſing him, in whom we beleive, to have been crucified, and knowing that that is a mighty deterrement and diſcouragement to the Jewes, who looked for a victorious Meſſias, that ſhould reſcue them out of their enemies power, and to the Gentiles a ridiculous thing, who are gratified with nothing but eloquence, or profound knowledge.
23. But we preach Chriſt crucified, unto the Jewes a * ſtumbling block, and unto the † Greeks fooliſhneſſe.] * ſcandal Σκάνδαλον † or Gentiles, for the King's MS. reads ἔθνεσι

24. But to the beleivers (ſee note on Mat. 20. c.) both Jewes and Gentiles, matter of greateſt admiration, there being more divine power and wiſdome expreſt in this ordering of things ſo, that the Meſſias ſhould be crucified, then in any thing, that the Jewes or Gentiles could have thought on.
24. But * unto them which are called, both Jewes and Greeks, Chriſt the power of God, and the wiſdome of God.] * to them the called τοῖς κλητοῖς

25. For of the actions and diſpoſitions of God's counſels, that which in man's opinion hath leaſt wiſdome in it, is infinitely to be preferred before all that men deem wiſeſt, and that which men think hath nothing of ſtrength or virtue, hath much more of power in it, then any thing elſe, it being much a more glorious act of power to raiſe Chriſt from the dead, then not to have permitted him to die, as it was a more likely way to bring any piouſly diſpoſed perſon to receive the doctrine of Chriſt, when he laid down his life for it, then if he had been the moſt proſperous in this world.
25. † Becauſe the fooliſhneſſe of God is wiſer then men; and the * weakneſſe of God is ſtronger then men.] † For the fooliſh part, Τὸ τοῦ μωροῦ * weak part, τὸ ἀσθενὲς

26. Accordingly ye may obſerve who the men are among you, that are wrought on, or converted by the Goſpel, not principally the learned politicians, the great or noble families.
26. For † ye ſee your calling, brethren, how that not many wiſe men after the fleſh, nor many mighty, nor many noble are called.] † look upon, βλέπετε

27. But the courſe which God hath choſen to take now in Chriſt, is that, that the world will count fooliſh, and this on purpoſe, that by the ſucceſſe of that, the wiſe men of the world may be put to ſhame; 'tis that which the world counts weak, that it may appear how much more power there is in that, which the world counts weakeſt in God, then in all their own ſtrength.
27. But God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world, to confound the wiſe: and God hath choſen the weak things of the world, to confound the things which are mighty.]

28. And thoſe methods & courſes hath God pitcht on, which are by the nobles and the potentates lookt on as moſt deſpicable, and empty, and abject, that it may appear how empty are all thoſe things, that are moſt valued in the world, when theſe which they ſo much deſpiſe, ſhall appear more effectuall then they.
28. And baſe things of the world, and things which are deſpiſed, hath God choſen, yea and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are.]

29. That no man may have any reaſon to boaſt of his wiſdome &c. in God's preſence.
29. That no fleſh ſhould glory in his preſence.]

30. Notes on Chap. I.

1. 2. Ἐπικαλεῖς ſignifies to be ſurnamed, Mat. 10. 3. Lu. 22. 3. Act. 1. 23. & 4. 36. & 7. 59. and in many other places, and ſo in a paſſive not active ſignification; Agreeably to this ὀνόμα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ] is to be called by the name of Jeſus Chriſt, as an agnomen or ſupernomination, which notes the ſpecial relation we have to him, as the ſpouſe of that husband, whoſe name is called upon her, Iſa. 4. 1. (which is the direct literal notation of ἐπικαλεῖς here) or as the ſervant to that maſter, by whoſe name he is called alſo, and ſo ἐπικαλούμενοι ὄνομα Χριστοῦ] is but a periphraſis of Chriſtians, and no more. In this ſenſe will it be moſt proper to interpret the like phraſe, Act. 2. 21. and 9. 14. 21. Rom. 10. 12, 13, 14. and generally in the New Teſtament, but when it ſignifies to appeale to, or the like. Ἐπικαλεῖς ὄνομα Ἰησοῦ

b. 5. The notion of λόγῳ in this place is ſomewhat uncertain, both becauſe it, and the knowledge following, may either be the matter wherein the Corinthians are ſaid to be enriched, or elſe ſomewhat in the Apoſtles, the means by which they were enriched in Chriſt. If it be taken the firſt way, then it will denote ſpeech or utterance, ability in inſtructing others, and muſt be applied only to them that had ſuch gifts in the Church, and not to the whole Church of Corinth, and thus it ſeems to be uſed 2 Cor. 8. 7. As ye abound in every thing, in faith, and word and knowledge,] Where as faith, ſo the other two are gifts, and graces in them, ſuch are σπουδὴ and ἀγάπη, diligence, and love, that are after mention'd. And the other parts of that verſe ἐν παντὶ περισσεύετε ye abound in every thing,] agreeing ſo well with [ἐν παντὶ ἐπλουτίσθητε here, ye were enriched in all,] 'tis moſt reaſonable to determine, that this ſame is the meaning of ἐν λόγῳ in word or ſpeech] here alſo. But becauſe there is ſome difference betwixt abounding] and being made rich,] and the latter of them referres peculiarly to the gaining of the riches, and ſo to the means of acquiring it, It is therefore poſſible, that it may there be that, which, as a gift, was inherent in them, and ſo be agreeable to the reſt of the graces mention'd there, and yet here be the means, by which they were enriched, and if ſo, then it will ſignifie the preaching of the word, the doctrine of the Goſpel, as it is firſt preacht and made known to men, that had not before received it, as when we read of preaching the word, that notes the doctrine of Chriſt, as it was taught by him, or the articles that were to be beleived of him, his death & reſurrection &c. This is wont to be ſet oppoſite to διδασκαλία doctrine (ſee 1 Tim. 5. 17.) which is the farther inſtructing of them that have formerly received the faith, and accordingly it may be ſo taken here, where 'tis ſet oppoſite to γνῶσις knowledge, which is the explication and unfolding of the myſteries of religion, and may well be here the watering of Apollos, which was ſuperadded to the planting of Paul, and both of them together make up that which followes ver. 6. The teſtimony of Chriſt confirmed in you] the teſtimony of Chriſt being the Goſpel, c. 2. 1. as 'tis firſt preached, (ſo Joh. 21. 24. where 'tis diſtinguiſhed from the very writing of it, and ſo 1 Joh. 1. 2. but eſpecially Rev. 1. 2.) and the confirming of it, is the farther declaring, and proving, and explaining of it; the firſt being prerequired to the baptizing of any, the ſecond uſefull for the fitting them for that impoſition of hands, which we ordinarily call confirmation. Λόγῳ

That the word γνῶσις here ſignifies the farther explication of the Chriſtian doctrine, may appear, not only by the uſe of it in other places (ſee note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) λόγῳ & γνώσεως, the word of knowledge, c. 12. 8. that is, being able to explain myſteries (as λόγῳ σοφίας the word of wiſdome there, is being able to ſpeak parables, or to uſe other ſuch waies of veiling wiſe conceptions,) but eſpecially by the circumſtances of the context here, the Goſpel's being confirmed in them, v. 6. And this of γνῶσις being here ſet down, as a χάρισμα a ſpecial gift, and the being made rich in every thing (particularly in word and knowledge,) being all one with coming behind, or being wanting (ὑστερεῖς) in no gift, ver. 7. this is again according to what we ſee ch. 12. 8. where γνῶσις is one of the gifts of the Spirit. Thus 2 Cor. 11. 6. where Paul's γνῶσις is preferred above his ſpeech, 'tis his skill in explaining the myſteries of the ſcripture, which is ſhewn in his writings in a greater height, then in his ſpeech (when he was preſent with them) was obſervable. Thus Epheſ. 1. 17 πνεῦμα ἀποκαλύψεως, the Spirit of revelation, ἐν ἐπιγνώσει αὐτοῦ, in diſcerning and acknowledging of Chriſt, the underſtanding of prophecies, and diſcerning Chriſt in them, is there joyned with the Spirit of wiſdome, as 1 Cor. 12. 5. γνῶσις had been, and 1 Tim. 4. 13. ἀνάγνωσις part of Biſhop Timothy's task, ſeems to be expounding, not ſimply reading of Scriptures, to which is joyned exhortation and doctrine. Thus is γνῶσις uſed in this Epiſtle c. 8. 1. where this gift of explaining myſteries is look'd on, as apt to puffe men up, and ſo indeed ſome hereticks of that time were ſo exalted and puffit up with it, that taking upon them εἰδέναι τι v. 2. to know ſomewhat, i.e. ſome extraordinary matter above other men (as he that thinks himſelf to be ſomething, i.e. ſome extraordinary perſon, all one with τινὰ μέγαν ſome great one, Act. 8. 9.) they call'd themſelves γνωστικοί, from γνῶσις, knowing men, from this ſort of ſublime knowledge, and explication of difficulties (as alſo πνευματικοί the ſpiritual, from this extraordinary gift) and ſo are referred to in that chapter, under the word γνῶσις, ver. 10, 11. and ψευδωνύμου γνώσεως, knowledge ſo called, but not truly ſo, from a falſe, not true Spirit, 1 Tim. 6. 20. c. Γνῶσις Ἐπιγνόντες αὐτῶν Εἰδέναι τι πνευματικοί ψευδωνύμου γνώσεως

d. The word βεβαιῶν to eſtabliſh] applied here to μαρτύριον teſtimony, may perhaps literally referre to the forinſick cuſtomes among the Jewes, where there being three parts of their Judicial proceſſe, Firſt מוֹבָא רִיב, the entring of the cauſe. 2^dly, מְכוֹנַן רִיב ſtabilitio litis, the eſtabliſhment of the matter in diſpute, 3^dly, חֵקֶר רִיב Job 29. 16. the ſearching into the cauſe, the ſecond of theſe may be here literally rendred βεβαίωσις, confirmation or eſtabliſhment. For that ſecond conſiſted in the interpoſing of an oath on one ſide, which is therefore ſaid ἀντιλογίας πέρας Heb. 6, 16. the end of contradiction Βεβαιῶν Ἀντιλογίας πέρας diction, i.e. of that affirming and denying, which was formerly lawfull betwixt the actors, till the oath on one side had given the Judge some reason to incline that way, and that is said to be [εἰς βεβαίωσιν] in that place, for the setling or establishing the cause, in that sense wherein the Romane law saith, "Ορκος διαφερόμενον ἀμφισβήτησιν τίθησι, (Pselus συνοψ. νομ: v.1243.) an oath takes off the Judge from that dubiousnesse that before he was in, one affirming and the other denying the same thing. By analogie to this, the preaching of the Gospel by the Apostles, being called μαρτύριον a testimony or witness, viz: that which the Apostles gave in to the testifying the truth of the Gospel (being eye-witnesses thereof) this testimony may be said to be established or confirmed, when beside the first preaching of it, more light, and knowledge, and evidences have been afforded to the removing of all ignorance, or doubt from men's minds. And so the meaning of the phrase here μαρτύριον τῦ Χριστῦ ἐβεβαιώθη] will be clearly this, that the Gospel which we first preacht, the testimony which we gave of Christ, hath since by sufficient probation been made good among you, to encline you to consent to the truth of it.

c. Σύνεσις

The word σύνεσις] signifies three things in these books, sometimes the mind or intellectual faculty, *Mar.*12.33. where God is to be loved with all thy mind, (see note on Rom. 1. k.) 2dly, an habit of science or prudence, as here, 3dly, perspicacity, *Ephes.*3.4. 2 Tim 2.7.

f. Ζητητὴς / Διῶν τόυτο / Σοφὸς / Γραμματεὺς

What is the meaning of ζυζητητὴς] in this place, is not easie to determine, because, as the word it self, so the adjunct [διῶν τόυτο] is very capable of a double notion; for if [διῶν τόυτο] be rendred, of this world, then it will seem to signifie the heathen world, and so σοφὸς, and γραμματεὺς, and συζητητὴς] all be interpreted accordingly, σοφὸς the wise moralist, as the seven wise men of Greece, and Socrates after, who for the moral learning was by the oracle proclaimed the wisest man in the world, and γραμματεὺς the learned philologer, literator, as Tertullian renders it, and συζητητὴς the searcher or indagator into the nature of things, which the Hebrews call העולם הזה this world, the philosopher or natural magician; And so the next words would encline one to understand the place, the wisdome of the world] ver. 20. and the world which by wisdome knew not God] v.21. looking most directly upon the heathen Philosophers, who are by Baruch described in these words ch.3.23. οἱ ἐκζητοῦντες τὴν σύνεσιν ὅση ἡ γῆ, they that seek out, or search wisdome on the earth. But then if διῶνος τόυτο] be rendred, of this age, then it may more probably referre to the Jewes, as ἄρχοντες τῦ διῶνος τόυτο, ch.2.6. must signifie the chief of the Jewes of that age, which crucified Christ, v.8. i.e. caused him to be crucified, and there is mention of those, v.22. and 23. and then σοφὸς may belong to the Jew, & denote their חכמי המחקר, naturalists, that undertook to know every work of the creation; and so likewise γραμματεὺς] will belong to the Jew, and signifie him that is skill'd in their lawes, and which interpreted them to the people according to the literal sense, their Doctors; and then συζητητὴς will have a peculiar notion among them also, For it was the custome of the Jewes, for many of the learned among them to sit in the Synagogue, and to speak all of them by way of discussion, or debate to the same matter, (as to find out the true sense of a piece of Scripture) and to that custome 1 Cor. 14. 29. seems to referre, Let the prophets speak, two or three &c. whence it is, that this Synagogue, where they did this, is called בית המדרש the house of searching, or inquisition, and to that custome perhaps referres that which is said of Christ, Lu. 2.46. that in the midst of the Doctors he heard, and asked questions, So he that interprets the scripture mystically and allegorically, is called בעל המדרש the master of inquirie or mystical disquisition, and absolutely הדורש, a searcher, or enquirer, i.e. literally συζητητὴς, and that mystical or allegorical sense דרך דרש, the way of inquiry, and מדרש, συζήτησις, and so מדרש תהלים, inquisitio Psalmorum, the searching of the Psalmes, see Elias Levita in the word מדרש. And then the συζητηταὶ διῶν τόυτο] will be the Jewish doctors, which among themselves inquired into the truth of scriptures (which Christ seems to call ἐραυνᾶν τὰς γραφὰς searching the scriptures, *Joh.*5.39.) but found not Christ there, as they might have done, beleived him not. Thus is the word used, *Act.*6.9. where severall men are said to rise up συζητοῦντες τῷ Στεφάνῳ, talking with Stephen, as the Jewish doctors use to doe one with another about the sense of scripture, and *Act.*9.29. 'tis said of Paul, that ἐλάλει καὶ συνεζήτει πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνιστάς, he talked and debated with them about the sense of scriptures concerning the Messias. This custome of the Jews seems to be referred to by this word, but yet whether the other circumstances of the place, which referre it rather to the heathens, may not so farre prevail, as that it may be fit to pitch upon a middle interpretation of the word, and to apply this custome of the Jewes to secular inquiries, in the heathen schooles, I shall leave it to be considered, and onely adde, that the making of this place to agree with that of the *prophet Isa.*33.18. seems to be a matter of some difficulty, The text there looking another way, viz: by way of admiration, how the taxes, that were exacted in the time of the siege, were so suddenly ceased, For that is the meaning of [Where is the γραμματεὺς;] i.e. he that even now kept the book of taxes, for so γραμματεὺς was the name of them that set down the publike acts, as also the customes, and taxes, and revenues of the Kings, and so [Where is the שקל the weigher?] i.e. the receiver of money, for so they received it by weight; and lastly, [where is the numberer of towers?] he that reckons and assesses the severall houses of the city, every one according to their bigness, which was in order again to the exacting of taxes. From this matter that of this text is distant enough, and yet may that be so farre here accommodated, as to expresse an admiration here, as it was there, at a strange sudden change wrought among them, although the matter of the change was very different; And yet for the words also they thus farre agree, that as there was [Where is the scribe?] so here, though in another sense [where is the scribe?] i.e. doctor or learned man, there the scribe to register the taxes, the notary, here the learned man or doctor of the law, as there שקל the weigher, so here, with the change but of a letter, without any of the sound שכל the intelligent or wise, and lastly as there the numberer of towers, so here

Ῥητέον δὲ ἐν τῇ τῶν λαλεσόντων

Ἀνάμεσα ἐπιχειρῶν

Ἐρωτᾷ τὸν γραμματέα

Συζητοῦντες τῷ Στεφάνῳ

here the enquirer, disquisitor of this world, that speaks his sense among others by way of debate or discussion to find out the truth, as there in the making an assesment, they debated the rate or value of every house, to proportion it accordingly. And such applications as these by way of accōmodating places to very distant senses (especially when the words in the Greek translation will bear them, though the Hebrew will not so well) is no extraordinary or strange thing in the New Testament; That of Christ's going with his parents to Nazareth, that the saying might be fulfilled, He shall be called a Nazarite, i. e. the title of נצר a branch, belongs to him, will appear to any as strange and farre off as this.

CHAP. II.

Paraphrase.

* according to height καθ' ὑπεροχὴν

1. AND I, brethren, when I came to you, came not* with excellency of † speech, or of wisdome, declaring unto you the † testimony of God.]

1. I said I preacht not the Gospel to you in any eloquent words c.1.17. (from whence to this place all hath been brought in, on that occasion, by way of parenthesis) and now I resume it again, because it is a thing laid to my charge by some of you, that I am too plain and mean in preaching the Gospel to you, An accusation, or charge, which I am most ready to confesse.

† or, mystery, for the King's MS. reads μυστήριον

* thought it not fit, οὐκ ἔκρινα

2. For I * determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.]

2. For I thought it not any way proper for me to goe about to mend God's method, and when he had determined the summe of our doctrine to be the doctrine of Christ, which he taught in his life time, together with the confirmation of it by his death (through which also we have many precious advantages, as pardon of sins through his satisfaction &c.) not excluding also, but taking in, in an eminent manner, his resurrection, it had been unreasonable to think of preaching any thing to you, but this doctrine thus confirm'd, see ch.1.17.

† in much fear and trembling ἐν φόβῳ καὶ ἐν τρόμῳ πολλῷ

3. And I was with you in weaknesse, and † in fear, and in much trembling.]

3. And accordingly when I was among you, I was (in the like manner as Christ when he was here on earth) very ill used, (see note on Rom.8.m. & Gal.4. a.) persecuted for my preaching, and in continuall fear of the utmost dangers, Act.18. and this was the method fittest for me to use to assure you of the truth of what I preached.

* word λόγος

† probable discourses πιθοῖς λόγοις

4. And my * speech and my preaching was not with † enticing words of mans wisdome, but in [a] demonstration of the Spirit and of power,]

4. And as for powerfull speaking, that which I used did not consist in rhetorical proofs or probable arguments of the truth of what I said, such as humane writings are content with, but in plain demonstration from the prophecies of the old Bible, or the voice of the Spirit since, and the miracles done by Christ under the Gospel,

* may not be, μὴ

5. That your faith * should not stand in the wisdome of men, but in the power of God.]

5. That the ground of your faith may not be humane eloquence &c. but the arguments of perswasion, which God hath thought fit to make use of.

† age, not the rulers of this age, οὐδὲ τῶν ἀρχόντων τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου

6. Howbeit we speak wisdome among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdome of this † world, nor of the princes of this world, that * come to nought.]

6. Mean while the things which wee teach, are (to those men, which are arrived to the highest pitch of wisdome) divine and perfect wisdome, not that which this age boasts of, or depends on, or in which the rulers of the Jewes v.8. doe excell, for all these are now a perishing, their learning and they ready to come to nought.

* perish, are abolished, καταργουμένων

† that which hath been hidden, τὴν ἀπεκρυμμένην

7. But we speak the wisdome of God in a mystery, † even the hidden wisdome which God ordained before the world unto our glory,]

7. But that wise dispensation of God's in giving us his Son, which was hidden under the Jewish types, and onely darkly spoken of by the prophets, but by God determined from the beginning to be now revealed to us, to the very great honour of us, to whom it is so revealed.

* rulers of this age v.6.

8. Which none of the * princes of this world knew; for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.]

8. A thing which is not to be imagined, that the chief men among the Jewes (v.6. see note on ch.1. c.) understood any thing of, for, if they had, they would sure never have put him to death, appearing by the voice from heaven, and his miracles (as well as by their own prophecies) to be God himself, come down from heaven.

† what eye-these things ἃ ὀφθαλμὸς

9. But as it is written, † Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entred into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.]

9. To this belongs that of Isaiah c.64.4. at least it may fitly be accommodated to this purpose, that God prepares for them that depend on him, all faithfull pious men, such things as they never imagine, or hope for, such is the revelation of his mercifull designes toward us in the Gospel.

* depths βάθη

10. But God hath revealed them to us by his Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the * deep things of God.]

10. And these hath God made known to us, not by any fallible deceivable way, but by sending down his Spirit upon the Apostles, which leading them into all truth, teaching them all things, reveals even these deep mysteries unto us, which, be they never so secret in God, must needs be known by his Spirit, which knowes all the secrets of God, as perfectly as our own Spirit knowes our secrets.

† none οὐδεὶς

11. For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the Spirit of a man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth † no man, but the Spirit of God.]

11. For, as among men, the thoughts, and great contrivements, and designes of a man, though none else knoweth them, yet his own Spirit doth, so these divine matters, though none else can reveal them to us, yet his Spirit can.

* vouchsafed us by God ἵνα εἰδῶμεν τὰ ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ χαρισθέντα ἡμῖν

12. Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are * freely given to us of God.]

12. And this is that Spirit, which we have received, the very Spirit of God, (not the Spirit which suggests worldly things to us, that instructs us in those) to the end that we may reveal to you the infinite mercies of God toward you, which being bestowed on you, should not in any reason be concealed from you.

13. And as the matter of our preaching is divine, and ſuch as was kept ſecret in God, till his Spirit revealed it to us, ſo we proportionably preach it to you not in an humane, but divine manner, not by uſing ordinary humane means of perſwaſion, but by ſuch arguments as the Spirit of God in the prophecies of the old Bible, and in his deſcent upon Chriſt Mat. 3. and by coming down upon his Apoſtles hath directed, adapting ſpirituall divine arguments, to the proving of divine matters.

13. Which things alſo we ſpeak, not in the words which man's wiſdome teacheth, but which the holy Ghoſt teacheth, * comparing ſpirituall things with ſpirituall.]

* accommodating ſpiritual words to ſpiritual things, συμβάλλοντες πνευματικὰ πνευματικοῖς

14. But ſuch things as theſe, they that are led onely by the light of humane reaſon, the learned Philoſophers &c. doe abſolutely deſpiſe, and ſo hearken not after the doctrine of the Goſpel (ſee note on 1 Tim. 1. c.) for it ſeems folly to them c. 1. 23. nor can they by any ſtudy of their own come to the knowledge of them, for they are onely to be had by underſtanding the prophecies of ſcripture, and other ſuch means which depend on divine revelation, the voice from heaven, deſcent of the holy Ghoſt, miracles &c.

14. But the naturall man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſſe unto him: neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned.]

15. But he that hath made uſe of all theſe afforded him by the Spirit of God, viz: prophecies and voices from heaven, and ſuch other evidences of divine revelation v. 13. he will be able to underſtand all theſe ſecrets perfectly, and being not himſelf perſwaded by any other arguments, but onely by thoſe, that he hath thus received from the Spirit of God, he cannot reaſonably be refuted by any other ſort of arguments taken from humane reaſon, or worldly wiſdome.

15. But he that is ſpirituall † judgeth all things, yet he himſelf is * judged of no man.]

† diſcerneth ἀνακρίνει
* diſcerned by none. ὑπ' οὐδενὸς ἀνακρίνεται

16. For who can be imagined to know more of God's mind then he doth, who is informed by the Spirit, that ſo he ſhould teach him God's mind? Certainly no body; And conſequently no body can teach you more of the truth of God, then we (to whom Chriſt hath revealed his whole will as farre as concerns any man to know) have, or are able to doe.

b. 16. [b] For who hath known the mind of the Lord, † that he may inſtruct him? But we have the mind of Chriſt.]

† which ſhall inſtruct him

Notes on Chap. II.

a. Πνεῦμα καὶ δύναμις

That πνεῦμα καὶ δύναμις ſpirit and power] may here ſignifie the ſame thing (as 'tis ordinary for two words or phraſes to be conjoyn'd, the one onely to explain the other) may ſeem probable from the next verſe, where one onely of them is mention'd, δύναμις Θεοῦ the power of God. But there is no neceſſity that we ſhould ſo interpret it, becauſe the power of God in the firſt verſe being ſet oppoſite to the wiſdome of men (i.e. the humane waies of perſwaſion or eloquence) muſt ſignifie God's powerfull waies of perſwading the beleif of the Goſpel, and ſignifying ſo, will contain under it the Spirit and power with the ſeverall notions that may well belong to them; as firſt taking the ſpirit] for the prophecies of the old Bible inſpired by the Spirit of God, and Power] for the miracles done by Chriſt, Thus hath Origen expreſt the meaning of them, [the demonſtration of the Spirit] i.e. ſaith he, τὰς περιουσίας ἱκανὰς παραπῆσαι τὸ ἐναργὲς καὶ τὸ πεῖσαι τοὺς ἀκούοντας, the prophecies which were ſufficient to give the reader aſſurance of the truth of the things that belong to Chriſt, [and of power] i.e. περιττὰς δυνάμεις, ἃς ἴχνη ἔτι σώζει, the miraculous ſtupendious actions, of which the footſteps yet remain, Cont: Celſ: p. 5. but beſide this notion of the Spirit] ſome others it is very capable of, as 1. that it ſignifie the deſcent of the Spirit of God on Chriſt, joyned with that voice from heaven, Mat. 3. This is my beloved ſon, in whom I am well pleaſed, and after, This is my beloved ſon, hear him. This may here fitly be called ἀπόδειξις πνεύματος, the demonſtration of the Spirit] an evidence afforded by God immediatly from heaven of the truth of the Goſpel, which being joyned with the power of Chriſt, both in reſpect of his doctrine and his miracles, were two heads moſt fit to be inſiſted on by S. Paul, for the confirming the truth of the Goſpel. But it may yet farther be applied not to Chriſt perſonally, but to the Apoſtles after him, and then the Spirit will be the deſcent of the Spirit upon them, and by their impoſition of hands, the holy Ghoſt's coming down upon others alſo, Act. 8. 18. and this together with their power of doing miracles, may well be their ἀπόδειξις or demonſtration of the truth of the Goſpel, and be the thing that is meant here.

Ἀπόδειξις πνεύματος

That this is a citation from Iſa. 40. 13. there is no queſtion, as alſo that the firſt words, Τίς γὰρ ἔγνω νοῦν Κυρίου; for who hath known the mind of the Lord?] are ſet down, after this Apoſtle's manner, out of the Septuagint. Now the ſame Apoſtle citeth that place again, Rom. 11. 34. and there in the latter part alſo ſets down the Septuagints words, καὶ τίς σύμβουλος αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο; and who hath been his counſellour? which words being not here read, but to [τίς γὰρ ἔγνω τὸν νοῦν Κυρίου;] theſe other immediately ſubjoyned, ὃς συμβιβάσει αὐτόν; who ſhall inſtruct him? there will be no reaſon to think theſe latter words to be another rendring of that ſecond part of the verſe in Iſaiah; For when the Septuagint had tranſlated it truly out of the Hebrew, why ſhould the Apoſtle, who conſtantly uſeth the Septuagint's tranſlation, and that ſometimes when that varies from the Hebrew, here uſe a new rendring of his own, and for [καὶ τίς αὐτοῦ σύμβουλος ἐγένετο; who hath been his counſellour?] ſet onely [ὃς συμβιβάσει αὐτόν; who ſhall inſtruct him?] For this there is no probable reaſon to be given, and therefore it muſt be reſolved, that no more then the firſt words are taken out of that place of Iſaiah, and that the latter words are the Apoſtles own, to bring them to his preſent purpoſe, Who hath known the mind of the Lord, which ſhall inſtruct him? i.e. who doth know the Lord's mind ſo well, as to be fit to inform & inſtruct the ſpiritual man? v. 15. for that [αὐτὸν him] ſhould ſignifie the Lord (as they conclude, that make theſe words all one with the latter part of the verſe in Iſaiah) would be very ſtrange, not only becauſe it would be farre different from v. 15. of which it is brought for a proof, but alſo becauſe knowing the mind of God, although it be a fit preparative to inſtructing of others, yet is not ſo for the inſtructing of God himſelf.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſt.

1. AND I, brethren, could not ſpeak unto you, as unto ſpiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Chriſt.] 1. And I, brethren, although I was furniſht with all manner of ſpirituall gifts, and was able to have revealed to you the higheſt myſteries, yet when I was among you, I could not think fit to treat ſo with you, the greateſt part of you being then but very ſlender proficienes in the Goſpel, ſo farre from ſpirituall men (as ſome of you, the Gnoſticks, are wont to ſtyle themſelves) from men inſtructed by the Spirit of Chriſt, that you were gotten no higher then the imperfections and paſſions and ſins of men meer beginners in Chriſtianity.

* ye were not then able. ουκ ἠδύνασθε

2. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat, for * hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.] 2. This was the reaſon that I gave you ſuch tender food, proceeded not to reveal the myſteries of Chriſtianity to you, for you were not fit for any higher diet, nor indeed yet are ye.

† or, men, for the Kgs MS. reads ἀνθρωποι * according to man, κατ' ἄνθρωπον

3. For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and ſtrife, and diviſions, are ye not † carnal, and walk * as men?] 3. For ye are not yet raiſed to any pitch of ſpirituall or Chriſtian temper, as may appear by the ſchiſmes and factions that are among you, which being ſo contrary to the commands of Chriſt, which are all for peace and charity, as long as they are among you, ye are advanced but little above the pitch of meer men, thoſe which have nothing of Spirit in them.

4. For while one ſaith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?] 4. And herein your carnality conſiſts, one pretends to follow the doctrine of Paul, another of Apollos in oppoſition to all other Chriſtians, and they that hold with one, hold againſt the other. And what is this uncharitableneſſe but carnality?

5. Who then is Paul? and who is Apollos? but miniſters by whom ye beleived, even as the Lord gave to every man.] 5. Where firſt it ought to be conſidered, that Paul or Apollos are not the authors of our faith, but onely inſtruments of conveighing the doctrine of Chriſt to us (and conſequently muſt not be conceived to teach diverſe doctrine) according to the different commiſſions given them by the holy Ghoſt.

†Ego de Paganis catechumenon feci, Apollo catechumenon baptizavit. Opiat.

6. I have planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increaſe.] 6 And ſo though I have taught you the doctrine of Chriſtianity, and made you beleivers of heathens, and † Apollos baptized you, when you had been thus brought to the faith by me (I being ſent by Chriſt, not to baptize, but to preach the Goſpel ch.1. 14,17.) yet the ſucceſſe of all the whole work in making either my preaching, or his baptizing effectual, was from God, not from us.

7. So then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither is he that watereth; but God that giveth the increaſe.] 7 And therefore there is no great matter imputable either to one or other, as that either of us ſhould be deemed the author of your faith, but God onely who hath made our endevours ſo effectuall to you.

* but δὲ

8. Now he that planteth and he that watereth, are one: * and every man ſhall receive his own reward according to his own labour.] 8 But then, ſecondly, the doctrine of both of us is but one, both of us have had the ſame deſigne and purpoſe of ſeiling men in the doctrine of Chriſt, though, according to the labour that either of us have taken in the work, we may have different degrees of reward. And conſequently, though one labourer may deſerve more honour then another, yet ought not this to be an occaſion of diviſion, or ſchiſme among you, becauſe our deſigne and doctrine being the ſame, your faith ought to be the ſame alſo.

† fellow-labourers of God, θεοῦ συνεργοί

9. For we are † labourers together with God, ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building.] 9. We indeed that preach, and they that baptize are both ſervants, or officers of God, and cooperate one with another in that great work of dreſſing, and building up of ſoules, which when 'tis wrought, muſt not yet be attributed to us the inſtruments, but onely to God, the author and perfecter of all.

* Architect ἀρχιτέκτων

10. According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wiſe * maſter-builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed, how he buildeth thereupon.] 10. God gave me abilities and commiſſion to plant & preach the Goſpel, to doe as the maſter-workman doth, to lay the foundation; and accordingly I have done, preached the faith, laid the foundation, Jeſus Chriſt and him crucified, c.2.2. and ſome others that came after me to this Church, which I had planted v.6. (I mean not Apollos, for he onely watered what I had planted, baptized and farther inſtructed whom I had converted, c.1. 5,6,7. but) ſome others, I ſay, which I hear have come in, have ſuperſtructed on my foundation ſomewhat which I never deſigned, But let them take heed what they doe, For if they have ſuperſtructed any other, but that one pure precious doctrine of Chriſt crucified, and conſtant confeſſion of him in time of perſecution, if from the Gnoſticks they receive any infuſions contrary to theſe, let them look to it.

11. For other foundation can no man lay, then that is laid, which is, Jeſus Chriſt.] 11. For the faith of Chriſt being the foundation which I have laid, and that indeed the onely one which can poſſibly be laid,

12. Now if any man build upon this foundation, gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, wood, hay, ſtubble,

13. Every man's work ſhall be made manifeſt; for the day ſhall declare it, † becauſe it ſhall be revealed by fire; and the fire ſhall try every man's work, of what ſort it is.

14. If any man's work abide, which he hath built thereupon, * he ſhall receive a reward.] 12, 13, 14. That which is regularly to be built thereon, is conſtant confeſſion of Chriſt, in deſpight of afflictions, which like gold & ſilver &c. is but refined and purified but not conſumed in the fire, But for any doctrine of worldly wiſdome ver.18. (ſee note a.) of prudential compliances with the perſecutors, Jewes or Gentiles. If any ſuch earthy material be brought in in ſtead of it, it ſhall be brought ſuddenly to the triall; For that judgment of Chriſt which ſhall ſhortly paſſe upon me, for the deſtroying all corrupt beleivers on one ſide, and delivering and owning all true beleivers (ſee Rom.13.d. and Heb.10.a.) on the other, ſhall deale with them, as fire doth with that which is put in it to be tried, (preſerving and refining what is true and good metall, and making it more illuſtrious, but burning up all that is combuſtible) burn up and conſume all this worldly wiſdome, and burniſh the conſtancy of others like gold in the fire, ſee Rev. 3. 18.)

† for it is revealed, ὅτι ἀποκαλύπτεται

* it ſhall receive, λήψεται are involved in their own ſubtilties, v.19. And ſo all that adhere ſincerely to Chriſt, they ſhall be ſure not to miſſe their reward, preſervation here in this world, beſides that other that expects them eternally.

15. But if it prove combuſtible matter, if ſhall * be [b] ſaved: yet ſo as by fire.] 15. If any man's work ſhall be burnt, [a] he ſhall ſuffer loſſe, but he himſelf * eſcape; but ſo as th ough fire the doctrine, or practiſe ſhall upon examination prove falſe and unchriſtian, and ſo will not bear that triall (ſuch are the Gnoſticks doctrines of denying Chriſt, when perſecuted) it ſhall then be ſo farre from helping him to any advantage as the Gnoſtick complier hopes it will, that it ſhall bring the greateſt danger upon him, and if upon timely repentance, or by his not having actually denied Chriſt (for all his ſuperſtructing of ſome erroneous doctrines) he be more mercifully dealt with by Chriſt, and freed from having his portion with unbeleivers, yet it ſhall goe hard with him, as with one that is involved in a common fire, and hardly eſcapes out of it.

16. By this that I ſay, you cannot but 16. Know ye not that ye are the Temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth † in you?] † among you, ἐν ὑμῖν diſcern what care you are obliged to take to beware of theſe falſe ſeducing teachers that creep in among you, You are a Church of God's plantation, built, as the Temple among the Jews, God's direction given for every part of it; ye have had the Spirit of God to teach you all true doctrine, and pure practiſes, by your Apoſtolical plantation, and ſo to dwell and continue among you, and oblige you to all purity.

17. And therefore, if any falſe teacher 17. If any man * defile the Temple of God, him ſhall God deſtroy: for the Temple of God is holy, † which temple ye are.] * corrupt, φθείρει † as many of you as there are, οἵτινές ἐστε ὑμεῖς ſhall bring in any unclean heretical doctrine into ſuch a Church of God's planting, a place of God's reſidence, and ſo pollute, or defile God's dwelling place, (as when Nadab and Abihu offered ſtrange fire on God's altar) then, as they were devoured by fire from heaven, ſo he muſt expect ſevere puniſhment; For all ye that are Chriſtians, make up this one temple of God's, and that being a conſecrated ſociety, muſt not be profaned, or polluted with ſuch impure doctrines, as the Gnoſticks every where infuſe.

18. And for that other conceit of theirs, 18. Let no man deceive himſelf: if any man among you ſeemeth to be wiſe in this * world, let him become a fool, that he may be wiſe.] * age, αἰῶνι by which they get ſo many proſelytes, that of the lawfulneſſe of denying Chriſt in time of perſecution, by which they promiſe themſelves ſecurity from all the preſent evils, Let no man cheat himſelf with this perſwaſion, any man that thus thinks to be more provident then other men, and by this means to ſecure himſelf, let him know that this will not thrive with him, he will find himſelf deceived at laſt (ſee v.15. & Rev.3. 18.) there is no ſuch prudent way for him to ſecure himſelf, as to lay aſide this worldly wiſdome, and conſtantly and cheerfully to adhere to Chriſt, when in the eye of the world it ſeems moſt fooliſh to doe ſo.

19. For God is wont to take off, and preſerve the plain ſimple perſon that avowedly adheres to him, and to outwit the ſubtile deſigner, And it will ſoon befall thoſe pretenders, according to that of Job 5. 13. they that think to be wiſer then other men, are by ſo much verier fools then others, and ſo are diſcerned to be. 19. For the wiſdome of this world is fooliſhneſſe with God; for it is written, He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſſe.]

20. And to the ſame purpoſe is that of Pſal.94.11. 20. And again, The Lord knoweth the † thoughts of the wiſe, that they are vaine.] † machinations, διαλογισμοὺς that all the ſubtile contrivances of crafty worldly minded men prove vain and improſperous.

21. Let no man therefore factiouſly or ſchiſmatically divide from the the unity of the Church, following ſuch, or ſuch a maſter or inſtructer, and ſo quarelling, or contending with others, v. 4. For all the gifts that are in the Church were given for your uſe, and whatſoever any man can boaſt of, it is not peculiar to him, but belongs as well to every other perſon in the Church. 21. Therefore let no man glory in men, for * all things are yours.] * all are πάντα ὑμῶν

22. He that planted the faith among you, 22. Wherefore Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things † preſent, or things to come, all are yours,] † inſtant ἐνεστῶτα ſee Rom. 8. 38.

and he that baptized you, and he that ſuperſtructed upon this foundation, are all ſubſervient to your uſes, and not to be maſters of your faith, much leſſe any of them to be ſet up againſt the other, to make diviſions, and rents among you, and ſo is likewiſe all humane wiſdome, or knowledge of naturall things, ſo is Gods mercy to us in keeping us alive, ſecuring ſome of us from the malice of our enemies, and delivering up others of us to death, for the teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt, the condition now inſtantly approaching, preſſures for the name of Chriſt, or that which is not quite ſo neer, the yet future coming of Chriſt (called the day v. 13.) for the deſtroying of the falſe, and rewarding the conſtant Chriſtians, all theſe are by God deſigned, in common to you all, as inſtrumental for your good.

23. And the concluſion from hence is this, that you give not up your faith to any but to Chriſt, that you reſolve firmly to obey him and adhere to him uniformly, as he reſigned himſelf up to the will of God, to doe and to ſuffer whatſoever he appointed him, in the great office of being our mediator and redeemer. 23. And ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's.]

Notes on Chap. III.

2. Ζημιωθήσεται Of the word [ζημιωθήσεται] here it may firſt be enquired, whether it belong to the man, or to his work, both immediatly precedent, εἴ τινος τὸ ἔργον, if any mans work; That which inclines it to ſignifie the work, is the ἀυτὸς ὃ that followes, but himſelf ſhall be ſaved | which ſeems to oppoſe himſelf to his work, that the one ſhall be loſt, but the other ſaved. But this is well enough avoided by ſetting the oppoſition betwixt the ſaving of him, and the burning of his work, præcedent to the ζημιωθήσεται; and then the conſideration of that as it anſwers the former probability, ſo it inclines more ſtrongly to render it the other way, that the man, not the work, ζημιωθήσεται ſhall be mulcted. For that this word ſignifies not [to be loſt,] but [to ſuffer loſſe] hath been ſaid, note on Mat. 16. m. Which cannot be here ſaid of the work, of which it had before been ſaid [it ſhall be burnt,] For what is ſo, doth not ſuffer a mulct, or fine, or loſſe, (which according to all lawes muſt be ſalvo contenementō without utter ruine) but is loſt, and utterly deſtroyed; It remains then that it be ſpoken of the man whether falſe teacher, or any follower of ſuch, that takes up any ſuch falſe doctrine from him, and ſo upon the doctrine of Chriſt, (profeſſing ſtill, or not denying of Chriſt) ἐποικοδομεῖ, ſuperſtructs ſome falſe doctrines, and erroneous practiſes; And of him it is here ſaid, that he ſhall ſuffer loſſe, ſo as the ἐποικοδομεῖ

the metall that goes into the fire with droſſe, or embaſement mixt with it, is ſeparated from all that mixture, and comes out a great deal leſſe then it went in, loſeth all that droſſe in that triall of fire. Now how this is to be particularly underſtood, of this ſuperſtructure of hay, or ſtubble here, muſt be collected from the conſideration of [the day] which is here mention'd, ver. 13. that it ſhall declare, or reveal. That the word [Day] in all languages, ſignifies judgment, and that [the day] emphatically, or the day of Chriſt, the day of the Lord, ſignified an approaching ſeaſon of judgment then expected on unbeleivers and miſbeleivers, Jewes and Gnoſticks, all the world over, in the Chriſtian plantations, ſee Rom. 13. note d. and Heb. 10. note a. And that this is the Day, or Judgment that is here referred to, may appear 1. by the excluſion of all other daies; The only two ſenſes that can come in competition are either 1. that it ſignifie the finall day of judgment; or 2^dly, the audience, and judicature, and ſentence of the Apoſtle, when he comes to examine this doctrine. For the firſt, that cannot be underſtood here, becauſe the office of the day here is δηλῶσαι, to make manifeſt, and ἀποκαλύπτειν, to reveale, v. 13. And therefore ſuppoſing there were ſuch a day of conflagration, which they that maintain, look on as a purging fire to burn up all the ill works of the Chriſtian, and fit him for heaven, yet the circumſtances of the text here doe not belong to that, but to another quality of the fire, the trying, revealing, and diſcriminating one from another, as appears by all the phraſes here uſed, Every mans work ſhall be made manifeſt, the day ſhall declare, it ſhall be revealed by the fire, the fire ſhall try what kind of work every mans is, and if any mans work remain, i. e. abides the triall, he ſhall be rewarded. As for that of the Apoſtles coming to judge and cenſure, it is not probably here meant, becauſe theſe hereticks and their followers did not acknowledge the Apoſtles power, but reſiſted and rejected them, as appears in divers other places (and oft layes a neceſſity on the Apoſtles to vindicate their authority,) And 2^dly, there is no reaſon to conceive that the Apoſtle ſhould call his own ſentence by the name of the Fire, or ſpeak of giving men rewards v. 14. which are to be expected from God. But then 2^dly, that it be applied to this of the puniſhment of God now approaching the Gnoſticks, will appear not only by the mention of the wood, hay, ſtubble, built on the foundation, which evidently denotes hereticall ſuperſtructures, (and it is known that theſe were the great hereticks of thoſe times) and ſuch as will be ſure to periſh, when fire comes, but alſo by the conſequents here to the end of the Chapter, which make up the known character of the Gnoſticks. For that conſiſted ſpecially of two things, 1. their doctrines of uncleanneſs, 2^dly, their arts of worldly wiſdome to ſecure themſelves from perſecutions by complying with the perſecutors. And both theſe are here noted, that of uncleanneſs v. 16, 17. by the defiling the Temple of God, i.e. themſelves, who as Chriſtians, are obliged to be holy, but by the Gnoſtick infuſions were in danger of all pollutions, And thoſe that were immerſt in them, the Apoſtle foretells, that they ſhall be deſtroyed by this day, Him ſhall God deſtroy v. 17. And ſo that of worldly wiſdome v. 18. If any man among you ſeemeth to be wiſe in this world, i.e. prudent for the ſaving, or ſecuring himſelf from perſecutions, and dangers here] And of this the Apoſtle gives warning, that this wiſdome is the greateſt folly, and that the contrary thereto is the onely wiſdome even for this life, the conſtant adhering to Chriſt, the ſureſt means to deliver him from the dangers which here he fears, whereas theſe wiſe and prudential worldlings are likely to be taken in their own craft, v. 19. by their arts of ſecuring, to deſtroy themſelves, and ſo will appear vain, and ridiculous in all their wiſe contrivances ver. 20. according to that of Chriſt, Mat. 16. 25. he that will ſave his life ſhall loſe it, And therefore the form of adviſe here uſed is, Let no man deceive himſelf, This practiſe of the Gnoſticks in order to the ſecuring themſelves, was a great miſtake, the way to bring all deſtruction upon them, when the day of the Lord, the vengeance of Chriſt upon the crucifyers, and perſecutors of Chriſtians, ſhould come ſuddenly upon them, and ſweep away the Gnoſticks among them. And ſo, the whole paſſage belonging clearly to theſe, the full importance of the [ζημιωθήσεται] will be, that they which being not ſo high in that hereſie, as to deny the foundation, the faith of Chriſt, (which many did, and are elſwhere call'd Apoſtates, and Antichriſts, and they that denied Chriſt to be come in the fleſh) and yet had received ſome of theſe Gnoſtick infuſions, that particularly of worldly prudence and compliance with the Jewes, ſhould (contrary to their expectation of gaining by this means) ſuffer loſſe, be in great hazard to be deſtroyed among them, and if they eſcaped, it ſhould be very narrowly, the conſtant, faithfull, Orthodox Chriſtian being the only one, that ſhould be perfectly ſafe, when that fiery day came, when the unfaithfull and the cowardly ſhould either utterly periſh, or run an horrible hazard in that day. And to this purpoſe is it that the doctrines of theſe Gnoſticks are expreſt by wood, hay, ſtubble, earthy materialls (and ſo notes of falſe doctrines, unfit to be built on this divine foundation) and thoſe, (of all things) the moſt combuſtible and ſure to be deſtroyed, when a fiery triall comes, and that in two reſpects, firſt, that when perſecution for Chriſt comes, ſuch a kind of Chriſtianity as this, is ſure to be burnt up, the Gnoſticks will not then hold out, and confeſs Chriſt, and 2^dly, in reſpect of Chriſt's coming to viſit, and judge, to reward the conſtant, and deſtroy the unfaithfull, then theſe prudential waies of theirs will be ſure to ſtand them in no ſtead, but bring them into greater danger, as he that means to ſecure himſelf againſt fire by wood, hay, ſtubble, ſhall be ſure to have all burnt, and to encreaſe, not leſſen the flame, Whereas the truly wiſe way, (and that which Chriſt counſels the Church of Laodicea to, in oppoſition to theſe Gnoſticks, Rev. 3. 8.) is to build gold, ſilver &c. which having been tried in the fire (and ſo denoting conſtancy in perſecutions) are ſure to hold out, and endure the teſt, whatſoever the day of viſitation be, Be the fire never ſo ſcorching, theſe will be the likelieſt to be preſerved in it.

b. That σώζεσθαι ſignifies to eſcape hath been often noted, but what σώζεσθαι διὰ to eſcape by] here ſignifies, is the onely difficulty, and that will be beſt explained by comparing it with other places of the ſame kind. Thus 1 Pet. 3. 20. διεσώθησαν δι' ὕδατος they were ſaved out of or through the water, the preposition διὰ perhaps (as other prepoſitions oft are in the New Teſtament) being taken looſely for ἐκ or ἀπὸ, out or from, or elſe as the neceſſity of the matter imports, an eſcaping through water, implying conſequently an eſcaping out of it alſo; And ſo the ſenſe will be, that though there were a great flood ready to drown all the earth, yet for all this, by the help of the arke they did eſcape that danger. And ſo here σωθήσεται ὡς διὰ πυρός he ſhall eſcape, as one eſcapes out of the fire; i.e. as * Chryſoſtome expreſſes it, as one that, when in the midnight his houſe is ſet on fire, wakes and leaps out of the bed, and runs naked out of dores, οὐδὲν τῶν ἔνδον λαβὼν, taking nothing that is within along with him, taking care onely (as he addes) ὅπως τὸ σῶμα τὸ ἑαυτοῦ ἁρπάσῃ † φλογὸς, that he may ſnatch his own body out of the flame. And it is a common * obſervation that ὡς διὰ πυρὸς σώζεσθαι is a proverbial ſpeech for thoſe, that get hardly out of a great danger, ſo ὡς δάλου ἐξῃρημένου ἐκ πυρὸς, as a brand ſnatcht out of the fire, Am.4.11. and ſo Jude 23. ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε, ἐκ τοῦ πυρὸς ἁρπάζοντες, ſave them by ſnatching them out of the fire in time of danger, for ſo ἐν φόβῳ ſignifies, ἐν κινδύνῳ, in preſence of any thing that men are afraid of. By this means that of 1 Pet.4.18. will be explained alſo, for this will be the meaning of μόλις σώζεται (for which the Hebrew, Prov.11.31. reads יִשָּׁלֵם, ſhall be recompenſed) he ſhall not eſcape without many loſſes and afflictions in that πύρωσις or combuſtion. So as in * Julian ἡ νὺξ ὀλίγους ἀπέσωσε μόλις, the night did hardly or with great difficulty reſcue a few, and in * Agathias, who, having ſpoken of ſome that πυρπολεῖσθαι ἔμελλον, were ready to be fired and burnt, addes, μόλις ἔνιοι διασωθέντες κλαδίων, they hardly eſcape out of it.

CHAP. IV.

1. And though, I ſay, we are ſubſervient to your uſes, and are appointed ſo to be, ch.3.22. yet it will become you to look on us, though not as maſters of your faith, yet as miniſters of Chriſt, and that in the moſt honourable office of the family, that of the ſteward, or ruler of the houſe, to whom among other things it belongs to diſpenſe out every man his proportion of food, &c. and ſo 'tis our part to diſpenſe the Goſpel to you in that meaſure, and by thoſe degrees that we ſee fit.

1. LET a man ſo account of us, as of the * miniſters of Chriſt, and ſtewards of the myſteries of God.]

* officers, ὑπηρέτας

2. And above all things fidelity and honeſt diſcharging of truſt is required of ſtewards, and if I ſhould faile in that, I ſhould be very worthy of blame.

2. Moreover it is required in ſtewards, that a man be found faithfull.]

3. But for this I am not to be judged by you, by men, nay by my ſelf.

3. But with me it is a very ſmall thing, that I ſhould be judged of you, or of man's judgment; yea, I judge not mine own ſelf.]

4. For though I can accuſe my ſelf of no fault in the execution of my Apoſtolical office, yet is not this the clearing of me, onely God that ſearcheth and ſeeth all, muſt doe this.

4. For I know nothing by my ſelf, yet am I not hereby juſtified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.]

5. Therefore be not you too forward in your cenſures of me, but leave it to God, and I make no doubt but in time he will diſplay the ſeducers, and diſcover every mans intentions and purpoſes, and then, as they that deſerve ſhall have blame, ſo every man that hath done well, ſhall by God be juſtified and commended.

5. Therefore judge nothing before the † time, untill the Lord come, * who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkneſſe, and will make manifeſt the counſels of the hearts, and then ſhall every man have praiſe of God.]

6. This of not following or admiring the perſons of men, I have thus ſaid, (ſee note on Rom.7.d.) in the perſons of my ſelf and Apollos, under that figure to give you a general rule how to demean your ſelves to any other diſpenſers of the Goſpel, viz: that in following of us ye go no farther then the directions v.1. and think of us, not as maſters of your faith, but as officers, ſtewards of Chriſt, to diſtribute that to you, which he hath entruſted to us, which if it were firmly reſolved on among you, you would never break out into factions, one to the deſpiſing of another, boaſting, one that he hath received the faith from Paul, and not from Apollos, another that he is a follower of Apollos, and not of Paul, &c.

6. And theſe things, brethren, I have † in a figure transferred to my ſelf, and to Apollos for your ſakes, * that ye might learn in us, not to think of men, above that which † is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one againſt another.]

† thus darkly ſet down of my ſelf, μετεσχημάτισα εἰς ἐμαυτὸν

* that in reſpect of us ye may learn, ἵνα ἐν ἡμῖν μάθητε

† hath been written γέγραπται

7. For this can be no matter of boaſting to any of you, for by it is no man dignified before another, for by whomſoever you received the faith, it is clear that you received it, 'tis no acquiſition of your own wit or parts, but meerly a mercy of Gods, that ſent us to preach to you, and therefore cannot in any reaſon be matter of boaſting to you.

7. For who maketh thee to differ from another? And what haſt thou that thou didſt not receive? Now if thou didſt receive it, why doſt thou glory, as if thou hadſt not received it?]

8, 9. You forſooth are ſo full and rich, ſo furniſht with all kind of knowledge & wiſdome, (ſuch the Gnoſticks brazg'd of) that you deſpiſe your Apoſtles, and ſpiritual fathers that firſt converted you to the faith; Since we parted from you, you have in your own conceits been in great tranquillity, and ſecurity, had happy Halcyonian daies, (ſee note on Rev. 1.6.) And I wiſh it were ſo with you, as you phanſie it to be, that the tranquillity which the Gnoſticks (with their compliances with the perſecutors whether Jewes or heathens) promiſe you, were a true Chriſtian tranquillity, that we which are ſo ſharply perſecuted, might come to you as to a refuge, and enjoy ſome part of that great privilege with you; For certainly we have need of it; For we are ſo farre from any ſecurity, that we are expoſed to all the miſeries

8. * Now ye are full, † now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us, and I would to God ye did reigne, that we alſo might reign with you.

9. For I think that God hath ſet forth us the Apoſtles laſt, as it were men appointed to death: for we are made a ſpectacle unto the world, and to Angels, and to men.]

* Ye are already full to ſatiety, Ἤδη κεκορεσμένοι ἐστε and perſecutions, and dangers in the world, we Apoſtles being as it were the forlorn party, ſent out laſt, without any reſerve behind to relieve us, and ſo given up unto certain ſlaughter, or as the gladiators upon a ſtage, thoſe that come out firſt fighting in jeſt, as it were, but they that come laſt, never giving over, till one lay down the other dead upon the place, For we are become as thoſe that being condemn'd to death, have wild beaſts let looſe on them upon the theatre, which certainly rend them to pieces, ch. 15. 32. And like thoſe combatants on the theatre, we are ſet forth for a ſpectacle, to the heathen world, to angels, to men to look upon.

We are vile & deſpiſed for the doing our duty, the exerciſe of our Apoſtolical office, but you forſooth are very wiſe men, deeply learned in the doctrine of Chriſt, we weak contemptible mean perſons, but you ſtrong and gallant.

Taking exceſſive pains that I may preach the Goſpel, and get mine own living by my labour, that I might not put you to any charges, (ſee Act. 18 3.) and when, in ſtead of thanks, I meet with nothing but reviling for all this, I have no return to make them, but that of my prayers for them, nay when perſecuted, I entertain no thought of revenge toward them.

When calumniated and falſly accuſed, I pray to God for them, by whom it is done, and this is no newes to me, for we Apoſtles of Chriſt are looke on and uſed as the unworthieſt creatures of the world, and ſo continue untill this time. a.

14. I write not theſe things to ſhame you, but as my beloved ſons I warn you.] 14. And though I have thus been uſed by ſome of you, ſince theſe ſchiſmes have come in among you, yet I ſay it not to reproach or bring ſhame upon you for ſo doing, but out of the affections of a father, I advise and admonish you to behave your ſelves more like children, then ye have yet done.

15. For * though you have ten thouſand inſtructers in Chriſt, yet have ye not many fathers; for in Chriſt Jeſus I have begotten you through the Goſpel.] 15. For though others may have taught you ſince, yet 'tis only I that planted the Goſpel firſt among you, and therefore there can be no occaſion of ſchiſmes and diviſions among you (by one's making one Apoſtle the maſter of his faith, another another) any more then that children of the ſame father ſhould contend and divide about their life, or coming into the world, one profeſſing to owe it to one, another to another.

16. Wherefore, I beſeech you, be ye followers of me.] 16. And therefore, I beſeech you, let the form of doctrine, which I left you, be retained among you, without any new inſertions by any other.

17. For this cauſe have I ſent unto you Timotheus, who is my beloved ſon, and faithfull in the Lord, who ſhall bring you into remembrance of my waies which be in Chriſt, as I teach every where in every Church.] 17. For this purpoſe I have ſent unto you Timothie, whom I converted to the faith, and one that hath long aſſociated with me, and done faithfull ſervice to me in the propagating of the Goſpel, who therefore exactly knowing my whole courſe of Chriſtian doctrine, may be your remembrancer, and tell you what my doctrine and practiſe is in every Church, where I come to confirm them.

† have been puffed up, ἐφυσιώθησαν * becauſe I come not, ὡς μὴ ἐρχομένου † ſpeedily, ταχέως

18. Now ſome † are puffed up, * as though I would not come to you.] 18. And ſince by my not coming to you my ſelf perſonally, ſome among you have taken occaſion to deſpiſe me that am abſent,

19. But I will come to you † ſhortly, if the Lord will, and will know, not the ſpeech of them which are puffed up, but the power.] 19. I am therefore reſolved by God's help my ſelf to come among you ſpeedily, and to examine what grounds they have for what they doe, and not much heeding the ſpeech or talk of them, to ſee whether this be any ſolid knowledge in them, upon ſtrength of which they ſhould deſpiſe others.

20. For the kingdome of God is not in * word, but in power.] 20. For Chriſtianity conſiſts not in ſpeaking but in doing, (according to a proverbial ſpeech of the Jewes, Speech is not a foundation, but work. Pirke Avoth p. 15.) and ſo all other perfections of men muſt be judged of, not by their boaſts of themſelves, but by the reality of their performances.

21. What will ye? ſhall I come unto you with [b] a rod, or in love, and in the ſpirit of meekneſſe?] 21. And now I talk of coming to you, I pray conſider, which will you chuſe? As you behave your ſelves, ſo at my coming will I exerciſe either my power of inflicting puniſhments, or the milder way of kindneſſe toward you, and therefore according as ye like beſt, ſo prepare your ſelves for my coming. b.

Notes on Chap. IV.

a. Περικαθάρματα] ſignifies thoſe things that are uſed in the luſtrating of a city among the Gentiles, * Suidas hath deſcribed the cuſtome in theſe words, Τῷ καθαρμῷ πόλεως ἀνήρ τις ἐκβάλλεται τινὰ ὃν ἐκάλουν περίψημα. For the purging and luſtrating of a city, they cloathed a man (in foule and filthy garments, ſay others) and put him to death, and he was called a luſtration or expiation; thus, ſaith Euſtathius, περίψημα is a luſtration for which the vileſt perſons were wont to be uſed, οἱ χρησιμοὶ καὶ ἀποβλητοι, ſordid, refuſe people, For thus it was, when the city was under any plague, or other great calamity, they choſe out one of the naſtieſt perſons in the city, and brought him to a certain place, with cheeſe, and drie figs, and a cake in his hand, and then beat him with rods about the ſecret parts, and then burnt him and the rods together in a ditch, and caſt the aſhes into the ſea (τῷ Ποσειδῶνι θυσίαν ἀποδιδοντες paying a ſacrifice to Neptune, ſaith Suidas) with theſe words, περὶ σοῦ τοῦτο, περὶ σοῦ περίψημα

a. Περικαθάρματα * in the word περίψημα καθαρμα, Be thou a lustration for us. This person was called κάθαρμα and περίψημα, and by Lycophron, and, before him, by Hipponax φάρμακον a medicament, and by Philostratus, (saith Surdus de ritib: l 3. c.19.) ἀποτροπαῖον a cure, or averter of judgment from the city. (But this is a mistake in Surdus; all that Philostratus saith being onely this, that in the Theatre τὸ τῆ ἀποτροπαίᾳ δρυῒ, i. e. the statue of the deity that averteth judgment, plagues &c. was set up.) By this it appears also, what is meant by περίψημα πάντων, the refuse of all] in the next words, to wit, the very same thing in another expression, the vilest, refuse creature in a city, such as used to be the expiation in a publick calamity. So saith Suidas, Περίψημα, κάθαρμα, which, I conceive, is a corruption from κάθαρμα, which differs but little from it, and Hesychius, Περίψημα (περικάθαρμα, for περικάθαρμα I conceive) ἀντίλυτρα, ἀντίψυχα, ἃ ὑπὲρ τῆς ψυχῆς πάντων, the two words are of the same signification, and denote those that are paid for others ransomes, or put to death in others stead, or else any thing that is most vile, trodden under feet by all men. Thus Tob. 5. 24. we have this phrase, περίψημα ἡμῶν γένηται] for, Let it be despised, a refuse, in respect of, or comparison to my son, this heathen custome, whence all this comes, being in a manner, but a transcript of the Azazel among the Jewes, the scape-goat, that was sent into the wilderness, with all the sinnes of the people upon him, which was therefore called ἀποπομπαῖος, rejectaneus, or refuse.

Περίψημα

The ῥάβδος or rod here is the power of inflicting punishments in the Apostles, of death it self, as on Ananias, of diseases, as on Elymas, and so the Hebrew word מגפה for ῥάβδος is rendred πληγὴ a stripe *Isa.*10.24. and is all one with μάστιξ scourge *Mar.*3.10. and contrary to this is the spirit of meekness, that followes here, mercifulness in not inflicting that sharpness on them, upon sight of their speedy reformation, which by threatning here he desires and hopes to produce, before his coming to them personally. b. ῥάβδος

Paraphrase.

CHAP. V.

a. 1. It is a great b. shame and reproach that lyes upon you, that sins of unnaturall uncleanness, and marriages within prohibited degrees are so frequently to be found among you, and those of such a pitch in one offender, as civil nations, (though not Christian) and even the unconverted Corinthians would abhor to be guilty of, a sonne to take in marriage (or otherwise to live in that sinne with) his father's wife.

1. ᵃ It is reported commonly, that there is ᵃ fornication among you, and such fornication, as † is not so much as named among the ᵇ Gentiles, that one should have his father's wife.]

ᵃ Fornication is generally reported among you, † or, is not among; for πορνεία named, is left out by the King's Ms.

c. 2. And this so freely that yee doe not look on it as a crime fit to be censured in him, ye are not at all humbled with it, nor mourn for it (see 2 Cor: 12, 21.) either out of an opinion of the person that hath done it, (who is one of the Doctors of your Church, say Chrysostome and Theodoret) or out of an opinion infused now by some hæreticall teachers into you (which your former condition of life makes you apt enough to beleive,) that fornication is an indifferent thing (see c. 6. 13.) whereas in any reason you ought to have mourned over him, as over a great sinner, and expressed your sorrow in complaining of him, and using meanes that he might be excommunicated, see c: 12. 21.

2. And ye are ᶜ puffed up, and have not rather mourned, that he that hath done this deed may be taken away from among you,]

d. 3. For I, though I am not present among you, yet by that authority that belongs to me, (and being sufficiently assured of the truth of the fact) have already passed sentence on him that hath thus offended,

3. For I verily ᵉ as absent in body, but present in spirit, have ᵈ judged already, as though I were present, † concerning him that hath so done this deed.]

ᵉ or, being absent, for the King's MS. leaves out ὡς as † him that hath so, τὸν οὕτω

4, 5. That in a publick assembly gathered in the name of our Lord Jesus e. Christ, in which you f. are to suppose me virtually present among you, by the authority of Christ committed to me and you, ye proceed to excommunicate and deliver him up into the power of Satan, who may inflict some disease upon him, that may be a means to bring him to a sight of his sinne and reformation, and so to salvation also.

4. In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, when ye are gathered together, and my spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ,]

5. To ᶠ deliver such an one unto Satan for the ᶠ destruction of flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.]

6. Such a teacher as this is not fit for you to follow or favour, for as a little sowre dough gives a tast to all the bread, so will such a sinne as this, permitted in the Church, have an influence on you all, both by discrediting that Church where this is permitted, and by corrupting the company by the example.

6. Your boasting is not good: know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?]

7. As therefore it was the manner of the Jewes on the day of the Passeover (that being the day of preparation, or the Eve to the feast of unleavened bread) most diligently and sollicitously to inquire if there were any crumbe of leavened bread left in their houses, and to remove it all (see note on Mar: 14. c.) so doe yee at this time deale with that heathen or Gnostick perswasion (among you) of the lawfulnesse of fornication, most contrary to the Lawes of Christianity, that you have undertaken, and whereby ye have obliged your selves to have none of that sowre unchristian doctrine among you, but on the contrary to fit your selves to celebrate a Christian Passeover, which (as the Judaicall was a signe of their deliverance out of Ægypt) must be kept with our departure out of sinne.

7. Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, * as ye are unleavened: for even Christ our passeover is sacrificed for us.]

* for as much as you are, καθὼς ἐστε

8. Doe yee therefore consecrate your selves to the service of Christ, by reforming all your former sinfull courses, particularly that of uncleanness and villany (see v. 13.) and by the practise of all Christian purity, and holding fast the truth which hath been delivered to you.

8. Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of † malice and wickedness: but with the unleavened bread of * sincerity and truth.]

11. But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or * covetous, or an idolater, or a † [k] railer, or a drunkard, or * an extortioner, with ſuch an one, no not to eate.] 11. But the purpoſe of my writing is onely to interdict you k.

12. For what have I to doe to judge them alſo that are without? doe not ye judge them that are within?] 12. What have the cenſures of the Church (ſee note d.) to doe with them that are not Chriſtians? they are wont to be executed on them onely that are in the Church.

13. But them that are without God judgeth. Therefore put away from among your ſelves that wicked perſon.] 13. Others therefore, that are not Chriſtians, being left to God, ſee that yee excommunicate the inceſtuous, and all Chriſtian profeſſors, guilty of any ſuch ſinne.

Notes on Chap. V.

2. Πορνεία fornication] in this place is a generall word to comprehend all unlawfull deſires of the fleſh, acts of whatſoever prohibited carnality, under it, For it is obſervable, that the precept given by Gods poſitive command to the ſonnes of Adam, and Noah, and ſo to all mankinde, which is ſtyled by the Jewes עַל גִּלּוּי עֶרְיוֹת of diſcloſing nakedneſſes, under which ſtyle all the marriages within prohibited degrees Levi 18. and all the unnaturall ſinnes are contain'd, is Act. 15. expreſs't by abſtaining ἀπὸ πορνείας from fornication. And that by the infuſions of the Gnoſticks, and remainders of their heathen cuſtomes, there was an Epidemical guilt of this ſin of many ſorts among them, is the meaning of ὅλως ἀκούεται ἐν ὑμῖν πορνεία, fornication is univerſally heard, i. e. found among you: for the word ὅλως ſeemes to be all one with καθόλα in univerſum, and ſo perhaps it is to be rendred c. 6. 7. ὅλως ἥττημα ἐν ὑμῖν ἐστί, there is a defect generally among you, and being here joyned with [ἀκούεται ἐν ὑμῖν, is heard among you] may ſignifie that 'tis an univerſall guilt of theirs; or elſe being joyned with πορνεία] it will ſound thus, fornication altogether or fornication in groſſe (containing the ſeverall branches of it) is heard, i. e. found or met with among you, and of the many ſorts thereof, one that had not been practiſed, or indured to be thought, or ſpoke of, among civill heathens, or the unconverted Corinthians at that time, that of having the fathers wife. This, ſaith Chryſoſtome, was done by a Doctor, i. e. I ſuppoſe, a Biſhop in ſome Church of Achaia, ὁ μόνον θείων μυστηρίων ἠξίωτο, ἀλλὰ καὶ διδασκαλικῆς ἐπιτυχὼν χαρίσματος, He was, ſaith he, not onely vouchſafed the divine myſteries, partaker of them, but had obtained the dignity of a Doctor. And ſo Theodoret alſo.

*That δεῖνα τινα.

b. What is here ſaid not to be named among the Gentiles] is not ſo to be underſtood, that no nation ever uſed it, but that civill (though not Chriſtian) nations have counted it abominable, and nefarious, no way lawfull, or tolerable, or that at this time, the unconverted Corinthians were not guilty of it. Among the ancient Arabians it was uſed, and the cuſtome ſo deſcribed by Al Moſtratraf, Ebnol Arbir &c. that when a woman was left a widow, or put away by the husband, the eldeſt ſonne ſhould take her by inheritance, and caſt his garment over her, as a ſigne of it; or if he would not, then the next heir, and ſo the ſon, they ſay, ſucceeded to the fathers bed, as well as wealth, by inheritance. This being formerly in uſe was by the Alcboran forbidden, O vos qui creditis, non permiſſum eſt vobis fœminas hæreditatis jure accipere. Beleivers (i. e. they that receive Mahomet's law) muſt not take the fathers wives by right of inheritance. So Al Shareſtanius, Turpiſſimum eorum quæ faciebant (Arabes tempore ignorantiæ) erat hoc, quòd vir duas ſorores duceret, & Patris ſui uxorem velut ſucceſſor aſſumeret, quod qui faceret appellabatur Al Daizan, quo nomine infectatus eſt Aus Ebn Haiar quoſdam è tribu Banikais, quorum tres ex ordine patris ſui uxorem duxerant. Mos autem erat apud Arabes, ut cum ab uxore, morte aut repudio, ſepararetur aliquis, filiorum ipſius natu maximus, ſi eâ opus haberet, veſtem ſuam ei injiceret, quod ſi ille opus eâ non haberet, duceret ipſam è fratribus aliquis dotis novæ interventu. The fouleſt thing that the old Arabs did in time of ignorance was this, that a man married two ſiſters, and took his fathers wife as his ſucceſſor, which he that did was called Al Daizan, and ſuch there were of the tribe of Banikais, who three of them one after another had married the father's wife, Now it was a cuſtome among the Arabians, that when any man was ſeparated from his wife by death or divorce, his eldeſt ſon, if he wanted her, caſt his garment upon her, i. e. took her to wife, or, if he wanted her not, one of his brothers married her.

c. The word πενθῆν] here to mourn, lament, wail, referres to the cuſtomary ſolemnity of putting on mourning habits, and wailing over them that were to be excommunicate, as over them that were dead, ὡς νεκροὺς πενθῶν, ſaith Origen Cont: Celſ: l. 3. juſt as Pythagoras, when any forſook his ſchool, had a κενοτάφιον or empty hearſe carried about, and mourned for him. Ἐλυπήθητε γὰρ κατὰ Θεὸν for ye were deal't with according to the diſcipline ordained by God or Chriſt in the Church, and ſo in all probability that is λύπη κατὰ Θεὸν v. 10. which brings μετανοίαν a change or newneſſe of life, as the cenſures and puniſhments of the world bring death, And ſo κατὰ Θεὸν λυπηθῶναι ὑμᾶς v 11. to be mourned or ſorrowed v. 11. i.e. cenſured according to God's appointment.

d. Κρίνειν] in this place, is the pronouncing or giving ſentence againſt the offender, ſo 'tis uſed v. 12. What have I to doe τοὺς ἔξω κρίνειν, to judge them, inflict cenſures on them, that are without? heathens, that were not in the Church, or Gnoſticks that divided from it, thoſe he leaves to God's cenſures and puniſhments, as not belonging to his Apoſtolical judicature, ſo ver. 13. οὐχὶ τοὺς ἔσω ὑμεῖς κρίνετε; Doe ye not judge them that are within? i.e. all that live within your Church, and yet fall into any ſuch carnal ſinnes, ye, the Governours of each Church of Achaia, ought to endevour to reduce, by inflicting the cenſures of the Church on them, and accordingly followes there what here precedes (ἐξαιρεῖτε τὸν πονηρὸν ἐξ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν] Remove the wicked perſon, perhaps τὸν πόρνον the fornicator or inceſtuous v. 1.) from among you. And agreeably ſo it muſt be here, κέκρικα τὸν οὕτω τοῦτο κατεργασάμενον, I have judged, ſentenc'd him that hath thus done this, and what the ſentence is, appears by the 4th and 5th verſes, the 4th containing the ſolemnity wherewith it was to be inflicted, in the publick aſſembly of the Church, to have the power of the keyes exerciſed on him, according to his Apoſtolical office, παραδοῦναι τὸν τοιοῦτον τῷ Σατανᾷ, to deliver up ſuch an one to Satan, v. 5. i.e. to excommunicate him, ſee note e.

e. Παραδοῦναι τῷ Σατανᾷ to deliver to Satan] here, and 1 Tim. 1. 20. is anſwerable to חרם among the Jewes, called in Greek ἀνάθεμα execration, the ſecond ſpecies of excommunication among them, and in which, for the greater ſolemnity of it, there were curſes out of the law of Moſes, and ſuch like execrations added to it (an eſſay of which we have Act. 8. 20. thy money be to thee to deſtruction &c.) This was inflicted on him who had firſt been under the firſt ſpecies, that of the נדוי ἀφορισμὸς, remotion or ſeparation, firſt for thirty daies, and then being allow'd thirty daies more (which they called the doubling of the נדוי) ſtill continued in that contumacy, For then, ſay the Jewes, מחרימין אותו they anathematize him, without defining any limited time, as in niddui they did. This in the Chriſtian Church is called delivering to Satan, for two reaſons. 1. Becauſe it was the depriving the offender of thoſe daily means which are in Chriſtianity afforded, and ordinarily uſefull to eject Satan, and the power of his kingdome out of the heart, ſuch are 1. the prayers of the Church, 2dly, the publick uſe of the word or doctrine of Chriſtianity (for he that is under Cherem, nec docet nec docetur, neither teaches, nor is taught, ſay the Jewes, and in the ancient Chriſtian Church, they that were upon repentance received in again, were firſt among the ἀκροώμενοι hearers in the porch, θείων ἀκούειν γραφῶν to hear the holy Scriptures, ſaith Zonaras, which argues that they were before excluded from it,) 3dly, the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, in which reſpect ſcandalous ſinners συνδειπνοῦντες feaſting with them are by S. Jude ver. 12. called σπιλάδες ſpots in their feaſts, or agapæ (which being annext to the Lord's ſupper denoted the whole action) i. e. unfit, as blemiſht ſacrifices, to be received there. And the uſe of all theſe means being in the œconomy of the Goſpel deſigned to ſo much advantage to the ſoul, for the caſting Satan out of it, 'the depriving men of the uſe of thoſe means, is properly ſtyled the delivering to Satan, as the Catechiſt, that inſtructed men and made them fit for baptiſme, or entrance into the Church, was wont to be called ἐξορκιστὴς the exorciſt that caſt Satan out. But then 2dly, in the Apoſtles times there was a ſad conſequent of this excommunication, proportionable to the execrations in the Jewiſh Cherem (which, ſay they, ſeldome wanted their effect) viz: corporal power, and poſſeſſion, and inflictions of Satan on thoſe who were delivered up to him, in like manner, as, we read, befell Saul, after his defection from God, when the evil ſpirit came upon him, 1 Sam. 16. 14. For about Chriſt's time, and a little after, 'twas ordinary with the Devil to tyrannize over the bodies of men, laying all kinds of diſeaſes upon them (as appears in the Goſpel) which is called Satan's buffeting, κολαφίζειν 2 Cor. 12. 7. βασανίζειν tormenting, Mat. 8. 6. ποικίλοις νόσοις καὶ βασάνοις συνέχειν taking or holding them with divers diſeaſes and torments, Mat. 4. 24. δῆσαι binding Lu. 11. 16. (the word that is uſed for excommunication) and ſo here the delivering to Satan is εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, to the deſtruction of the fleſh, to the inflicting bodily diſeaſes on him. This Ignatius in his Epiſtle to the Romans calls κόλασις διαβόλου, the puniſhment of the devil, for he wiſhes there, there, that it were on himself, μόνον ἵνα Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιτύχω onely that by that meanes he may come to enjoy Jesus Christ, which cannot be said of the punishments in hell, for those would not be reconcileable with that end, (see Rom.9. note b.) And so as among the Essæni of the Jewes, saith Josephus, πρὸ ἐτῶν ἀξιοχρέοις ἁμαρτήμασιν ἀλόντας ἐκβάλλουσιν ἐκ τῆς πόλεως, ἐπὶ ἐκπεσοῦσι πολλάκις μέγα διαφθορᾷ, those that are found in any considerable sinne they cast out from their congregation, and they that are cast out commonly come to miserable deaths, and as Heliodorus 2 Mac. 3. in his sacrilegious enterprize was scourged by two Angels in the shape of young men, v.26. and hardly came off with life, So the Apostolical excommunication or anathema was attended with diseases and torments on the body, to lay a necessity on them of reforming. And this is the ῥάβδος rod, see note on c.4.b.

παιδεύω Now for the word παιδεύεσθαι delivering, that seems to have an elegant notation in it, for it is a relative to asking or demanding, and implies that truth, which otherwise appeares from scripture, Thus; Satan is our adversary before God (and ἐχθρὸς therefore called שטן ἐχθρὸς enemy, ἀντικείμενος set against us) this he expresses by accusing (to which *Rev.*12.11. referres) or impleading, and ἀντίδικος thence he is called ἀντίδικος an adversary ἐν δίκῃ in court of judicature, 1 *Pet.*5.8. this he doth falsly sometimes, as in the case of Job, c.1.9,11. (in which respect he is called διάβολος a calumniator, by which the Septuagint oft render שטן) but sometimes truly, upon the real commission of some sinne, to which purpose he is said, as an explorator or searcher for faults, to go up and down, to and fro upon the earth, Job 1.7. when he hath any such accusation against any ἀδελφὸς, brother, Christian professor, or pious person, then, as perhaps it was in the case of Peter (see *Lu.*22.31.) he ἐξαιτέομαι is said ἐξαιτέσθαι to require him of God, demands to have him delivered up to him, as to a lictor or executioner, σινιάσαι to sift and shake him terribly;

ζητῶν τινα καταπιεῖν and that perhaps is the meaning of his ζητῶν τινα καταπιεῖν, seeking whom he may devoure, 1 *Pet.*5.8. and if God think fit to answer this request of his, then God is said to deliver up to Satan, and from that course of God's is that discipline of the Apostles transcribed and copied out in the censures of the Church, which therefore are thus exprest.

f. That Satan had (when he was permitted by God for sinne) power to inflict diseases on men's bodies, appeareth by what hath been said note e. and by most of Christ's cures of men possessed with devils, those possessions being generally accompanied with some ordinary disease, discernible by the symptomes there mentioned, the Epilepsie, and the like. And to this purpose 'tis observable what we find in the Hierusalem Targum on *Gen.*2 14. supposed to be said to the serpent by God, Cum filii mulieris præcepta legis deserverint, nec mandata observaverint, tu (i.e. the serpent) firmus eris, & percutient eos in calcaneo eorum, ægritudine afficies, When the children of the woman shall forsake the commandements of the law, thou shalt be strong, and shalt strike them on the heel, and inflict sicknesse upon them.

g. What is the meaning of μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι, whether onely interdicting Ecclesiastical assemblies, or farther excluding from civil commerce, is a matter of some question. In favour of the former of these, we may here observe one thing in the context, that 'tis somewhat which the Apostle had, before these words, written to them about, ἔγραψα ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ &c. I wrote to you in an Epistle, where there is no enforcing reason to conclude that the Apostle referres to some former Epistle of his (not now extant, nor anciently mentioned by any) the words being very capable of this other rendring, that in this Epistle he had so written to them, and so he did, v.2. of this Chap: Just as *Gal.*1.9. [As we have before said, even now again I say] the word [προειρήκαμεν, before said] looking no farther off then to the eight verse immediatly præcedent, where that was said, that ver.9. is repeated by him. As for the Νυνὶ δὲ ἔγραψα but now I have written v.11. which may seem to oppose this to some former Epistle, there is no force in that. For the vuvì now] is not alwaies a note of time, but, as 'tis ordinary among us, of transition, thus. When I wrote to you not to converse with fornicators, I meant not the heathen fornicators, but I wrote to you onely in reference to the Christian professours, guilty of those sinnes. But whether this be so or no, yet 'tis apparent that v.11. which referres undoubtedly to this Epistle, the same phrase is used, μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι not to converse with them, which will therefore make it reasonable to explain this phrase by that which is mention'd, v.13. the ἐξαιρεῖτε ἐκ μέσου, removing the offendor from among them, which is the ordinary phrase for excommunication (see note c.) and the brief of the sentence that had been set down v.3,4,5. I have judged &c. and then there will be no necessity of extending it any farther, then to not joyning with such an one in sacred meetings, excommunicating, delivering up to Satan, and so 2 *Thess.*3.14. μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι, ἵνα ἐντραπῇ, have no fellowship with him, that he may be ashamed,] may referre to these censures of the Church inflicted on the ἀτάκτου, disobedient, or refractary there. But then a second circumstance in the context will be observable, that v.11. where the μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι] is repeated again, there is added to it, τούτῳ μηδὲ συνεσθίειν, nor to eat with such an one. This is indeed more likely to belong to the interdicting all familiarity of civil commerce, and the rather, because the Jewes thought it unlawfull to eat with the Samaritans, Publicans, and sinners (μὴ συγχρῶν), they will have nothing to doe with such, and, Why eateth your Master with such? say they to Christ's disciples) and a special example we have of it, 3 Macc. where speaking of the ἀποστατοῦντας ἐξ αὐτῶν, desertors, apostates from their law by any notorious breach, 'tis said, ἐβδελύσσοντο, καὶ ὡς πολεμίους ἔθνος ἔχοντες, καὶ κοινῆς ἀναστροφῆς καὶ συγχύσεως ἐκείνων, they expressed a detestation of them, judged them as enemies of the nation, and denied them the civility of common commerce and good usage, and the same is called afterward in that place χωρισμὸς a separating from them, ἀποστροφαὶ (though it be corruptly and without sense read καταστροφαὶ) aversation, and expressed by ἀπεχθεῖς ἐφάνησαν, they appeared enemies to them. And 'tis certain that the Jewish נדוי or first degree of excommunication being a separation or remotion ad quatuor passus, not suffering any man to come within four paces of him that was under that censure, was an interdiction of civil familiar converse,

converse, or of eating with him, And for this there is one farther argument from ver.10. For if he had meant onely Church-assemblies, the caution he there interposeth of not extending it to heathens, had been superfluous, since they who never were within their communion, could not be ejected out of it, And so again the reason he gives for their converse with them [for else they must needs goe out of the world] seems to denote a civil commerce, which is here interdicted. It is true indeed that the not-eating with the fornicator may be also applied no farther then to sacred converse (and accordingly the words may be thus read, μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι πίνειν, μηδὲ συνεσθίειν, including what is between, in a parenthesis, not to joyn, nor eat with such a man) for in those they eat together, συνευωχούμενοι, saith S. Jude, v.12. feasting together in their agapæ, the common suppers that accompanied the sacrament, in this Epistle ch.11.20. and when fornicators &c. were received or admitted there, S. Jude calls them σπιλάδες spots in their feasts, unfit to be present there, as blemisht sacrifices to be offered to God. And if there be any more then this meant by the μηδὲ συνεσθίειν not eating with them, it must probably relate to the particular case of the Church of Corinth at that time, as being then torne asunder with schisms c.3.4. & c.11.1,8. in wch case the censures of the Church being neglected (c.11.31. and so here v.2.) the Apostle might think fit to prescribe to private Christians this method of shewing their dislikes, by avoiding all civil commerce or familiarity with notorious offenders, and that the rather, in respect of the scandal of such sinnes, that being not practised by the Gentiles there, but detested by them, v.1. could not be committed by Christians among them, without bringing great reproach on Christianity, And that would not be removed by exclusion from sacred meetings, which could not be visible to the Infidels, and therefore might fitly be provided for by this separation from familiar converse, or society, an expression of a clear detestation of so foule facts. And so 'tis possible the Apostle might designe his exhortation *Rom.*16.17. to mark such as cause divisions &c. among them, and avoid them, and 2 *Thess.*3.14. to note him that obeyes not S. Paul's orders by Epistle, and have no company with him, as a direction not onely for the publick censures in a quiet Church, where they may be seasonably exercised, but also what private Christians were to do for the discountenancing of offenders in case of schisme, and of the either neglect or unefficacionsnesse of the censures of the Church. And to that also may be applied that of Christ, *Mat.*18.17. Let him be to thee an heathen, and a publican, It being in this case reasonable for private Christians to restrain themselves towards those, who resist all fraternal methods of charity, and by outward behaviour to shew a dislike of their contumacy and obduration, especially when an Apostle at a distance shall passe that judgment on any particular man, and the present state of the Church leave no place for expectation of formal censures, the law of Charondas being not unreasonable in this case, Ἀδίκου ἀνδρὸς ἢ γυναικὸς μὴ ὁμιλεῖν μηδένα, ἢ ἀνειδίζεσθαι, ὡς ἴδιον ὄντα, That no man converse with a wicked man or woman, or bring a reproach on himself, as if he were like him. But this is not to be thought necessary, but when it is by the Governour of the Church, as 'twas here by S. Paul, prescribed; not prudent, but when by so doing we may hope to bring offenders to some sense of their faults: And whensoever it is done, it ought onely to be designed to charitable ends, and not to gratifie a man's own pride or wrath, to expresse animosities or revenges on any.

What ἁρπαγὴς signifies here is somewhat uncertain; That which the other sinnes, with which 'tis mention'd, encline it to, is, that it denote violence, or rapes, forcing, or ravishing to uncleanness, the ἅλωσις 2 *Pet.*2.13. preying like vultures on all that come neer them, The literal notation of the word from ἁρπάζω rapio, by which, as by ἁλόω, the Hebrew טרף is rendred; This was the sinne of Sodome, forcing of strangers, and even of the Angels, when they came into the city to destroy it. And this is it which seems to be meant by the earth's being full of violence, *Gen.*6.11. joyned with the corruptnesse of it before God, for which two there joyned together (as 2 Pet. 2.12. ἅλωσις and φθορὰ taking, and corrupting) the word [corrupt] is used alone v.12. which, we know, in the New Testament signifies those pollutions, (see note on 2 Pet. 1.b. and 2.a.) which probably were the sinne of the old world, a consequent of the sons of God seeing, and marrying with the daughters of men, ver.1. (the like as happen'd after on the like occasion, Num. 25.1.) and they are therefore joyned with Sodome in this matter, 2 *Pet.*2.5.6. For to that of uncleanness it is, that this whole Chapter belongs, on occasion of πορνεία unlawfull lusts and incest, at the beginning; And to that of violence or ravishing, or using to unnatural sinnes, ἁρπάζειν and ἅρπαγες ordinarily belongs; Thus in Harmenopulus ἐξάβιβ: ε: τιτ: ζ'. (where τὰ τῶν ἁρπαγῶν εἰς δημόσιον ἀποκομιστῆ), the goods of the ravishers shall be carried and forfeit to the Exchequer,) the word is used in this sense. So in the second book of the Sibylline Oracles (written, I suppose, by some ancient Christian) with [* Ἀισχύνῃ ἐσχληκότες, ἀναισχύντῳ πεθέοντες, those that had put off all shame] are joyned ἁρπακταῖοι, forcers, violators of chastity, and p.216. with λεκτρόκλοποι εἰδωλολάτραι, and οἷς γαμὸς ἐν σφετέροις ἐπὶ μιαιφόνῳ οἴστρῳ (which is in effect all one with πλεονέκται) and εἰδωλολάτραι here, inordinate lusters, and idolaters) there is joyned ἁρπάζοντες, ἀναίδεια θύμων ἔχοντες, violent forcers, and persons of impudent lusts, and σέξεων χυρίως secret loves and adulteries, to which the brimstone, the portion of Sodome should be allotted, θείῳ ἀποβήσῃ ὄδμῃ. And thus, I conceive, it is that ἁρπαγὴ and ἀκρασία, violence and incontinence, are joyned together, Mat. 23.25. and opposed both to καθαρὸν and καθαρίζειν, pure and cleansing, v.26. where S. Luke, c.11.36. in stead of ἀκρασία incontinence, hath πονηρία villany or wickednesse, as that is used here ver.13. and in Genesis ch.6.5. in this sense for abominable lusts.

That εἰδωλολάτραι] here is not to be restrained to the particular sinne of worshipping pictures or images, will be probable by the rest of the sinnes which are joyned with it, for which a Christian professor is to be excommunicated, v 11. It seems rather to referre, either to the joyning in the idol-feasts, of which the Gnostick hareticks were guilty, or else to those filthy practises so frequent and custom[illegible] in their mysteries, as prime rites of the heathen heathen false worships, and taken up in a most vile manner by the Gnosticks also, That the word should thus be used, will appear most reasonable, 1. because, of the words used in the old Testament to signifie an idol; גלול is one, which signifies pollution, or filth, by which any man is contaminated, and which is sometimes rendred βδέλυγμα abomination, and the false God or idol meant sometimes, when βδέλυγμα abomination is used, as *Wisd.*12. 23. referring to those abominable sinnes, which those idol-worships were commonly guilty of, and to the same purpose is it, that the Hebrew שקץ abomination or filthinesse, commonly rendred βδέλυγμα or μίασμα, abomination or pollution, is sometimes εἴδωλον idol also. And so saith Lyra on *Gen.*21. of the word צחק that it signifies idololatrantem and coeuntem or lascivientem, idolatry and any act of uncleanness or lasciviousness. 2dly, Because their heathen worships were so full of these foule sinnes. Thus Wisd. 14. after an enumeration of many other wickednesses in their τελεταὶ and κρύφια μυστήρια, sacrifices and secret mysteries v.23. (that Cereris arcanum, the secrets of Ceres in Horace, secreta Ceres in Seneca, Hercul: Fur: and Cadmæis orgia condita cistis, in OEteus) he concludes with μιασμὸς, ψυχῶν ἀκαλλὴς, γάμων ἀτάξια, μοιχεία καὶ ἀσέλγεια, pollution, inversion of nature, confusion of marriages, adultery, and shameless uncleanness, v.26. and concludes that the worship of nameless idols, or idols not to be named, is the beginning and cause and end of all evil, v.27. So *Jer.*44.19. when they that dwelt in Ægypt justifie themselves to Jeremy, that they did no harm in their sacrifices to the Queen of heaven, because they did it not secretly, without the privity of their husbands, 'tis clear that there were such night sacrifices used by women, and suspected and disliked by their husbands. Thus 1 *Kin.*14.24. after the mention of idols and groves, it followes that there were Sodomites in the land, doing according to the abomination of the heathens which the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel, which withall notes the particularity of the sinne of the Amorites and other nations, for which they were rooted out, set down more fully *Lev.*18. 24,25. 27,28. and an expresse threat from heaven v.29. that Whosoever shall commit any of these abominations shall be cut off from among their people. To which purpose no doubt it was, that the signe of God's covenant with his people, was that of circumcision, σύμβολον ἡδονῶν ἐκλογῆς, a signe of the excision of pleasures, saith Philo, noting the casting off that ἀκαιρία χαυνὸς superfluity of naughtinesse, which had been practised among those nations, and the same is more then intimated in our baptisme, the outward part of which is ἀπόθεσις ῥύπου σαρκὸς, the washing away the filth of the flesh, and signifies the forsaking of all the sinfull lusts thereof. So 1 Kin: 15. 12. the Idols and the Sodomites are mention'd together, and 2 Kin. 23.7. the houses of the Sodomites are cast down. Where there is also mention of the groves for those dark purposes, by which, under the name of Ashteroth, Astarte seems to be designed. So when the Babylonians made Succoth Benoth, that signifies the tents of Venus, in which the Virgins were solemnly prostituted to the honour of that false Goddesse, under the title of Mylitta, and so the prostitution of their daughters for the honour of their Gods, which is mentioned not onely by Herodotus l. 1. and Strabo l. 16. but in the Epistle of Jeremie v.43. where as the δεσμῶν πύλας (from the Hebrew מסורת apertura) hath an unclean notation in it, so the cords there mention'd are the signes of their foule vowes, and obligation to pay their sacrifices before they went. So *Isa.*57. 5. You that inflame your selves with Idols under every green tree, noting that prostitution of men and women in the groves about their Idol-Temples, in honour of their false gods. So 1 Mac. 5. 43. the Temple that was at Carnaim is expresst 2 *Mac.*12.26. to be the Temple of Venus, for so Ἀτεργατείων signifies, אדרעתא or אתרעתא being with the addition but of an א all one with דרעתא or Δερκέτω, and with אדרעה Ashara, or ἡ Συρία, the expression of, and title for Venus, And 2 *Mac.*6.4. when the heathens profaned the Temple of God and transformed it into the Gentile worships, the first thing that is mention'd, is their ἀσωτία and κῶμοι, luxury, and unclean night-meetings (so the scholiast on Theocritus explains κωμάζειν ὅτι ἐν νυκτὶ εἰς τὰς ἑρμαίνας ἀφικόμενοι) μεθυόντων μὲν ἐπαίειν, καὶ ἐν ἱεροῖς ἀσελγείαις γυναιξὶ πλησιάζοντες &c. committing all filthinesse in the precincts of the Temple; And so there is more then a trope or figure in it, that Idolatry in the scriptures of the Old Testament is so oft expressed by fornication, having so much of the reality of that vice in it, Philo calling the πάθη ἢ ἡδονῆς, sensual inordinate pleasures, εἴδωλα idols, and the heathen idols generally leading into those heathen sinnes also. Thus in the Sibylline Oracles speaking of the Romane lustrations, l.3. p.231. we find all the unnatural villanies mention'd, the same that *Rom.*1.26. &c.

Ἄρσενα δ' ἄρσενι πικρὸς, ὑποσταὶ τε παῖδας
Αἰσχεῖς ἐν πόλει &c. And therefore in those Oracles p. 264. speaking of the Christians giving over Idolatry (ἐξ' ἔργ' ἀνθρώπων χυσια &c.) 'tis added

Κ' ἐξὶ θεὸς ἀρσενικὸς παῖδας μίγνυ) ἀνάγνως,
Οὐτέ τι φόνιτας τ' &c. naming all the nations of the heathen world that were guilty of it, and p.279. exhorting against Idolatry,

Φεύγετε λατρείας ἀδίκους, τῷ ζῶντι λάτρευε,
Μοιχείην φεύγοντα, καὶ ἄκριτον ἄρσενος ὕβριν.

Avoid unlawfull worships, and serve the living God, keep from adultery and unnaturall mixtures, and l. 4. p. 287. the true piety is set in opposition, as to the Idolworship, so to ἀλλοδαπὴς κοίτης πάθος ἀσχετὸς, and ἄρσενος ὕβρεις ἀπηχθὲς τε συγρύ τε, all unlawfull and abominable lusts, and p. 216. the heathens title is--λατρείλοποι εἰδωλολάτραι, Idolaters that use stolen venery, and so p.296. and 315.

Μοιχείαι πικραὶ θεοῦ, καὶ παίδων μίξεις ἄθεσμοι, all to the same purpose, concerning the Romanes practise. And infinitely more in other Authors, of the Eleusinia sacra, Cybele's mysteries, Venus's and Flora's feasts among the Graecians. By this may appear the notion of εἰδωλολάτρης idolater and Idolatry in this place for all those foule sinnes so practised by the worshippers of false Gods, and from them taken up and improved by the Gnosticks. So Col. 3. 5. fornication, uncleanesse, πάθος, evill concupiscence and inordinate desire, ἥτις ἐστὶν εἰδωλολατρεία, which is Idolatry, where Saint Cyprian, Ep: 51. will have ἥτις referre to all the foregoing ſins, for which the wrath of God comes &c: So Eph. 5. 5. Every fornicator, and unclean perſon, and πλεονέκτης inordinate luſter, who is an idolater. To this may be referr'd that of Maimonides, More Nebochi l. 3. c. 38. ſpeaking of the unnaturall ſins of the Gentiles, and inſtancing in one of them, Propter hoc, ſaith he, prohibitæ ſunt commixtiones, ſcilicet inciſio arboris in aliam ſpeciem, ut elongemur à cauſis Idololatriæ & fornicationum, making fornication, in that notion of ſins againſt nature, to be all one with idolatry, or that which idolaters freely practiſed. This may be alſo the notation of Idolaters, when the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 10. 6. Be not ye idolaters, as were ſome of them, as it is written, they ſate down to eat and drinke, and roſe to play, for the Greek παίζειν there rendred to play, may referre in that place to thoſe ſins of uncleanneſſe, ſee note on that place. But no queſtion, this is the meaning of ἀξίωτοι εἰδωλολατρείας abominable, nefarious idolatries 1 Pet. 4. 3. as appeares by the ἀσελγείαις juſt before, i. e. the τὰ παρὰ φύσιν unnaturall ſins of uncleanneſſe, in Phavorinus, and the ἀνάχυσις ἀσωτίας v. 4. confuſion of ſexes, and all kindes of villany, not to be named, as thoſe words denote, ſee note on that place. And ſo moſt manifeſtly in this Epiſtle c. 6. 9. where fornicators, idolaters, adulterers, effeminate, abuſers of themſelves with mankinde, &c. are joyned together in the ſame matter. And Gal. 5. 20. where among the workes of the fleſh are in the front, adultery, fornication, uncleanneſſe, laſciviouſneſſe, idolatry, &c. all clearly of a making, if this notion of idolatry be accepted. And Rev. 21. 8. where among the ſeverall, to which fire and brimſtone belong, (the portion of Sodome) we have ἐβδελυγμένοι abominable (in the ſenſe that c. 17. 4. and 7. βδελύγματα and ἀκαθαρσίας τῆς πορνείας abominations and uncleanneſſe of fornication, are put together) fornicators, idolaters &c. and c. 22. 15. fornicators, idolaters &c. And this ſure was it that Saint John referr'd to in his firſt Epiſtle c. 5. 21. when he perſwades his little children, his new converts, to keep themſelves from idols, i. e. from thoſe Gnoſtick practiſes, which had overrun all Aſia, as appeares by the Epiſtles to the Churches there, Rev. 2. and 3. Thus in Polycarpe's Epiſtle, He that abſtaines not from unnatural luſts (under the name of πλεονεξία, which is there miſtranſlated covetouſneſſe, ſee note on Rom. 1. h.) ab Idololatria coinquinabitur, & tanquam inter Gentes judicabitur, ſhall be infected by Idolatry, and judged as among the Gentiles. And ſo when Bede on Mat. 5. 32. ſaith of fornication, that by that word is not onely underſtood adultery, but omnis concupiſcentia vel avaritia (for πλεονεξία again) vel Idololatria, every concupiſcence, inordinate luſt or idolatry. And all theſe uſes of the word Idolatry in the New Teſtament, diſtinctly referring to the Gnoſticks practiſes, who, as they were content to be preſent at the idol-ſacrifices, making it an indifferent thing (rather then be perſecuted by the heathens) ſo they practiſed all theſe heathen villanies in the highſt manner imaginable. I ſhall adde but one teſtimony more to this purpoſe, that of the Illiberitane Councell, Can. 2. Flamines, qui, poſt fidem lavacri & regenerationis, ſacrificaverunt, eo quòd geminaverint ſcelera, accedente homicidio, vel triplicaverint facinus coherente mœchiâ, placuit &c. The prieſts that, after the receiving the faith, and being baptized, have ſacrificed, in reſpect that they have doubled their ſins by the acceſſion of homicide (the bloodſhed in the gladiators prizes, which were ordinarily joyned with their heathen ſacrifices) or trebled them by the adherence of adultery or ſinnes of uncleanneſſe, 'tis decreed &c. where, it ſeemes, theſe followers of the Gnoſticks, that, after the receiving of the Chriſtian faith, ſacrificed as heathen prieſts, undertook the office of their Flamens, lay under a treble-guilt, worſhip of falſe God's, bloodſhed, and uncleanneſſe alſo.

That λοίδορος ſignifies a railer or opprobrious, contumelious ſpeaker, there is no doubt; but that it ſignifies reproachfull actions, as well as words, there is as little queſtion, and therefore Heſychius that renders it ἐγκωμιαστῶν in reference to words, renders it ὑβριστὴς a contumelious perſon, it may be, in reſpect of actions alſo: And then it may be here another notation of the heathen Gnoſticks ſinnes of uncleanneſſe, which in all languages have beene civilly expreſt by words that note contumely or reproach. So in the Sibylline Oracles, Ἄφρονες ὕβρεις ἀνθρώπων τε ψογερή τε, the contumelious uſing of mankinde, abominable and baſe. So when the Apoſtle calls them ἄτιμα πάθη, infamous, diſhonourable. So to abuſe or defame, in Engliſh, is ordinarily taken for theſe ſins of uncleanneſſe committed on any, and in the Hebrew dialect, to mock (and מלז and התמלז, ſee note on 1 Cor. 10. b.) as of Joſeph, He hath brought in an Hebrew to mock us, Gen. 39. 14. and ſo ſaith Lyra of צחק to mock (mention'd note h.) that it notes lædentem & coeuntem, mocking and defiling. And thus ſure it may ſignifie in this place, and ſo all that are mention'd here will be reducible to the ſame head, of ſins of uncleanneſſe or incontinence, ſave only that of drunkenneſſe, which, as another heathen rite, and ſenſuall ſin, is fitly joyned with them. But if this be not it, it may then according to the ordinary uſe of the word for reproachfull ſpeeches, refer to the uncharitableneſſe of the Gnoſticks in accuſing the Chriſtians, and ſo ſtirring up perſecutions againſt them.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. VI.

1. When there is any matter of controverſie betwixt you, about your worldly goods, I heare that you implead one another, (ſee Rom: 3. note b.) before the heathen tribunals, and uſe not that method preſcribed by Chriſt to Chriſtians Mat: 18. 15. How dareth any Chriſtian doe thus?

1. DAre any of you, having * a matter againſt another, goe to Law before the unjuſt, and not before the Saints?] * an action, πρᾶγμα

2. You cannot but know, that in the great final judgement of all the world, the Saints of God ſhall bear God company in judging the wicked: and if Chriſtians ſhall then by God be vouchſafed that honour, to have any thing to doe in matters of ſo much higher importance

2. Doe ye not know that the Saints ſhall judge the world? and if the world ſhall be judged by you, are ye unworthy † to judge the ſmalleſt matters?] † of the ſmalleſt judicatures, κριτηρίων ἐλαχίστων pertance, is there any reaſon they ſhould be deemed unworthy to be intruſted with the judging of worldly differences, which are much inferior to thoſe of adjudging of men's eternall being?

* and not then, unleſs ye

3. Know ye not that we ſhall judge angels? * how much more things that pertain to this life?] 3 Tis certain that God's children, when crowned by him, ſhall pronounce ſentence againſt the evill ſpirits; and ſhall they not be thought fit to decide a controverſie about an ordinary treſpaſſe among men?

† If therefore ye have any ſecular controverſies, Βιωτικα μεν ουν κριτηρια εαν

* ſet thoſe to decide them that are ſet at nought, τους εξουθενημενους τουτους καθιζετε

† Is there ſo never a wiſe man, ουτως ουκ ενι ουδεις ο

4. † If then yee have judgement of things pertaining to this life,* ſet them to judge, who are leaſt eſteemed in the Church.] 4. If therefore there fall out betwixt you any matters of controverſie concerning the common matters of life, and if ye doe deſpiſe the Governours of your Churches (which, ſince theſe diſſenſions are come in, are quite out of eſteem among you) ſo farre, that yee doe not think fit to ſtand to their ſentences or deciſions, yet ſure ye have all reaſon to chooſe to be judged by the ſimpleſt and meaneſt Chriſtians, and referre it to be arbitrated by ſuch privately, rather then carry your controverſie before the Gentile Courts.

5. I ſpeak this to your ſhame; † Is it ſo, that there is not a wiſe man amongſt you? no not one that ſhall be able to judge between his brethren?] 5. My mentioning the meaneſt and moſt deſpicable among you, is to make you aſhamed of your unreaſonableneſſe in ſuppoſing (as by going to heathen courts, ye muſt be interpreted to doe) that there is no one Chriſtian fit for this employment, i. e. that there is not one man of them that hath underſtanding enough to arbitrate an ordinary buſineſſe between you.

6. But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbeleivers.] 6. But one Chriſtian impleads his fellow Chriſtian, and this before Gentiles.

* a defect † that, ὅτι * Why are ye not rather defrauded? διατι μαλλον αδικεισθε

7. Now therefore, there is utterly * a fault among you, † becauſe ye goe to law one with another: Why doe ye not take wrong? * why do ye not rather ſuffer your ſelves to be defrauded?] 7. It is not ſo well, that you goe to law at all, it were the part of a more excellent magnanimous Chriſtian ſpirit, to be content to loſe ſomewhat that were his own, to bear ſome injuries, rather then to goe to law upon every treſpaſſe. 2.

8. Nay, you doe wrong, and defraud, and that your brethren.] 8. But ſome of you are ſo farre from this excellent Chriſtian temper, that you are ready to injure others, even your fellow Chriſtians, and, ſo ye may gain to your ſelves, care not how you deprive others.

9. Know ye not that the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the kingdom of God? be not deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abuſers of themſelves with mankinde,] 9. This is abſolutely unconſiſtent with the Chriſtians duty or reward; Never doe you flatter your ſelves with a beleife of the contrary, nor permit the falſe teachers that are crept in among you, to give you any hope of it; And as for matters of injuſtice, ſo for all your other Gnoſtick practiſes of uncleanneſſe (ſee notes on c. 5. 2. b. i.) and unnaturall luſt.

* contumellious perſons, ſee note on c. 5. k.

10. Nor theeves, nor † covetous, nor drunkards, nor * revilers, nor † extortioners ſhall inherit the kingdome of God.] 10. Neither they that are guilty of them, nor of any other injuſtice, ſhall, without reformation, ever be capable of inheriting the crown which is by Chriſt promiſed to Chriſtians.

† the violent, ſee note, on c. 5. h.

* ye have been waſhed, ἀπελουσασθε

11. And ſuch were ſome of you: but * ye are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified, but ye are juſtified † in the name of our Lord Jeſus, and by the ſpirit of our God.] 11. And ſuch ſins as theſe were ordinary among you in time of your heathen ſtate, but now you have given up your names to Chriſtianity, which denounceth judgment againſt all theſe; your baptiſm is a renouncing of them all, your ſanctification by the Spirit directly contrary to it, your juſtification by what Chriſt hath ſuffered and done for you (ſee note on Mat: 7. b.) utterly incompatible with ſuch impurities and injuſtices, ſpoken of either in the laſt or this chapter.

† through it * for me, μοι

12. All things are lawfull * unto me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawfull for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.] 12. And whereas your teachers, to allure you to ſenſuall practiſes, tell you firſt that all meat is freely to be eaten, and ſo ſooth you up in luxury, and then proceed and perſwade you that uſe of venery is as neceſſary for your bodies, and ſo as lawfull, as eating of meat is, I ſhall tell you firſt, that ſuppoſing them lawfull, yet it will beſit a Chriſtian to abſtain from many things that are not utterly unlawfull, and ſecondly, that if indifferent things begin to get a dominion over any, if men, upon conceit that meats are lawfull, come to be enſlaved to their bellies (as of the Gnoſticks this affirmed, that they ſerve their bellies, and that they are lovers of pleaſures, more then of God) this is then abſolutely unlawfull.

† take away, καταργησει

* But the, δε

13. Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats; but God ſhall † deſtroy both it and them. * Now the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body.] 13. Tis true that meats are by God and nature appointed for the uſe of men, and that the body of man here in this life hath abſolute neceſſity of them: And yet to take off our hearts from them, we may alſo conſider that in the next life, which is a ſpirituall life, this eating and deſiring of meat ſhall be taken away, and therefore even here we ſhould keep the fleſh in ſuch a ſubordination to the ſpirit, that we may be able to deny our ſelves even lawfull pleaſures ſometimes, eſpecially when any occaſion makes it more expedient, v. 12. But then for fornication (whatſoever your former heathen principles, or preſent falſe teachers, the Gnoſticks, teach you) that is no ſuch lawfull or indifferent thing, your bodies are to be conſecrated to God either in lawfull wedlock, or in chaſte ſingle life, and by being kept pure here, muſt be made capable of riſing to everlaſting life, with Chriſt hereafter. v. 14.

14. And God hath both raiſed up the Lord, and will alſo raiſe up us by his own power.] 14. And then God, that raiſed up Chriſt's pure ſinleſſe body out of the grave, and hath made it a ſpirituall body, ſhall alſo doe the ſame for us, though we lye down in the grave alſo.

15. Know yee not that your bodies are the membess of Chriſt? ſhall I then take the members of Chriſt, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid.] 15. And this one conſideration may have force on you.

Your bodies expect to riſe with Chriſt, as members with the head, ye muſt not then in any reaſon pollute a member of Chriſt, a devoted conſecrated perſon, by ſuch unclean embraces.

16. That which was ſaid at the inſtitution of marriage in paradiſe, that the man and the wife become one body, concludes, that the fornicator makes himſelfe one body with a whore.

16. What, know ye not that he which † is joyned to an harlot, is one body? for * two (ſaith he) ſhall be one fleſh.]

† cleaveth
* they two, ut ſupra

17. As on the other ſide he that keeps cloſe to Chriſt's commandements, and ſo cleaves to him, Deut: 10. 20. hath a ſpirituall union with him, minds the ſame things that he minds, and ſo is very farre from theſe carnall baſe joyes, in which all the Gnoſticks religion conſiſts.

17. But he that * is joyned unto the Lord, is one ſpirit.]

† cleaveth, v. 16.

18. Be ſure therefore that ye keep your ſelves farre removed from that ſinne; Moſt other ſins are committed againſt God, or the neighbour, but ſinnes of uncleanneſſe are againſt one's ſelfe, a defiling of his fleſh, a polluting of that which by chaſtity and ſingle life is ſet apart to be a temple of God, a place of ſanctity and purity. v. 19.

18. Flee fornication. Every ſin that a man doth, is without the body: but he that committeth fornication ſinneth againſt his own body.]

19. Your bodies are, by your being Chriſtians, conſecrated to the ſervice of his Spirit, (and the Governours of the Church, of which ſort the inceſtuous perſon is thought to be, (ſee c. 5. 2.) ſet apart in all purity to diſcharge that function, to which they are conſecrated by receiving the holy Ghoſt.) This benefit of the Spirit ye have received from God, and it is an engagement to you to think your own bodies are not now at your own diſpoſall, to uſe them as you pleaſe (as in your ſtate of Gentiliſme, or without that engagement ye might be tempted to imagine.)

19. What, know ye not that your body is the Temple of the Holy Ghoſt which is * in you, which ye have † of God, and ye are not your own?]

* among you, ἐν ὑμῖν
† from, ἀπὸ

20. For God hath paid dear for the purchaſe of you, hath given his ſonne out of his boſome, and his very Spirit, to this purpoſe, to purchaſe unto himſelfe a peculiar people, zealous of good works, by this price making purchaſe of our bodies, as well as our ſoules, and ſo engaging us to ſerve and glorifie him in both, and not leaving either of them at liberty for us to diſpoſe of, as wee pleaſe.

20. For ye are bought with a price, therefore glorifie God in your body, and in your ſpirit, which are God's.]

Notes on Chap. VI.

a. Ηττημα

The word ἥττημα is uſed Rom. 11. 12. and is oppoſed to πλήρωμα fulneſſe, noting there the great paucity of the Jewiſh converts to Chriſtianity. Accordingly, though it be here applyed to another matter, yet in the ſame notion it is a going leſſe, or an inferiour degree, which, in reſpect of that, which is to be expected of the higher proficients in Chriſtianity, is a defect or failing, a low pitch for any Chriſtian, but not ſuch as can abſolutely and univerſally be counted a ſin, as not being againſt any precept. Contending or going to law for light inconſiderable matters, is forbidden by Chriſt, Mat. 5. 40. but not abſolutely, all contending, for the recovering or defending one's own, when the matter is of weight or importance. Onely they that have gotten a ſuperiority and contempt of the world, they will goe higher then that ſtrict precept, and rather endure conſiderable loſſes, then engage themſelves in ſuch diſquiets of minde and turmoiles, as ſuch contentions uſe to bring with them: and to this is to be applyed that which here followes in this place, why doe ye not rather ſuffer injury and defraudation? i. e. it is more Chriſtian and excellent to doe ſo: And in this reſpect, or comparatively to this higher vertue the going to law at all, though it be not a ſin, ἁμάρτημα or παράπτωμα, yet it is ἥττημα a diminution, a leſſe degree of Chriſtian perfection; and that is all that is meant in this place. As for the word ὅλως although that be left out in the King's MS. which reads ἥττημα ὑμῖν ἐστὶ it is a diminution for you, yet it may bee well retained, and note, that this defect was univerſall among them. (See note on c. 5. a.)

CHAP. VII.

Paraphraſe.

1. Now in anſwer to that particular in your letter, which (on occaſion of the Gnoſtick doctrine of marriage being from the devill &c.) ſeems with ſome reaſon to preferre ſingle life before marriage, I thus far acknowledge, that, for them that can live chaſte and pure without marrying, it is better or more commendable that they doe ſo.

1. NOw concerning the things whereof yee wrote unto me, It is good for a man not to touch a woman.]

2. But for the avoiding of all kindes of uncleanneſſe, or pollution, it is generally moſt ſafe and fit, that men and women ſhould betake themſelves to the conjugall ſtate.

2 † Nevertheleſſe, to avoid fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.]

† But for fornications, διὰ δὲ τὰς πορνείας

a. 3. All acts of conjugall love,

3. Let the husband render unto the wife * [a] [due benevolence,] and likewiſe alſo the wife unto the husband.

4. The wife hath not power of her own body, but the husband; and likewiſe alſo the husband hath not power of his own body, but the wife.

* the kindneſſe which is due

5. By mutuall conſent for ſome time, b. particularly, that yee may have a vacancy for duties of devotion, faſting &c. wherein it was uſual to abſtain from thoſe things, which are lawfully enjoyed at other times (ſee note on Mat. 6. b.) which being paſt, ye may then take care to prevent thoſe dangers, that may attend long abſtinencies, for want of ſtrength to reſiſt thoſe temptations that Satan may take advantage to preſent to you, or caſt in your way.

5. Defraud you not one the other, except it be [† with conſent for a time, that yee may * give your ſelves to faſting and prayer, and come together again, that Satan tempt you not † [b] for your incontinency.]

† by compact, ἐκ συμφώνου
* be at leaſure for, σχολάσητε τῇ
† by reaſon of your not being able to contain

6. But

† by way of advise, not by way of precept.

6. But I ſpeak this † by *permiſſion, and not of commandment.]

6. What I thus ſay, c. v.2,3,4,5. I ſay onely by way of counſel, what appears to me to be beſt for men, generally ſpeaking, all being not able to contain, but herein I am farre from laying any precept on any to marry.

7. For I would that all men were even as I my ſelf: but every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that.]

7. For I would rather deſire or adviſe all men to continue unmarried as I doe, but that will not, I ſuppoſe, be beſt for every one, becauſe every one is not fitly qualified with the gift of continence to undertake that more honourable pitch, and ſuch a man may have ſome other ſpeciall excellence, whereby to glorifie God.

8. I ſay therefore to the unmarried and widows, It is good for them if they abide even as I.]

8. It is more worthy their deſigne and endevour, either to live unmarried, or when the wife is dead, to abſtain from ſecond marriages, for which ye have me for your example.

* have not power over themſelves, ſee note b. † to be on fire πυροῦσθαι

9. But if they * cannot contain, let them marry, for it is better to marry then † to burn.]

9. But if they have not that experience of their own ſtrength and ability to abſtain, and preſerve chaſtity, which may encourage them to this, let them marry in God's name, It is infinitely better to doe ſo, and preſerve conjugall chaſtity, then, by rejecting the uſe of that remedy to be enflamed with burning vehement deſires, perhaps to break out into unnaturall practiſes (ſee Rom.1.27. Jude 11.)

* I give warning, παραγγέλλω † be ſeparated, χωρισθῆναι * be ſeparated χωρισθῇ

10. And unto the married * I command, yet not I, but the Lord, let not the wife † depart from her husband:]

10. But to them that are married, 'tis not my caution or commandement, but Chriſt's, that the woman be not ſeparated from her husband.

11. But and if ſhe * depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife.]

11. Or, if upon juſt cauſe, i.e. in caſe of fornication, ſhe be put away from her husband, let her either remain ſingle, or uſe means to gain the pardon and affection of her husband again; and for the husband, let not him in any caſe, but that wherein Chriſt allowes it, the caſe of fornication, put away his wife.

† For the reſt, τὰ λοιπὰ

12. † But to the reſt ſpeak I, not the Lord. If any brother hath a wife that beleiveth not, and ſhe be pleaſed to dwell with him, let him not put her away.]

12. But in anſwer to the other parts of your letter, ver. 1. 6, 8,10. or, For other things I give mine own judgment, not any precept of Chriſt's. 'Tis certain, and by the precept of Chriſt (which commands, not to put away a wife, but for cauſe of fornication) to be reſolved neceſſary, that if any Chriſtian husband have an heathen wife, and ſhe have a mind to live with him, he ſhould not put her away, unbeleif being no ſufficient cauſe of divorce.

13. And the woman which hath an husband that beleiveth not, and if he be pleaſed to dwell with her, let her not leave him.]

13. And ſo in like manner for the Chriſtian wife, that is married to an Infidel, if he be willing to live with her, let her by no means ſeparate from him.

* hath been ſanctified, ἡγίασται † hath been ſanctified

14. For the unbeleiving husband * is ſanctified by the wife, and the unbeleiving wife † is ſanctified by the husband, elſe were your children [d] unclean, but now are they holy.]

14. And beſide the prohibition of Chriſt, which obliges to this, other advantages there are, worth conſidering; For it ſometimes hath come to paſſe, and there is great reaſon to hope it, that the heathen husband may be converted by the Chriſtian wife living with him, and ſo the wife by the husband: and this one conſideration is the reaſon why the young children of Chriſtians are admitted to baptiſme before they come to knowledge, becauſe by their living in the family with Chriſtian parents, theſe children may be brought up in the faith, and kept from heathen pollutions (and the Church requiring and receiving promiſe from the parents, doth conſequently preſume they will) and by the ſame reaſon it is that the children of the heathen are not ſo admitted. d.

* inſlaved, δεδούλωται

15. But if the unbeleiving depart, let him depart. A brother or a ſiſter is not † under bondage in ſuch caſes: but God hath called us to peace.]

15. But now the thing not ſtated or medled with by Chriſt, and therefore now promiſed to be defined by me ver.12. is this, that in caſe the infidel will not live with the beleiver unleſſe ſhe will forſake her religion, ſhe is not then ſo enſlaved or ſubjected ſo farre, that ſhe may doe acts prejudicial to her religion, and to the betraying thereof, for that end, that ſhe may continue with her husband, but ſhe remains blameleſſe, if ſhe remain ſeparate from him, upon ſuch his deſertion. But yet above all things, that which is moſt to be obſerved is, that the beleiving party doe the utmoſt that is poſſible to keep peace and agreement with the other, not to fall out at all, or, if they doe, to repaire the breach and be reconciled again; nay farther, not to marry again, as long as there remains any hope of returning or reconciliation.

† O husband, ἄνερ

16. For what knoweſt thou, O wife, whether thou ſhalt ſave thy husband? or how knoweſt thou, * O man, whether thou ſhalt ſave thy wife?]

16. For 'tis poſſible that the Chriſtian wife may uſe ſome means to work upon the infidel husband, or the Chriſtian husband on the wife, ſo as to bring him or her to repentance and the faith of Chriſt, and in intuition and hope of this any difficulties would be undergone, but when this poſſibility ceaſeth, as in caſe that the heathen party deſert, or will not live with the Chriſtian unleſſe he or ſhe deſert the faith of Chriſt, then 'tis evident that this hope ceaſeth, and in this caſe the Chriſtian party is free from thoſe obſervances, v.15.

* Only εἰ μὴ

17. † But as God hath diſtributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, ſo let him walk, and ſo ordain I in all Churches.]

17. Onely according to the lot that any man hath befaln him, if it be with an infidel wife or the like, let him be content with it, and doe as much good in it, as he can, and not think himſelf priviledged by his being a Chriſtian to throw it off; And this every where is my doctrine, and I deſire it be univerſally reſolved on in all Chriſtian Churches.

† uſe means to become

18. Is any man called being circumciſed? let him not * become uncircumciſed: is any man called in uncircumciſion? let him not be circumciſed.]

18. If one which hath been circumciſed be converted to Chriſtianity, let him contentedly continue in it, let him never trouble himſelf to get off that mark from his fleſh (as ſome did:) as on the other ſide, he that is not circumciſed, when he is converted, need not receive circumciſion (as ſome required of them, Act.15.1.) e.

19. For ſuch outward things as theſe on either part, are no part of Chriſtianity, but the obſervation of the precepts of Chriſt is all in all, ſee Gal. 5. 6. and 6. 15.

19. Circumciſion is nothing, and uncircumciſion is nothing, but the keeping of the commandements of God.]

20. Let every man abide in the ſame calling, wherein he was called.

20, 21. In what condition of life ſoever a man is, when he is converted to Chriſtianity, let him contentedly continue in it, and not think that Chriſtian religion frees a man from any obligation, that lay upon him before, for that is to make Chriſtian liberty a pretenſe for covetouſneſſe, or luſts, or ſecular advantages (ſee 1 Tim. 6. 5.) if either the being a Chriſtian might manumit a ſervant, or free an husband or wife from former obligations. He therefore that being a bond-man is converted to Chriſtianity, muſt not think it any diſparagement to his Chriſtianity, that he continues a ſervant ſtill, nor be ſollicitous of changing his condition, Yet this is not ſo to be underſtood, but that if, by any fair regular means, he can obtain his freedome, he may then make uſe of them, and preferre liberty before ſervitude, for ſo he might have done, if he had never been Chriſtian.

21. Art thou called being a ſervant? * care not for it: † but if thou mayeſt be made free, uſe it rather.]

* take no care, μὴ σοι μελέτω

† but yet alſo if, ἀλλ' εἰ καί

22. For he that being in the condition of a ſervant is converted to Chriſtianity, doth by his converſion become a freeman in reſpect of Chriſt, not that he ceaſeth to be a ſervant to his former maſter, or reaps any ſecular advantage thereby, but his advantages are ſpiritual, to wit, that by being a Chriſtian he is now delivered from many ſervitudes, that of ſinne &c. that lie upon all others, and to live in Chriſt's family, as one of his free men, though in reſpect of the world, he continue as a ſervant; and ſo on the other ſide, he that is a freeman and turns Chriſtian, becomes thereby a ſervant of Chriſt, undertaking obedience to his commands, though he loſe not his liberty in the world by that means. (By which 'tis clear that Chriſt meddles not with the ſecular government of the world, nor changes any man's outward condition by his becoming Chriſtian.)

22. * For he that is called in the Lord, being a ſervant, is the Lord's freeman: likewiſe alſo he that is called being free, is Chriſt's ſervant.]

* For the ſervant which is called in the Lord, Ὁ γὰρ ἐν κυρίῳ κληθεὶς δοῦλος

23. Ye that are Chriſtians, and not formerly ſervants to heathens, doe not voluntarily put your ſelves into that condition, but preferre liberty rather, ver. 21.

23. Ye are bought with a price, † be not ye the ſervants of men.]

† be not ye made μὴ γίνεσθε

24. And ſo ſtill, as he was, when he was converted, ſo let him ſtill abide, let not his being a Chriſtian move him out of his ſtate, or make him leſſe, but rather more contented with it.

24. Brethren, let every man wherein he is called, therein abide with God.]

25. For your other queſtion concerning virgins marrying at ſuch a time as this, or of thoſe that are betrothed, whether they ſhould be bound to conſummate their marriage, or no, I muſt ſay again, that I have no command of Chriſt to build my anſwer upon, yet I ſhall again give you my opinion in it, as an honeſt faithfull man with all uprightneſſe.

25. Now concerning virgins, I have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my * judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithfull.]

* opinion γνώμην

26. Firſt then my opinion is, that 'tis beſt in reſpect of the diſtreſſes that are daily to be looked for on Chriſtians, I ſay that 'tis beſt for men and women (ſuppoſing them not contracted) to continue unmarried.

26. † I ſuppoſe therefore that this is good for a man ſo to be.]

† I think this then to be good, becauſe of the neceſſity approaching, to wit good, Νομίζω οὖν τοῦτο καλὸν ὑπάρχειν διὰ τὴν ἐνεστῶσαν ἀνάγκην, ὅτι καλόν, ſee note on Mat. 7. d.

27. But if thou art engaged or betrothed to a woman, this is no excuſe for thee to ſeek to get looſe again (for that cannot be done ſo as to be free to marry another, as long as ſhe lives) All that I ſay is, that it is not now the prudenteſt way to think of marrying, if thou art not already engaged.

27. Art thou bound to a * wife? ſeek not to be looſed: art thou † looſed from a wife? ſeek not a wife.]

* woman γυναικὶ

† free fro a woman λέλυσαι ἀπὸ γυναικός

28. Yet not ſo, that if thou doſt, 'tis a ſin to marry, or that the virgin that now marries commits any ſinne, Onely (in ſuch times as theſe) the married ſtate is likely to be fulleſt of trouble, and therefore my kindneſſe to you makes me perſwade you not to marry.

28. But and if thou marry, thou haſt not ſinned: and if a virgin marry, ſhe hath not ſinned: nevertheleſſe ſuch ſhall have trouble in the fleſh: but I ſpare you.]

* that the time is now ſhort, or fro henceforth ſhort, that ὁ καιρὸς συνεσταλμένος ἐστὶν τὸ λοιπὸν ἵνα

29. But by the way let me tell you, that within a ſhort time now 'twill come to paſſe, that they that have wives, ſhall be as they that have none, all in great and equall dangers;

29. But this I ſay, brethren, * the time is ſhort; it remaineth that both they that have wives, be as † though they had none;]

† they that have none, μὴ ἔχοντες

30, 31. And they that weep for the loſſe of husband or wife, as thoſe that have loſt neither, and thoſe that rejoice for being newly married, as thoſe that are not married at all, and rich men and purchaſers, as thoſe that keep nothing at all for themſelves, thoſe that deal in the world, as thoſe that are wholly taken off from it, for as a ſcene which is turned and ſhewes a new face, ſo doth now the faſhion of this world begin to appear, the times are turning into very troubleſome.

30. And they that weep, as * though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as † though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as * though they poſſeſſed not:

* thoſe that doe not weep, ſee note on Rom. 12. b.

† thoſe that rejoice not, μὴ χαίροντες

* thoſe that poſſeſſe not, μὴ κατέχοντες

31. And they that uſe this world, as † not abuſing it, for the faſhion of this world paſſeth away.]

† thoſe that uſe it not, μὴ καταχρώμενοι to be without care, or ſollicitude, ἀμερίμνους εἶναι

32. All the advantage therefore I with you, is, to be as uncompounded as may be, that you may have the leſſe perplexity before-hand, and be able to attend the ſervice of God, more then you would be, if you were married. He that is unmarried hath but one obligation of care, how he may ſerve God moſt acceptably.

32. But I would have you * without carefulneſſe; he that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may pleaſe the Lord.]

* thoſe that poſſeſſe not, μὴ κατέχοντας

33. But the married man hath another obligation of care lying on him, viz: the pleaſing of his wife, and by this means he is divided and diſtracted.

33. But he that is married careth for the things of the world, how he may pleaſe his wife.†]

† and is diſtracted

34. There

† the unmarried woman and the virgin takes care for

34. [f] There is difference alſo between a wife and a virgin: † the unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that ſhe may be holy both in body and ſpirit: but ſhe that is marryed careth for the things of the world, how ſhe may pleaſe her husband.]

34. The widow and virgin being both unmarryed, have no diverſion, nothing elſe to doe but to ſerve God, and to take care to render themſelves acceptable to him, whereas domeſticall affairs are part of the womans care, and it is part of her calling to be very carefull to pleaſe her husband. f.

*lay a ſnare in your way, βροχον ὑμιν επιβαλω † that you may decently waite

35. And this I ſpeak for your own profit, not that I may * caſt a ſnare upon you, but † for that which is comely, and that § you may attend upon the Lord without diſtraction.]

35. But all this while I ſpeak onely of that which is expedient for you, in reſpect of worldly convenience, not as if marriage were in any kinde unlawfull, but that if you can contain from marriage, and if no ſuch unfitneſſe be in it, as is mention'd v. 36. you may have the advantage of the leſſe diſtractions in attending the ſervice of God. §.

* be above age, and that this muſt be, let him do that which he likes, ὃ θελει ποιειτω (the King's MS. readeth) ὃ θελει ποιειτω, (not ἁμαρτανει) ὃ γαμιζει, ὁ δικαιως ποιει ὃ θελει ποιειτω † hath ſtood ἑστηκεν * determined this to keep κεκρικεν τηρειν † ſo that both he that marries doth well, and he that marries not, doth better. ὥστε καὶ ὁ γαμιζων καλως ποιει, καὶ ὁ μὴ γαμιζων

36. But if any man think, that he behaveth himſelfe uncomely toward his virgin, if ſhe * paſſe the flower of her age, and need ſo require, let him doe what he will, he ſinneth not; let them marry.]

36. As for the laſt part of your queſtion, that of being betrothed, that, I confeſſe, is a circumſtance which will much alter the caſe; For in caſe a man be betrothed but not married (ſee note on Matt. 1. f.) to a virgin, and ſhe begin to grow in yeares, ſo that if (in reſpect of the preſent condition of the times approaching) marriage be deferr'd, 'tis neceſſary that ſhe muſt paſſe her prime, In this caſe I lay no reſtraint upon him, ſo much as in prudence, let him doe what he likes beſt, let them marry.

37. Nevertheleſſe he that † ſtandeth ſtedfaſt in his heart, having no neceſſity, but hath power over his own will, and hath * ſo decreed in his heart, that hee will keep his virgin, doth well.]

37. But hee that hath made a firm reſolution to ſtay a while, and finds himſelf able to doe ſo, and neither from any neceſſity ariſing from himſelf, nor from the condition of the virgin to whom he is betrothed, is any way obliged to preſent marriage, but hath free power in all reſpects to doe what he will, and hereupon judges it fit and determins to keep his virgin, i. e. not yet to marry her for a time, but at laſt in a better ſeaſon to doe ſo, this is a very commendable reſolution.

38. † So then he that giveth her in marriage doth well: but he that giveth her not in marriage doth better.]

38. So that the concluſion is, that he that marries, even at this time, doth that which is abſolutely lawfull, and in the caſe mention'd v. 36. expedient alſo: and again he that in the caſe ſet v. 37. doth deferre, and for a time abſtain from marriage, makes a more prudent choiſe in the reſpects forementionn'd v. 35. of attending the better on the ſervice of God, and for avoiding of diſtraction.

39. The wife is bound by the law, as long as her husband liveth: but if her husband be dead, ſhee is at liberty to be married to whom ſhe will, onely in the Lord.]

39. As for her that is once marryed, ſhee is by that obliged to her husband, as long as he lives, but if he dye, 'tis abſolutely lawfull for her to marry another, ſo that in the doing of it, there be no other circumſtance that make it unlawfull, or ſo that conſiderations of piety be taken in in the doing of it, and not onely carnall deſires gratified thereby.

40. But ſhe is happier if ſhe ſo abide, in my judgement: and I think alſo that I have the ſpirit of God.]

40. But 'tis more for her earthly advantages to continue unmarried, and more convenient toward the ſerving of God without diſtraction v. 35. according to my judgement, and I think the ſpirit of God guides me in making this judgement, though I have no expreſſe precept for it.

Notes on Chap. VII.

a. Ἔυνοια

What ἔυνοια here ſignifies, will be beſt conjectured by the uſe of the Hebrew עונה Exod. 21. 10. (mentioned after food and clothing) that muſt not be denyed the wife. The Septuagint render it ὁμιλιαν αὐτῆς, accompanying with her, the Hebrew word alſo ſignifies ἔυνοια benevolence, which is therefore here uſed as a modeſter word, in ſtead of the other; The Syriack reades [the love which he owes] and ſome other Greek copies read ὀφειλομένην τιμὴν due honour or worſhip, which perhaps is the ground of the uſe of the word [worſhip] retained by our Church, in the form of marriage, meaning that kindneſſe, which is here ſaid to be due unto her, but the King's MS. hath ὀφειλὼ onely, all that by vow of marriage is due unto her.

b. Ἀκρασία

What ἀκρασία ſignifies here, will be beſt gueſs'd by the context, where the reaſon of the advice, συνέρχεσθε, for the man and the wife to accompany together, being this, that the devill tempt them not διὰ τὴν ἀκρασιαν, ἀκρασία being the occaſion or advantage that the devill takes hold of to tempt, muſt ſignifie their want of ability to contain; Not that it ſignifie incontinence, for that is a ſin againſt the marriage vow, and will not agree with the context, which ſuppoſes no ſuch ſin; but, I ſay, a want of ability to contain or abſtain any longer from the lawful pleaſures of marriage, as ἐγκρατὴς is he that ἑαυτὸν ἐν χράει ἔχῃ, hath himſelf in his power, his own command, and ſo οὐκ ἐγκρατεύονται v. 9. they that have not the command of themſelves, ſo as to live chaſtly without marriage, and ſo ἀκρατὴς and thence ἀκρασία the contrary inability to contain; which inability or weakneſſe is an occaſion of temptation, and will be an advantage alſo to the tempter, by which, when he tempts, hee may be moſt probably able to overcome.

c. Συγγνώμη

That συγγνώμη may ſignifie adviſe or counſell, will be gathered from the Grammarians, Heſychius and Phavorinus, συγγνώσομαι ſay they (it ſhould be συγγνώσομαι) συμβουλεύσω, giving counſell, and συγγινωσκόμενοι πεπεισμένοι they that are perſwaded by adviſe or counſell, And then the plain importance of this verſe is, that in reſpect of the contrary dangers of fornication, &c. v. 2. 5. hee generally gives his adviſe, that men ſhould marry, &c. v. 2, 3. Yet for this hee is far from giving any command, or laying obligation on any. For if upon experience, and long tryall, there be no fear of thoſe dangers, then his adviſe is to live unmarried. For ſo he had ſaid. v. 1. that it is good for a man

not to touch a woman, and again he ſubjoyns it, ver. 8. that it was good for them to continue as he was himſelf, i. e. in ſingle life. And ſo each of theſe, marrying, and not marrying, is according to ſeverall circumſtances, matter of counſell, but neither abſolutely of præcept. If there be danger of fornication, then it is his adviſe, that for the avoiding of that, marriage be choſen, v. 2. and to the ſame purpoſe, rather let them marry then burn, v. 9. And becauſe every man hath not the gift of continence, and it is not preſently diſcerned, who hath, therefore in generall ſpeaking, and as farre as belongs to thoſe, who doe not diſcern, that they have this gift, the contrary danger is ſo ſtrictly to be avoided, that the Apoſtles adviſe (though not command) is, that ἄνδρες, and γυναῖκες, men and women generally v. 1. betake themſelves to that ſafer courſe. But this ſtill far from any univerſall precept, for in caſe ſecurity from that danger of fornication be otherwiſe to be had, then the Apoſtles Counſell, and adviſe is to follow his example v. 7. and 8. and either in virginity, or widowhood, to remain unmarried, That is the meaning of [Θέλω γὰρ for I will, or would] not that he commands, or preſcribes that, but that, in caſe a man hath the gift of containing, he preferres the ſingle life, For the Hebrewes for want of a word in their language to denote comparative degrees, uſe poſitives, in ſtead of comparatives, and accordingly [θέλω to will] ſignifies here to wiſh rather, or to be more willing, to preferre, or recommend, as better, And that is the meaning of καλόν ἐστι, it is good, both v. 1. and 8. and 26. i.e. κρεῖττον better, or more eligible, if that circumſtance of the contrary danger doe not hinder it, or outweigh on the other ſide. Of this ſpeech of the Apoſtles concerning marriage it is Tertullian's ſaying lib: de monogam: Dixit hoc Apoſtolus indulgens non præcipiens, What the Apoſtle here ſaid, he ſpake by way of indulgence, not by way of command, rendring συγγνώμη indulgence, according to that other notion of the word, whereby it ſignifies pardon, or forgiveneſſe of a fault, and ſo ſaith Heſychius συγγνώμων ἐλεήμων, it denotes pity or mercy. Thus it is poſſible Tertullian might interpret the place, being by the Montaniſts infuſions ſomewhat unkind to marriage; But againſt this the Apoſtles words are plain, (even when he adviſes ſingle life as beſt at that preſent) If thou marrieſt thou haſt not ſinned, v. 28. And in this place the context is no way favourable to that notion; For the [ἕκαστος ἐχέτω let every man have his own wife &c.] ver. 2. and the [γαμησάτωσαν let them marry] ver. 9. (in caſe of the forementioned danger, διὰ τὰς πορνείας becauſe of fornications, & εἰ οὐκ ἐγκρατεύονται), if they have not command over themſelves, ſee note b.) is certainly more then this, even a free conceſſion of marriage to all, and, in caſe of that danger, an adviſe and counſell alſo. To which purpoſe it is obſervable, that as here συγγνώμη is oppoſed to ἐπιταγὴ command, ſo is γνώμη alſo, ver. 25. where that γνώμη ſignifies adviſe or counſell, and not onely permiſſion, or indulgence, appears by the conſequents, Νομίζω οὖν τοῦτο καλὸν —— v. 26. I think this is good (i.e. as was ſaid, better) for the approaching, inſtant diſtreſſes, and again ὅτι καλὸν that it is good, or better for a man to be ſo. From whence as it followes evidently, that γνώμη ſignifies counſell, as that looks on that which is better, and as counſell is generally oppoſed to precept, and as many things which are not under precept are yet under counſell, ſo in all reaſon the συγγνώμη differing ſo little from γνώμη, will by the oppoſition to ἐπιταγὴ precept (common to both of them) be determined alſo to this ſignification, of adviſe, and counſell. And ſo there is no queſtion of it, that for all thoſe who have not that command over themſelves, which may give them ſome degree of ſecurity againſt the danger of fornication, it is κρεῖττον γαμῆσαι ver. 9. better to marry, and ſo matter not onely of permiſſion, or indulgence, but of counſell to them.

The meaning of [οὐκ ἀκάθαρτα ἀλλὰ ἅγια, not unclean, but holy] in this place, appears by the context to be clearly this, that the children of Chriſtians are not refuſed, or rejected from baptiſme, are ſuffered to come to the font, when others are not ſuffered: In the ſame ſenſe that ἀκάθαρτα is uſed, when Peter refuſes to preach to the Gentiles, becauſe they are κοινὰ καὶ ἀκάθαρτα, profane and unclean, where God, reforming his error, bids him Call no man common, which God hath cleanſed or ſanctified, i.e. reputed fit to be made partaker (there) of the privilege of preaching, (here of baptiſme.) For the ground of this ſaying here, that [Elſe were your (i.e. the Chriſtians) children unclean, but now are they holy] is only this in the beginning of the ver. [For the unbeleiving husband hath been ſanctified by the beleiving wife, &c.] i. e. 'tis of common experience, and from thence preſumed very probable, that a Chriſtian living with an unbeleiver will inſtill Chriſtianity into him or her, and therefore they ſhould live together. This be farther proves by the practiſe of the Church about children, Thus, Were it not for the great probability, that the Chriſtian living with the heathen, ſhould infuſe Chriſtianity into him, there could no reaſon be rendred of the practiſe of the Church, why the Chriſtian's childe, which is no more a Chriſtian, then the childe of an heathen (Chriſtianity being no natural gift, born with them) ſhould yet be capable of baptiſme, and thought fit to receive that ſacrament, when the heathen's childe is not wont to be ſo admitted; And this, it ſeems, by the generall judgment and practiſe of the Church, with whom 'tis thought reaſonable thus to preſume, that the Chriſtian's childe ſhall be educated in Chriſtian knowledge, which of the heathen's childe they cannot preſume, unleſſe he be taken out of the hand of the parents: This conſideration thus propoſed by the Apoſtle here by the way, is of great authority to prove the Apoſtolical uſe and practiſe of baptizing the infants of Chriſtian parents, viz: upon preſumption that thoſe parents will ſee them educated, and inſtructed in the knowledge of their undertaking, and vow of baptiſme; And when any other Chriſtian will undertake the ſame for the children of heathens, there is little doubt, but they may be admitted to baptiſme alſo, paritate rationis, by analogie of the reaſon. And thus it was the cuſtome of the Jewes before Chriſt, in their receiving and baptizing of proſelytes (from whence that the Chriſtian baptiſme was deduced, ſee note on Mat. 3. 2.) For, ſay they, this baptiſme belonged not onely to thoſe, which being of years came over from heatheniſme to the Jewiſh religion, but alſo to their infant children, if their parents and the conſeſſus under which they were, did desire it in behalf of the children, promising to let them know and understand when they came to age, what was required of them by their proselytisme, and on condition that they should not then renounce the Jewish religion; which is since the office of the sponsores or susceptores, the godfathers in the Church, who doe it in the name of the confessus, the Church or congregation. This practise of the Church seems clearly deducible from this place, where, by the context, is concluded, that it is strongly probable (and being by the parents and sponsores undertaken and promised, it is by the Church presumed) that the Christian's childe will be catechized, and consequently that such an one may be allowed baptisme on that presumption, and that it was then in the Apostles time the custome of the Church to baptize them; which is here expressed by νῦν δὲ ἅγιά ἐστι, but now they are holy, the word קדש, which is vulgarly to sanctifie, signifying among the Jewes, to wash, as when the High Priest's washing his hands and feet ten times on the day of expiation is called עשרה קדושין the ten sanctifications, Joma c. 3. §. 3. which being the word that notes the washing of some part of the body, and distinguished in use from the word טבילה which is the immersion of the whole body (see note on Job. 13. b.) may perhaps be an intimation, that the primitive baptismes were not alwaies a dipping or immersion of the whole body, but that the washing or sprinkling of some part might be sufficient, for that was the meaning of the קדושין. As for any privilege which the parents faith hath to save the childe, or infuse saving grace into it, it is not conclusible from hence, nor any thing, save onely this, that Christian's children, 'tis presumed, will be catechized and instructed in the Christian faith, and so may, and frequently used to be baptized, but the children of heathens brought up with them, will not probably be so instructed, and therefore are not to be thus admitted to baptisme. That this should be the notion of ἅγια and ἀκάθαρτα will farther also appear by remembring the nature of legal uncleannesses or pollutions. They made the man to be separated from the congregation, They that were so unclean, might not enjoy the privileges of the Temple, till they were washed or sanctified; and that is just proportionable to the notion here given of it, And accordingly ἁγιάζειν to be sanctified] in Gregory Nazianzen and the antients signifies to be baptized.

e. Ἐπισπασθω

Ἐπισπασμὸς signifies attraction, and particularly belongs to a practise of some Jewes, who under the Ægyptian tyranny first, then under Antiochus, and lastly under the Romans, being oppress'd for being Jewes, of which their circumcision was an evidence, used means by some medicinal applications to get a new præputium, And these were called by the Talmudists מְשׁוֹכִים i. e. ἐπισπασταὶ attractores. And that it is possible to be done is affirmed by Cor: Celsus the famous Physician, but easier, saith he in a boy then a man, So saith R. Aleai of Achan, that he made himself a præputium, in Excerp: Gemar: Sanhedr: c. 6. §. 2. This the author of the books of the Maccabees affirms 1 Mac. 1. 15. ἐποίησαν ἑαυτοῖς ἀκροβυστίας, they made themselves foreskins. So under the tyranny of the Romans there were many, who therefore were circumcised again by Bar-chuziba, when he took upon him to be the Messias, and got power among the Jewes two years and an half, and was at last slain under Ælius Adrianus. This also Epiphanius observes of the Jewes, when they turned Samaritanes, and of the Samaritanes when they turned Jewes, for in both those cases there was use of the ἐπισπασμὸς attraction, that they might be capable of being initiated by circumcision, of which number Symmachus is said to be one, (the Greek translator of the Old Testament) when being hated by the Samaritanes, he betook himself to the Jewes in the reigne of Severus the Emperor. Now that this practise is here forbidden the Corinthians by the Apostle, may seem to be from hence, because some that were converted to Christianity from Judaisme, did so zealously renounce all their Judaical rites, that they used means to attract the præputia again, which was an act of too much superstition and curiosity, and so is censured here.

f. Μεμέρισται

For the right understanding of the word μεμέρισται, it will first be necessary to set down out of the King's MS. a various reading of this whole place, which differs much from that which is vulgarly received, and seems very probably to be the truer, It is thus, ver. 33. Ὁ δὲ γαμήσας μεριμνᾷ τὰ τοῦ κόσμου, πῶς ἀρέσῃ τῇ γυναικί, καὶ μεμέρισται, v. 34. Καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἡ ἄγαμος, καὶ ἡ παρθένος ἡ ἄγαμος μεριμνᾷ τὰ τοῦ Κυρίου, ἵνα ᾖ ἁγία καὶ σώματι, καὶ τῷ πνεύματι, &c. He that is married careth for the things of the world, how he may please his wife, and is divided or distracted. And the unmarried woman (i. e. the widow) and the unmarried virgin careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and spirit. Here μεμέρισται signifies being divided between two, the service of God, which lies upon him as a Christian, and the pleasing his wife, which lies upon him as an husband, and contrary to this is the ἀπερισπάστως without distraction v. 35. which belongs to the unmarried. Thus the Hebrew חלק, to which μερίζω is punctually answerable, signifies ordinarily to divide an inheritance, but among the Rabbines, in partes distractum esse, to be distracted several waies, and when 'tis rendred dividi to be divided, it is yet oft to be taken in that notion of distraction. Hence it is that the Hierusalem Targum, Gen. 22. 14. describing Abraham's faith, and ready obedience, without any doubting, or anxiety, or distraction what to chuse, describeth it thus, Tibi perspicuum est, nullam fuisse in corde meo divisionem, quo tempore jussisti me offerre Isaacum &c. Thou seest, O Lord, that I had no division or distraction in my heart when thou badst me offer Isaac, and Gen. 25. 26. speaking of Jacob's not beleiving the newes of Joseph's being alive, in stead of non credidit, he beleived not, the Targum reads, & divisit cor ejus, and he divided his heart. The word in all other places in the New Testament signifies simply to be divided into two parts, Mat. 12. 25. Lu. 12. 13. 1 Cor. 1. 13. and so doth μεριστὸς Heb. 4. 12. and μερισὸς Lu. 12. 14. And there is no appearance of reason, that it should doe otherwise here. Now for the vulgar reading of the words, μεμέρισται in the front of verse 34. that cannot well be imagined in the notion of differing, For though the Hebrew חלוק signifies with the Rabbines, divisio Arithmetica, division

Μεμέρισται

Μεριστὸς

ſion in numbring, and thence differentia and diſcrimen, difference of one from another, yet firſt that importance of the noun is not obſerved to belong to the verb among them, and 2dly, the verb in the ſingular cannot be applied to the two nounes, ἡ γυνὴ and ἡ παρθένος, the woman and the virgin in conjunction, (mulier & virgo differt, would not be true Latine, nor would it be better Greek) and therefore if that ſhould be the reading, the words muſt be rendred ſeverally, the woman is divided, i.e. diſtracted, and likewiſe the virgin. But there would be no great ſenſe in that, the context ſpeaking onely of the diſtractions of the married, whereas in the other reading, to which we adhere, the whole context is very current, and the meaning perſpicuous, as we have expreſſed it. But the not underſtanding of this notion of μερισμὸς for diſtraction, ſeems firſt to have been the occaſion of taking away the ᾗ, and then the μερισμὸς, which is in the end of ver. 33. was of neceſſity to be put in the front of v. 34. and from thence all the perplexineſſe of the place, which is clearly taken away by the other reading.

This rendring of πρὸς τὸ ἔυχρηστον καὶ ἐυπάρεδρον τῷ Κυρίῳ ἀπερισπάστως that you may decently wait upon the Lord without diſtraction, is avowed by the Syriack, and the figure of ἓν διὰ δυοῖν expreſſing one thing by two words, in the ἔυχρηστον καὶ ἐυπάρεδρον] will bear it very well. g. Ἔυχρηστον καὶ ἐυπάρεδρον

CHAP. VIII.

1. Now for that other part of your letter, which requires of the lawfulneſſe of eating things offered to idols (on occaſion again of the Gnoſticks infuſions) and accordingly ſpeaks of the knowledge that you have (from whence the word Gnoſtick comes, ſee note on c. 1. c. and 2 Pet. 1. b. and Rev. 2. 6. i.e. knowing men) that an Idol is nothing, and ſo that that which hath been offered to Idols may as freely and indifferently be offered to Idols as any thing elſe, I ſhall now tell you, firſt that we orthodox Chriſtians have knowledge too, to wit that knowledge of our Chriſtian liberty, and therefore need not be deſpiſed by thoſe among you, who ſeparate your ſelves from us, in the pride of your hearts calling your ſelves Gnoſticks, which ſuppoſes all others ignorant but your ſelves; But our care is to joyne charity or the love of God with our knowledge, and that will encline us to ſuffer any thing for Chriſt's ſake, and ſo we ſhall not need to goe to their idol-feaſts, to ſave us from perſecution, as the Gnoſticks doe; and a little of this courage and love of Chriſt is much better, tends more to our profit, then all that pretended deep knowledge of their liberty which the Gnoſticks pretend to, and by that chuſe to goe to the Idol-feaſts, rather then confeſſe and ſuffer for Chriſt. (ſee note on Rev. 2. b.)

1. NOW as touching things offered unto Idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.]

2. And therefore if any man pleaſe himſelf with an opinion of his knowledge, from ſuch ſubtilties as theſe, and ſo come to deſpiſe other men, and not to conſider what tends to their good and edification, this man (let him call himſelf Gnoſtick, or what he will) is farre enough from the true Chriſtian knowledge, or from directing his knowledge to the right end, for that is charity, or the edification of his brethren.

2. And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.]

3. If any man love God ſincerely, and ſo adhere to him in time of danger, or temptation, he truly knowes God, and conſequently is known and acknowledged by God.

3. But if any man love God, the ſame is known of him.]

a. 4. Having premiſed thus much concerning the name and ſect of the Gnoſticks, who are ſuch aſſertors of their liberty to doe all things, and particularly in this matter think they have argued ſo ſubtilely for liberty to eat of the idol-feaſts, to make that an indifferent thing, becauſe forſooth an idol is nothing, I come now to the thing it ſelf, by confeſſing their objection, that an idol indeed, according to the notation of the Hebrew word, is nothing, there being but one God, and all the heathen idol-gods being but fictions of theirs, ſo farre from being Gods, that they are but the works of mens hands.

4. As concerning therefore the eating of thoſe things that are offered in ſacrifice to idols, we know that an idol is [a] nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one.]

5. For though there be many called by that title, whether the celeſtiall and ſupreme deities, ſo eſteemed among the heathen, or inferiour, of a ſecond order, called Baalim, or Lords, agents and mediators between the Gods and men,

5. For though there be that are called Gods, whether in heaven or in earth (as there be Gods many, and Lords many)]

6. Yet we Chriſtians know and are aſſured, that there is but one true God, the Creator of all things, to whom all mens prayers muſt be addreſſed, as to the ſupreme, from whom as we had our being, ſo we are to think our ſelves obliged to be his ſervants, and to make all our applications to him, and ſo likewiſe but one mediator, but one Lord, by whom all things were created, and by whom, as the onely mediator betwixt God and us, all our prayers are addreſſed to heaven, viz: Jeſus Chriſt.

6. * But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we † in him, and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, and we by him.]

* Yet Ἀλλ'

† to or for him εἰς αὐτὸν

7. But all men doe not know or thinke this, that theſe idols or heathen Gods are nothing, (for ſure they that are accuſtomed to worſhip them think they are ſomething) but 'tis clear that ſome men, that are of opinion that idols are ſomething, (and ſo that muſt confeſſe, that the eating of thoſe feaſts, pollutes thoſe that have caſt off the worſhip of them) and that continue their cuſtome and former heathen courſe to this very time, though they have received Chriſtianity, doe ſtill goe to idol-feaſts as ſuch, even now that they have received the faith of Chriſt; and their ſick, i.e. wounded, ſinful conſciences, ſee note b. (i.e. they that goe on ſtill in this old heathen practiſe, not yet laid down) are defiled or polluted by doing ſo, This is certainly a ſinne in them.

b.

7. Howbeit, there is not in every man that knowledge, for ſome * with conſcience of the idol unto this houre, eat it as a thing offered to an idol, and their conſcience being [b] weak is defiled.

* or, with the cuſtome or common uſage of the idol, untill this time, for the Kings MS. reads τῇ συνηθείᾳ τοῦ εἰδώλου ἕως ἄρτι

8. But

* or neither if we eat not, doe we any great matter, for if we eat, do we come ſhort, for the King's MS. reads ἐὰν μὴ φάγωμεν περισσεύομεν, ἐὰν δὲ φάγωμεν ὑστερούμεθα

8. But meat commendeth us not to God: for * neither if we eat, are we the better; neither if we eat not, are we the worſe.

8, 9. Now this being ſuppoſed, it will follow that hee that goes to the idol-Temple with theſe,

9. But take heed leſt by any means this liberty of yours become a ſtumbling block to them that are weak.

though he be not of their perſwaſion, may yet be a means of confirming them in their error, it being certaine that they will think, hee comes as they come, i. e. with an opinion of that deity, and of the benefit he ſhall reap by eating of (i. e. partaking in) the ſacrifice, which inconvenience being counted of, there is no ſo great benefit to be reaped by going and eating there, as that it ſhould be fit to incurre that danger. For though neither eating nor abſtaining be in it's ſelfe in the ſight of God of any moment, yet this care will befit every Chriſtian, that he ſo uſe his own liberty, that he be not an occaſion of ſinning (or continuing in ſinne) to thoſe that are already in that erroneous ſinfull courſe, by confirming them in it.

† being weak ἀσθενῆ ὄντα * confirm'd, οἰκοδομηθήσεται

10. For if any man ſee thee, which haſt knowledge, ſit at meat in the idols temple, ſhall not the conſcience of him † which is weak be * emboldened to eat thoſe things which are offered to idols?

10. For if any man, that, through an erroneous conſcience, goes to thoſe Idol-feaſts, ſhall ſee a Gnoſtick (who within himſelf knowes an idol to be nothing, and therefore eats this but as ordinary meat) be at an Idol-feaſt and partake of it, will not he by this means be confirmed to goe on in his erroneous courſe?

† or, Thy brother therefore, for whom Chriſt dyed, growing ſick through thy knowledge, is deſtroyed, for the King's MS. reads Ἀπόλλυται ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ τῇ γνώσει σου ἀσθενῶν.

11. † And through thy knowledge ſhall the weak brother periſh, for whom Chriſt dyed.

11. And that Chriſtian of an erroneous conſcience (ſee note b.) ſhall be confirmed in his error and ſinne, and conſequent ruine, by occaſion of this practiſe of thine, all which, through confidence of thine own knowledge, without care of thy brothers heatheniſh errors remaining in him, thou haſt been guilty of, which is a ſinne in thee, not onely of uncharitableneſſe to him, but of injury, or robbery againſt Chriſt, in betraying a ſoul to ruine, for the ſaving of which Chriſt dyed.

* ſcandalize my brother, σκανδαλίζει

12. But when ye ſin ſo againſt the brethren, and * wound their weak conſcience, ye ſinne againſt Chriſt.]

12. And though it ſhould bee granted that your preſence at idol feaſts were no impiety againſt God, yet ſure this uncharitableneſſe againſt thy brother, bringing him to a confirmation in his ſinfull practiſe, who through error is already in it, muſt be looked upon, as an impiety and ſin againſt God himſelf, who is concern'd in him.

13. Wherefore if meat * make my brother to offend, I will eat no fleſh while the world ſtandeth, leſt I make my brother to offend.]

13. If therefore this my eating in an idol Temple of that feaſt, (or any uſe of my liberty in the ſame kinde) be an occaſion of confirming any Chriſtian in an erroneous ſinfull practiſe, or bringing him to doe any thing which is unlawfull, I will ſure deny my ſelf the uſe of that liberty, be it ſuppoſed to be ſuch, as by the Laws of Chriſt truly belongs to me, when it ſhall prove of ſo dangerous conſequence to my fellow Chriſtians.

Notes on Chap. VIII.

a. Οὐδὲν εἰδώλιον ἐστιν.

The meaning of this aſſertion of the Gnoſticks, and conceſſion of Saint Paul's that εἴδωλον οὐδὲν ἐν κόσμῳ, an idol is nothing in the world] muſt bee fetcht from the notation of the Hebrew word, אֱלִיל, from אָל that ſignifies nothing, that which hath no exiſtence, Job. 13. 4. Jer. 14. 14. Zach. 11. 17. and from thence comes אֱלִילִים idolls, i. e. ſo many nothings, ſo farre from being Gods, that they are εἴδωλα ἐν κόσμῳ, nothing in the world, no parts of God's firſt creation, onely inventions and phancies of men, creatures of men's own creating, πανοῦργοι πανούργων δαιμόνων ἢ παιδιαὶ ἢ μυστηρίαι, ſaith Greg: Nazianzene, wicked men are the formers firſt, and then the worſhippers of their wicked deities.

b. Ἀδυνῶν

That ἀδυνῶν] ſignifies being ſick, in the New Teſtament, hath been formerly made clear, note on Rom. 8. m. And being applyed to the ſoul or conſcience, as here, it muſt needs ſignifie the diſeaſe or ſickneſſe of the ſoul or conſcience, which is ſin or error. Thus in the Greek of the Old Teſtament, Nahum 2. 5. where we read out of the Hebrew, they ſhall ſtumble in their walk, there tis, ἀδυνήσουσιν ἐν ταῖς πορείαις they ſhall be weak. So Rom. 5. 6. Ἡμῶν ἀδυνῶν when we were weak] ſignifies when wee were in a ſick, mortally ſick ſtate, noted by [when we were enemies] in other places, & there by ἁμαρτωλῶν ὄντων ἡμῶν v. 8. when we were ſinners, and by ἀσεβῶν v. 6. impious or ungodly. And thus, tis clear, it ſignifies in this place, the diſcourſe being of thoſe, who take the idol-Gods to be true Gods, and conſequently that the eating or partaking of their ſacrifices, which is a part of the worſhip of thoſe idols, will ſtand them in ſtead, prove beneficial to them, and therefore goe on purpoſe to thoſe feaſts, and eat the idol-ſacrifice, ὡς εἰδωλόθυτα, as, or becauſe (or under that very notion, or upon that reaſon that) it is ſo, which certainly is an erroneous, and ſo an idolatrous, ſinfull conſcience, though it be in one, that hath embraced Chriſtianity. So v. 9. it is uſed again for theſe ſame men of thoſe erroneous conſciences, leading them into that heathen ſin, to whom a Chriſtian's going to (or being preſent at, and eating of) their idol-feaſts, though hee eat it but as ordinary meat, will yet be a means of ſcandal, i. e. an occaſion of confirming them in their ſin: Thus again v. 10, 11. where they are called brethren, which notes that this heathen error was yet, ἕως ἄρτι, v. 7. continued among ſome Chriſtians at Corinth, not the Gnoſticks (for they pretended to know that an idol was nothing, and ſo profeſs'd not to eat of thoſe feaſts as idol-feaſts, but onely as of ordinary meat, who therefore are here warned to take heed, that they doe not confirm theſe others in their ſin) but ſome more rude, ignorant, heathen Chriſtians, that through the cuſtomarineſſe of their former practiſe συνηθείᾳ τοῦ εἰδώλου ἕως ἄρτι, the cuſtome of the idol untill now, and 2^dly through their rawneſs c. 3. 1. their infancy or rawneſſe in Chriſtianity (which made S. Paul look upon them not as ſpirituall, but as carnal men, not as Chriſtians, but heathens ſtill) and 3^dly through the infuſions of corrupt falſe teachers (mention'd in the following chapter, the word, and the hay, and the ſtubble, v. 12. that muſt be fired out of the Church) and 4^thly though fear of loſing all that they had by the heathen perſecutors (which ſeemes to be mention'd c. 10. 13. and which occaſion'd many to offer ſacrifice in after times, when Chriſtianity had taken deeper root, then it had yet at Corinth) were ſtill in theſe dreggs and lees of heatheniſme, after their embracing of Chriſtianity; which will be no wonder to any that obſerves in this very Epiſtle, that they thought all kindes of fornication and even inceſt, no ſins, c. 5. and c. 6. 15. ſuing one another at heathen tribunals, no ſin, c. 6. yea and believed not the reſurrection c. 15. And the villanies that were under pretenſe of Chriſtian liberty practiſed by the Gnoſticks, who took themſelves to be perſons of farre deeper knowledge, at the beginning of this Chapter, were yet as groſſe, and as heatheniſh and abominable, as could be imagined, ſetting Chriſtians at liberty from all their former obligations toward husband, maſter, Prince, and engulfing themſelves in all the filthineſſe in the world, 1 Tim. 6. Jude 8. From this explication of ἀσθενεῖ will appear alſo the notion of it. Rom. 14. 21. where being placed alſo with σκάνδαλον ſtumbling, and σκανδαλίζεται being ſcandalized, it muſt needs ſignifie to ſin, alſo.

Τύπτον] ſignifying to ſtrike, or give any blow, and being here applyed to the weak, or ſick, i. e. erroneous, ſinfull conſcience, and being parallel to σκανδαλίζει ſcandalize, v. 13. muſt be underſtood in a notion, which will be common to that other. Thus he that layes a ſtumbling block in any man's way, at which hee falls, or breaks his ſhins, or otherwiſe hurts himſelf, is ſaid τύπτειν to ſtrike, or hurt, or wound him, and ſo it beſt agrees with this place, noting the confirming that man in ſin, betraying him to all his after-commiſſions, whoſe conſcience was before erroneous, and his practiſes ſinfull, which is as if in ſtead of curing a ſick man, which ſure ſtands in need of that charity, I ſhould wound, and hurt him more. c. τὸ ἀσθενὲς

1. Now to another part of your letter, which mentions the deep knowledge of the teachers you have now among you, and intimates how I am deſpiſed by them, and that particularly for labouring in the works of my calling, making of tents, and ſo getting mine own living among you (ſee ver. 3, 4.) I make this reply, that without the vanity of comparing with them, I may ſurely ſay four things of my ſelf, 1. that I am an Apoſtle of Chriſt, called from heaven immediately to that office, 2. that I had no obligation to doe what I have done among you (ſee v. 4, and 19.) i. e. to preach on free coſt to you, as I have, that I diſcern my Chriſtian liberty ſo well, that I know I might have done otherwiſe, 3. that though I was none of Chriſt's followers here on earth, yet I have been equalled to them by ſeeing, and being ſpoken to by Chriſt out of heaven, and 4. that I am certainly he that converted you to the faith, that planted the Goſpel at Corinth, and ſo ſurely am not unworthy to be conſidered by you.

1. AM I not an Apoſtle? Am I not free? Have I not ſeen Jeſus Chriſt our Lord? Are not you my work in the Lord?]

2. For the firſt of theſe, mine Apoſtleſhip, Whatever I am to others, I am ſure I am an Apoſtle in reſpect of you, Your converſion to the faith, is as great a confirmation of my Apoſtleſhip, as a ſeal is to an indenture or inſtrument, or particularly to the letters dimiſſory, by which meſſengers were wont to be ſent to the Churches.

2. If I be not an Apoſtle to others, yet doubtleſſe I am to you: for the ſeale of mine Apoſtleſhip are ye in the Lord.]

3. For the ſecond, that of my getting my living by my labour, the account which I give unto them that backbite me for this (as if I knew not the nature of Chriſtian liberty, and ſo out of niceneſſe of conſcience, or ſcrupuloſity durſt not receive any reward from them to whom I preach) is this,

3. * Mine anſwer to them that doe examine me, is this,] * My apologie to them Ἡ ἐμὴ ἀπολογία

4, 5. 6. That we know ſufficiently that 'tis lawfull for us to take along with us in our travailes for the Goſpel, a beleiving woman ſuch as Phœbe, (ſee note on Rom. 16. a.) as freely as others of the Apoſtles generally have done, to provide for us in our preaching, that ſo we may be able to eat and drink, and yet not be forced to work with our own hands to get our maintenance (ſee Act. 18. 3. & 1 Cor. 4. 12.) I doe not beleive that any greater burthen lies upon Barnabas and me, any greater neceſſity of getting our living by our trades, then lies upon others that have left their trades, and ſo I know my Chriſtian liberty well enough.

4. Have we not power to eat and drink?

5. Have we not power † to lead about a ſiſter, a wife, as well as other Apoſtles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?

6. * Or I onely and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working?] † to carry about a ſiſter woman, ἀδελφὴν γυναῖκα περιάγειν * Or have I onely and Barnabas no power, Ἢ μόνος ἐγὼ καὶ Βαρνάβας οὐκ ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν

7. For my Apoſtleſhip being a kind of warfare in the ſcripture phraſe, a planting a vineyard, a feeding a flock, in all reaſon, in all theſe reſpects, I may expect a ſufficient maintenance from them, to whom I have theſe many relations.

7. Who goeth to warfare any time at his own charges? who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?]

8. Nay this is not onely rational diſcourſe, but tis the doctrine of the law;

8. Say I theſe things † as a man? ſaith not the law the ſame alſo? † according to man, κατὰ ἄνθρωπον

9, 10. For when 'tis there cõmanded that the oxe that treadeth out the corn, ſhould, all the while he doth ſo, have liberty to eat of the corn before him, That precept that ſeems to reſpect the oxe, belongs certainly to men, and ſignifies that men are obliged to reward all thoſe that take pains for them, as the ploughman would never labour, were it not in hope of reward, and he that is at the pains of threſhing, muſt in any reaſon have the encouragement of eating of the corn that he threſheth out.

9. For it is written in the law of Moſes, Thou ſhalt not muzzle the mouth of the oxe that treadeth out the corn: doth God take care for oxen?

10. Or ſaith he it altogether for our ſakes? for our ſakes no doubt this is written, that he that plougheth, ſhould plough in hope, and he that * threſheth in hope, ſhould be partaker of his hope.] * or in hope of partaking, for the King's MS. reads ἐφ' ἐλπίδι τοῦ μετέχειν

11. And then much more wee that have laboured ſpiritually for your good, planted the Goſpel among you, may think it but juſt and proportionable, that we receive ſome part of your wealth from you.

11. If we have ſown unto you ſpiritual things, is it a great thing, if we ſhall reap your carnal things?]

12. If

12. If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? nevertheleſſe, we have not uſed this power, but ſuffer all things, leſt we ſhould hinder the Goſpel of Chriſt.

12. This I know; The falſe Apoſtles that come among you make uſe of this power, and receive the fruits of it, and then may not I have great confidence to doe it? By what hath been ſaid 'tis clear we might require a maintenance from you, and that we know this our liberty, v. 1. But yet we have abſtained from making uſe of it, and have rather choſen to take any paines our ſelves, Act: 18. 3. 1 Cor. 4. 12. yea and to ſuffer hunger many times (that you may not think we abſtain from receiving from you, becauſe we have no need of it) and ſo make no uſe of this claime of ours, as we might lawfully doe, (ſee note on c. 13. e.) rather then be thus burthenſome to our auditors, on purpoſe deſigning this, that we may not hinder the courſe of the Goſpell, or keep men from being alacrious and cheerfull in it, by making it chargeable them.

13. Doe ye not know, that they which miniſter about holy things, * live of the things of the Temple? and they which waite at the altar, are partakers with the altar?]

* eat of that which is holy, or, feed by the temple, ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ ἐσθίουσιν

13. In ſacrifices 'tis clear that the prieſts (ſee note on Joh: 6. b.) eat part of the conſecrated offering, and all is not burnt upon the altar, the altar devours not all, but the prieſt divides with it, and eats or carries home ſome portions of the ſacrifices.

14. Even ſo hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the Goſpell, ſhould live of the Goſpell.]

14. And accordingly God, that hath the free diſpoſall of all mens eſtates, hath given an aſſignement to thoſe that preach the Goſpell, of ſo much out of their auditors ſubſtance, that they may be maintained by preaching it.

15. But I have uſed none of theſe things: † neither have I written theſe things, that it ſhould be ſo done unto me; for it were better for me to dye, then that any man ſhould make my glorying void.]

† yet have I not written, οὐκ ἔγραψα ἵνα

15. But I have made no uſe of this privilege of an Apoſtle, but have preacht to you on free coſt, And I doe not now ſpeak of it, as if I would deſire to receive any thing from you, for I am much better pleaſed to doe it thus, yea and I would rather chooſe to famiſh by doing ſo, then be deprived of this way of advancing the Goſpell, v. 12. I am ſo farre from murmuring or complaining of this, that I would not for all the world loſe this comfort and joy, that I have preacht to you without receiving any thing from you, it being farre a more bleſſed thing to give, then to receive.

16. For * though I preach the Goſpell, I have nothing to glory of; for neceſſity is laid upon me, yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the Goſpell.]

* if I do

16. For I am commanded to preach the Goſpell, and conſequently by doing ſo I can expect no extraordinary reward from God, I doe no more then ſtrict duty, (ſee note a.) I am ſent by God with Commiſſion to doe ſo, and that layes an obligation upon me, and 'twere a damning ſin, if I did it not.

17. For if I doe this thing [a] † willingly, I have a reward: but if againſt my will, * a diſpenſation of the Goſpell is committed nnto me.]

† voluntary * I have been intruſted with a ſtewardſhip οἰκονομίαν πεπίστευμαι

17. If I did indeed preach voluntarily without a command, then even for my preaching the Goſpell, as well as for my doing it without any reward, I might have ſome reaſon to expect ſome reward from God, as for an act of freewill offering: But ſeeing I doe it not ſo, now all that can be ſaid of me, in reſpect of the preaching it ſelf, is onely this, that I had a ſtewardſhip entruſted to me, and I diſcharged it, which if I had not diſcharged, I ought to be puniſhed, and having diſcharged it, I can expect no future reward for doing that which I was bound to doe. a.

18. † What is my reward then? Verily, that when I preach the Goſpell, I may make the Goſpell of Chriſt without charge, that I * abuſe not my power in the Goſpell.]

† What then is reward to me? Τίς οὖν μού ἐστιν μισθός; * uſe not μὴ καταχρήσασθαι

18. What is it then that ſhall bring me in a reward? whence ſhall my reward come? why if I preach freely, and make not uſe of that liberty or power which I know I have v. 12, 15. 17. (ſee 2 Cor: 11. 9, 10) then this will be rewardable in me.

19. For though I be free from all men, yet have I made my ſelf [b] ſervant unto all, that I might gain the more.]

19. For being obliged to no man, I have freely ſerved all, preached to them without any wages, that I might be more likely to bring them to Chriſt. b.

20. And unto the Jewes, I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jewes: to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law.]

20. In like manner I have denyed my ſelf the uſe of my Chriſtian liberty in many other things alſo, obſerved many ceremonies of the Jewiſh law, which I needed not to have done, but onely to gain the Jewes.

21. To them that are without law, as without law, (being not without law to God, but * under the law to Chriſt) that I might gain them that are without law.]

21. To thoſe that obſerve not the law of Moſes, I behave my ſelf in like manner (not as if I were irregular, but ruling my actions according to the law of Chriſt and Chriſtian liberty) that I may work on thoſe that are not obſervers of Moſes's law.

22. To the weak, became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means ſave ſome.]

22. To thoſe which were not ſufficiently inſtructed in the nature of their Chriſtian liberty, I reſtrained my ſelf of the uſe of mine, that I might attract thoſe the more probably; and ſo I dealt with all other ſorts of men, doing that which I thought moſt probable to win them to Chriſt.

23. All this I doe for the Goſpel's ſake, that I might be † partaker thereof with you.]

† copartner of it, συγκοινωνὸς αὐτοῦ

23. And all this for the propagating the Chriſtian faith, that I may convert the more, that by ſo doing my reward in another world may be the greater.

24. [c] Know ye not that they which [d] run in a [e] race, run all, but [f] one receiveth the prize? [g] ſo run, that ye may obtain.]

24. You Corinthians have the Grecian games in one part of your countrey, and therefore cannot be ignorant of the cuſtomes of thoſe, particularly how in that of running in a race, though many runne, yet onely one comes formoſt to the goale, and conſequently onely one receives that reward, which by the lawes of the game belongs to him that comes firſt, Doe you therefore ſo run, and ſo it becomes us all to doe, that we may come formoſt, and ſo receive the prize. c. d. e. f. g.

h. i. 25. Now every man that undertakes any of thoſe combats or ſtrifes, binds himſelf to ſtrict lawes of abſtaining from all ſuch things as are hurtfull for him, doth nothing but what is in order to his deſigne, Theſe indeed in thoſe heathen times, meerly to get a crown of leaves, or boughs, which preſently fade or wither, but we Chriſtians, that we may obtain an unfading, durable crown.

Notes on Chap. IX.

a. Ἑκὼν πράσσω C.

What is the meaning of ἑκὼν πράσσω] to doe any thing voluntary, or, as a voluntier] appears by ſeverall parts of the context, 1. by the oppoſition to ἄκων involuntary, as that is explain'd by [a neceſſity is laid upon me, and woe is to me, if I preach not &c.] v.16. and [I am intruſted, or a truſt is repoſed in me] v.7. For that notes the involuntary action to be that which is by law required, and cannot be omitted without ſinne, and ſo becometh neceſſary. So ſaith Theophylact εἰ δὲ ἐπιχείδωκε πρᾶγμα, δῆλον ὅτι οὐκ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ τοῦτο ποιῶ, ἀλλὰ διακονίαν ἐπιτετραμμένος πληρῶ, τοῦτο γάρ ἐστι τὸ ἄκων, by theſe words [If I am intruſted] 'tis manifeſt he means, that I doe it not of my ſelf, but perform the Lord's command, for this is to doe it involuntary. And therefore to doe it ἑκὼν voluntary] is to doe it of ones ſelf, without any command, or obligation on him to doe it. So Theophylact interprets it, εἰ μὴ οὐκ ἐπιτετραμμένος τὸ κήρυγμα ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ ἦ τοῦτο ἐποίουν, it ſignifies, if this were not committed to me as a truſt, but I did it of my ſelf. 2dly, By the mention of καύχημα boaſting ver.16. and 2 *Cor.*11. 9,10. for that implies what is done, to be done without obligation, and above that which was neceſſary by engagement of any precept; And ſo 3ly, by μισθὸν ἔχω I have reward] here, and v.18. for reward ſignifies a return or retribution to ſomewhat, which a man was not bound to doe. So the phraſe is uſed among the Jewes, and Maimonides hath a rule, Mor: Neb: l.3. c.17. Ei datur præmium, qui injuſſus aliquid facit, to him a reward is given, who doth any thing unbidden. And therefore the whole phraſe here, εἰ γὰρ ἑκὼν τοῦτο πράσσω] muſt thus be rendred moſt clearly, not, if I doe, or ſhall doe this voluntary, as ſuppoſing that poſſible that he may (for ſpeaking of preaching the word, he had before ſaid, that neceſſity was laid upon him, and therefore he cannot be free, or at liberty to doe, or not doe it) but, as ſuppoſitio non ponit, a ſuppoſition doth not affirm, ſo the [εἰ] is to be rendred, if, i.e. on ſuppoſition that I did this voluntarily, a reward would then belong to me, εἰ δὲ ἄκων, but ſeeing 'tis not ſo, ſeeing I doe it not of my own inſtinct, but by appointment from God, &c. διὰ τοῦτο ἡ φιλοτιμία τὸ πρᾶγμα, therefore there is nothing heroical, or matter of holy emulation or ambition in it. And accordingly it followes that the matter of preaching being to him diſtinctly under precept, there was but one thing which could bring him any reward, viz: the ἀδάπανον ποιῶ, making it coſtleſs to the auditors, εἰς τὸ μὴ καταχρήσασθαι τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ μου, v.18. in not making uſe of that power which he had, i.e. the power of receiving maintenance from others, v.5. which he might moſt lawfully have done v.7, 12,14. and which Cephas and others freely did, v.5. and the not uſing it would therefore be thankworthy with God, and yeild him ſome reward from him. To this purpoſe clearly S. Chryſoſtome, τὸ μὲν δεῖν ἐπίταγμα, τὸ δὲ τὸ ἐμῆς προαιρέσεως καλόν ἐστιν, one was a precept, the other a virtuous action of his choice, ἃ μὲν γὰρ ἀναγκαίως ἐπιτελῶ, πλοῦτον οὐκ ἔχει τὸ μισθὸν ἐπὶ τούτοις, for what is done above the command, hath proprotionably a great reward. And again of the word Ἀνάγκη neceſſity, that it referres to the command, πρὸς ἐπιτέλειαν καὶ ἀναδιορίαν τὸ ἐν τῷ λαμβάνειν, in oppoſition to the freedome or liberty of receiving v.12. So again Theophylact, τὸ εὐαγγελίσασθαι ἐπίταγμά ἐστι, καὶ χρέος, καὶ ἐὰν πληρῶ τοῦτο, οὐκ ἔστι καλόν τι τοῦτο &c. Preaching the Goſpel is a command, and ſo a debt, and if I doe it, there is no great matter of virtue in it, τὸ δὲ ἀδαπάνως κηρύσσειν προαιρέσεως φιλοτιμία, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καύχημά ἐστι, but to preach without charging them, is the ambition of my free will, or choice, and in that reſpect there is place of boaſting, or I may boaſt. And ſo S. Auguſtine, Potuit beatus Paulus ex Evangelio ſibi victum quærere, quòd maluit operari, amplius erogabat, Bleſſed Paul might get his food by preaching the Goſpel; but in that he choſe to labour with his hands, he erogated the more, did more in God's ſervice, then by any particular precept was required of him.

Καύχημα

Μισθὸν ἔχω

b. Δοῦλοι

Servants or δοῦλοι, bondmen or ſlaves were wholly in the power of their maſters, they had power of life and death over them, much more of their bodies for labour, without giving them any wages or reward. To doe all that they are commanded is but the due debt to their maſters, which if they perform, they are not praiſed, but puniſhed if they doe it not; whereas they that are free, if they doe any office for any, they may in reaſon expect to be paid for it; So here S. Paul being a freeman, no ſlave to the Corinthians, i.e. under no obligation to preach without maintenance v. 1. might in reaſon expect from them reward for all his ſervice, his preaching &c. but he did all this for nothing, and that he calls ἐδούλωσα ἐμαυτὸν πᾶσιν, his ſerving them as a ſervant doth, without any wages, or as though he were their ſervant.

c. Οὐκ οἴδατε. The discourse that here begins, and goes on to the end of the Chapter, is all perfectly agonistical, no way to be explained but by observation of the customes in the Grecian games or ἀγῶνες; Of these there were four most famous in Greece,

Τέτταρες εἰσὶν ἀγῶνες ἀν' Ἑλλάδα, τέτταρες ἱεροὶ in the Anthologie, l. 1. the Olympick, Pythian, Nemæan, Isthmian, differing one from the other onely in the places of the πανηγύρεις or celebrations. The last of them, the Isthmian, were kept among the Corinthians, and that occasions his speech in this place, οὐκ οἴδατε; doe you not know? as presuming their particular knowledge of all those customes, which he is about to mention or referre to.

d. Τρέχει. In every of these four ἀγῶνες, there were five exercises, as was said, note on Rom. 9. k. Wrestling, Cuffing, Running, Leaping, Quoiting, Πάλη, πυγμὴ, δρόμος, ἅλμα, δίσκος, which the Anthologie sets downe with some little change, putting ἄκοντα for πυγμὴν not very fitly. Beside these five single ones, there was another kind made up and compounded of the two foremost together, cuffing and wrestling both, and because to the performing of that, all kind of strength and agility was required, it was therefore called παγκράτιον from κράτος strength, not from κρατεῖν to overcome. Now the particulars that are here referred to, are onely two of these, that of δρόμος or ποδωκείη running, the third of the five, and this of παγκράτιον, the one compounded of the other two, the former of these in this and the two next verses, the latter in the last verse of the Chapter.

Ἅλμα, ποδωκείλω, δίσκον, ἄκοντα, πάλην.

e. Στάδιον. Στάδιον was the space wherein they run, ὁ τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἔθεον, ὃν ἦν πηχῶν τριακοσίων διάστημα, &c. saith the Scholiast on Pindarus, it was three hundred cubits long. Olymp. Od. 13.

f. Εἰς κλῆρον λαμβάνει. This race is open to all to run in, i. e. to all that aspire to the crown or prize, who come from all coasts to that end, and from thence the agones were called πανηγύρεις or frequentia, places of meeting or assembly. But when never so many run, there was no possibility for above one to overcome, to wit, he that came foremost to the goale, for to him onely the reward or prize belonged, which was called in their idiome, βραβεῖον bravium, or ἆθλον, which two words differ no more then δῶρον and λῆμμα, the first in respect of the βραβεύσεως that adjudges, the second in respect of the ἀθλήσεως that receives it, This he was said λαμβάνειν, or περιλαμβάνειν, or ὑπολαμβάνειν (see note on Rom. 9. k. Phil. 3. b.) which we render by receiving, or obtaining, i. e. catching of the prize or σκοπὸν from the top of the goale, the βραβεῖς or judges having passed their sentence that he hath overcome, and it belongs to him. Βραβεῖον

g. Οὕτω τρέχω. The οὕτως here referres to the lawes or rules of the agones, the observing of which was as necessary toward the obtaining the victory or prize, as the swiftnesse was; For in the race, there was not only the two termes, from whence, and to which they run, the first called βαλὼν ἐκ τέρμα, the latter ἐκκαμπὴ, βάλβις, τέλος, σκοπὸς, but also κανὼν, the rule, a white line marking out the path, within which they were to run, and if they transgresst or ran over it, they did not νομίμως ἀθλεῖν 2 Tim. 2. run regularly, and consequently they lost the prize, so saith S. Chrysostome, ἂν μὴ πάντα ἀπλῶς διέλθοι τὰ τῆς ἀθλήσεως ἀναγκαῖα, ἀλλ' ἔστιν ὅτε παρέβη, if they doe not absolutely passe through, and perform all things that befit the combatants, they are never to be crowned. Nay, if others observe aright (that they were bounded with swords on one side, and the river Alpheus on the other) the danger was greater then that of losing the prize, if they transgressed, they not onely lost, but fell into the river, or on the swords point, which is very applicable to our Christian race. Beside these, many other νόμοι ἀθλήσεως lawes or rules of combating there were, all which were to be observed in order to obtaining the crown, and that is the meaning of the ὅπως τρέχω here, so run. Νόμιμος ἄθλησις 2 Tim. 2.

h. Ἐγκρατεύεται. What is here meant by [ἐγκρατεύεται πάντα] will be best collected by recounting the manner of the athletæ in preparing themselves for the games, first negatively, that it was not by λιτὴν διαίτην temperance or thin diet, but directly the contrary, many times ἀναγκοφαγία cramming, forcing themselves to eat, that by that means they might become παχεῖς and πολύσαρκοι, fleshy and corpulent. So saith * Lucian of Damosias the athleta, whom Charon durst not take into his boat, πολὺν τὰρκα ἐπιβεβλημένον, having such a weight of flesh about him. To this agrees the phrase among Physicians ἀθλητικὴ ἕξις, and athleticè and pancraticè valere, for a full habit of body. So Julian of Constantius, that he did not think agreeable to an Emperor τὴν παλαίστρας καλλιπόρου δρυλλιώδη ἀνεξίαν, that famous full habit of the combatants, or palæstritæ, and therefore that he used ἔφθης ὑ πολλῆς, ἢ παντὸς ὑ κρεμαστὴ θοίνης, ὅτι κρέατα πυκνὰ ἀσιτούμενος, neither much meat, nor prescribed either for quantity or quality. ἀλλ' ὅ τι ἐπιτυχόντος but any that came next to hand; By which it appears, that the farther he was from the diet of the Athletæ, the more temperate he was esteemed, but yet withall that the diet of the Athletæ was a prescribed, set diet, both for quality and quantity, prescribing so much, and of those kinds which were fittest for the turn, to give them a full habit of body, and requiring them to force it upon themselves. And Andronicus Rhodius gives the reason of this, ἡ δὲ ἰσχὺς γίνεται ἐκ τῆς πολλῆς τροφῆς λαμβάνειν, strength is acquired by receiving much nourishment. It will not then be proper to render ἐγκρατεύεται here by temperance, especially when Suidas labours a whole page together to prove that it differs ἀπὸ σωφροσύνης from temperance; But one of these three notions will be agreeable enough to it, and will by the way set down the manner of preparing them to their games. 1. It may be rendred continence, so the word signifies in the matter of Felix Act. 24. 25. and I conceive, Gal. 5. 22. and 2 Pet. 1. 6. where the addition of it to γνῶσις knowledge, seems to referre to the Gnosticks of that time, which pretended to great knowledge of their Christian liberty, and by that fell into all uncleanesse and incontinence. So Tit. 1. 8. it signifies, being annexed to ὅσιος clean or pure, and differing from σώφρων temperate, which went before. And then the meaning of this phrase here will be, that whosoever fits himself for these agones, either wholly abstains from women, or for the time containeth, according to that of Horace, de Art: Poet:

Qui cupit optatam cursu contingere metam, Abstinuit venere &c. And so saith Eusta- things on Homer Ἰλ: ω'. Ἀθλητὴ τὰ τῆς ἀθλήσεως πάντα χαιρὸν οὐκ ἀρίστου παιδίζειν γυναιξὶ, The combatants, all the time of their combating, were not permitted to come neer women. So Ælian of the Tarentinus Luctator, ἀδιάστατος χρόνον διατελέσας Ἀφροδίτης ἁπάσης, he knew nothing of venery all the time of his combating. So Clem: Alexand: speaking of the Athletæ, saith they did δι' ὅλου σωφρονοῦντες ἐγκρατεῖς καὶ ἀφροδισίων ἀπόχους, contain in respect of their bodily exercise, and abstain from venery; And so in Ignatius's Epistle to the Philippians εἴτις ἁγνεύει καὶ ἐγκρατεύεται, if any be pure and continent &c. And after this example it was, that the ancient Christians that contained strictly, and lived a virgine chast life, were call'd ἀσκηταὶ exercisers, and thence Hesychius renders ἐγκράτεια continence, by ἄσκησις exercise. A second possible notion of ἐγκρατεύεται may be to signifie a constancy of mind in abstaining from all things that are hurtfull, so doth Suidas render it ἀπὸ τῶν κακῶν ἀπόχη, abstaining from evil, and in Hesychius, ἐκτενεστέρους is καρτερικούς, and so saith S. Chrysostome of Job's great constancy in avoiding the occasions or beginnings of sinne, that he did πάντα σίδηρον καὶ ἀδάμαντα τῇ τῆς ψυχῆς ἐγκρατείᾳ παρελθεῖν goe beyond iron or adamant in constancy of mind, and agreeable to this saith the Italian note here, S' astiene da tutte le cose che possino esserli in qual si voglia modo d' impedimento, He abstains from all things that can in any manner be hindrance to him, and so it may be applied to the matter in hand of abstaining from the use of Christian liberty, when that abstaining may tend to the edifying of the brethren, or be profitable to his ministery. Lastly it may signifie his having all things in his power, πάντα ἐν κράτει ἔχων (see note on c. 7. b.) and then the meaning of the place will be, that the combatant keeps a mastery over himself, suffers not himself to be brought under the power of any thing, but is superior to all carnal desires, first conquers himself, then attempts victory over others also, first subjugates one desire, denieth himself the use of one liberty, then of another, and so πάντα ἐγκρατεύεται gets all into his power.

i. Φθαρτὸς στέφανος

The ground of this phrase φθαρτὸς στέφανον a corruptible fading crown] hath been mentioned, note on Rom. 9. k. For in all those famous games of Greece, that were so honourable in respect of their institution, their authors, and the celebrity and concurse of people to them, there was yet no reward proposed or obtainable by any of them, but the leaves of some plant, or boughs of some tree, which therefore Lucian calls τὸ φυλλινον στέφανον, a leafy crown, and in the person of Anacharsis sufficiently derides, περὶ γυμνασ: p. 727. to which is opposed not onely the στέφανον ἄφθαρτον here, but more clearly the ἀμάραντον 1 Pet. 1. 4. the not-fading crown, the not-withering inheritance, to which perhaps may be applied also that of Heb. 12. 11. where having made mention τῶν γεγυμνασμένων of them that are exercised, he saith there is laid up for them καρπὸς εἰρηνικὸς a peaceable fruit, which, saith Peter Faber, denotes the crown made of the olive tree, the emblem and token of peace.

περὶ τῶν ἐν μέθῃ ὀνειρ. p. 321.

Ἀμάραντον

k. ἐκ Ἀδήλου

The phrase ἐκ ἀδήλου] referres to the form or manner of the stadia or courses among the Grecians, wherein every racer had his course chalk'd out to him, both the place where he set out, the goale whither he went, and the way that he past, so that unless a man winked, he could not but see perfectly, and know (for ἀδηλία and ἄγνοια uncertainty and ignorance are all one in Hesychius) which way he must goe, and whither aspire. To this may be farther added the δηλότης certainty of the victory, and the assurance that he shall have the crown, if he doe regularly perform the race and overcome. So in Lucian, saith Anacharsis, εἶτ' ἐν τῇ ἀδήλῳ καὶ ἀμφιβόλῳ τῆς νίκης ποιοῦσι πονοῦν, If they labour so, when the victory is uncertain and doubtfull, &c. περὶ γυμνασ:

l. Πυκτεύειν

Here is the allusion changed from that of running, to the other of cuffing (for that is the particular notation of πυκτεύω and πυγμὴ) or rather to that of παγκράτιον compounded of cuffing and wrestling, and so of which πυγμὴ was a part, for so saith S. Chrysostome here, καὶ γὰρ δρόμου καὶ παγκράτου &c. the Apostle speaks of two exercises, racing, and that called pancratium, (see note d. and o.)

m. Ἀέρα δέρειν

Ἀέρα δέρειν or δαίειν, beating or striking the aire] belongs to that of cuffing, a præludium or preparative to which was σκιομαχία fighting with, or beating the aire, which Virgil describes by

——— Alternaque jactat
Brachia protendens, & verberat ictibus auras.

He thrusts out his armes one after another, and beats the aire with his blowes, and * Lucian, Ἤν τινα ἀδηλητῶν ἴδῃς ἀσκούμενον πρὸ τῆς ἀγῶνος, πάλλοντα εἰς τὸν ἀέρα, ἢ πυξ κενὸν πυκνὸν τινα καλαφίσσοντα, If you see a combatant exercising before the combate, kicking into the aire, and with his fists giving it an empty blow. This was onely a brandishing before the fighting, of which saith Budæus on the Pandects p. 74. that there is nothing more ordinary then that they that excell in skill and dexterity at this, (so that they can before they meet with their adversary, shew their readinesse to take all advantages of striking and wounding the enemy) yet when they come to fight in earnest, and proceed à prolusione ad cruentum discrimen, from the prolusion to the bloody combat, conciderint statim animo, nec artis suæ præceptorum meminerint, miscarry and fall presently in spirit, and forget all the precepts of their art. Where the opposition between this beating of the aire, and bloodinesse of the combate, coming to sharps, as we call it, may give us the understanding of that phrase, Heb. 12. 4. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sinne, all that they had yet suffered being but a προπυγμὴ or σκιομαχία, as it were, they were not yet come to the real blowes, had but been in some skirmishes as yet. Another notion there may be of this phrase, to signifie the missing of the adversary, and hitting the aire onely; So saith Eustath: on Ἰλ. ϛ'. οἱ πύγμαχοι πολλάκις ἐκ ἐυστοχοῦντες μάτην κινοῦσι τὰς χεῖρας, they that contend by cuffing doe many times misse and move their hands (i.e. strike) to no purpose. And thus will it here agree with the former phrase [ὡς ἀδήλως] for as those that cuffe in the darke, though they strike never such καλὰς πληγὰς, saith Aristotle, luckie blowes, yet many times misse their aime, wound nothing but the aire, so here, should the Apostle not be perfectly skill'd in the ἀγὼν or combate he was about, he might often lose his blowes, but being perfectly instructed in his race, and what will bring him first to the goale, and being entred into the

* in Hermot: p. 319.

ἀμέλγειν Ἀλλὰ πυκτεύω οὕτω ἀδήλως the lists with his adversary, and set knowingly about his businesse, as it follows, ὡς πυκτεύων οὐκ ἀέρα δέρων, he plaies the pancratiasta notably.

n. ὑπωπιάζω

What is the notion of ὑπωπιάζω] hath been formerly touch't on, Lu. 18. 5. and though there it signifie by a secundary borrowed signification [to reproach, or put to shame,] yet here 'tis certainly in a primary notion, to strike under the eye or in the face, as the πυκτεῖ were wont to doe. This being here joyned to τὸ σῶμά μου, and applied to the matter in hand, of denying himself the use of his Christian liberty, must be rendred (according to the notion of עִנּוּי which is Hebrew for σῶμά μου my body, before mentioned, note on Rom. 6. 2. and is no more then ἐμαυτὸν my selfe) I doe give my self blew eyes, as in cuffing the combatant doth the adversary, pugnis ductis, castibusque impactis lividum reddere, I use great severity upon my self.

o. δουλαγωγῶ

Δουλαγωγῶ to bring under, belongs to wrestlers, who strive to throw the fellow combatant, to get him under them, that so he may not be able to resist or strike. And this being adjoyned to the former, is the character of παγκράτιον, according to the plain words of Aristotle, Rhetor: l. 1. c. 5. Δυνάμει δὲ διαφέρει &c. πολλαχοῦ, ὁ μὲν ἅπτεσθαι τῆς παγκρατικῆς, ὁ δὲ ἀμφοτέροις τούτοις, παγκρατιαστὴς λέγεται, He that can oppresse and get down his adversary, is called good at wrestling; he that can strike him down with the fist, an able cuffer; but he that is for both these is the pancratiasta. And so the plain sense of the place applied to the matter in hand will be this, that the Apostle is so farre from making use of all his Christian liberty, that, saith he, I subdue and bring my self down, I bind my self to abstain from many things, which I might very lawfully enjoy, to labour with my hands, and suffer many hardships, which I need not, and all this to acquire the crown, which belongs not to the idle person, or to him that doth no more then he is bound to, but to him that enters the lists, and overcomes there, and in order to that

Multa tulit fecitque —— sudavit & alsit, Abstinuit &c. Thus is fasting expressed by the Arabians, that 'tis sui domatio & depressio, & subjugatio concupiscentiæ, (see Greg: Abul Farai de Arabum moribus p. 29.) the taming and depressing of himself, and subjugating of concupiscence. And so Philo Judæus speaking of immoderate fasting (lib: Pejorem insidiari meliori) saith, they doe λιμῷ καὶ τῇ περὶτην ψυχὴν καὶ σῶμα ἐκβιαζόμενοι, by fasting, and ill usages subdue their body, and mind, as wrestlers doe their adversaries, and accordingly this of fasting &c. is ordinarily styled ἄσκησις and γυμνασία, exercise, relating to these agones.

p. κήρυσσω

Κήρυξ in the Olympick or Isthmian games is the præco or Herald (The word by its origination seeming to come from the Hebr: קרא clamavit & proclamavit, to crie and proclaim, and from thence κράζω and κηρύσσω by an easie change) whose office it was from a scaffold or eminent place to proclaim the combate, that was to be entred, to call the agonista, to name the prizes, to admonish the athletæ, to animate them, to set them the lawes of the agones, to subject all to the examination of the judges, and as they shall determine, to pronounce the conqueror. So in Isidor. Pelus: Epist: l. 3. ὁ κήρυξ τῆς ἐξουσίας ἀγώνων τοὺς νικῶντας ἀναπρυτάνεται, ἀγῶνα τοῖς ἄλλοις διαλαμβάνει, he proposes the combate, and proclaims the conqueror and conquered. Such are the Apostles under Christ, at once κήρυκες, and στεφανῖται, heralds and crowners, saith Isidore, pronouncing, proclaiming, citing, admonishing, binding, loosing, pronouncing some conquerors, and ἀποκρίνοντες rejecting others as unworthy.

q. ἀδόκιμος

What [ἀδόκιμος] signifies, hath been said in note on Rom. 1. 28. to miscarry, and lose the reward, that he is contending for. Thus in good Authors ἀδόκιμον ἡμᾶς] and ἀποκηρυχθῶμεν] are all one, and are opposed to στεφανοῦσθαι being crowned or rewarded. And so that will be the importance of this close of the Apostle, that he denies himself many things, which he might enjoy, as combatants are wont to doe, puts himself to many hardships also, that (whilst he is an Apostle to others, directing them to that course, that will bring them to their crown, to wit that of self-denial, and the cross, by which Christ our captain attained it before us) he may not himself miscarry, or be found unworthy to receive it.

CHAP. X.

Paraphrase.

* But I would not have you ignorant. ὁ δὲ οὐ θέλω ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν † that our fathers were all ἐν τῇ νεφέλῃ ἦσαν πάντες οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν

1.* MOreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, † how that all our [a] fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea,]

1. Now, my brethren, for those of you that count your selves so acceptable to God, such eminent, and, as you think, spiritual persons, that have attained to an high pitch of excellence and perfection, and so call your selves Gnosticks, see ch. 3. 1. I desire that you should remember that the antient Israelites had many high dignations from God, many miraculous works afforded toward them, and yet were not all very acceptable in Gods eyes; and so it may well be with you also: As for example, Not onely Caleb and Joshua, that came to Canaan, but even all the rest of the Jewes (all which perished in the wildernesse beside them two) had the favour of the cloud to overshadow them, (as you Gnosticks say you have, whatsoever you doe) and so also passed through the Red-sea, and were miraculously preserved by God (and yet after perished in the wildernesse.)

2. And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud, and in the sea,]

2. And that cloud and that passage through the Red-sea, which were used as means to confirm the ministery of Moses, to assure them that he was sent to them by God, and so were a kind of baptizing them into the beleif of the doctrine of Moses, and were a type of our baptisme, were allowed to them all.

3. And did all eat the same spiritual meat,]

3. So the Manna also that came down from heaven, and in that was a type of Christ, (and which was indued by God with a speciall excellency, such various relishes, to agree with every ones taste, noting the various gifts of the Spirit among us Christians) was rained down among them all, and gathered by all, and so all, as it were, partakers of spirituality, fed from heaven miraculously.

4. And they all (those that perisht, as well as others) drank the water which came out of Horeb, which flowed miraculously and copiously, and, as the Jewes now affirm, followed them for their use a great while, and that rock signified Christ, so that in effect all the wicked which perished, as well as others, had mystically tasted of Christ, and so were partakers of this spiritualnesse, as well as others.

4. And did all drink the same spiritual drink: (for they drank of that spiritual rock that [b] followed them, and that rock was Christ.)

b.

5. And though they had so many degrees of miracles afforded them by God, so many degrees of spiritualnesse, yet were they not finally in the favour of God, but were destroyed, and their carcasses scattered in the wilderneſſe, all of them, except onely two, after all this.

5. But with * many of them God was not well pleased; for they were † overthrown in the wilderneſſe.

* the most † strawed, or destroyed

6. And these passages of story are very observable and exemplary to us, that you that count your selves spiritual, and pretend to such high perfections and privileges, should keep your selves pure from base sensual lustings, lest you perish after their examples.

6. Now * these things were our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.]

* these were types of us.

7. And that you should not fall into the snares of idolaters, some of you going still to the idol-sacrifices, as ye were wont to doe before your conversion to the faith, (see ch.8.7.) others, as the Gnosticks, being present at those feasts out of a confidence, that they, knowing the idol to be nothing, are not polluted by going thither (ch.8.10.) and imitating the idol-worshippers in their filthy unnatural bestial sinnes (for so the Gnosticks did) And so follow the example of those Israelites of whom 'tis said, that from their idolatrous feasts, they fell into filthy bestial sinnes, the rites of those heathen festivities.

7. Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them, as it is written, The people sate down to eat and drink, and rose up † to [c] play.]

c.

8. Neither let us Christians fall into those sins of fornication and other villany, as the Israelites did at Shittim, Num. 25. 1. after their idol-feasts v.2,3. and were destroyed 23000 of them. A judgment that might deserve to be considered by the Gnosticks of this age in the Church of Corinth.

8. Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand.]

9. Nor let us loath and be weary of the Gospel, as the Israelites did Manna, Num 21.5. and for it were destroyed by serpents, v.6. and yet so doe many of you by the Gnosticks infusions among you, which are quite weary of that heavenly Christian temper of purity, and chastity, and sufferings, which Christ commended to his disciples Mat. 5. you must have security from persecutions, and withall the flesh-pots of Ægypt, the carnal heathen sins, which were allowed in their worships, And for these two causes it is that you goe to their idol-feasts, to avoid persecution, and to gratifie your lusts.

9. Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents.]

10. Nor be you guilty of that sinne of murmuring at Gods dispensations under the Gospel, the nature of those precepts, which there he hath given us, as if the heaven promised were a good heaven, but the way thither, the duties to be performed, rough and unpassable (unlesse you may have your carnal joyes afforded you) For this were just after the manner of the Israelites, who brought up an evil report upon the land of Canaan, Num. 13.32. and from thence fell a murmuring c.14.2. and were swept away by the destroying Angel, i.e. the plague v.36. & c.16.41.

10. Neither murmure ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the [d] destroyer.]

11. All these sinnes and judgements on those Israelites, who were vouchsafed such wonderfull mercies by God, which were his people under his immediate conduct, had so much of his Spirit among them, and yet sinn'd so foully, and were destroyed so miserably, are all emblemes of our estate, if we doe not beware of their sins, and they are set down in the old Testament, as warnings for us Christians.

11. Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the * world are come.

* ages

12. And therefore let him which is the most spiritual among you, that seems to himself to stand the firmest, take care that he fall not into these carnal sins, which bring such ruine along with them.

12. Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.]

13. And though some motives there are now among you that may tempt you to joyne with the heathen in their idolatries, to wit, the persecution of the heathens, among which you live, yet ought not this to work much upon you, to drive you out of your religion, For first, these are but ordinary, and to be look'd for, (see note on Rom.6.b.) and besides, God that hath promised not to suffer his servants to be afflicted, i.e. tempted (see note on Gal.4.a.) above their strength, will be sure to make good his promise, and will give you a way of escaping their terrors, if you continue faithfull and constant, that you shall be able to bear whatsoever befalls you.

13. There hath no temptation taken you, but † such as is common to man, but God is faithfull, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that you are able; but will with the temptation also make a * way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.]

† humane, ordinary
* passage out, issue

14. To conclude therefore, let no temptation bring you to yeild to these sins, that are in their idol-feasts, (see note on ch.5.1.) nor at all to be brought to sacrifice with them.

14. Wherefore, my dearly beloved, flee from idolatry.]

15. I need not speak more plainly to you, what I mean by idolatry, you are wise enough to know, see note c.

15. I speak as to wise men: judge ye what I say.

16. The Christian feast of bread and wine in the Lord's supper, is the exhibiting to us (see note on Mat. 26. 26.) the making us partakers of the body and blood of Christ (see note on Act.2.d.) and is by us all acknowledged to be so, and therefore sure the joyning in an idol-feast, is a participating of the idol-God.

16. The [e] cup of blessing, which we blesse, is it not the † communion of the blood of Christ? The bread, which we break, is it not the * communion of the body of Christ?]

† communication
* communication

17. And all we that do partake of that one feast, are by that supposed to be one body, of the same kind one with another, and so in like manner if we joyn with heathens, and partake of their idol-feasts with them, ye are to be supposed of the same lump and mould with those heathens.

17. For we being many are one † bread, and one body; for we are all partakers * of that one † bread.]

† loaf ἄρτος
* of the one † loaf ἄρτος

18. Behold

* the sacrifices are devils

18. Behold Israel after the flesh: are not they which eat * of the sacrifices, partakers of the altar?]

18. In the Jewish sacrifices 'tis a known thing, that not onely they that sacrifice (the priests) but all they also that eat of any part of the sacrifice (the people) are said to perform service to God, to eat, as it were, and drink with God at the altar, and to partake of all the benefits that come from God upon the sacrificers.

19. What say I then? that the idol is any thing? or that which is offered in sacrifice to idols is any thing?]

19. I need not then affirm (that which the objection c. 8. 4. denyed, viz:) that an idol is any thing, or that that which is offered to a false God is in it self at all different from any ordinary meat, from the contrary of which the Gnosticks concluded, that there is no unlawfulnesse to joyn in eating at an idol-feast.

† No, but that 'An' [illegible]
* be partakers, κοινωνοὺς γίνεσθαι

20. † But I say, the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should * have fellowship with devils.]

20. No, I need not come to examin that nicety, 'tis sufficient to say in plain words, that those sacrifices of the heathens are sacrifices to devils, and that whosoever eats of the feasts joyned to those sacrifices, doth communicate and joyn, and doe service to devils, and I would not have Christians guilty of that.

21. Yee cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: yee cannot be partakers of the Lords table, and the table of devils.]

21. The Sacrament of the body and blood of Christ, wherein we communicate with, and partake of the benefits of the death of Christ, will not well agree with communicating of, and joyning with divells, see Rev: 13. note a.

22. Doe we provoke the Lord to jealousie? are we stronger then hee?]

22. Doe we joyn divels in competition or rivality with God? doe we thinke that we shall dare to give our selves up to all idolatry and heathen sin, and yet that God will not punish us? when in the second commandement hee hath expressd his jealousie against those that take in any other rivall into their worship, and threatned to visit and punish for it.

23. All things are lawfull for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawfull for me, but all things edifie not.]

23. Many things there are, see c. 13. note i. which I might lawfully doe, but that they are hurtfull and disadvantageous to others, tend not to their edification, but to the scandalizing of them, either bringing them to, or confirming them in some sinne.

† that which is another's τὸ ἑτέρου

24. Let no man seek his own, but every one † anothers wealth.]

24. And tis not fit that any should be so intent on what is lawfull for him in respect of himselfe, or what is for his own advantage, as to neglect the benefit and advantage and edification of others.

* making no inquiry μηδὲν ἀνακρίνοντες

25. Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, that eat, * asking no question for conscience sake.]

26. For the earth is the Lord's, and the fulnesse thereof.]

25,26. And whereas you object that some portions of the heathen sacrifices are sold in the markets among other meat, and that therefore, if it be not lawfull to eat what is offered to idols, ye must not eat what ye buy in the shambles, because that may be such, and then this is a great retrenchment of your Christian libety, by which ye may lawfully enjoy any of God's creatures; I answer, that in that case I may lawfully eat whatsoever is there sold, and not think my self bound in conscience to enquir and examin, whether what I meet with there, were a portion of an heathen sacrifice or no: For if no man be present to see and know that that which I eat is such a portion, or if I know it not my self, then sure I am guilty of nothing my self, nor can any other come to any hurt by this means.

† But if [illegible]

27. † If any of them that beleive not, bid you to a feast, and ye be disposed to goe, whatsoever is set before you, eat, asking no question for conscience sake.]

27. Nay farther, if it bee at an heathens own table, where 'tis more probable that such portions of their sacrifices are to be met with, then 'twas in the shambles, yet there also yee may eat freely of all, and never think your selves bound in conscience to enquire whether there be any of those portions of their sacrifices there.

* the King's MS. reads [illegible] instead of [illegible]

28. But if any man say unto you, This is offered * in sacrifice unto idols, eat not for ſ his sake that shewed it, and for conscience sake.] The earth is the Lord's, and the fulnesse thereof.

28. But in case any man take notice that that which is before you was a portion of an idol sacrifice, and punctually tell you of it, then you are not to eat of that, lest you confirm that man in (or betray him to) the sinne of idolatry by your example not understood by him aright, and so offend against a conscience. ſ.

29. Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the others: for why is my liberty judged of another man's * conscience?]

29. When I say a conscience, I mean not thine own but that other man's conscience; That is, that thou art in this case to abstain, for the sake of that other man's conscience, lest he be betraid to sinne by that meanes, v. 28. and not for thy own, for there is no reason in the world that that other man's conscience should make that simply unlawfull to me, which I receive as a gift of God, and acknowledge it from him, i. e. render it altogether unlawfull, abstracting from the scandall annex'd, which were otherwise (by the liberty which Christ hath given) perfectly lawfull to me.

* or, conscience, if I with thankſgiving partake, for the King's MS. reads [illegible]

30. For if I by grace am a partaker, why am I evill spoken of for that for which I give thanks?]

30. And certainly, abstract it from that case of scandall, and there will be no reason to finde fault with, or accuse me for eating of that, before which I say grace, blesse God for it, and eat it meerly as a blessing of his, without any respect unto any idol-god whatsoever.

31. Whether therefore ye eat or drinke, or whatsoever ye doe, doe all to the glory of God.]

31. The onely thing then considerable in this matter is the scandall, which tends to the dishonour of God, and betraying men to, or confirming them in sinne, and that must be provided against, and care be taken, that in every bit I eat, or action I doe, I may not dishonour God, or doe hurt to my brother.

32. Give none offence neither to the Jewes, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God.]

32. Let nothing you doe be apt to betray any man to sin, whether it be Jew or heathen on one side, or Christian on the other.

33. Even

33. Even as in my miniſtery, I conform my ſelf to all men, ſo as may be moſt for their advantage, not for my own, (ſee note on Rom. 14. c.) that by ſome means or other I may bring them to embrace the Goſpel, ch. 9. 20. &c.

33. Even as I pleaſe all men in all things, not ſeeking my own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be ſaved.]

Notes on Chap. X.

a. Τὸ Νεφέλιον

The Jewes have a known ſaying, (ſee note on Lu. 13. c.) that he that enters into Gods Covenant, is gathered under the wings of the majeſtatick preſence, See Maimonides Tit: Iſuri bia. cap. 13. Whenſoever, ſaith he, a Gentile will enter into covenant ולהסתופף תחת כנפי השכינה, and be gathered under the wings of Gods preſence, or glory, or majeſty, &c. The foundation of this ſpeech is to be taken from that plain truth, that God obliges himſelf to take care of, and protect all thoſe that undertake obedience to him; but the peculiarity of the expreſſion referres to the manner of Gods exhibiting himſelf in the holy of holies, viz: by the Cherubims wings overſhadowing the covering of the arke, to repreſent to us, that, as the bird covers, and defends the young ones with her wings ſpread over them (to which our Saviour referres Mat. 23. 37.) ſo doth God, that is every where preſent, peculiarly exhibit himſelf to thoſe that keep his covenant, and think upon his commandements to doe them. And what was thus repreſented in the Tabernacle, and the Temple was before more really exhibited in the departure of Iſrael out of Ægypt, For there we find mention of the cloud and the fire, Exod. 13. 21. in, or by which (the cloud by day, and the fire by night) God went before, or conducted them. Where firſt it muſt be remembred, that this [going before] doth not neceſſarily denote any diſtance of ſpace from them, ſo as a guide goes before the rider, when he is onely to teach, or direct him the way, and he followes after, but (as was more agreeable to their condition at that time, who were to be ſhielded, and protected, as well as led, and that protection noted by Gods going before them, the ſame God going behind them too, The Lord ſhall goe before thee, and the holy one of Iſrael ſhall be thy reward) an encompaſſing them on every ſide, So in * Rabbi Eleezer עמוד הענן סובבו את מחנה ישראל כעיר מוקפת חומה, the pillar of cloud encompaſt the camps of Iſrael as a wall invirons a city, and therefore when it is ſaid Exod. 14. 19. that the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and ſtood behind them, I ſuppoſe it muſt be interpreted by v. 20. that the inner part of the cloud that was next the Iſraelites, being a light ſome part, and the external ſuperficies of it not ſo, (now, when the Ægyptians purſued the Iſraelites) the cloud was ſo diſpoſed, as to be behind, as well as before them, ſhining round about them, and yet ſo to be (in reſpect of the luminous part of it) confined to them, as to give light onely to the Iſraelites, but none to the Ægyptians that followed them. And ſecondly, that the word [pillar] applied to it, is not to be looked on, as a ſolid body, ſtanding, and faſtned on the ground, and ſo ſtill paſſing before them, but as pillars were antiently built hollow, as a kind of houſe, or dwelling place, (and accordingly Simeon the Anchorite is call'd στυλίτης, becauſe he dwelt alwaies in a pillar) a concave body over their heads, and ſo coming down to the ground, like wings incloſing and encompaſſing them on every ſide, and accordingly 'tis here ſaid that they were ὑπὸ τὴν νεφέλην under the cloud, (and ſo the cloud over them, not placed, or fixt before them) which is all one with what is expreſt in other places by the clouds overſhadowing them, that it comes upon, hovering over them, as a dove before it lights on any thing, to which the Pſalmiſt referres, when he ſaith, under the ſhadow of thy wings I will rejoice, and thou ſhalt hide me under thy wings, &c. 3^dly, that this pillar of cloud, and of fire were all one, viz: a bright, ſhining cloud, ſuch as is deſcribed Mat. 17. 5. φωτὸς νεφέλη ἐπισκιάζουσα a light ſome cloud overſhadowing, For that the ſame word in Hebrew ſignifies both light and fire, hath been formerly obſerved (ſee Lu. 22. 56.) and that a fiery, or light ſome cloud, though in the day time, when the ſun ſhines, it ſhineth not, doth yet ſhine in the night, and give light, as fire, 'tis evident, And that I ſuppoſe is the reaſon why here is mention onely of the cloud, not of the fire, though in Moſes there is mention of both. All this being thus premiſed, it appears 1. how fitly it is here ſaid by the Apoſtle, that our fathers, i. e. thoſe Iſraelites that then went out of Ægypt, were under the cloud, and paſt through the ſea, Theſe two being varied phraſes of the ſame importance, For it muſt firſt be remembred that the Iſraelites paſt not ſo through the Red-ſea, as to goe over it, entring on one ſide, and going out at the other, but came out again on the ſame ſide that they went in, as appears Num. 33. 6. (where before their paſſing through the ſea, they pitched in Etham, in the edge of the wilderneſſe) compared with v. 8. where after their paſſing through the ſea they goe three daies journey in the wilderneſſe of Etham. And therefore 2^dly, this paſſing through the ſea] muſt be their entring into the chanel, ſo as the ſea firſt gave way to them, and then returned up to the ſhore again, drie ground being left to them in the midſt of the chanel, and the ſea incompaſſing, on every ſide of them, before them, behind them, on the right hand, and the left, and ſo, as the cloud environ'd them, in like manner the ſea environ'd them alſo, and as they were protected, and ſecured by the one, ſo they were by the other. And therefore 2^dly, from hence it alſo appears, why it is here ſaid of them, that they were baptized in the cloud, and in the ſea, and why by both baptized into Moſes, For Baptiſme being among the Jewes (as well as Chriſtians) the ceremony of initiation of all that entered into the Covenant, by the ſame reaſon that ſuch are ſaid to be received under the wings of the divine preſence, they may alſo be ſaid to be baptized in, or with the cloud, and ſea, that covering them with the cloud, and invironing them with the ſea, being on Gods part the receiving them under his protection to bring them ſafe to Canaan, and ſo to perform to them his part of the Covenant, and on their part, an obligation to be for ever obedient to God, under the conduct of Moſes, The aſſuming of which, is being baptized into Moſes. And this may ſerve for the literal explication of the verſe, as it belongs to the fathers. Now for the application of it * in Pirki c. 44 f. 40.

διὰ τῆς Θαλάσσης

βαπτισθῆναι ἐν τῇ νεφέλῃ, &c.

it to the matter in hand, to which it is accommodated by the Apoſtle, it ſeemeth to lie thus. The Gnoſticks were great pretenders to liberty, by reaſon of their being ſpirituall, and perfect, And among the branches of their hereſie, Saint Irenæus inſiſting at large on Marcus's followers, obſerves of them, among other things, their pretence, that they were φύσει πνευματικοὶ, naturally ſpirituall, by which meanes, ſaid they, no ſinne was able to defile them, any more then gold was defiled by being in a ſinke, or the ſunbeams by ſhining on a dunghill; Then, that they had a ſhield, or cloud or covering, which whatſoever they did, made them ἀοράτους τῷ κρατοῦντι, invisible to the Judge, and that this belong'd to all that had their ἀπολύτρωσις, redemption, as they ſtyled their baptiſm. That theſe Scholars of Marcus were after the Apoſtle's time, there is no doubt, but yet being branches of the Valentinians, it is to be thought that they did, as the ſame Irenæus ſaith of them, take the old doctrines of the Gnoſticks, and εἰς ἴδιον χαρακτῆρα μεταφράζειν accommodate them to their own manner of ſpeaking; and ſo we may, from what we finde in theſe latter, diſcern the deceits of thoſe former hereticks, that unclean ſink of the Gnoſticks, that pretended to that perfection of knowledge, called themſelves the ſpirituall, and Simon their leader pretending that he was that God the Father that appeared in Mount Sinai, they were thoſe Iſraelites, ſhielded by him with the cloud, carryed ſafe through the Red-ſea, and had a ſpeciall kinde of baptiſm, or ἀπολύτρωσις, which they, by their γνῶσις, i. e. myſtical interpretations of Moſes's writing, made proportionable and parallel to the ſeverall things here named of the Iſraelites, v. 2, 3, 4. And this ſeems to occaſion the Apoſtle's diſcourſe in this place, where following their language of themſelves, and ſuppoſing but not granting them parallel to thoſe Iſraelites, that were ſo miraculouſly led and fed, he ſhewes by their example, that if they goe on in their ſins, they muſt expect that uſage, that the Iſraelites then had, viz: to dye in the wilderneſſe, and not come to Canaan.

b. Ἀκολουθοῦσα πέτρα

The Jewes have now a relation, whether by way of ſtory, or of parable, that the water that came out of the rock in Horeb, Ex. 17. 6. or the ſtreams that flowed or overflowed, Pſal. 87. 20. did follow the Iſraelites through their journeying in the wilderneſſe; And that it did ſo, may appear probable, becauſe in that dry wilderneſſe we hear no more of their wanting water, till Cadeſh, which was ſome 36. years after this, when they had taken a contrary way in their journeying, by which means (as alſo by God's making this new tryall of them, and to that purpoſe ordering the change of their journey) that water might now ceaſe to follow them, which before, as long as the miraculous flowing laſted, might naturally, without any new miracle, follow them all their voyage. This ſaying of theirs S. Paul makes uſe of in a myſticall ſenſe, making Chriſt indeed to be the rock in a ſpirituall ſenſe, and that Chriſt, following (coming really, ſo long after, into the world) but even then (ſo long agoe) ſpiritually, and in power preſent among them.

c. Παίζειν

That the word παίζειν] here is to be taken in an unclean ſenſe, may appear probable by the uſe of the word [mocking] among the Jewes. This will be diſcerned by the Hieruſalem Targum on Gen. 21. 9. on that of Iſmael's mocking, In ſtead of theſe words in the Hebrew [Sarah ſaw the Sonne of Hagar mocking] they read by way of paraphraſe, Et vidit Sara filium Ægyptiæ facientem opera mala, qua fieri non oportuit, illudentem, & cultum peregrinum exercentem. And Sarah ſaw the Son of the Ægyptian doing evill works which ought not to be done, mocking, and exerciſing ſtrange worſhip. Where the opera mala, qua fieri non oportuit, the evil works that ought not to bee done, are the ἄθεσμα 2 Pet. 2. 7. and ἀθέμιτα 1 Pet. 4. 3. i. e. thoſe unnaturall filthy ſins, which were ſo ordinary among the heathens, uſed as part of their Gentile worſhip, and thoſe, it ſeemes, noted by the phraſe of illudere or mocking, which there and here, and in other places (according to the civility of the ſacred ſtyle) is made uſe of, rather then others which ſignifie more groſly thoſe acts of unnaturall filthineſſe. So Rabbi Solomon mentions an interpretation, that Iſmael had committed uncleanneſſe and that that is the meaning of the Hebrew צחק to mock, Gen. 39. 17. And Lyra on that of Gen. 21. ſaith that the Hebrew word is equivocall, and ſignifies ludentem, Idololatrantem, occidentem, & coeuntem, vel laſcivientem, mocking, committing Idolatry, killing, commiting uncleanneſſe and wantonneſſe. And then there will be little doubt but the words of the ſame Targum on Ex. 32. 6. (the place from which the words in this place are taken) & ſurrexerunt ſibi ludentes cultu peregrino, and they aroſe mocking themſelves after the ſtrange or heathen worſhip, may belong to that alſo. To which purpoſe tis farther obſervable that ἐμπαίζειν (which may well be reſolved Synonymous to παίζειν, but cannot ſo well be miſtaken for playing as the other may, but diſtinctly ſignifies illudere, to mock) is the rendring of צחק (which is the word in Exodus whence theſe words are cited) Gen. 39. 14. and 17. in that ſtory of Potiphar's wife and Joſeph, and certainly ſignifies uncleanneſſe there. Thus Tobit 3. 18. where Anna to ſhew her ſelf free from all uncleanneſſe ἀπὸ πάσης ἁμαρτίας ἀνδρὸς from all ſin of, or, with man, v 17. addes in Saint Jerome's tranſlation, nunquam cum ludentibus miſcui me, I never aſſociated my ſelf with them that mockt, where no doubt uncleanneſſes are meant, and 'tis probable that the Greek, which he tranſlates ludentibus was παίζουσιν,] though our Greek copies wholly leave out that part of the period. And if the comparing of the ſtory, Act. 7. 41. where 'tis ſaid in this matter [εὐφράνοντο, they rejoyced in the works of their hands] be apt to incline to the other interpretation, as ſuppoſing that παίζειν to play is all one with ἐυφραίνεσθαι to rejoyce, and conſequently that both denote their dancing before the idol, it will be eaſily anſwered, that ἐυφραίνεσθαι rejoycing] there ſignifies moſt properly the rejoycing at a feaſt, Lu. 12. 19. and 15. 23. 24. 29. 32. and 16. 19. and ſo following the offering of ſacrifice to their idols, ſhall note the ſacrificiall feaſt, and be all one with eating and drinking here, but not with παίζειν, whether playing, or mocking, that attends it; and ſo ſtill παίζειν may fitly thus be interpreted, eſpecially when in this place it followes immediately after [ἐπεθύμησαν πονηρῶν luſters after evill things] (in the notion that [πονηρῶς ζῆν to live ill] is uſed by Phavorinus in the word ἀσωτῶ wanton, i. e. for this this very ſin, and ſo κακὰ ἰλιτσσε Rem. 1. 29.) and is attended with μηδὲ πορνεύωμεν neither let us commit fornication, &c. referring to that other act of the like ſin, Num. 25. 2, 3. and thence, I ſuppoſe, it is, that to his exhortation of flying from Idolatry v. 14. he ſubjoyns v. 15. I ſpeak to wiſe men, judge ye what I ſay, not willing to ſpeak more plainly, or to adde more words on that ſubject, ſee note on Eph. 5. c.

Ἐυφραίνεσθαι

d. Ἐξολοθρευτὴς That which is here called ὀλοθρευτὴς deſtroyer] is in the Hieruſalem Targum, Exod. 4. 26. called perdens, and that there explained by Angelus mortis, a meſſenger of the Lord's, ver. 24. that came to kill him. This is otherwhere called the deſtroying Angel, for what is here ſaid, they were deſtroyed by the deſtroyer, is in the ſtory, from whence 'tis taken, Num. 14. 37. they died by the plague before the Lord. So the Angels that came to Lot's houſe are ſent to deſtroy the city, Gen. 19. 13. In all which and many more places where plagues are ſaid to be inflicted of God by Angels, it doth not appear that the Angels uſed as inſtruments of thoſe plagues, are the fall'n Angels or devils, but thoſe heavenly, that wait on God to execute his wrath, as well as conveigh mercies. Thus God's coming with his Angels is an expreſſion of deſtructions, and yet thoſe are μυριάδες ἁγίαι holy myriads, Jude 14. or multitudes of heavenly Angels (ſee note on Jude d.) Μυριάδες ἁγίων

The Jewes uſed to conclude the feaſt wherein the Paſchal lamb was eaten with a cup of wine. This they called כוס של מזגה the cup of praiſing, becauſe they ſang an hymne at that time, ſee Mat. 26. 30. and εὐλογίας of bleſſing, and from thence the receiving the wine in the ſacrament being by Chriſt inſtituted after his paſchal ſupper, is here called by that title. Of the word εὐλογεῖν to bleſſe, ſee note on Mat. 14. c. e. Πότήριον εὐλογίας

If theſe words be to be read in this place, the meaning of them will be, that in a matter of this nature of eating, they have little temptation to ſin againſt conſcience, when they conſider the great ſtore of other food, even all the plenty of the world, which they may lawfully enjoy, and let the idol-ſacrifices alone. But the King's MS. which leaves them out, ſeems to be in the right (and 'tis eaſie to imagine how the tranſcribers might here inſert them on occaſion of διὰ συνείδησιν here, the ſame words after which v. 25. theſe words had followed) and then the 29th ver. will immediately adhere to the end of v. 28. becauſe of conſcience; Conſcience, I ſay &c. which connexion will be otherwiſe diſturbed. f. τῆς ἔξω ὑ γῆ

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XI.

1. And doe ye in like manner, as oft as there is occaſion for the good of others, deny your ſelves the uſe of your Chriſtian liberty.

1. BE yee followers of me, even as I alſo am of Chriſt.]

2. Now for you that have written this letter to me, and asked my adviſe in all theſe particulars, I cannot but commend you, that ye have been ſo mindfull of my doctrine, that ye have adhered ſo cloſe to it, that ye have not been ſeducible by any falſe teachers, in any of theſe particulars, but have appealed to me, for my opinion of them.

2. Now I praiſe you, brethren, that you remember me in all things, and keep the * ordinances as I delivered them to you.] * traditions παραδόσεις

3. To proceed then to your next quære, In order to matters of decency in the Church, it is fit for you to conſider the ſubordination of perſons in the Church, viz: that as Chriſt in reſpect of his office of mediator is under God, but above all men, ſo the man being under Chriſt is above all women, and conſequently that their garb in the Church muſt be proportionable to this.

3. But I would have you know that the head of every man is Chriſt: and the head of the woman is the man, and the head of Chriſt is God.]

4. Every man that doth any office in the Church, that either praies, or expounds the word of God, or ſings Pſalms &c. (ſee note on Lu. 1. m.) if he doe it with his head and face covered, this is indecent, againſt the liberty and dignity of his ſex, it being a ſigne of ſhame and infamy in a man to have his head and face covered.

a. 4. Every man praying or prophecying, having his head covered, † [a] diſhonoreth his head.] † reproacheth

5. But every woman that doth any office in the Church, that is at prayer, or expounding, or ſinging Pſalmes &c. (ſee note on Lu. 1. m.) and hath her head or face uncovered, this is contrary to decency in her, againſt the modeſty, and meeknetſe of her ſex, as much as it is for her to cut her haire, and weare it as men doe.

5. But every woman that prayeth or prophecieth with her head uncovered, * diſhonoureth her head: for it is even all one, as if ſhe were ſhaven.] * reproacheth, note a.

6. The uſe that is made of the not cutting a woman's haire, of letting it be worn at the length, is that it may be a kind of veile or covering to her, ver. 15. which is an argument, that as 'tis uncomely, or unfaſhionable for her to have her haire cut after the manner of men, ſo it is uncomely to have her head uncovered after the manner of men, the diſtinction of ſexes being to be maintained in the one, as well as in the other.

6. For if the woman be not covered, let her alſo be ſhorn: but if it be a ſhame for a woman to be ſhorn or ſhaven, let her be covered.]

7. For the man indeed is to be uncovered, that being a ſigne of power and majeſty, and man (being the image of God, and a beam and irradiation, as it were, of God) is an image of his power and majeſty, and therefore ought ſo to appear, but the woman ſhe is but the beam of the man, having no power but from him, and ſo her ſubjection to the husband being her duty, ſhe therefore is to be covered, which is a ſigne of that ſubjection.

b. 7. For the man indeed ought not to cover his head, for as much as he is the image and [b] glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.]

8. As you know in the forming of man and woman, the woman was made of the rib of the man, and ſo is to be reſolved inferior to him.

8. For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man.]

9. And the creation of the woman was, that ſhe might be the helper, miniſterial and uſefull to the man, not ſo the man to the woman, which is another proof of her being inferior to him, and that a reaſon ſtill, why ſhe ſhould wear a covering on her head, eſpecially in the time of divine ſervice, where her behaviour ought to be moſt decent, and agreeable to her condition.

9. Neither was the man created for the woman, but the woman for the man.]

10. For

† a covering

10. For this cauſe ought the woman to have † [c] power [d] on her head * because of the Angels.]

10. And eſpecially when the Angels are c. d. e.

generally beleived to be preſent in the places of God's publick worſhip, this piece of decency in the woman, her being covered, ought moſt ſtrictly to be obſerved, as we will be moſt carefull of doing no indecent thing in the preſence of ſuch pure divine ſpirits.

11. Nevertheleſſe, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man in the Lord.]

11. But this inferiority of the wife to the husband muſt not ſo be urged, that the man being independent from her, ſhould be thought to have no reſpect unto her, (which may be ſeaſonable to tell the Gnoſticks, who were great deſpiſers of marriage) any more then the woman ſhould be from the man.

* was out of is

12. For as the woman * is of the man, even ſo is the man alſo by the woman; but all things are of God.]

12. For as the woman was formed out of Adam's rib, ſo all the ſons of Adam were born and conceived and propagated by women, and man and woman united by God, from whom all things are.

13. Judge in your ſelves, is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?]

13. But for that of women's behaviour in the place of publick ſervice, judge you by what is decent among you, is this decent for her to have her head uncovered in time of divine ſervice?

† weare his haire at length, 'tis reproach, ἀτιμία-ὸν

14. Doth not even [f] nature it ſelf teach you, that if a man † have long haire, it is a ſhame unto him?]

14. Doth not the f.

univerſal cuſtome of all nations make this diſtinction between ſexes, that men wear their haire cut, and that is decent in them.

* weare her haire at length, note f.

15. But if a woman * have long haire, it is a glory to her: for her haire is given her for a covering.]

15. And women do not, but weare it at length, and that is decent in them; and to what purpoſe is this, but that their haire may be a kind of vaile or covering to them?

16. But if any man ſeem to be contentious, we have no ſuch cuſtome, neither the Churches of God.]

16. And if after all this any man will ther contend in this matter, all that I ſhall adde, is, the conſtant cuſtome of all the Apoſtolicall Churches, that women in the Churches ſhould conſtantly be veiled, and that may be of ſufficient authority with you.

† This I warn you of, and commend you not, for the King's MS. reads παραγγέλων δὲ ὑμῖν οὐκ ἐπαινῶ

17. Now † in this that I declare unto you, I praiſe you not, that you come together, not for the better, but for the worſe.]

17. Now one thing

there is, wherein you are much to be blamed, that your aſſemblies are not ſo Chriſtian as they ought.

18. For firſt of all, when ye come together in the Church, I heare that there be diviſions among you, and I partly beleive it.]

18. For firſt I am told, and I have ſome reaſon to beleive it, that there are diviſions and factions among you, which expreſſe themſelves in your aſſemblies.

* diviſions διχοστασίαι † the ſincere δόκιμοι

19. For there muſt be alſo * hereſies among you, that † they which are approved may be made manifeſt among you.]

19. And indeed

there is ſome good uſe to be made of diviſions among Chriſtians, that ſo the honeſt and orthodox may be more taken notice of.

* it is not, or, 'tis not poſſible, οὐκ ἔστι

20. When ye come together therefore into one place, * this is not to eat the Lord's ſupper.

20. That which I am to blame in you, is, that your publick common meetings, which ſhould be as at the table of the Lord, to eat a Church-meal, a common Chriſtian feaſt, are indeed much otherwiſe, none of that communicativeneſſe and charity among you, as is required in ſuch, ſee note on Act. 1. e.

† takes his own ſupper, for the Kgs MS. reads προλαμβάνει

21. For in eating every one † taketh before other his own ſupper; and one is hungry, and another is drunken.]

21. For at your feaſts of charity accompanying the Lord's ſupper, which were intended for the relief of the poor, and wherein all the gueſts are to be equal, no man to take place, or eat before another, no man to pretend any right to what he brought, but every man to contribute to the common table, and to eat in common with all others, this cuſtome is utterly broken among you; he that brings a great deale, falls to that, as if it were in his own houſe, at his own meal, and ſo feeds to the full, whereas another, which was not able to bring ſo much, is faine to goe hungry home, and ſo your meetings are more to feed your ſelves, then to practiſe a piece of Chriſtian charity, to which thoſe ſacramental aſſemblies were inſtituted.

* put them to ſhame that have nothing καταισχύνετε τοὺς μὴ ἔχοντας

22. What, have ye not houſes to eat and to drink in? or deſpiſe ye the Church of God? and * ſhame them that have not? what ſhall I ſay to you? ſhall I praiſe † you in this? I praiſe you not.]

22. This certainly is to doe as you were wont at home, and you may as well ſtay there, and doe thus; this is quite contrary to the inſtitution of Church-meetings, and the not onely ſending away hungry, but even reproaching and putting to ſhame thoſe that are in want, and are not able to bring any great offering along with them. This ſure is a great fault among you.

† you? In this I praiſe you not. ἐπαινῶ; Ἐν τούτῳ οὐκ ἐπαινῶ ὑμᾶς,

23. For I have received of the Lord that which I alſo delivered unto you, that the Lord Jeſus, the ſame night in which he was betrayed, took bread,

24. And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and ſaid, Take, eat, this is my body which is broken for you; this doe in remembrance of me.

23, 24. For from Chriſt it was that I received (though I were not preſent there) what I delivered in my preaching among you, that Chriſt, when he inſtituted his laſt ſupper, took, and bleſſed the bread, and then eat it not all himſelf, nor preferred any one before another by a more liberal portion, but gave it in an equall diſtribution to every one at the table, and that as an expreſſion and token of his giving his life for all of them, without preferring one before another, and then appointed all diſciples to imitate this action of his, to meet and eat as at a common table, not one to engroſſe all or deprive others, and ſo to commemorate the death of Chriſt, and the unconfined mercy of that, by this ſignificative typical charity of theirs.

* Covenant διαθήκη

25. After the ſame manner alſo he took the cup, when he had ſupped, ſaying, This cup is the new * Teſtament in my blood; this doe ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.]

25. And when ſupper was ended, he took alſo the grace-cup cup (ſee note on c. 10. e.) and delivered it about, telling them, that this action of his was an emblem of that covenant of grace and bounty, which he would ſeal in his blood to all, without reſpect of perſons, and commanding them to imitate and commemorate this impartiall charity of his, whenſoever they met together at the holy table.

26. And doe yee, ſaith he, in all your ſacred feſtivals thus ſhew forth to God and man, this gracious act of my bounty in giving my life for my people, and continue this ceremony, till I come again at the end of the world.

26. For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, * ye doe ſhew the Lord's death till he come.] * declare yee καταγγέλλετε

27. So that to offend in this kinde against this inſtitution of this feaſt, by doing contrary to the univerſal charity deſigned therein, is to ſin againſt the body and blood of Chriſt, to take off from the univerſality of Chriſt's goodneſſe and mercy in that death of his.

27. † Wherefore whoſoever ſhall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord unworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.] † So that ὥστε

28. It is therefore fit that every man examine himſelf throughly, whether he be rightly grounded in the faith of Chriſt, of which this Sacrament is an emblem, and accordingly when upon examination he hath alſo approved himſelf (ſee note on Rom. 2. f.) when he is fitly prepared, let him come to that table, and partake of it in a Chriſtian manner.

28. But let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.]

g. 29. And hee that doth come without that preparation, and ſo underſtands not the truth of Chriſt's univerſall mercy in his death, ſignified by this inſtitution of the Lord's ſupper, or conſequently receives it not in an holy manner, incurres damnation, in ſtead of receiving benefit by ſuch eating and drinking of it.

29. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himſelf, not ᵍ diſcerning the Lord's body.]

30. And the want of this due preparation to, and performance of this duty, the factions and diviſions that are among you, have brought many puniſhments upon ſome of you, afflictions (ſee Gal. 4. a.) diſeaſes, and death it ſelf, as was threatned upon thoſe who at the feaſt of the Paſſeover put not all leaven out of their houſes. Exod: 12. 19.

30. For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and * many ſleep.] * Some ἱκανοὶ

31. Which had never fallen upon you, if you had not by ſuch faults needed admonition and diſcipline, God never puniſhing them that doe not ſtand in ſome need of being awaked thus, and ſtirr'd up by his puniſhments.

31. For if we would † judge our ſelves we ſhould not be judged.] † Examin διακρίνωμεν

32. And when wee are puniſhed, 'tis for our good, that being reformed by ſtripes, we may be freed from thoſe puniſhments which fall on the unreformed to all eternity.

32. But when we are judged we are chaſtned of the Lord, that we ſhould not be condemned with the world.]

33. To conclude then, when ye meet at one of theſe Chriſtian feſtivals, have that care and charity to all others as well as your ſelves, that all eat together by equality, as having a common right to a feaſt of charity, that ſo ye may celebrate it as ye ought to doe.

33. Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.]

34. And hee that cannot doe thus, let him ſtay at home, and eat there, for he may there diſpoſe of himſelf as he pleaſe, which here he muſt not doe, and his making no difference betwixt a meale at home, and this Chriſtian feſtivall in the aſſembly, is a great ſinne in him, and may expect puniſhment accordingly.

For the other particulars mention'd by you, I will deferre the ordering of them, till I come my ſelf unto you.

34. And if any man hunger, let him eat at home, that ye come not together to condemnation. * And the reſt will I ſet in order when I come.] * As for the other things I will when I come give appointment for them. Τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ, ὅτε ἂν ἔλθω διατάξομαι.

Notes on Chap. XI.

a. It was a part of the puniſhment of malefactors among ſeverall nations, to have a covering put over their faces, and therefore in the Roman form of giving ſentence, this was part, Caput obnubito, Cover his head, and that belong'd to the whole head, the face alſo. So among the Perſians in the ſtory of Heſter, c. 7. 8. the word went out of the Kings mouth, and they covered Hamans face; And this ſeems to be the literall notation of κατὰ κεφαλῆς ἔχων, having over the head] which is here uſed, ſo having upon the head, as comes down upon the face alſo, as that differs from ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς ἔχειν, having the vaile upon the head onely. This therefore, which was the faſhion of condemned perſons, is juſtly ſaid καταισχύνειν τὸν κεφαλὸν αὐτῆς, to reproach, or ſhame his head. Κατηφόνειν τὸν κεφαλὸν

b. The Hebrew כבוד ſignifies both glory and beam (the beams of the ſunne being ſo glorious, that all glory is deſcribed by them) and is rendred both by δόξα & ἀπαύγασμα, & one of them may be here taken for the other, δόξα glory for ἀπαύγασμα beam or irradiation, ſuch a beam, which flowing from another, derived from another, implyes that, from whence it flowes, to be more honourable. Or elſe the word may ſignifie ſimilitude, likeneſſe, in both places of this verſe, for ſo it is uſed by the Septuagint, Num. 12. 8. δόξα κυρίου the ſimilitude of the Lord, and Pſal. 17. 15. δόξα σου, thy likeneſſe, where the Hebrew hath תמונה in both places. And ſo here it will agree with εἰκὼν, the man is the image and ſimilitude of God, and the woman of the man. Δόξα

What the word ἐξουσία ſignifies here, will be beſt conjectur'd, not by harkning to the critickall emendation of Jacobus Gothofredus, who would read ἐξυβίαν the Latine exuvian in ſtead of it, but by looking on the Hebrew word which ſignifies the woman's hood or veile and that is רְדִיד, whoſe theme רדד ſignifies dominion or power over any thing or perſon, according to which notion of the theme, the word ἐξουσία muſt needs be anſwerable to the Hebrew רְדִיד and conſequently, though it ſignifie power primarily, is yet fitly ſet here to ſignifie a veile (and by the Vulgar tranſlation in ſome copies rendred velamen) by the ſame proportion, as רְדִיד deduced from the root ſignifying power, is put for a woman's veile, Cant. 5. 7. and Iſa. 3. 23. and ſo Gen. 24. 65. and 38. 14. and explain'd by the Targum by צניף a veile, peplum, theriſtrum, ſuch as Rebecca and Tamar uſed. And this more c. Ἐξουσία de Dom. Mariæ c. 3.

fidly in respect of the discourse, or rationall importance of this place, which v. 8. proves that the woman should weare a covering in token of her husband's power over her. So when Eustathius a Bishop of Sebastia in Constantine's time, among other things τὰς γυναῖκας κείρειν περιεκέλευεν, caused women to be polled, against him the Councell of Gangra made a * Canon in these words, ὅστις γυναικὸν διὰ νομιζομένην ἄσκησιν ἀποκείροιτο τὴν κόμην, ἂς ἔδωκεν ὁ θεὸς εἰς ὑπομονὴν τῆς ὑποταγῆς, ὡς ἀνατρέπουσα σχῆμα τῆς ὑποταγῆς, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω, If any woman for some exercise of pretended piety shall poll her haire, which God gave for a remembrance of subjection, let her be excommunicate, as one that dissolves the ordinance of obedience or subordination of the woman to the man; So Photius Epist. 210. The women ought to be subject to the man, καὶ τῆς ὑποταγῆς σύμβολα τὸ ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς κάλυμμα φέρειν, and bear the sign of her subjection, a covering on her head, which hee there sets as the meaning of this place; As for that on which this whole interpretation is founded, the custome of using one Greek word for another, when the Hebrew signifies both, it hath been formerly observed, note on Mar. 14. f. and need not now seem strange, or be repeated again.

* Can. 17.

d. Κεφαλὴ

The woman's head] signifies her head and face both, which were customarily covered with a veile, and 'twas counted immodest to be without it, according to that saying of Rabbi Abraham in the Talmud, tract: Sota, that the bare uncovering of the head is immodest for the daughters of Israel. See Schickard de jure Regio p. 134. Thus among other writers also. Plutarch in Problem: Rom: Συνεδίσκευ ταῖς μὲν γυναιξὶν ἐγκεκαλυμμέναις, τοῖς δὲ ἀνδράσιν ἀκαλύπτοις διὰ τὸ δημόσιον σχολάζειν. It is the custom (and consequently decent) for women to come into the publicke covered, and for men uncovered. And Clemens Alex: Pedag: l. 2. c. 10. Ἐγκεκαλύφθαι δὲ τὴν κεφαλὴν, καὶ τὸ σχῆμα ἐπιεικῶς σκεπάζεται, ὑπὲ γὰρ ὕπνου ἄνευ θαρρεῖν ἀνθρώπου τὸ κάλλος τῇ σιμάλει. T was appointed that the heads and faces of women should be covered and shaded, and that the beauty of the body should not be a snare to catch men. So saith Dicaearchus of the Thebanes, ἰμαλλίων δὲ τῆς κεφαλῆς κάλυμμα πιῦτί ἐστι, ὅθεν σχεδὸν δοκεῖν πᾶν τὸ σχῆμα κεκαλύφθαι, οἱ γὰρ ὀφθαλμοὶ διαφαίνονται μόνοι, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ μέρη τῷ σχήματι πάντα καλύπτεται τοῖς ἱματίοις. Their heads and faces were all covered, as with a mask, and nothing but their eyes to be seen. And so of the city of Tarsus (Saint Paul's countrey) saith Dio Chrysostom, that the women came so attired into publick, ὡς μηδὲν ἀυτῶν μέρος ἰδεῖν τινὰ, μήτε τὸ πρόσωπον, μήτε λοιπὸν σῶμα, that no part, either of their face, or the rest of their body might be seen. And for those that have not used, or retained that custom of wearing veiles or coverings, yet the universall custom of women among all people, is to wear their hair at length, and that is usefull to cover their faces, and necks, and shoulders, and that is the reason of the mentioning their long hair, that nature teaches them, v. 15. and that it is as fit for her to be shaven, as uncovered, v. 6.

e. διὰ τοῦτο γίνεται

The presence of God, in any one place more then in another, is not easily conceivable by any, And therefore that any place should be called his house, or place of residence, his temple wherein he dwels, 2 Cor. 6. 19. must needs be in some other respect, and what that is, is sufficiently explicated by Jacob, who upon the vision of Angels at Luz, awakes, and sayes, that the place was venerable, and that God was in it, and that it was the house of God; which concludes that the appearance, or presence of Angels, is that, from which God is said to be peculiarly present any where, and which fits that place to be God's house, and thus Eccles. 5. 5. when we read, from the Hebrew, before the Angel, the Septuagint interpret it ἐνώπιον τοῦ θεοῦ before the face of God, making the Angel and God's presence all one. Thus Psal. 68. the Myriads of Angels are said to be God's Chariots, places to receive God, as he is said to sit on the Cherubims, and to flye on the wings of the wind or Angelicall spirits: Psal. 18. Agreeable to this was it, that God was said to be in the arke between the Cherubims, and that the arke was therefore called the glory, the Schechinah, or inhabitation of God, and many things of this nature in the Old Testament (see note on Mat. 3. k.) And proportionably, both under the Old and New Testament, the Angels have been thought to bee present in the places of God's publick service. Thus Philo περὶ ἀγάπ: p. 541. speaking of the hymnes of Moses, saith they were composed διὰ πολλῆς ἁρμονίας καὶ συμφωνίας ἵνα μὴ μόνον ἐγκεκλεισμένον ἀνθρωπίνῳ καὶ ἄγγελοι λειτουργοὶ, with all kinde of harmony and symphony, that men and angels, which attend, doe hear, making the Angels, as well as men, auditors of the hymnes in the Temple, and, as it followes, ἵνα ἐπισκοποῦσι μὴ τι τῶν ἀδῶν ἐκπεσὸν, overseers to look that all be done as it ought. So Tertullian de Orat: Angelo adhuc orationis adstante, the Angel of prayer standing by. So Chrysostom speaking of the disorderlinesse of some in the Church, οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι μετ' ἀγγέλων ἕστηκας, saith he, knowest thou not that thou standest with the Angels, μεθ' ἑαυτῶν ἄδεις, μεθ' ἑαυτῶν ὑμνεῖς, καὶ ἕστηκας γελῶν; thou singest with them, praysest God with them (referring questionlesse to the ancient form in the Liturgy, with Angels and Archangels &c. wee laud and magnifie &c.) and standest thou laughing? Agreeable to which is that of the Psalmist in the Septuag: translation, Psal: 138. 1. ἐναντίον ἀγγέλων ψαλῶ σοι, In the presence of the Angels I will sing unto thee, which, that it belongs to the Temple, appears by that which followes v. 2. προσκυνήσω πρὸς ναὸν ἅγιόν σου, I will worship toward thy holy temple, i. e. the Sanctuary, they standing in atrio, in the court, not in ναῷ in the Sanctuary, when they worshipt. So in Saint Basil's Liturgie, we have this form, Δέσποτα κύριε ὁ θεὸς ἡμῶν ὁ καθίσας ἐν ὑπερνοῖς τὰ πάσματα, καὶ στρατιὰς ἀγγέλων &c. εἰς λειτουργίαν τῆς σῆς δόξης, πέμπον σὺν τῇ ἁγίᾳ σου εἴσοδον ἀγίων ἀγγέλων γίνεσθαι συλλειτουργοῦντων ἡμῖν, καὶ συνδοξολογούντων τῇ χρηστότητί σου, O Lord our God that constitutest the orders and hosts of Angels in heaven for the ministery of thy glory, make thy holy Angels enter with us, that we may officiate and praise thy goodnesse together. Thus saith * Procopius of God, that he doth by the Angels οἰκείαν ποιῶν ἐπιφάνειαν ἐν ναῷ, exhibit himself, or appear peculiarly in the Temple. And so in the very heathen Plutarch (περὶ ἐκλειψ: χρησ:) speaking of the δαίμονες, which differ little in their notion from that of Angels among Christians, he saith of them, that they are ἐπίσκοποι τῶν ἱερῶν, καὶ μυστηρίων ἐφορικοὶ, overseers of their divine offices and prieſts of their myſteries, and Iamblichus to the ſame purpoſe, that every Temple hath its keepers. Which being ſuppoſed and taken for granted, the account will be clear, why the woman muſt be covered, becauſe of the Angels, i. e. that ſhe ought to doe that which was moſt decent, in that place, where the Angels were preſent to behold them, and that yet more particularly, when ſhe hath thoſe Angels (which uſe to be preſent in ſuch places) for her example alſo, who by covering their faces uſe to teſtifie their ſubjection toward God, for ſo we read of the Seraphim, Iſa. 6. 2. with two wings they covered their face. To which Photius addes Epiſt: 210. that the Angels are ὑποπταὶ καὶ μάρτυρες τῆς ἀνδρὸς γενέσεως ἀνῶσι καὶ προόδου, lookers on, and witneſſes of the womans production out of the man.

f. φύσις

What is meant by φύσις here, which is ſaid to teach that men are to cut, women not to cut their haire, may be gueſs'd 1. by the practiſe and vow of the Nazarites, of never cutting their haire, which yet was allowed and commended by God in ſome men, which it would not have been, if the practiſe had been againſt the law of nature, or if that were the notion of φύσις here. 2^dly, by the words precedent v. 13. πρέπον ἐστὶ &c. is it decent? which though it belong to the woman's praying uncovered, yet when being uncovered and cutting her haire are made unfit upon the ſame principle, v. 6. the τὸ πρέπον or decency will be an interpretation of the φύσις nature, as v. 6. αἰσχρὸν uncomely is applied to both the being ſhaven, and uncovered. 3^dly, by the notion of φύσις in other Authors for cuſtome, ſo ἤδη ἔθισιν φύσεις cuſtomes are acquired natures in Galen, and in Ariſtotle Rhet: l. 1. c. 11. καὶ γὰρ τὸ εἰθισμένον ὥσπερ πεφυκὸς ἤδη γίνεται, ὅμοιον γὰρ τὸ ἔθος τῇ φύσει, ἐγγὺς γὰρ τὸ πολλάκις τῷ ἀεί ἐστιν, ἡ δὲ ἀεὶ μᾶλλον φύσις τῆς ἀεί, τὸ δὲ ἔθος τῆς πολλάκις, cuſtome and nature are neer and like one another, and that which is frequently done is next that which is alwaies done. And therefore when in Lucian, in the perſon of Demoſthenes we have συγγνωστέ μοι μὴ πεφυκότι ῥᾳδίῳ γενέσθαι, pardon me, that am not born to be ill, or naturally ill, Phil: Melanchthon renders it ignoſcas mihi, qui non conſuevi inconſtans eſſe, pardon me that am not wont to be ſo, that being an ordinary notion of πεφυκέναι among Authors, and ſo 'tis ordinary for that to be called the law of nature, which was but the law of nations, ὅπερ ἔθος ἦν, ἢ ἔθνη χρῶνται τινα, which one nation, or ſome nations uſe, in Harmenopulus, ἐξάβ: l. 1. tit: 1. And ſo in the Digeſts (de ſtat: Hom: l. lex naturæ,) that which was but the law of many nations, ut qui naſcitur ſine legitimo matrimonio matrem ſequatur (which, though it held among the Grecians and Romans, did not among other nations) is called Lex naturæ, the law of nature, as on the other ſide, Dio Chryſ: ἔθος, of cuſtome, comprehends the law of nature under that ſtyle. 4^thly, by the uſe of the word φύσει in the New Teſtament, as Epheſ. 2. 3. τέκνα φύσει ὀργῆς, children of wrath by nature, applied to the national univerſal cuſtome of idolatry among the Gentiles, as appears v. 2. in which you (Epheſian Gentiles) ſometimes walked, and ver. 3. among whom we all (we Romans, from whom he wrote) ἀνεστράφημέν ποτε, ſometime converſed, ὡς καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ as the reſt alſo of the heathen world. Juſt as the ſame Idolaters Wiſd. 13. 1. are called φύσει μάταιοι, vain, i. e. idolatrous by that general cuſtome among them. To this matter the teſtimony of Suidas is moſt clear on the word φύσις, where having enlarged on the ſignification of it in Philoſophy, he adds, ὅταν δὲ ὁ Ἀπόστολος λέγῃ, καὶ ἡμεῖς τέκνα φύσει ὀργῆς, ὡς καὶ λοιποὶ, ὁ αὐτὸς τοῦτο τὸ σημαινόμενον φύσεως λέγει, ἐπεὶ τῇ πατρικῇ οὐ λέγεται τὸ ἔγκλημα, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἔμφυτον καὶ κακίαν διάθεσιν καὶ πονηρὰν καὶ πονηρὸν συνήθειαν, but when the Apoſtle hath thoſe words [which were by nature &c.] he takes not the word, Nature, in this notion, but for an evil, durable diſpoſition or chronical cuſtome. So when the Apoſtle ſaith of the Gentiles, that παρὰ φύσιν beſide nature they were graffed into a good olive tree, being but a wild olive themſelves, Rom. 11. 24. he ſure means by [nature] the cuſtome of the Jewes, which by analogie with Levit. 19. 17. was extended to a prohibition of graffing one fruit-tree into another kind, or elſe he referres to the conſtant cuſtome and rules of gardening, never to graffe an ill fruit upon a good ſtock. And ſo ſure 'tis in this place, either the univerſal cuſtome of all nations, or the faſhion of the place, or of the generality of people, for men and women to diſtinguiſh their ſexes by cutting or not cutting of the haire.

Παρὰ φύσιν

g. διασείσῃ

The Hebrew קדש ſignifies two things, to ſanctifie, and to diſcriminate, and is accordingly ſometimes rendred by ἁγιάζειν, and one by διασείειν Joſ. 20. 7. From hence it ſeems to be that διασείσῃ here, being the literal rendring of one notion of the Hebrew קדש is taken for the other of hallowing or ſanctifying the Lord's body, i. e. eating the Lord's ſupper (in a different manner from that of eating our ordinary meale, or ἴδιον δεῖπνον our own ſupper, viz:) as the inſtitution of Chriſt, to repreſent his death for the world, and the diffuſive mercy of that, by our Chriſtian liberality, and furniſhing a common table, where the poor, as well as rich, may feaſt, and not the rich eat all to themſelves, which is the profaning of that feaſt of the body of Chriſt.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XII.

1. Now to that other part of your letter, concerning thoſe that are moved and acted by the Spirit, whether good or ill, (ſee c. 14. 37. and note on Lu. 9. d.) and foretell &c. by that means, I deſire to admoniſh and direct you, brethren, and to give you ſome characters to diſcriminate one from the other, when they come into your aſſemblies, as ſometimes ſome with evil ſpirits did (Euſeb: Hiſt: l. 4. 16.) and as Simon the Magician is ſaid to have contended with S. Peter.

1. NOW concerning * ſpiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.] * the ſpiritual συνευματικῶν

2. When ye were heathens, ye know the oracles pretended to foretell things to come, and by your deſire to know ſuch things, ye were ſeduced to idols, which were ſo farre from being able to preſage, that they were not able to ſpeak, and the anſwers that were given you there, were neither given you by the idols, nor their prieſts, but by the devil in them.

2. Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto theſe dumb idols, even as ye were led.]

3. Where-

3. Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God, calleth Jesus † accursed: and that no man can say, * that Jesus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghost.]

† anathema accursed
* the Lord Jesus κύριος Iesus

3. The way therefore to discriminate them, is this, that no man who pretends spiritual gifts in the Church, who is led or speaks by the Spirit of God, will ever speak evil of Jesus, and no such man again hath any of those extraordinary powers of miracles, &c. and doth them in the name of Christ, but he is acted by the holy Spirit, the doctrine and commands of Christ being so contrary to, and destructive of the evil spirits, and their designes among men, that the devil will never assist men with his power to set up that.

4. Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.]

4. But of the gifts that come from the Spirit of God there are differences, and though all men doe not the same things, yet in them all the Spirit is the same.

5. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord.]

5. And there are diversities of offices and ministeries, but all performed to the one true God.

6. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God, which worketh † all in all.]

† them all in all men, πάντα ἐν πᾶσιν

6. And there are diversities of afflictions or inspirations, but the God that worketh all these in all men, is the same.

7. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man * to profit withall.]

* for that which is profitable πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον

7. But the exercise of these spiritual gifts whereby the Spirit manifests it self in any man, is designed still for some benefit or advantage of the Church, and therefore those powers that tend to no use or advantage in the Church, are to be suspected not to come from the Spirit of God.

8. For to one is given by the Spirit, the word of wisdome, to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit.]

8. The gift that one man hath from the Spirit is the special ability of speaking parables, and veiling wise conceptions: Another hath the understanding and interpreting the mysteries of scripture, (see note on ch. 1. c. and note on 2 Pet. 1. c.)

9. To another faith by the same Spirit, to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit.]

9. Another hath a miraculous faith, or by which he works all kind of miracles, another hath from the same Spirit a peculiar power of curing diseases without the help of physick.

† the operations of powers ἐνεργήματα δυνάμεων

10. To another † the working of miracles, to another prophecie, to another discerning of spirits, to another diverse kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues.]

10. Another hath strange formidable powers of inflicting diseases, nay death it self, on malefactors (see note d.) Another the faculty of interpreting scripture. Another of knowing men's hearts, whether they be sincere or no, (in order to Ecclesiastical discipline in censures and diseases.) Another to speak some languages which he was never taught (see note g.) which served both as a miraculous act to confirm the Gospel, and as a help to reveal it to men of all countries. Another the power of interpreting strange languages to such in the congregation, who had not understood the language in which the Apostles had spoken, ver. 30.

11. But all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.

12. For as the body is one, and hath many members: and all the members of that one body being many are one body: [so also is Christ.]

12. so in like manner is Christ and his Church many members in one body, see Gal. 3. note d.

13. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jewes or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free: and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.]

13. For in baptisme being made partakers of the same Spirit we are entred into one body to be fellow-members with all Christians of what quality or sort soever we are: And the cup of charity or thanksgiving, appointed by Christ in his last supper to be used in his Church, is a token and band of the same unity among Christians, and signifies the animating of all by the same Spirit.

14. For the body is not one member, but many.

15. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16. And if the eare shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17. If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?]

14,15,16,17. For as the body is made up of severall members for severall uses, so is the Church of Christ, each of them profitable for some end, and therefore though one be inferiour to some others, yet hath that no reason to envy them.

18. But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.]

18. It hath therefore seemed best to God to give severall men severall offices in the Church, which they are to be content with, not repining that they are not more honourably employed.

19. And if they were all one member, where were the body?]

19. For if every member were equall to all others, there could not be a subordination, and assignation to severall offices, as in a body there must be.

20. But now are they many members, yet but one body.]

20. And therefore God hath so ordered it, that each should have his peculiar office, and all together be united into one body.

21. And the eye cannot say to the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you.]

21, 22. Every one having need and use of every other, And generally those which we more despise, and are ashamed of, being most necessary.

* But the members of the body that seem to be more weak, are much more necessary, ἀλλὰ πολλῷ μᾶλλον τὰ δοκοῦντα μέλη τοῦ σώματος ἀσθενέστερα ὑπάρχειν, are rather to be

22. * Nay much more those members of the body, which seem to be feeble, are necessary.]

† more diſhonourable or ſhamefull ατιμότερα

24. but God hath ſo diſpoſed of the ſeverall parts of the body,

24. For our comely parts have no need: [but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that part which lacked,] that ſome ſhall have a naturall beauty, others that want that, ſhall be ſupplied by clothes, which are an artificiall beauty,

26. And whether one member ſuffer, all the members ſuffer with it: or one member be † honoured, all the members rejoice with it.] as in the body, every member hath a fellow-feeling with each other, ſo all true members of the Church have the ſame common intereſts and concernments, whether of ſuffering or of rejoicing.

Notes on Chap. XII.

a. Ἀπόστολοι

The word Ἀπόστολοι Apoſtles] is known to ſignifie here, not meſſengers of a common nature, but commiſſioners from Chriſt, ſent with the ſame power, which he had from his father, Joh. 20. 21. to plant and govern the Church, and to that end, to part the world between them into ſo many μερίδες, and κλῆροι, and ἴδιοι τόποι, portions and lots, and proper places, and provinces, Act. 1. 25. over which they were ſet. And ſo though, when Chriſt was here on earth, theſe were diſciples, and followers of his, yet after his departure, and the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, they are inſtated in the ſupreme authority in the Church. See note on Joh. 20. a.

b. Προφῆται

Next after the Apoſtles, are prophets placed in the Church, both here, and Epheſ. 3. 5. and 4. 11. Their office was to preach more fully the Goſpel of Chriſt, to thoſe who had formerly received it, and to that end they were inſpired by God with that ſpecial gift of interpreting the prophecies &c. of the Old Teſtament, thereby to confirm the Jewes in the faith, and beſide many other ſpiritual gifts, they had that of foretelling things to come, as appears by Agabus, and thoſe that went down from Jeruſalem to Antioch, Act. 11. 27. Theſe differed from Apoſtles on one ſide, were inferior to them, οὐκ εἶχον τὴν Ἀποστολὴν, had not that higher commiſſion, ſaith Theophylact, and being joyned with Doctors, Act. 13. 1. did yet in this differ from them, ſay the Scholiaſts, that the Prophets did ſpeak all from the Spirit, πάντα ἀπὸ πνεύματος φθεγγόμενοι, οἱ δὲ διδάσκαλοι οἴκοθεν, but the doctors from themſelves. Such were Judas and Silas Act. 15. (ſee note c.) who being Biſhops of Judaea were farther furniſht with this gift of prophecie, and προφῆται ὄντες being prophets v. 32. διὰ λόγου πολλοῦ παρεκάλεσαν τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς καὶ ἐπεστήριξαν, exhorted and confirmed the brethren, or Chriſtians, as other the like did lay on hands on Paul and Barnabas by revelation from the Holy Ghoſt, Act. 13. 3. their revelation being an evidence of their gift of prophecy, their laying on of hands an exerciſe of their Epiſcopal power. And ſuch were the two witneſſes Rev. 11. 3. who are there ſaid to prophecie in ſackcloth, i. e. after the manner of Prophets in the Old Teſtament, to preach the will of God, and foretell things to come, who that they were the Biſhops of Jeruſalem, ſee note on that place.

c. διδάσκαλοι Doctors] are here set down in the third place, differing, as hath been said, from Prophets onely in this, that they spake οἰκοθεν from themselves, and had not the gift of foretelling things to come. But for the office of teaching and confirming those, which had already received the Gospel, and for the governing of the Churches, as Bishops, in that they agreed with them; and accordingly Act. 13. 1. the same persons are there call'd Prophets and Teachers. And therefore 'tis to be observed, that *Ephes.*4.11. Teachers are set as all one with ποιμένες Pastors (the Bishops title, saith * Chrysostome, and so say the Scholiasts, τοὺς ἐκκλησίας ἐγκεχειρισμένους, &c. those that govern the Churches, the Bishops, he calls Pastors, such was Timothy, Titus, and the like) τούτεστι ποιμένας καὶ διδασκάλους some pastors and teachers, not distinguishing them, as Apostles, and Prophets, and Evangelists, with a [τούτεστι some] to each, but only connecting them with the καὶ ὑζευγτικὸν, the particle [and] by way of explication, and so noting them to be two names for one thing, and accordingly ποιμένες Pastors, is not mentioned here. The particular notation of the word διδάσκαλοι must be first taken from the difference observable betwixt [κηρύσσειν and εὐαγγελίζεσθαι, preaching] on one side, and [διδάσκειν teaching] on the other, so as the word and doctrine differ, 1 *Tim.*5.17. the first belonging to the planting, the second to the watering, i. e. instruction and exhortation and confirmation, superadded to the preaching or planting the faith any where. This office of instructing and confirming certainly belonged primarily to the Bishop in every Church, *Act.*13.1. and was not competible to any but him, or whom the Bishop appointed to it, (As the Apostles sent the Evangelists to preach for them, where they could not come themselves) by neglect of which wholesome practise, all heresies, and seeds of new doctrines have gotten into the Church. Thus in Justine Martyr Apol: 2. when the Anagnostes or Reader hath read the portion of Scripture out of the Apostles or Prophets, he holds his peace, and the προεστὼς Prafect or Bishop ἢ ῥυθμίζει τοῦτο), makes the exhortation, after the manner that we see practised by Paul, *Act.*13.15,16. And agreeable to that it is that the Bishop should be styled Διδάσκαλος Teacher. So Chrysostome, and Theophylact on 1 *Tim.*4.14. Τὸ ἢ διδασκαλίας καὶ ἱερωσύνης ἀξίωμα μέγα ὂν &c. the Dignity of Teacher, or Priest being great, &c. by both noting the ἱερωσύνη or Priesthood, to which ὁ Τιμόθεος ἠξιώθη, Timothy was there chosen, i. e. his Episcopal power. (Of this see more, note on *Jam.*3. 2.)

d. Having set down the three prime sorts of dignities in the Church, Apostles, Prophets, Teachers, with the distinctive termes of πρῶτον, δεύτερον, τρίτον, first, secondly, thirdly, the Apostle addes now in another style, ἔπειτα δυνάμεις, εἶτα χαρίσματα ἰαμάτων, after powers, then gifts of healings. Of which two it must first be observed, that they doe not denote severall persons distinct from the former, (for 'tis evident the Apostles had both, the powers, and the gifts) but onely several χαρίσματα, or extraordinary gifts, with which the Apostles, and Prophets, and Teachers were all endowed. And consequently these cannot be imagined to constitute new orders in the Church, nor those that follow in this place, helps &c. 2^dly, For the meaning of δυνάμεις powers, it is most probable, that by it is denoted the same thing, that by the ἐνεργήματα δυνάμεων ver.10. operations of powers (which are there also joyned with gifts of healing) and those may denote those operations or exercises of powers, which we find exemplified in S. Peter on Ananias and Sapphira, in Paul on Barjesus, (either inflicting immediate death, or diseases upon them, or pronouncing that they should come, and accordingly it followed) and in those first times, in the Governours of the Church, by their censures delivering men up to Satan, εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, to the destruction of the flesh, to inflict diseases on them. And this may very probably be the meaning of δυνάμεις powers here also. And these seem to be the τέρατα prodigies wrought by the Apostles, Act. 2.43. upon which 'tis said that fear was on every soule, in like manner, as it was said upon the death of Ananias ch.5.10. in respect of these powers of the Apostles.

That ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι] signifies to succour, or relieve any in distresse, hath been said, note on Lu. 10.b and there is no doubt but ἀντιλήψεις here is to be taken in that sense, relieving and providing for the poor out of the stock of the Church, and this here set down as a special part (as the κυβερνήσεις is another) of the office of those men, which were set down in the beginning of the verse, The powers and the gifts of healing referring to the virtues and assistances, by which they were backt in the discharge of their office, and so, in an inferior degree, the γένη γλωσσῶν, sorts of tongues, in the close of the verse, skill in some languages, which was usefull to their preaching to the nations, but these two, [helps, and governments] denoting two special parts of their office, under which all was indeed contained, which had not been before intimated in their names. For as to the former of these, the relieving of the poor, that alwaies belonged to the Apostles and Bishops, and though the Deacons were employed in one inferiour part of it, the serving tables, Act. 6. the distributing of the several portions daily to the poor widowes &c. as διάκονοι under the οἰκονόμος, servants under the steward, yet the supreme trust and charge was referred to the Apostles and Bishops of the Church, So in the 41. Can: of the Apostles, Δεῖ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον &c. A Bishop must have the care of the monies, so that by his power all be dispensed to the poor by the Presbyters and Deacons, and, we command that he have in his power the goods of the Church, So Justin Martyr Apol: 2. Συναγόμενον παρὰ τῷ προεστῶτι ἀναλίσκεται, καὶ αὐτὸς ὀρφανοῖς τε καὶ χήραις, that which is gathered is deposited with the Prafect or Bishop, and he helps, relieves the orphans and widowes, καὶ ἀνάγκῃ πᾶσιν ὁ ἐν χρείᾳ ὢν ἐπιμέλειαν γίνεται), and becomes the curator or guardian to all absolutely that are in want. So Ignatius in his Epistle to Polycarp the Bishop of Smyrna, μετὰ τὸν κύριον σὺ χηρῶν φροντιστὴς ἴσθι, After the Lord thou shalt be the curator of the widowes. And accordingly Polycarp himself speaking of the Elders or Bishops, among the parts of their office reckons ἐπισκεπτόμενοι πάντας ἀσθενεῖς they visit and take care of all that are sick, μὴ ἀμελοῦντες χήρας ἢ ὀρφανοῦ ἢ πένητος, not neglecting the widow, or orphane, or the poor, and therefore, saith he, must be farre from the love of money, as S. Paul appoints in the qualification of the Bishop. And therefore as the bounty of the first beleivers, Act. 2. was brought to the Apostles feet, and they by that means were made the dispensers of it, so the contribution that Paul and Barnabas brought in time of famine to the poor brethren in Judea was by them delivered into the hands of the Elders or Bishops of the Churches of Judea, *Act.*11.30. as to the stewards, which had the supreme power on earth of ordering this family of Christ. And so Epaphroditus that was sent with the liberality of the Church to Paul, Phil. 4. 18. and is therefore called λειτουργὸς τῆς χρείας μου, he that ministred to his wants, *Phil.*2.25. is by Theodoret, and others affirmed to be the Bishop of the Philippians at that time. By all which the account and reason appears, why the ancients doe explain ἀντιλήψεις by προστασίας, helps here, by prefectures, this office of providing for and looking to the poor, being a special part of the Bishops power, which he had over the goods of the Church in the forecited Canon Apostolical.

Αφτεργὸς τῆς χρείας μου

f. Κυβερνήσεις] The word κυβερνήσεις] is all one with the Latine gubernationes, and so denotes the power and office of ruling and governing particular Churches already planted by the Apostles, and by them committed to the care of the Bishops, set down here under the style of διδάσκαλοι teachers, who, as they farther instructed the congregations, which had received the faith, so did they rule and order, and administer them, (κυβερνᾷ διοικεῖ, saith Hesychius) Hence I suppose it is, that as ποιμὼν pastor, and ποιμαίνειν to discharge the office of a pastor, denotes this power of ruling, and is the description of an ἡγούμενος a ruler, Mat. 26. ὅστις ποιμανεῖ τὸν λαόν, who shall rule the people, and is applied first to Christ, *Mat.*26. 31. *Joh.*10. 11, 14. *Heb.*13.20. 1 *Pet.*5.4. (& joyn'd with Bishops 1 *Pet.*2.25.)then to S. Peter *Joh.*21.16. then to the Bishops of Asia *Act.*20.28. then to the Bishops of the Jewes in their several dispersions, 1 Pet. 5. 1. so 'tis joyned with διδάσκαλος teacher *Ephes.*4.11. and not as a several office from that (as Apostles, Prophets, and Evangelists had been) but as two parts of the same persons office, τοὺς δὲ ποιμένας καὶ διδασκάλους some Pastors and Teachers, noting these governours of the several Churches to have been the teachers also: And so here the διδάσκαλοι being named in the former part of the verse, κυβερνήσεις is added in the latter, to denote the ruling powers that belong'd to those teachers: διδάσκαλοι with the addition of ἀντιλήψεις & κυβερνήσεις here, being all one in effect with the Pastor and Teacher in one person, Eph. 4.

Ποιμαίνει

g. Γένη γλωσσῶν kinds or sorts of tongues] in this place, and v.10. signifies with some restraint, not all the languages of the world, as was in the effusion of the Spirit on the Apostles *Act.*2. but some sorts of languages, which they had never learn'd, in order to their preaching to those people, which used those languages, For it must be observ'd, that though the power of miracles, indefinitely all miracles, even to the raising the dead, removing mountains, &c. were bestowed on the Apostles by Christ, and so in like manner power of speaking all languages of the world, yet these in this full latitude were not thought fit to be bestowed on other persons after them, but with some limitations, to one this, to another that, which was usefull toward the building up of the Church, now that the foundation was already laid by Christ and the Apostles. Hence is it that some are peculiarly endowed with gifts of healing, not having those other powers, called δυνάμεις, or ἐνεργήματα δυνάμεων, here and ver.9. nor the πᾶσα faith, v. 9. that which extended to all miracles, even to removing of mountains, ch.13.2. And so in like manner, some had some certain languages (as a χάρισμα or gift) by inspiration, yet not all, because that was not in order to their business. And as the power of speaking with all tongues is called indefinitely λαλεῖν ἑτέραις γλώσσαις Acts Act. 2. 4. speaking with other tongues, and here ch.13.1. γλώσσαις ἀνθρώπων λαλεῖν, καὶ ἀγγέλων, speaking with the tongues of men and of Angels, i.e. all kind of languages imaginable (proportionable to the πᾶσα πίστις all faith v.2.) so this more limited gift is expressed by γένη γλωσσῶν, sorts or kinds of languages, and γλώσσῃ λαλεῖν, ch. 14. 2. speaking with a tongue, i. e. some one tongue or more, for of him it is said ver.13. Let him pray that he may interpret, which, it seems, he is not yet able to doe, and so not to speak with all tongues, For if he could, then, understanding himself well enough (as he is supposed to doe v.4.14.) it must needs follow, that he would also be able to interpret himself, and not need another qualified to that purpose v. 27. In like manner as here v. 30. tongues and interpreting belong not both to the same persons; nay c.14.28. when two or three speak in unknown tongues, 'tis supposed possible that neither of them may be able to interpret or declare intelligibly to the people what hath been said, in which case the Apostle bids them that speak strange languages, hold their peace in the Church, i.e. in the presence of beleivers, for to them the strange language is wholly useless. Thus though S. Paul thank God that he doth γλώσσαις λαλεῖν μᾶλλον πάντων ὑμῶν, c.14.18. speak with tongues more then all, in the Church of Corinth, yet his very saying so, is an intimation that he had not the gift of all tongues, as being not one of those twelve, on whom that gift descended, Act. 2. yet furnisht abundantly for his office with the languages of all those to whom he was to preach.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. XIII.

1. If I have never so perfect a degree of the gift of languages, and doe not withall study and endevour the good and edifying of the Church, I am no better then a trumpet or cymbal that sounds a triumph, for vanity or boasting, but not at all for profit or benefit of the Church.

1. THough I speak with the tongues of men and of Angels, and have not charity, I am become * as [a] sounding brasse, or a tinkling cymbal.]

* a resounding brasse, or a loud sounding cymbal

2. And though I can expound scripture, and know all the most mysterious and subtile parts of it (see note on 2 Pet.1. b.) and if I have the highest degree of that faith by which miracles are wrought, so as to be able to remove mountains, and doe not employ my gifts to the good of others, I am worth nothing, in comparison to those that have that most excellent gift c.12.31.

2. And though I have the gift of prophecie and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have no charity, I am nothing.]

3. And

3. And though I * beſtow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing] 3. And if I ſpend goods and life, and all, and thereby contribute nothing to the benefit of others, I am in compariſon never the better for it.

4. Charity [b] ſuffereth long, and is † [c] kind, charity [d] vanteth not it ſelf, is not puffed up.] 4. It is the property and commendation of this virtue of charity, that it teacheth forbearance, makes a man patient and not revengefull of injuries, kinde, tender and compaſſionate, as ſenſible and zealous of other mens good, as of his own, makes a man farre from envying, very well pleaſed at all other mens happyneſſes, abates all fooliſh elation of minde, ambition and oſtentation, as alſo all pride, and inſolence in overvaluing himſelf, and deſpiſing others. b. c. d.

† [h] Beareth [i] all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.] 7. Inclineth a man to hide or conceal all the evill of another that he knowes, ſo farre as is for his good, and is not contrary to the greater good of others, to beleive without prejudice all the good that he hears, or can have any ground in charity to believe of him, to hope that which he beleives not, and never ſo far to deſpaire of his repentance, as to give over the uſing all probable means, which may reclaim him, and to endure much pain and trouble and loſſe to procure a greater good for others, then the evill we ſuffer herein is to our ſelves. h. i.

8. Charity never faileth: but whether * there be prophecies, they ſhall fail; whether there be tongues, they ſhall ceaſe; whether † there be knowledge, it ſhall vaniſh away.] 8. And for this charity, the love of God and our brethren, as it hath many branches of excellent virtue in it, ſo hath it priviledges above all other graces, particularly this, that it ſhall be uſefull to us, and be exerciſed by us in another world, it ſhall never be outdated, but laſt even in heaven, when our imperfect gifts of prophecy, languages, explication of myſteries, ſhall be ſwallowed up in that abyſſe of perfections.

9. For we know in part, and prophecie in part.

10. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part ſhall be done away.] 9, 10. For our knowledge and prophecie, and other graces and gifts being now imperfect, muſt give way to the perfect ſtate, and become abſolutely uſeleſſe then.

* was affected, ἐφρονουν

† reaſoned, ἐλογιζομην

11. When I was a childe, I ſpake as a childe, I * underſtood as a childe, I † thought as a childe; but when I became a man, I put away childiſh things.] 11. As it fares in the change of ages in a man, our words, our affections, our inclinations, and our reaſonings are quite changed; in the compaſſe of a few years, we neither ſay, nor deſire, nor underſtand any thing, as ſome years before we did: ſo much more is it betwixt this, and another life.

* we ſee yet βλεπομεν αρτι

† I yet know, αρτι γινωσκω

12. For * now we ſee through a glaſſe darkly, but then face to face: † now I know in part, but then ſhall I know, even as alſo I am known.] 12. For now our viſion is very dark and imperfect, looking at things as when they are ſhewed us through a glaſſe on purpoſe to give us but a glimpſe of them; but when we come to heaven, we ſhall then ſee as perfectly, as if we looke cloſe to it, know God as truely, as we have hitherto been known by him.

13. And now abideth faith, hope, charity, theſe three, but the greateſt of theſe is charity.] 13. So that it is evident, that as faith hope, and charity, are farre to be preferred before all other gifts of the Spirit, which are given men for the benefit of others v. 2. ſo of thoſe three graces or divine virtues charity is the moſt excellent, whether conſidered in it ſelf, or in the duration of it. In it ſelfe it is the moſt neceſſary grace here, v. 1. &c. and all the other whether graces or virtues are but means for the working of this, our Faith teacheth it, and our Hope excites it, and Charity is the end of the Commandment, and Faith muſt be perfected by it, and without it all the gifts mentioned v. 1, 2. are nothing worth, and are given men for the working of that in others, and ſo likewiſe in reſpect of the duration, the gifts were ſoon to vaniſh (and are now vaniſhed long ſince, the gift of miracles, of languages &c.) and faith and hope will vaniſh with this life, for Faith is of things not ſeen, and therefore ceaſeth when viſion cometh, and ſo Hope if it be ſeen, is not Hope, but Charity ſhall never be outdated, but laſt and flouriſh when we come to heaven, and be then a ſpeciall ingredient in our happineſſe, which indeed conſiſts in loving God, and having common deſires with him, and loving all whom he loves, (not the damned, who are veſſels of his wrath) and that eternally.

Notes on Chap. XIII.

2. χαλκος

That κυμβαλον cymbal here is an inſtrument of loud muſick may appear, not onely by the Epithets which are given it. Pſal. 150. 5. the loud cymbals, and the high-ſounding cymbals, but alſo by the reſt of the conſort there mention'd, the ſound of the trumpet in the firſt, and (after the pſaltery and harp, timbrel and pipe, ſtringed inſtruments and organs) this of the Cymbal in the laſt and higheſt place, and that no doubt a πνευματικον a wind inſtrument of braſs, as appears by Heſychius, who renders χαλκωματα inſtruments with braſen mouths, by χαλκια κυμβαλα braſen cymbals. So improbable is it, that this ſhould be that tinkling inſtrument of ſo ſlight, and low a ſound, that now we call by that name. This more appears by the Epithet here added to it, ἀλαλαζον, which certainly ſignifies a loud noiſe, or crie, a ſhout either of mariners and the like, when they ſet all uniformly to ſome work of difficulty, to hoyſe the main ſayle, to which they all muſt joyne, and ſummon one another to it by that ſhout, or elſe of conquerors in a field, ἀλαλαζει στρατιος ἐχθῶ the word notes ſhouting ἀλαλαζω for victory, ſaith Heſychius, and ἀλαλαγμὸς ἐπινίκιος ὕμνος, ἢ ἴυγμὸς βόη, 'tis a ſong of victory, or ſhout of acclamation. And that ſignifies this inſtrument to be ſuch as was then uſed (as the trumpet, meant, I ſuppoſe, by the χαλκὸς ἠχῶν reſounding braſs, is now) for thoſe ſolemn military ovations and triumphs; and in that reſpect it ſeems moſt applicable to the gift of tongues in the Church, as that is oppoſed to charity. Charity is all for the edification, the benefiting and profiting of others, but the gift of tongues being onely uſefull, as a miracle, to convince unbelievers, and to ſpeak intelligibly to them, which are of another nation, and not at all uſefull to beleivers of their own nation that underſtood not a ſtrange tongue, may in reſpect of them, fitly be compared to a cymbal, or trumpet, ſounding a triumph for oſtentation, but not for edification, as is inſiſted on at large in the fourteenth Chapter.

for

b. Μακροθυμεῖ The notion of μακροθυμεῖν] for ſlowneſs to wrath, or revenge, in oppoſition to quick reſentment of injuries, is ſufficiently known, *Rom.*9.22. and ſo it is to be taken here, as a firſt and principal act of charity, on which [χρηστεύῃ, is kind, or good, or gentle, or gracious] fitly attends. This differs from the παροξύνῃ, is not exaſperated or highly provoked to anger v. 5. eſpecially in two things, 1. Παροξυσμὸς notes the hight, or pitch, to which it advanceth, as the paroxyſme is the ſharp fit of the feaver, and ſo that part of the character of Charity is, that where that is planted, it moderateth anger, and ſuffers it not to boyle to that hight, but this of μακροθυμία is the deferring and putting it off; the charitable man is ſo farre from raſh anger, or ſuddain revenges, that he can bear and forbear long. 2. Παροξυσμὸς is reſtrained to the paſſionate, ſharper part of anger, which is called ὀργὴ, as the former to the rational, and heavier part of it, θυμὸς, which relates to revenge, or inflicting of puniſhment. This is otherwhere expreſſed by βραδὺς εἰς ὀργὴν ſlow to wrath, Jam. 1. 19. by ἀνεξίκακος 2 *Tim.*2.24. bearing with evil, not apt or forward to puniſh thoſe that doe amiſſe, to which is annexed ἐν πραΰτητι παιδεύων, in meekneſs inſtructing oppoſers. Contrary to this are the ἀνήμεροι fierce 2 *Tim.*3.3.

c. Χρηστὸς ſignifies ἀνυπολαβόχυλον, ἢ ὃς ἐκ πάσας συμπαθείας, τὰ αὑτοῦ ὡς ὀικεῖα ἰδιοποιούμενον, ſaith Phavorinus, tenderneſs of compaſſion, kindneſs toward the neighbour, making all things that belong to him, as if they were his own, and ſo it ſeems to ſignifie here, that it is the property of charity, where it is planted, to infuſe a benignity into their nature, making them conſider others as they doe themſelves, and ſo extend the ſame liberality, and kindneſs to them, that ſtand in need of it, that in the like caſe they would wiſh to themſelves, A God-like quality, attributed to God himſelf, ὅτι Κύριος χρηστὸς, the Lord is gracious, 1 *Pet.*2.3.

d. What the word φυσιοῦται ſignifies, or of what origination it is, whether Greek, or Latine is ſomewhat difficult. Among the antient Greeks it is not met with, but among the moſt antient Latines it is; Perperi in Accius, and perperitudo, and perperam facere very ordinarily. Which makes it reaſonable to reſolve it a Latine, not a Greek word originally. Then for the meaning of it, in the Latine it ſignifies generally to doe amiſſe, perperam oppoſed to rectè, but in the Greek, the Gloſſaries and the ancient fathers doe differ, and yet prettily well agree, Περφερὴς ὑπερήφανος, ſaith Heſychius, is elated, ſets himſelf out at the greateſt advantage, and πέρφερος μετὰ βλακείας ὑπερηφάνου, lifted up, and fooliſh, (and therefore when in Phavorinus we read φυσιοῦται ἀντὶ κολακεία, it ſhould doubtleſſe be read ἀντὶ βλακεία fooliſhneſſe, and ſo preſently to the ſame word he hath, ἀντὶ τοῦ βλακεία) And Phavorinus hath pointed to this place, ἀπερισκέπτως, ἀπερίσκεπτος φησι, τοῦτέστιν, ἀσυντάκτως, when the Apoſtle ſaith, ἀπερισκέπτως, the meaning is, that he runs not headlong, precipitous, as giddy proud fools are wont to doe, ἀσυντάκτως, ſaith Heſychius, ἀσυντάκτως ἐπὶ παντὶ λογισμῷ, that falls upon any action before conſideration, or deliberation, raſh, unadviſed (and therefore when Heſychius hath ἀσυντάκτως ἀφίησιν, it will be reaſonable to correct, and read it, ἀσυντάκτῳ.)

* Clemens Alexandrinus renders φυσιοῦται κομψεύεται, adorning and dreſſing ones ſelf gayly, and † S. Baſil, Τί δὲ φυσιοῦται; πᾶν ὃ μὴ διὰ χρείαν, ἀλλὰ διὰ κομψείαν ἐπιλαμβάνει, What doth it ſignifie? All that is put on not for uſe, but ornament. From theſe ſeverals put together the reſult may ſeem to be this, that φυσιοῦται] ſignifies that ambitious oſtentations ſetting himſelf out, which proceeds from a fooliſh, giddy pride and elation of mind, and puts a man forward upon all headlong, precipitous actions in purſuit of his own glory, or to ſatisfie his own intemperate humour; Thus in Accius, ductabilitas nimia, and perperitudo, are put together, an eaſineſſe to be led, and an haſty raſh precipitous behaviour. And then the excellence of charity (as in other things) appears in this, that, where it is truly planted, it keeps a man from this fooliſh, giddy elation of mind, which breaks out precipitonſly into all ambitions, oſtentations actions, and renders him ridiculous by an undue unconſiderate purſuit of his own glory, or praiſe, whereas the true Chriſtian love of others, ſo contrary to ſelf-love, the ſource of all this, is buſied in the advancement of the reall concernments of others, and ſets conſiderately about that, and runs not headlong after ſuch improper waies of getting in any aerial empty good unto themſelves.

* Padag. l. 3. c. 1.

† in Defin.

What ἐκ ἀσχημονεῖ] here ſignifies, is a matter of ſome queſtion, That which ſeems moſt commodious to the place is, that it is one effect of the grace and duty of charity to our brethren, that he that hath it, doth never uſe others unſeemly in words or geſtures, but eſpecially not reproachfully, Thus will it fitly be joyned to ἀ φυσιοῦται is not puffed up] contumelious behaviour being a natural concomitant of pride and arrogance. And accordingly as Heſychius renders ἀσχημονεῖ (for ſo it ſhould be read, not, as the copie corruptly hath it, ἀσχημεῖ) ἀκοσμεῖ doth uncomely in general, ſo he explains ἀσχήμων θάνατος an uncomely death, by ὀνειδιστὸς reproachfull, contumelious, to which it will be conſequent, that the verb may alſo ſignifie, to deal reproachfully, and to doe ſo is very contrary to charity, of which therefore it is here denied. The notion which Eraſmus hath of it for being aſhamed of nothing, doing any the meaneſt offices, though it might be agreeable to the context, as an act of high charity, doth not yet any way agree with the nature of the word. And the other notions of doing no diſhoneſt thing &c. affixt by others, will not agree with the context, which belongs all to duties of charity to other men, whereas this is terminated in our ſelves.

e. ἐκ ἀσχημονεῖ with

f. λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν

What λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν] ſignifies muſt be doubtfull, becauſe both λογίζεσθε] and κακὸν] are capable of two interpretations, λογίζεσθε] may ſignifie to think, as that ſignifies to deſign, λογεῖται, διαλογίζεται ἐνθυμεῖται, ſaith Heſychius, and κακὸν evil] may be hurt, or miſchief, and then λογίζεσθε τὸ κακὸν] will be to imagine miſchief, deſigne in the mind, contrive hurt to any, and ſo thinking evil] ſignifies Gen. 50. 20. and διαλογισμοὶ πονηροὶ evil thoughts, are wicked machinations, (ſee note on Mat. 15. e.) On the other ſide λογίζεσθαι] is to reckon, to account, and τὸ κακὸν evil, is alſo wickedneſſe in any man, as well as miſchief to him, And then λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν] is to impute, or account ſinne to any man, Thus λογίζεσθαι ἁμαρτίαν Rom. 4. 8. is rendred truly, imputing of ſinne, i. e. accounting ſinne to any, reckoning it, charging it on him. And this latter is more probably the meaning of the phraſe here, For this may fitly be reckon'd among the excellent effects of charity, that it keeps a man, in whom it is, from reckoning or imputing of evil to any man; whatſoever good another doth, it makes one impute that to him, commend him, reward him for that, as it was Gods charity to Abraham (and to all ſincere beleivers) that he did λογίζεσθαι δικαιοσύνην, impute righteouſneſſe unto him, though he performed not exact obedience or ſuch to which the reward was due, But τὸ κακὸν the evil, that w^ch is amiſs, (all one with ἡ ἁμαρτία the ſin) ὁ λογίζεται, it will not ſuffer him to impute that any way to his diſadvantage. This a man will be otherwiſe apt enough to doe, if Charity doe not reſtrain him, and a moſt commendable virtuous act it is, a ſpecial ingredient in raiſing that great elogie of charity premiſed in the firſt verſes of the Chapter, that it accounts, reckons, imputes the good, but not the evil, whereas the deſigning of miſchief is it ſelf ſo vile a thing, ſo contrary to the lawes of common humanity, that an heathen, virtuous man, without the advantage of Chriſtian charity, will not think fit to doe ſo, And meerly to reſtrain one from that diabolical, malicious humour, is not ſo commendable, or ſo excellent a thing. To this rendring of it agree the ſeverall gloſſes in Heſychius, Λογισμοῖς Ὑφαῖς, and λογιάμβοις ἀπατεμμένοις, and λογίζονται φαντάζονται, 'tis certainly a falſe print for ψηφίζεται, for it followes Λογίζομαι τῇ γνώμῃ ψηφίζω, and Λογίζομαι ἐνθυμήμασι φαντάζω, it ſhould certainly be again ἐνθυμήμασι ψηφίζω. All tending to this, that it ſignifies to reckon, (ſee note on Rom. 3. g.) as generally it doth in the New Teſtament. Another notion yet there is which is affixt to this phraſe, that λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν is to ſuſpect evil, but that is expreſt by another phraſe ἐνθυμεῖσθαι πονηρὰ Mat. 9. 4. and that charity permits not a man to doe that, is in effect ſaid, ver. 8. in πάντα πιστεύει it beleives all things, beleives alwaies the beſt of every man, for that is all one with [ſuſpecteth not evil.]

Ἐνθυμεῖσθαι πονηρὰ

g. Ἀδικία Ἀλήθεια

For the explaining this verſe, it muſt firſt be reſolved what is meant by ἀδικία iniquity, and ἀλήθεια truth, Ἀδικία may ſignifie, (in oppoſition to the peculiar notion of truth,) deceit or falſeneſſe, as when it is ſaid of Chriſt, Ἔστιν ἀληθὴς ὁ πέμψας με this is true, and οὐκ ἔστιν ἀδικία ἐν αὐτῷ Joh. 7. 18. there is no unrighteouſneſſe in him, i. e. no deceitfulneſſe, (ſee note on Lu 16. a.) And then the meaning will be, that true charity infuſes ſuch a value of truth, and diſlike of deceit, and conſenage, that it permits not any man to be pleaſed with any ſuch act either in himſelf, or others. But as ἀδικία is oft uſed in a wider ſenſe for all wickedneſſe, Rom. 1. 18. ſo is ἀλήθεια taken for ſincerity of goodneſs 1 Cor. 5. 8. and ſo 3 Joh. 3. and often in other places, and then as ὁ χαίρει, rejoiceth not, ſignifies figuratively, is very ſad, extremely grieved (as Iſa. 66. 4. that in which I delighted not] is their abominations v. 3.) ſo the full meaning of the verſe will be, that charity will make a man truly mourn and grieve at any ſin committed by any other, and moſt heartily rejoice to ſee men diſcharge their Chriſtian duty, live in all manner of ſincerity. And thus ſaith S. John 3 Joh 4. that he hath no greater joy, then to hear that his children walk in the truth. ὁ χαίρει

h. στέγω

That στέγω ſignifies to cover, and is, within a very little, the Latine tego, and from thence στέγω & tectum, is ſufficiently known, and therefore by Heſychius 'tis firſt expreſſed by κρύπτει, ζωσκεῖ, to cover, to contain, and then by βαστάζει, ὑπομένει, to carry, to endure; And that this notion of covering, belongs principally to concealing, in oppoſition to ſpeaking out or reporting, may appear by Heſychius alſo, who in the word στέγασον explains it by τὸ δυνάμενον στέγειν τοὺς λόγους, ἢ μὴ ἐξαγγέλλειν, to cover words, and not report them, and σιγατόπιγον σιωπηλότατον, referring to ſilence or holding the peace. And this is the moſt probable notion of the word here, where ſpeaking of charity, that it rejoiceth not in iniquity (i. e. is ſo farre from joying to ſee another offend, that it produceth great ſorrow and compaſſion for it) but, on the other ſide, rejoiceth together in the truth, is very glad to ſee men doe as they ſhould doe, live in all Chriſtian ſincerity, he addes πάντα στέγει, as a farther evidence of that temper, conceals all the ill of another, unleſſe when 'tis greater charity to reveal it, (as Pro. 10. 12. it is ſaid of love, that it covers all ſins) and then goes on, πιστεύει πάντα, beleiveth all things, i. e. all things that are ſaid for the excuſe, or mitigation of a fault, (which is the quality of the ſupernal wiſdome, Jam. 3. 17. that 'tis εὐπειθὴς eaſie to be perſwaded of that which tends to mitigate the fault) and when nothing is ſaid in defence, or excuſe, yet ἐλπίζει πάντα. hopeth the beſt, that the matter is capable of; And then followes πάντα ὑπομένει endureth all things, whatſoever of injury comes to him by anothers fact, he is moſt ready to bear, and never meditate revenge; Which is the very thing that muſt be meant by this phraſe πάντα στέγει, if it were rendred, beareth all things; as in Heſychius 'tis manifeſt, that στέγω in that notion of bearing is ὑπομένω to endure. And that is one farther evidence, that στέγω is here in the other notion, for elſe there would be no avoiding a tautologie. It is true that ch. 9. 12. it may bear another ſenſe (for the word certainly ſignifies to endure, as well as to conceale) and yet that with ſomewhat of this notion in it, for the ſenſe lies thus, we might uſe our liberty or authority, claim the privilege of labourers, i. e. to be provided for by thoſe, for whom we labour, but we have not done ſo, but πάντα στέγομεν, make no ſuch claims, but endure hardſhip, rather then hinder the propagating of the Goſpel by inſiſting on this right.

Ἐλπίζει πάντα

The

i. Πάντα

The word [Πάντα all things] though it be an universall, is not to be taken in the utmost extent, but according to the uſe of the like phraſes in all languages, wherein the universal ſigne affixt either to perſons, or times, or places, or things, ſignifies onely a greater number, but not all without exception. So when Pſal. 14. 4. it is ſaid of the children of men, that they are all gone out of the way, all become abominable, it is manifeſt that it is not ſpoken of all men without exception, for v. 8. there is mention of Gods people, and v. 9. of the righteous, So for things Joh. 14. 26. the holy Ghoſt ſhall teach you all things, and bring all things to your memory, not abſolutely all, but all that were uſefull to their office. So 1 Cor. 10. 23. All things are lawfull to me, i.e. many of thoſe things which are unexpedient, or all indifferent things. So Phil. 4. 13. I can doe all things] is determined there to the things there ſpoken of, to want, and to abound, &c. and ſo here the covering, and beleiving, and hoping, and enduring all things, is the concealing and burying in forgetfulneſſe many conſiderable injuries, and evils of other men, beleiving, and hoping, and enduring very many things, which they, which have not this excellent divine grace of Charity, will never doe.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XIV.

1. Let the prime ſupreme care be to do good to others, and in order to that, of all ſpirituall gifts which you are to deſire zealouſly, that of interpreting Scripture is the moſt uſefull, ſee note on Lu. 1. m.

1. * Follow after charity, and deſire ſpirituall gifts, but rather that ye may prophecy.] * purſue διώκετε

2. For he that by the gift of God ſpeaketh any unknown languages, onely to ſhew what he can doe, muſt be ſuppoſed to ſpeake to the underſtanding of none, but of God, and then he ſpeakes indeed by that gift or afflation, myſteries or hidden things, but no body receives benefit by him.

2. For he that ſpeaketh in an unknown tongue, ſpeaketh not unto men, but unto God; for no man underſtandeth him, † howbeit in the Spirit he ſpeaketh myſteries.] † though he by the ſpirit, ἀνεξηγήτοις δὲ

3. But he that declareth to others what himſelfe underſtands of holy things, ſpeaks to men's profit and inſtruction, admoniſheth and exhorteth them to all Chriſtian practiſe, and comforteth them from the promiſes of Chriſt.

3. But he that prophecyeth ſpeaketh unto men † to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.] † edification ἐποικοδομὴν

4. He that ſpeakes a ſtrange language, can benefit no body but himſelfe, but he that interprets Scripture doth that which much tendeth to the confirming, and benefiting the congregation, improving them in ſpirituall knowledge.

4. He that ſpeaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himſelfe, but he that phecieth, edifieth the Church.]

5. I had much rather that ye had the gift of prophecying then of ſtrange tongues, for expounding of Scriptures is infinitely more uſefull to the Church, then the gift of tongues, unleſſe he that uſeth that gift doth after tell them in plain words what he meant, for unleſſe he doe ſo, the Church can receive no advantage by him.

5. I would that yee all ſpake with tongues, but rather that ye prophecied: for greater is he that prophecieth, then he that ſpeaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the Church may receive edifying.]

6. For ſtrange tongues are not at all profitable for them that are already Chriſtians; that which is profitable is either 1. expounding ſacred figures, or 2. communicating ones knowledge in great myſteries (ſee note on 2 Pet. 1 b.) or 3. interpreting of difficulties of Scripture, or 4. morall catechiſticall inſtitution, teaching you what men ought to doe and believe.

6. Now brethren, if I come unto you ſpeaking with tongues, what ſhall I profit you, except I ſhall ſpeake to you, either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophecying, or by doctrine.]

7. This you may diſcern by an ordinary ſimilitude, for when ſounds are made by inſtruments, unleſſe thoſe ſounds are ſet to ſome tune, no man can tell what to make of it.

7. And even things without life giving ſound, whether pipe or harpe, except they give a diſtinction in the ſounds, how ſhall it be known what is piped or harped?]

8. And particularly the trumpet, which is uſed to ſound alarmes, doth ſo by a particular diſtinct ſound, and if that be not ſounded no man that hears a trumpet will thinke himſelfe bound to make ready.

8. For if the trumpet give an uncertain ſound, who ſhall prepare himſelfe to the battail?]

9. So if you, that have the gift of ſtrange languages, doe not by that means ſpeake that which the Auditors may underſtand (for to that end ſure were thoſe languages given, that you might ſpeake to every one in his own language, Act. 2. 6.) how ſhall any man be the better for your languages? your words ſhall be poured out into the aire unprofitably.

9. So likewiſe you, except yee utter by the tongue * words eaſie to be underſtood, how ſhall it be known what is ſpoken? for yee ſhall ſpeake into the ayre.] * intelligible ſpeech, εὔσημον λόγον

10. There are, for example, ſeventy languages, and every nation ſpeakes ſome or other, and underſtands that, but ordinarily no other.

10. There are, it may be, ſo many kindes of † voices in the world, and none of them are without ſignification.] † languages --and none of them is without ſom language, ---ἀφωνότατον οὐδὲν αὐτῶν (but the Ks. MS. leaves out ἀφωνότ) ἄφωνος

11. And therefore if he that hath all theſe languages, ſpeak to me in any but that which I underſtand, he ſpeakes to no more purpoſe to me, and I receive no more advantage from him, then if a couple of men of ſeverall countreys ſhould talke one to another, and neither underſtand a word of the other.

11. Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voyce, I ſhall be unto him that ſpeaketh a Barbarian, and he that ſpeaketh ſhall be a Barbarian unto me.]

12. So ye alſo ſeeing ye would fain have

12. Even ſo yee, for aſmuch as yee * are zealous of ſpirituall gifts, ſeek that ye may † excell to the edifying of the Church.]

have ſome of thoſe extraordinary gifts of the Spirit (ſee note on Lu. 9. d.) ſeek thoſe gifts eſpecially by which the Church may receive edification and advantage, that ſo you may doe ſomewhat more then ordinary, and of this ſort is prophecying.

13. Wherefore let him that ſpeaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.] 13. And in ſtead of amazing people with ſtrange languages which they underſtand not, let him pray to God for the gift of expounding ſtrange languages, that he may help others to underſtand them that ſpeak thus.

14. For if I pray in an unknown tongue, my ſpirit prayeth, but my underſtanding is unfruitfull.] 14. For if by that gift of tongues I pray in an unknown language, my gift, or the gift of tongues which is given me, prayes, but my underſtanding lies idle (ſee note on Lu. 9.d.) does no body elſe any good, I make uſe of my gift of tongues, which I my ſelfe underſtand, but I make no uſe of that underſtanding of mine to make others doe ſo too.

† by the ſpirit προσ-ευχη * by the underſtanding, τω νοι † by * by 15. What is it then? I will pray † with the ſpirit, and I will pray * with the underſtanding alſo; I will ſing † with the ſpirit, and I will ſing * with the underſtanding alſo.] 15. What then is it that is moſt deſirable? Why, that, if in praying I make uſe of the gift of tongues, which is intelligible to my ſelf, I pray alſo by my underſtanding, ſo as he that hath not the gift of tongues is wont to pray, that ſo my underſtanding may be uſefull to others, and help them to underſtand alſo, and ſo likewiſe that I may make uſe of the gift of tongues in ſinging Pſalms, and ſing alſo by my underſtanding, ſo as he that hath not thoſe extraordinary gifts is wont to ſing, i.e. So as ſhall be intelligible to others.

† vulgar perſon, ιδιωτου

16. Elſe, when thou ſhalt bleſſe with the ſpirit, how ſhall he, that occupyeth the room of the † unlearned, ſay, * Amen, at thy giving of thanks, ſeeing hee underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt? 16. For if thou adminiſter the Sacrament in an unknown tongue, how ſhall the people that receive, ſay, Amen, at thy adminiſtring of it, when they underſtand thee not? 2.

17. For thou verily giveſt thanks well; but the other is not edified.] 17. And in that caſe how well ſoever that be done, which thou doſt, yet tis clear 'tis not for the advantage of others, or benefit of the Church.

18. I thank my God, [I ſpeak with tongues more then you all.] 18. I have the gift of tongues more then any of you hath it.

* by † I may inſtruct κατη-χησω

19. Yet in the Church I had rather ſpeak five words * with my underſtanding, that † by my voyce I might teach others alſo, then ten thouſand words in an unknown tongue.] 19. But for the benefit of others 'twere much better that I ſpake, though never ſo little, from my own underſtanding, ſo as he that hath not the gift of tongues, is wont to ſpeak, ſo that others may underſtand, and be inſtructed by me, then never ſo much by the gift of tongues, when no man knowes what I ſay.

* in your affections, ταις φρεσι, † wickedneſſe τη κακια * affections

20. Brethren, be not children * in underſtanding: howbeit, in † malice be ye children, but in * underſtanding be men.] 20. Brethren, tis a piteous thing to bee thus childiſhly affected (ſee note on Lu: 1. 5.) to brag or boaſt of uſeleſſe, gaineleſſe things, ſuch as is ſpeaking what no man underſtands: In reſpect of ſin, be as like children, i.e. as innocent as you will, but be more mature and manly in your affections.

be ye perfect, τελειοι γινεσθε † or, by the lips of others, or ſtrangers, for the King's MS. reads χειλεσιν ετεροις

21. In the law it is written, With men of other tongues and † other lips will I ſpeak unto this people: and yet for all that will they not heare me, ſaith the Lord.] 21. In the old Teſtament in the prophecy of Iſaiah c. 28. 11. tis mention'd as a miracle ſhewed to the people, that God would ſend prophets to them in languages which they underſtood not, and yet that this ſo great a miracle ſhould not work on them.

22. Wherefore tongues are for a ſign, not to them that beleive, but to them that beleive not, but prophecying ſerveth not for them that beleive not, but for them which beleive.] 22. By which it appears that the uſe of the gift of tongues, is principally as a miracle, and that for the converting of unbeleivers; but interpreting of Scripeures, and teaching Chriſtian doctrines, is that that is moſt proper for beleivers.

* vulgar perſons v.16.

23. If therefore the whole Church be come together into ſome place, and all ſpeak with tongues, and there come in thoſe that are * unlearned or unbeleivers, will they not ſay that ye are mad?] 23. If therefore in a ſociety of Chriſtians and none elſe, all that ſpeak, ſhall ſpeak ſtrange languages, what will an ordinary man, or an unbeleiver thinke or ſay? would hee not thinke them all mad, if he ſhould caſually come among them?

† diſcovered ελεγχεται

24. But if all prophecy, and there come in one that beleiveth not, or one unlearned, he is † convinced of all, he is judged of all.] 24. But if that which they are about, be the interpreting of Scripture, promulgating the doctrine of Chriſt, this may probably work upon them that heare, though they came in unbeleivers.

* proclaiming that God is really among you αναγγελων οτι ο θεος οντως εν υμιν εστι

25. And thus are the ſecrets of his heart made manifeſt, and ſo falling down on his face he will worſhip God, * and report that God is in you of a truth.] 25. And coming to a ſight of their ſins they will be forced to doe reverence, and confeſſe that God is in ſuch a congregation as that.

26. How is it then, Brethren? when ye come together every one of you hath a Pſalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation: let all things be done unto edifying.] 26. If then yee demand, how ye ſhal behave your ſelves in Church meetings; Take care eſpecially that, what ever ye doe, whether by the aſſiſtation of the Spirit ye compoſe Pſalms (ſee note on Eph: 5. c.) for the praiſing of God, as was uſed eſpecially in the Euchariſt v. 15, 16. or whether ye make uſe of your gift of languages (note on c. 12. g.) or whether ye explain the figures of the old Teſtament (ſee note b.) or whether ye interpret what others have ſpoken in an unknown tongue, all be done ſo as may be moſt to the benefit and advantage of others.

27. If any man ſpeak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the moſt by three, and that † by courſe, and let one interpret.] 27. And whenſoever any uſe the gift of of tongues, let not above two or three doe it at one time, and they one by one, and let one of them interpret all that the reſt have ſpoken.

28. And if none preſent be able to doe that, let not him that hath the gift of languages ſpeak in the Church, the place of beleivers (but reſerve his tongues for the converting of ſtrangers) and in the mean time keep his languages to himſelf, to be uſed at his own home betwixt God and him in private.

28. But if there be no interpreter, let him keep ſilence in the Church, and let him ſpeak to himſelf and to God.]

29. And as for the gift of tongues, ſo next for prophecying, let that be done by two or three in a day, the reſt paſſing judgement on that which is done by them.

29. Let the prophets ſpeak, two or three, and let the other judge.]

b. 30. And if, while one is reading or expounding any part of Scripture, another that ſitteth by be able to give any expoſition of a ſacred figure or other emergent difficulty, let it be free for him to doe ſo, and in the mean while, let the other, that was ſpeaking, give way to him.

30. If any thing be [b] revealed to another that ſitteth, by let the firſt hold his peace.]

31. For yee may give your ſenſe of Scripture one after another, and if ye doe ſo, that will be the beſt way to inſtruct and exhort all others.

31. For ye may all prophecy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be † comforted.] † exhorted

32. And it cannot be objected againſt this, that they that are thus inſpired, cannot thus ſtop themſelves; for the afflations or inſpirations of ſuch prophets as are here ſpoken of, may be ruled by the prophets, i.e. by them that have them, the Chriſtian gifts of expounding &c: being not like the afflations of evill ſpirits which put them into extaſies, God's gifts to the Church are (as even Prophecy it ſelf appeared to be in Jonah) ſuch, as it is in their power to reſtrain, and conſequently they may prophecy one after another v. 31.

32. And the ſpirits of the prophets are ſubject to the prophets.]

33. For the Spirit of God is not a violent, extatical, impetuous, but a quiet, ſoft ſpirit, as appears by the effects in all well tempered, conſtituted Churches.

33. For God is not the * author of confuſion, but of peace, as in all Churches of the ſaints.] * God of diſturbance

34. As for your women, let them be ſo farre from teaching, that they doe not ſo much as ſpeak, by way of asking queſtions, in the Church, but acquieſce in the Judgments of their ſuperiours, particularly their husbands, as the law of God commands Gen. 3. 16.

34. Let your women keep ſilence in the Churches, for it is not permitted unto them to ſpeak, but † they are commanded to be under obedience, as alſo ſaith the law.] † or let the be ſubject to their husbands, for the King's MS. reads

35. What therefore they deſire to be inſtructed in, they muſt ſeek it by their husbands, by whom it may be conveighed to them (if not from their own skill, yet from thoſe that are able to inſtruct, the officers of the Church) much more decently then by their ſpeaking or asking queſtions in the Church, the doing of which is uncomely in a woman, as arguing ſome pride in her, or weakneſſe in her husband.

35. And if they will learn any thing, let them ask * their husbands at home: for it is a ſhame for women to ſpeak in the Church.] * their own

36. As for you that take upon you to order otherwiſe, are you the planters of the Goſpel? or did the Apoſtles, that planted, give none but you directions, that you muſt doe contrary to all other Churches, particularly to Jeruſalem, and ſuffer women to ſpeak in your Churches.

36. What? came the word of God out from you? or came it unto you * onely? † alone

37. If any man be a prophet, or have any other ſpiritual gift, or afflation, let him receive theſe directions, as the commands of the Lord, or not pretend to be a true prophet. For the Apoſtles (and ſuch am I) being the men intruſted by Chriſt to conveigh the Goſpel to the world, and to preſerve order in the Church, are to be obeyed by the Prophets themſelves; and in matters of difference the reſolution is to be made by the Apoſtles, as the Governours of the Church, not by the prophets or the ſpiritual.

37. If any man think himſelfe to be a Prophet, or ſpiritual, let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you, are the commandments of the Lord.]

38. But if any man doubt of it, reſiſt the directions, let him continue to doe ſo, his, will be the danger of it.

38. But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.]

39. To conclude therefore, prophecying, teaching, exhorting is the thing by which the Church is moſt profited, and for the gift of tongues, tis that, that they which have may be allowed to uſe, if they doe it according as I have directed.

39. Wherefore, brethren, covet to prophecie, and forbid not to ſpeak with tongues.]

40. Let all things therefore be done according to the cuſtome of the Church, (which is the rule of decency) and according to the orders and directions, which now, and at other times have or ſhall be given you by me. And this is all I ſhall now adde on this ſubject.

40. Let all things be done decently, and * in order.] * according to appointment, &c. vide

Notes on Chap. XIV.

2. Ἀμὴν The word Amen is an expreſſion ordinarily uſed by the people, by way of aſſent to the prayer made by another before them, being an Hebrew Adverb of affirming, and ſo rendred by Symmachus πιστῶς faithfully. For, as Maimonides ſaith, 'twas a cuſtome of the Jewes in their daily prayers, that he that had not skill or ability to pray himſelf, ſhould ſay Amen, but he that had ability, ſhould pray himſelf. The former of theſe was he that is here called ἰδιώτης the private or vulgar perſon, νήπιος 1 Pet. 5. 5. the younger, as * Lucian defines ἰδιώτης, Πολὺς ὄμιλος, ὃς ἰδιώτας καλοῦσιν οἱ σοφοί, the multitude or congregation, which the wiſe men call Idiots. This cuſtome is clearly deduced from Deut. 27. where all the people of Iſrael joyne in this, and ſo in the Pſalmiſt particularly on this occaſion of εὐλογία bleſſing of God, Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael from everlaſting and world without end, and let all the people ſay, Amen. Hence have the Talmudiſts a threefold Amen, * adi multi p. 788.

Now the uſe of this Amen ἐπὶ τῇ σῇ εὐχαριστίᾳ at thy giving thanks, ſeems here to referre to the cuſtome of the ancient; and, it ſeems, Apoſtolical, Primitive Church, which was at the conſecrating of the Lord's Supper, for to that the giving of thanks ſeems to belong, according to the uſe of the word εὐχαριστία or εὐλογία ch. 10. 16. At the ending of which, ſaith Juſtine Martyr Apol: 2. there was a ſolemne ἐπιφώνημα, Ἀμὴν, acclamation of Amen by the people.

b. ἀποκάλυψις

That Ἀποκάλυψις] doth not alwaies ſignifie a viſion, or paſſively, a receiving a revelation, by extaſie or dream from God, but onely a ſenſe or notion, a meaning or interpretation of a piece of ſcripture, that through ſome figure (or the like) hath much of difficulty in it, may appear by v.6. where in oppoſition to the miraculous ſpeaking of tongues, thoſe four waies of expounding in the Church are ſet down, and the firſt of them ἀποκάλυψις, revelation, or expounding of ſacred figures, &c. So v.26. ἀποκάλυψιν ἔχει hath a revelation, as hath an interpretation, is of him that can expound any ſuch figure, as the other is he, that can interpret a ſtrange language, and ſo here in this verſe, that which is here [hath a revelation] muſt be expounded by the prophet's ſpeaking v.29. For thus it lies, Let the prophets ſpeak, two or three, i.e. ſo many in a meeting, If another that ſitteth by, have any revelation, i.e. if whilſt one is a ſpeaking, another be, or conceive himſelf able to expound the difficulty, then let the firſt, i.e. the prophet then a ſpeaking, hold his peace, give way to him; where, as the prophets ſpeaking is all one with having a revelation, ſo the thing thus delivered being to be judged of by others, whether it be right or no, (let others judge v.29.) is concluded not to be any ſpecial revelation from God, for if 'twere ſuppoſed ſuch, it ought not to be ſubject to others judging of it. And then what is here ſaid will clearly be explained by that which we read in Philo, (lib: Omnem probum liberum eſſe) where ſpeaking of the Doctors of the Jewes, when they are ſet in the ſynagogues, Ὁ μέν, ſaith he, τὰς βίβλους ἀναγινώσκει, One reads the bible, ſome part of it, ἕτερος δέ τις τῶν ἐμπειροτέρων τὰ μὴ γνώριμα παραλαβὼν ἀναγινώσκει, And another of the more ſkilful, or Doctors, paſſing through thoſe things that are not known, i.e. the more difficult paſſages, expounds. CHAP. XV.

Paraphraſe.

*have ſtood ἑστήκατε

1. MOreover, brethren, I declare unto you the Goſpel, which I preached unto you, which alſo ye have received, and wherein ye * ſtand,]

1. As to that great hereſie of ſome among you v.12. that deny the reſurrection, I ſhall now ſpeak the very ſame, which at my firſt preaching the Goſpel among you I taught, and which ye then embraced, and for ſome time, till theſe Gnoſtick falſe teachers crept in among you, ye never made queſtion of,

† you are eſcaped, σώζεσθε * after what manner, τίνι λόγῳ † raſhly, εἰκῇ

2. By which alſo † ye are ſaved, if ye keep in memory * what I preached unto you, unleſſe ye have beleived † in vain.]

2. By which alſo you were converted and fetcht out from the midſt of the Gentile world, if you remember how I delivered the ſtory to you with all the circumſtances and explication of difficulties, unleſſe your beleiving and receiving the Goſpel were light and raſh and inconſiderate, or unleſſe what you then received, be now quite vaniſhed.

* among the principal things, ἐν πρώτοις

3. For I delivered unto you * firſt of all, that which I alſo received, how that Chriſt died for our ſins according to the ſcriptures.]

3. For one of the principal things which I told you, and which I my ſelf had learned at my firſt beleiving the Goſpel, was this, that, as Chriſt died for our ſinnes,

4. And that he was buried, and that he roſe again the third day according to the ſcriptures,]

4. And his body was layd in the grave, ſo on the third day, according to the prophecies of the ſcripture, he roſe from the grave,

5. And that he was ſeen of Cephas, then of the twelve.

5. And after his riſing appeared to Peter, Lu. 24. 34. and then to the whole college of diſciples, Lu. 24. 36. conſiſting formerly of twelve, and ſo ſoon after again, though now one of them was wanting.

6. After that he was ſeen of above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain unto this preſent, but ſome are fallen aſleep.]

6. After that he was ſeen in Galilee Mat. 28. 7. by neer 500 beleivers or Chriſtians, at one time, of whom a great part are now ſtill alive ready to teſtifie it, but ſome of them are dead.

† Then, Ἔπειτα

7. † After that he was ſeen of * James, then of all the Apoſtles.]

7. Beſides all theſe, he was, preſently after his reſurrection, ſeen by James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, then by all the twelve Apoſtles, Joh. 20. 25.

* an abortive, ἐκτρώματι

8. And laſt of all, he was ſeen of me alſo, as of * one born out of due time.]

8. And after his aſcenſion to heaven he ſpake from thence, and exhibited himſelf to be ſeen by me, who before had not ſeen him, being not a diſciple of his then, but after his aſcenſion converted on a ſuddain; and ſo ſuddainly, not regularly brought forth, as abortives are wont to be.

9. For I am the leaſt of the Apoſtles, that am not meet to be called an Apoſtle, becauſe I perſecuted the Church of God.]

9. For I having firſt been a great perſecutor of Chriſtianity, though by Chriſt I was thus miraculouſly call'd to be an Apoſtle of his, am not yet worthy to be ſo eſteemed, but being by Chriſt ſo conſtituted, am yet for that former life of mine, inferior to all the reſt of the Apoſtles of Chriſt, who were never thus guilty.

10. Though being by his ſpecial favour ſo conſtituted, I have since laboured to walk worthy of it, and have been more induſtrious and laborious then all the reſt, that had been his diſciples here: Yet what I have thus done is not to be imputed to me in any manner, but to the grace and goodneſſe of God that went along with me, and enabled me to doe what I have done.

* favour χάρις toward me εἰς ἐμὲ

† toward me εἰς ἐμὲ

11. Well then, whether ye look upon me, or upon them, to whom he appeared here on earth, and ſo were eye-witneſſes of his reſurrection, I am ſure ye can have no grounds from either of doubting of this truth, for both they and I preached the ſame among you, and at our preaching, you then received and beleived it.

11. Therefore, whether it were I or they, ſo we preach, and ſo ye beleived.]

12. Now upon this foundation thus laid, that you can have no reaſon to doubt it, it follows that the dead truly riſe, and then how comes it to paſſe, that ſome of your Churchmen, that have received the faith by our preaching, begin now to deny all reſurrection?

12. Now if Chriſt be preached that he roſe from the dead, how ſay ſome among you that there is no reſurrection of the dead?]

13. Theſe are preſently confuted, ſuppoſing it granted that Chriſt is riſen from the dead:

13. But if there be no reſurrection of the dead, then is Chriſt not riſen:]

14. Which if it be not true, then is that falſe, which both we preached, and ye beleived v. 11. and in all probability whatever elſe we have built upon it.

14. And if Chriſt be not riſen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is alſo vain.]

15. And ye muſt ſuppoſe of us who taught you Chriſtianity, that we taught you a meer forgery, for ſuch muſt the reſurrection of Chriſt be, if there be no reſurrection from the dead.

15. Yea, and we are found falſe-witneſſes of God, becauſe we teſtified of God, that he raiſed up Chriſt, whom he raiſed not up, if ſo be that the dead riſe not.]

16. For thus one may argue backward, If there be no poſſibility for a man by the power of God to be raiſed from death, then is not Chriſt raiſed.

16. For if the dead riſe not then * is not Chriſt raiſed.]

* neither hath Chriſt been raiſed, οὐδὲ Χριστὸς ἐγήγερται

17. And if ſo, then all that we have preacht to you, particularly remiſſion of ſins upon repentance, being bottom'd on the reſurrection of Chriſt, Act. 5. 31. is to be ſuppoſed falſe alſo.

17. And if Chriſt be not raiſed, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your ſins.]

18. And they that have loſt their lives for Chriſt's ſake have had nothing to pay them for thoſe loſſes, have periſht eternally, and ſo loſt very much by their fortitude, which muſt argue madneſſe in them, if they beleived not a reſurrection, (for then they had better have kept the life they had, till a natural death had called it from them) and muſt argue a groſſe error in thoſe firſt Chriſtians Stephen, and James &c. if they beleived that which had not truth in it.

18. Then they alſo which are fallen aſleep in Chriſt are periſhed.]

19. And indeed, if Chriſt were not riſen, if all our hope in Chriſt had been terminated with this life of his here on earth (or if all the advantages, which we reap by Chriſt, are thoſe which we enjoy here, who are worſe uſed then any other men, perſecuted continually for our profeſſion of Chriſt) it would then follow, that (as once the Apoſtles deemed themſelves upon his death, not knowing he was to riſe again, ſo) we Chriſtians ſhould be the moſt unhappy perſons, the moſt proper objects of compaſſion that are in the world.

19. If in this life onely we † have hope in Chriſt, we are of all men moſt miſerable.]

† have hoped ἐλπικότες ἐσμὲν

20. Which now, bleſſed be God, is much otherwiſe, for Chriſt being riſen, he, by riſing himſelf, raiſeth all others with him (as in the conſecrating of the firſt fruits, the whole harveſt is ſo conſecrated) and then we that are miſerable here, ſhall be rewarded there, (and ſo his reſurrection is a certain proof, that other men ſhall have a reſurrection alſo, which is the ſumme of the arguing from v. 12. till this place.)

20. But now is Chriſt riſen from the dead, and become the firſt fruits of them that ſlept.]

21. For as one man brought death, ſo another brought reſurrection into the world.

21. For * ſince by man came death, by man came alſo the reſurrection of the dead.]

* ſeeing ἐπειδὴ

22. For as upon Adams ſin, all that are partakers of his nature, are concluded under the ſentence of death pronounced againſt him, ſo all regenerate beleivers, all that are like, that belong to Chriſt, v. 23. ſhall be raiſed to immortal life.

22. For as in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive.]

23. But this with ſome diſtance of time berwixt: Chriſt the firſt fruits, ſome time before the reſt, then all regenerate Chriſtians at his laſt coming to judgment.

23. But every man in his own order; Chriſt the firſt fruits, afterward they that are Chriſt's at his coming.]

24. Then I mean, when in the concluſion of this world, of this ſpiritual kingdome of Chriſt in the Church here below, he ſhall deliver up all his power exerciſed by himſelf, and his commiſſioners, into the hand of God his Father, having firſt deſtroyed all earthly dominions, pronouncing ſentence on the great potentates, as well as the meaneſt men, or elſe having ſubdued all to his power, by converting ſome, and deſtroying all others.

24. Then cometh the end, when he † ſhall have delivered up the kingdome to God, * even the Father, when he ſhall † have put down all rule, and all authority and power.]

† ſhall deliver up παραδῷ

* and the Father τῷ θεῷ καὶ πατρὶ

† take away, or bring to nought, καταργήσῃ

25. For to this purpoſe was the promiſe made to Chriſt, Pſal. 110. that his ſpiritual kingdome on earth, ſhould laſt ſo long, till God had brought all the world to be ſubject to him.

25. For he muſt reigne, * till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

* ſo long untill he put ἄχρι οὗ θῇ

26. And of the enemies to be ſubdued death is the laſt, which therefore muſt be ſubdued (and ſo men raiſed from death.)

26. The laſt enemy that † ſhall be deſtroyed, is death.]

† is deſtroyed, καταργεῖται

27. For

27. For he hath put all things under his feet, but when he ſaith, All things are put under him, it is manifeſt that * he is excepted, which did put all things under him.]

* this is with an exception of him Davis ſay —

27. The evidence being clear, for all enemies, all things, no one excepted, that God will ſubdue them all under Chriſt, Alwaies ſuppoſing that God himſelf is excepted, of whom 'tis affirmed that he will put all things under Chriſt.

† But when that ſ

28. † And when all things ſhall be ſubdued unto him, then ſhall the Son alſo himſelf be ſubject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.]

28. And when all is ſo ſubdued to Chriſt, then ſhall Chriſt lay down that office which till then he exerciſeth, and in which he is conſpicuous in his Church (which till then he is to adminiſter) and then ſhall God the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt fill all the elect with glory and bliſſe eternally.

* For 'Ewei' † alſo ſ

29. * Elſe what ſhall they doe, which are baptized [b] for the dead, if the dead riſe not at all, why are † they then baptized for the dead?]

29. Now for them among you ver. 12. b. which ſay there is no reſurrection of the dead, and conſequently that the dead ſhall not be raiſed at the coming of Chriſt (which was the point in hand v. 23. and from that verſe to this all betwixt being to be read as in a parentheſis, ſetting down the ſtate of all things at, and after that reſurrection) I ſhall onely make this demand, Why then have they in their baptiſme made profeſſion of their beleif of it (ſee v. 14, 17.) it being certain that the dead, or the reſurrection of the dead (expreſſed here for brevity under that word [the dead]) is one of the articles, and that a prime and ſpecial one, to the beleif of which they were baptized, and to which, baptiſme (being the putting in and taking out of the water) doth referre, as a ſignificant embleme, firſt of Chriſt's, then of our reſurrection from the grave? And therefore to what end did theſe men in their baptiſme profeſſe their beleif of this article, if they beleive it not? To be a baptized Chriſtian, and not to beleive the reſurrection, is a ſtrange ridiculous thing, an hypocriſie which they will never be able to anſwer to God or men, and that which actually deprives them of all benefits of baptiſme; and yet ſuch are they if they make doubt of this.

* doe we run hazards and ſuffer

30. And why * ſtand we in jeopardy every houre?]

30. And why ſhould we Chriſtians ever adventure any danger that might poſſibly bring death upon us, if we were not aſſured that there were another life, wherein all our patience and valour for Chriſt ſhould be rewarded by him? v. 18.

31. I proteſt by your rejoicing, which I have in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, I die daily.]

31. I for my part proteſt by that which I take moſt joy in of any thing in the world, my fidelity to Chriſt, that I daily run the hazard of death, which ſure I ſhould not doe, if I had not confidence of another life after this.

† according to man

32. If † [c] after the manner of men I have fought with beaſts at Epheſus, what advantageth it me, if the dead riſe not? Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we die.]

32. Certainly all the hazards which I ran at Epheſus Act. 19. being, as to man, to the eye of man, or as farre as mens purpoſes could goe, ſet to combate with wild beaſts, i. e. ſentenced and condemned (2 Cor. 1. 9.) to that kind of bloody execution on their theatres (though by the providence of God I was delivered) can bring me no advantage, unleſſe there be another life after this. And were it ſo, there were ſome place for that ſaying of ſome among you, Let us enjoy the good things of this world at preſent, for within a while death comes, and there's an end of all. c.

33. Be not deceived, evil communications corrupt good manners.]

33. And 'twill concern you, that are not yet thus ſeduced, to take heed that ſuch ſpeeches and diſcourſes as theſe, ſuch atheiſticall temptations to ſenſuality upon pretenſe of the no future ſtate, no being after that of this life, doe not work upon you; The very converſing with ſuch diſputers as theſe may corrupt the beſt of you.

36. Thou fool, that which thou ſoweſt is not quickned, except it die.]

36. But this is a fooliſh objection, for even in corn that is ſowed, the rotting of the corn is neceſſary to the enlivening of it, or ſpringing of it up again.

37. And that which thou ſoweſt, thou ſoweſt not that body, that ſhall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of ſome other grain.]

37. And it is not the cuſtome to ſow that very thing which after comes up, the blade, and eare, and corn in it, but onely the corn without the reſt, as the corn of wheat, or the like.

38. But God giveth it a body, as it hath pleaſed him, and to every ſeed his own body.]

38. And when ſuch a ſingle corn is ſown without any ear or chaffe about it, God cauſeth it to come in this or that form, a root and blades, and eares of wheat, and proportionably from other ſeeds according to the property of each.

22. For as upon Adams ſin, all that are partakers of his nature, are concluded under the ſentence of death pronounced againſt him, ſo all regenerate beleivers, all that are like, that belong to Chriſt, v. 23. ſhall be raiſed to immortal life.

22. For as in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive.]

23. But this with ſome diſtance of time berwixt: Chriſt the firſt fruits, ſome time before the reſt, then all regenerate Chriſtians at his laſt coming to judgment.

23. But every man in his own order; Chriſt the firſt fruits, afterward they that are Chriſt's at his coming.]

24. Then I mean, when in the concluſion of this world, of this ſpiritual kingdome of Chriſt in the Church here below, he ſhall deliver up all his power exerciſed by himſelf, and his commiſſioners, into the hand of God his Father, having firſt deſtroyed all earthly dominions, pronouncing ſentence on the great potentates, as well as the meaneſt men, or elſe having ſubdued all to his power, by converting ſome, and deſtroying all others.

† ſhall deliver up παραδῷ * and the Father τῷ πατρὶ † take away, or bring to nought, καταργήσῃ

25. For to this purpoſe was the promiſe made to Chriſt, Pſal. 110. that his ſpiritual kingdome on earth, ſhould laſt ſo long, till God had brought all the world to be ſubject to him.

25. For he muſt reigne, * till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

* ſo long until he put ἄχρις οὗ θῇ

26. And of the enemies to be ſubdued death is the laſt, which therefore muſt be ſubdued (and ſo men raiſed from death.)

† is deſtroyed, καταργεῖται

27. For

27. The evidence being clear, for all enmities, all things, no one excepted, that God will ſubdue them all under Chriſt, Alwaies ſuppoſing that God himſelf is excepted, of whom 'tis affirmed that he will put all things under Chriſt.

* this is with an exception of him that did put

28. † And when all things ſhall be ſubdued unto him, then ſhall the Son alſo himſelf be ſubject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.]

† But when that is

28. And when all is ſo ſubdued to Chriſt, then ſhall Chriſt lay down that office which till then he exerciſeth, and in which he is conſpicuous in his Church (which till then he is to adminiſter) and then ſhall God the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt fill all the elect with glory and bliſſe eternally.

29. * Elſe what ſhall they doe, which are baptized [b] for the dead, if the dead riſe not at all, why are † they then baptized for the dead?]

* For Else
† also

29. Now for them among you ver. 12. which ſay there is no reſurrection of the dead, and conſequently that the dead ſhall not be raiſed at the coming of Chriſt (which was the point in hand v. 23. and from that verſe to this all betwixt being to be read as in a parentheſis, ſetting down the ſtate of all things at, and after that reſurrection) I ſhall onely make this demand, Why then have they in their baptiſme made profeſſion of their beleif of it (ſee v. 14, 17.) it being certain that the dead, or the reſurrection of the dead (expreſſed here for brevity under that word [the dead]) is one of the articles, and that a prime and ſpecial one, to the beleif of which they were baptized, and to which, baptiſme (being the putting in and taking out of the water) doth referre, as a ſignificant emblеme, firſt of Chriſt's, then of our reſurrection from the grave? And therefore to what end did theſe men in their baptiſme profeſſe their beleif of this article, if they beleive it not? To be a baptized Chriſtian, and not to beleive the reſurrection, is a ſtrange ridiculous thing, an hypocriſie which they will never be able to anſwer to God or men, and that which actually deprives them of all benefits of baptiſme; and yet ſuch are they if they make doubt of this.

b.

* doe we run hazards and ſuffer

30. And why * ſtand we in jeopardy every houre?]

30. And why ſhould we Chriſtians ever adventure any danger that might poſſibly bring death upon us, if we were not aſſured that there were another life, wherein all our patience and valour for Chriſt ſhould be rewarded by him? v. 18.

31. I proteſt by your rejoicing, which I have in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, I die daily.]

31. I for my part proteſt by that which I take moſt joy in of any thing in the world, my fidelity to Chriſt, that I daily run the hazard of death, which ſure I ſhould not doe, if I had not confidence of another life after this.

† according to man

c.

32. Certainly all the hazards which I ran at Epheſus Act. 19. being, as to man, to the eye of man, or as farre as mens purpoſes could goe, ſet to combate with wild beaſts, i. e. ſentenced and condemned (2 Cor. 1. 9.) to that kind of bloody execution on their theatres (though by the providence of God I was delivered) can bring me no advantage, unleſſe there be another life after this. And were it ſo, there were ſome place for that ſaying of ſome among you, Let us enjoy the good things of this world at preſent, for within a while death comes, and there's an end of all.

33. Be not deceived, evil communications corrupt good manners.]

33. And 'twill concern you, that are not yet thus ſeduced, to take heed that ſuch ſpeeches and diſcourſes as theſe, ſuch atheiſticall temptations to ſenſuality upon preteaſe of the no future ſtate, no being after that of this life, doe not work upon you; The very converſing with ſuch diſputers as theſe may corrupt the beſt of you.

34. 'Tis all reaſon and more then time that you ſhould truly (ſee note on Lu. 16. 2.) or throughly rouze your ſelves out of that drouſie condition of ſinne, that you have gone on in, at leaſt ſome of you, ver. 12. that by their behaviour and diſcourſe ſhew themſelves to be meer heathens ſtill, Of whom I tell you, that it may work ſhame in you, that you have ſuch men among you, rather then that you permit your ſelves to be tempted to imitate them.

* what kind of body

35. But ſome man will ſay, How are the dead raiſed up? and with * what body doe they come?]

35. But ſome object, that if men die, how can they live again? or what kind of body ſhall they have, that which they had, being rotten in the grave? (ſee note on Act. 15. c.)

36. Thou fool, that which thou ſoweſt is not quickned, except it die.]

36. But this is a fooliſh objection, for even in corn that is ſowed, the rotting of the corn is neceſſary to the enlivening of it, or ſpringing of it up again.

37. And that which thou ſoweſt, thou ſoweſt not that body, that ſhall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of ſome other grain.]

37. And it is not the cuſtome to ſow that very thing which after comes up, the blade, and eare, and corn in it, but onely the corn without the reſt, as the corn of wheat, or the like.

38. But God giveth it a body, as it hath pleaſed him, and to every ſeed his own body.]

38. And when ſuch a ſingle corn is ſown without any ear or chaffe about it, God cauſeth it to come in this or that form, a root and blades, and eares of wheat, and proportionably from other ſeeds according to the property of each.

39. All fleſh is not the ſame fleſh, but there is one kind of fleſh of men, another fleſh of beaſts, another of fiſhes, and another of birds.]

39. And as it is among us, one ſort of fleſh differs very much from another, ſo much more a body of a man here on earth, may differ in qualities from a glorified body in heaven.

† both

40. There are † alſo celeſtial bodies, and bodies terreſtrial, but the glory of the celeſtial is one, and the glory of the terreſtrial is another.

41. There is one glory of the ſun, another of the moon, and another glory of the ſtarres, for one ſtarre differeth from another ſtarre in glory.

42. So alſo is the reſurrection of the dead: it is ſown in corruption, it is raiſed in incorruption.]

40, 41, 42. Two things are obſervable in the reſurrection, firſt the improvement of all mens eſtate, who have their part in the the reſurrection of the juſt, above that which here they enjoy, 2. the ſeverall degrees of glory that they then ſhall have one above another; For as heavenly bodies are more glorious then earthly, and one heavenly then another, ſo is it in the reſurrection, And for the firſt of theſe, which is the chief matter of preſent conſideration, The bodies that riſe differ from thoſe that died, the ſtate of the reſurrection differs from that of this life, That which was here was a corruptible body, that which riſes, an incorruptible.

43. The body here hath ſome diſhonourable deformed parts c. 12. 3. others weak and feeble, ſubject to, or decayed by diſeaſes and age; but the future body is quite contrary, glorious and ſtrong.

43. It is ſown in diſhonour, it is raiſed in glory, it is ſown in weakneſſe, it is raiſed in power.]

44. The body here is ſuſtained by meat and drink, but in the future ſtate 'twill be a body immortall, that wants nothing to ſuſtain it, Such bodies indeed there are of both theſe ſorts.

44. It is ſown * a naturall body, it is raiſed a ſpirituall body. There is † a naturall body, and there is a ſpirituall body.]

* an animal ψυχικὸν

45. One ſuch as Adam is mentioned to have had, Gen. 2. 7. and ſuch as we had from Adam, who communcated life to his poſterity, the other we ſhall receive from Chriſt, that reſtores them from the grave, when they have been dead.

45. *And ſo it is written, The firſt man Adam was made a living ſoul, the laſt Adam was made a quickening Spirit.]

* For ſo it hath been written

46. The immortal body was not firſt formed, but that which needed ſuſtenance, ſo as without that it was to periſh, and after that, the immortal body is to be returned to us in ſtead of that mortal.

46. Howbeit, that was not firſt which is ſpirituall, but that which is naturall, and afterward that which is ſpirituall.]

47. The ſtock of the animal life was Adam, ſo called as an earthy man, made out of the earth; the ſtock of the immortal, Chriſt the Lord, that came down from heaven.

48. Such a body as Adam himſelfe had, ſuch have all we mortal men; and ſuch a body as Chriſt now hath, ſuch ſhall we, that live like him, according to his example and precept, have at the reſurrection.

48. As is the earthy, ſuch are they that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, ſuch are they alſo that are heavenly.]

49. And as we have firſt been made like the mortal Adam, ſo ſhall we be made like the immortal Chriſt, when we come to heaven.

49. And as we have born the image of the earthy, we ſhall alſo bear the image of the heavenly.]

d. 50. One thing only I ſhall adde, that 'tis not poſſible, that theſe earthy, corruptible, weak, ignominious bodies of ours ſhould come to heaven, unleſſe they be firſt changed, purified, immortalized (ſee note on Mat. 16. 17. e.)

50. Now this I ſay, brethren, that [d] fleſh and blood cannot inherit the kingdome of God: neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.]

51. And therefore for thoſe that are found alive at the day of Doom, I ſhall tell you a ſecret, not yet diſcovered to you, that though they doe not die at all, yet muſt they all be changed before they go to heaven, theſe bodies, thus qualified as now they are, cannot come thither, ver. 50.

51. Behold * I ſhew you a myſtery, we ſhall not all ſleep, but we ſhall all be changed,]

* I tell you a ſecret, μυστήριον ὑμῖν λέγω

52. And this change ſhall be wrought in them in a minute, at the point of time when all the world are ſummoned to judgment, for God ſhall make the Angels ſound a trumper, or make a noiſe like that of the trumpet, call the whole world of men, that ever was or ſhall be, to judgment, and at that inſtant all that were formerly dead ſhall ariſe in immortal bodies, and thoſe that are then alive ſhall from their mortall be changed into ſuch.

52. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the laſt trump (for † the trumpet ſhall ſound, and the dead ſhall be raiſed incorruptible, and we ſhall be changed.)]

† he ſhall ſound the trumpet, σαλπίσῃ

53. For 'tis moſt certain and neceſſary v. 50. that our mortal bodies muſt be changed into immortal.

53. For this corruptible muſt put on incorruption, and this mortal muſt put on immortality.]

54. And when this is done, then ſhall that ſaying of Hoſea c. 13. 14. be made good, that death ſhall be deſtroyed forever, never to recover ſtrength again over any thing, nothing from thenceforth ſhall ever die.

e. 54. So when this corruptible ſhall have put on incorruption, and this mortal ſhall have put on immortality, then ſhall be brought to paſſe the ſaying that is written, Death is ſwallowed up [e] in victory.]

55. In contemplation of which, a Chriſtian may look on death as a hurtleſſe thing, the ſting or wounding power of which is taken away by Chriſt; and ſo on the ſtate of ſeparation of ſoul from body, that it is ſuch as ſhall not laſt forever.

55. O death, where is thy ſting? O * grave, where is thy victory?

* hades, ᾅδου

56. The only thing that makes death like a ſerpent, able to doe us any hurt (without which it differs nothing from a calm ſleep) is ſin, as that which gives ſin any ſtrength to miſchief us, is the law, which prohibits it, and conſequently brings guilt upon us.

56. The ſting of death is ſin, and the ſtrength of ſin is the law.]

57. But thanks be to God, who, by what Chriſt hath done for us, hath given us victory over ſin and death, and by the conqueſt of ſin, getting out of the power of that, hath made death but an entrance to immortality.

57. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

58. Theſe are arguments ſufficient to teach any Chriſtian conſtancy and perſeverance in doing and ſuffering God's will, and to oblige him to the utmoſt induſtry, and diligence in the ſervice of God, knowing that nothing that we thus undergoe, ſhall fail of receiving a reward.

58. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye ſtedfaſt, unmoveable, alwaies abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as you know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.]

What

2. Ἰακώβῳ ὄφθη

What is here said of Christ's appearance unto James, is not mentioned in the Gospels, yet is it by S. Jerome mentioned from the tradition of the Church, and that presently after his resurrection, before those other appearances, which are here mentioned before it, which if it be true, it is necessary that ἔπειτα be not rendred afterward, but either as an Ordinal of dignity, not of time, or as a form of numbring up several times, without exact observation of the order of them, then, besides, or, in the next place, as the word is used in this Epistle c. 12. 28. πρῶτον ἀποστόλους, where nothing of order, is considered. Now what James this was, is affirmed by S. Hierome also, that James, the brother of our Lord, whom he * calls the thirteenth Apostle, styled James the Just, saith Eusebius l. 2. c. κγ'. and, saith he, reckoned by S. Paul among the special witnesses of the resurrection, James the known Bishop of Jerusalem, whom therefore some of the antients affirm to have been constituted Bishop there by Christ himself at this appearance of his unto him, see Jerome in Catal: and on Gal: c. 1. Epiph: Har: 78. Greg: Turonensis l. 1. c. 17. Chrysostome Hom: 1. on the Acts, Theophyl: on 1 Cor. 15. 7. Ὤφθη Ἰακώβῳ τῷ ἀδελφῷ τῷ κυρίου τῷ ὄντι αὐτῷ συλλειτουργῷ, ὑπὸ τοῦ πρώτου Ἱεροσολύμων, He was seen by James the brother of the Lord, constituted by him the first Bishop of Jerusalem; So Photius the Patriarch of Constantinople, Epist: μιζ'. Ἰάκωβος ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς, ᾧ διαπαντὸς ἔξεστι τὸ ἅγιον χρίεσθαι, καὶ ὁ ἐπίσκοπος Ἱεροσολύμων λαχών, James the first of High-priests (or Bishops) who by the Lords hand received the holy unction, and Bishoprick of Jerusalem. What is thus said of his being constituted Bishop by Christ, is by others said to have been done by Christ and the Apostles (Euseb: l. 17. c. ιδ'. Ἰάκωβος πρῶτος ὁ Ἱεροσολύμων ἐκλελοιπὼς ὁ ἐπισκοπῶν ἐκεῖσε ὑπὸ Σωτῆρος καὶ τῶν Ἀποστόλων ἐπιτυγχάνω, James the first Bishop of Jerusalem, received it from Christ himself and the Apostles,) by others from the Apostles immediately, So Eusebius from Clem: Alexandr. l. 6'. Πέτρον, φησὶ, καὶ Ἰάκωβον, καὶ Ἰωάννην μετὰ τὴν ἀνάληψιν τὸν Σωτῆρα, οὐκ ἂν καὶ τοῦτο τὸν κυρίου προτετιμηκέναι, μὴ ἐπίσκοπον δόξης, ἀλλὰ Ἰάκωβον τὸν Δίκαιον ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων ἐλέσθαι, He saith that Peter, and James, and John, after the assumption of Christ, as being the men that were most favoured by Christ, did not contend for the honour, but chose James the Just to be Bishop of Jerusalem. So, before Clemens, Hegesippus ἱστορεῖ: ὁ'. in Euseb: l. 2. c. κγ'. τὸν τε πρῶτον διαδέχεται) ἐκκλησίας μετὰ (or, as others read, ἐκ τῶν) Ἀποστόλων ὁ ἀδελφὸς τοῦ κυρίου ὁ Ἰάκωβος, ὑπολαμβανόμενος ὑπὸ πάντων Δίκαιος, After this manner did the brother of the Lord, James, called by all men the Just, receive the Church (of Jerusalem) from the Apostles. And that this was done the first year after the death of Christ, is the affirmation of Eusebius in Chronico p. 43. which makes it out of question that this was the James that is mentioned Act. 12. 17. when Peter being delivered out of prison commands word to be carried to James and the brethren, i. e. the Bishop and the beleivers there. And thence is it that he is called an Apostle, Gal. 1. 19. and Act. 15. 6. and 22. the Apostles came together, and It seemed good to the Apostles, so saith Theodoret, Τοὺς νῦν καλουμένους ἐπισκόπους Ἀποστόλους ὠνόμαζον &c. Those whom they now call Bishops, they called Apostles, bringing this for a proof of his affirmation, ὅτε καὶ ἡ Ἱερουσαλὴμ πέμπει εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν ἐγκύκλιον οἱ Ἀπόστολοι, so the Apostles wrote from Jerusalem to those in Antioch. And this is the reason that in this his Church of Jerusalem, James is set before Peter and John, Gal. 2. 9. and is said to give the right hand of fellowship to Paul and Barnabas, and accordingly Paul assoon as he comes to Jerusalem, presently goes in to James Act. 21. 18. And this is the James, that wrote the Epistle, and is called James the Apostle in the inscription of the Epistle, though in the beginning of it he style himself a servant of Jesus Christ. See note b. on the Inscription of that Epistle.

'Tis to little purpose to set down the several interpretations of this place (see Justell: in Cod: Can: Eccl: Universa p. 173.) This which hath been set down in the paraphrase is most natural, rendring ὑπὲρ for, answerable to the Hebrew עַל. For the τῶν νεκρῶν the dead, is but the title in brief of that grand Article of the Creed, that of the resurrection of the dead, just as among the Hebrewes עַל עֲבוֹדַת זָרָה of, or for strange worship, denotes that precept of the sons of Adam and Noah, which prohibiteth the worship of any strange Gods, or עַל בְּרָכַת הַשֵּׁם of, or for the benediction of the name] is the precept of worshipping and serving the one true God, and so generally titles of constitutions, and of articles, are abbreviates, in a word or two. Of this interpretation of the place see Chrysost: t. 3. p. 514. Andr: Downes notes on Chrys: p. 305. t. 8. p. 305. Zonaras in Can: Eccl: Afr: 18. p. 408. & Theophylact on this place. To this there is but one thing necessary to be added, which will remove all difficulty from it, viz: that τινες ἐξ ὑμῶν v. 12. is the nominative case to Βαπτίζονται, those of the Corinthians, that now doubted of the resurrection, had in their baptisme among other things made profession of the beleif of it. Which makes the Apostle's argument unanswerable, because they had not yet renounced their baptisme, though they denied the resurrection. The truth of the fact, that some of the Church of Corinth did deny the resurrection, is the expresse affirmation of the Apostle v. 12. And that that may not be thought strange, it may be remembred what Photius relates of some of the Philosophers, that this was the last article of the Christian faith which they received, as thinking it most contrary to those Philosophical principles imbibed by them; and, by name, of Synesius, that he was made a Bishop before he beleived the truth of that article; For which they that had made him, being question'd, made this Apologie for so doing, that they found so many excellent graces in him, that they could not but think them useful to the Church of God, and confidently hope that God would not let them all perish, but would in time give him this grace also, which accordingly came to passe.

That S. Paul here referres to that which befell him at Ephesus, Act. 19. may appear 1. by 2 Cor. 1. 8. where he mentions his great persecution in Asia (of which Ephesus was the Metropolis) and pressure so heavy, that, saith he, I despaired even of life, having the sentence of death passed on him, as farre as he could guesse of himself, and so making his deliverance a wonderfull unexpected act of

Now that S. Paul was condemned, at leaſt by the multitude deſigned, to this puniſhment at that time, Act. 19. may thus appear, 1. by the expreſſe words of 2 Cor. 1. 9. we had the ſentence of death in our ſelves, i.e. paſſed on us. but, as it follows, God delivered him out of it. 2^dly, by the phraſe κατ' ἄνθρωπον here, (in the ſame ſenſe as χριθῆναι κατ' ἀνθρώπους 1 Pet. 4. 5. and τὸ κατ' ἐμὲ as much as in me is, nothing on my part wanting, Rom. 1. 15.) i. e. ὅσον τὸ εἰς ἀνθρώπους, ſaith Theophylact, as much as related to, or concerned men (parallel to that of ἐν ἑαυτοῖς in our ſelves, in that place to the Corinthians) i. e. men ſo deſigned me, though God took me out of their hands, ἁρπάσαι τὸν κίνδυνον ſnatched me out of the dangers (parallel to God's raiſing him from the dead there, and delivering him from ſo great a death v. 10.) 3^dly, by the ſtory in the Acts c. 19. where v. 29. the city being in an uproar, they all with one conſent run to the theatre, the place where theſe bloody tragedies were acted, and haled Gaius and Ariſtarchus, two of Paul's companions thither. And if Paul had come into ſight, they would have done ſo to him alſo, but the Chriſtians there would not permit him to come amongſt them, ver. 30. And, v. 31. the Aſiarcha having ſome kindneſſe to Paul (a great work of God's providence that they ſhould) ſent and gave him warning that he ſhould keep cloſe, and μὴ δοῦναι ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὸ θέατρον, not give himſelf to the theatre, i.e. not run the hazard, by coming out, to be carried thither, knowing the full purpoſe of the people to ſet him to the θηριομαχία combating with wilde beaſts, if he did. Which farther appears by the regiſters words (in his ſpeech whereby he pacified the people) ver. 37. Ye have brought theſe men, being neither robbers of your Temple, nor blaſphemers of your Goddeſſe, i. e. ye have dealt with them, as if they were ſome notorious malefactors, to be thus publickly puniſhed on the theatre, whereas they have done nothing worthy of ſuch proceedings. This is a clear interpretation of theſe words, and gives a fair account of the κατ' ἄνθρωπον, ſo as to ſignifie as farre as man's purpoſe concerning us (who had condemn'd us to this death, though God delivered us) of which learned men have given ſo many, and ſo wide conjectures.

εἰς τὸ Θέατρον, τοῦτ'

That [fleſh and blood] ſignifies that ſtate of growing, feeding, corruptible bodies, ſuch as theſe we carry about us, there is little doubt. How, or with what propriety it comes to doe ſo, may receive ſome light from that of Homer Iliad. 5. There of the Gods he ſaith

d. ζωὴν ἡ αἷμα

—ἠ οἷνον πίνουσ', ἠ πίνακ' ἀιθοπα οἶνον,
Τοὔνεκ' ἀναίμονές εἰσιν, ἀθάνατοι καλέονται.

They eat no meat, nor drink no wine, therefore they have no blood, and are called immortal. Thus in the Goſpel 'tis ſaid of the ſaints in heaven, which are clearly anſwerable to the ſobereſt notion of their Gods, that they neither eat nor drink, and from thence (agreeably to that which Homer concludes from thence) they are here ſaid not to be fleſh and blood, nor, as it followes, corruptible, denoting the difference betwixt the natural body we have here, and the ſpiritual hereafter.

The Hebrew phraſe לנצח, which is ordinarily rendred εἰς τέλος Lam. 5. 20. 2 Sam. 2. 26. Job 36. 7. Jer. 3. 5. Amos 1. 11. doth in all of them ſignifie forever, and is rendred εἰς τὸ διηνεκὲς Iſa. 13. 20. and εἰς τέλος to the end Pſal. 13. 2. and ſo 'tis in this place, Death ſhall be forever (or, perfectly, or finally) devoured.

CHAP. XVI.

1. Now concerning the contribution for the ſupply of the wants of the poor Chriſtians in Judæa, diſtreſſed by means of the great famine (in the reigne of Claudius, ſee Act. 11. 8. and 2 Cor. 9. 1.) the ſame order that I gave to the Churches of Galatia, I now give to you.

2. On the day of the Chriſtian aſſembly it is not reaſonable for any to come to the Lord empty (ſee Exod. 23. 15. Deut. 16. 16.) and therefore at ſuch a time, upon ſuch a ſpecial occaſion as this, let every one lay aſide whatſoever by God's bleſſing comes in to him by way of increaſe, ſo that there may be a full collection made, without any more gatherings when I come among you.

23. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you.

24. My love be with you all in Chriſt Jeſus. Amen.

The firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi, by Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus, and Timotheus.

Notes on Chap. XVI:

2. Προπέμψῃ

Προπέμπω is to accompany, to bring on the way, v. 6. and to ſet forth, and, if need be, to provide for the neceſſaries of his journey. So Tit. 3. 13. where 'tis explain'd by ἵνα μηδὲν ἀυτῶν λείπῃ that they want nothing. So Act. 15. 3. where they that were ſent by the Church of Antioch, in all reaſon are to be beleived to have had the charge of their journey defrayed by them. As for the phraſe ὁ πορευόμενος ἐν εἰρήνῃ in the Lord's peace] peace] here added, it ſeems to referre to that notion of peace (as in, Peace be with you &c.) which is a form of ſalutation, eſpecially at diſmiſſing the aſſembly (ſee note on Rom. 16. c.) or at any other parting, or taking of leave, which was among the Chriſtians uſed by way of benediction, and then ἐν εἰρήνῃ, in, or, with peace, will be no more then, when ye take leave, or part with them.

b. Ἀνέπαυσε πνεῦμα

This phraſe ἀνέπαυσε πνεῦμα quieted the ſpirit,] is taken out of the Greek tranſlation Zach. 6. 8. in ſtead of which the Chaldee have עבידו ית רעוותי they have done my deſire, i. e. ſaith Maimonides, they were acceptable and welcome to mee, See Joh: Coch: Tit: Talmud: p.300.

c. Ἐκκλησία

The word ἐκκλησία the Church] doth not onely ſignifie the place of aſſembling together, but the perſons of thoſe that uſe to doe ſo, i.e. all the Chriſtians in any place, So in the beginning of this Epiſtle having named the Church which is in Corinth, he proceeds ἡγιασμένοις, κλητοῖς ἁγίοις &c. the ſanctified, the ſaints, i.e. all the Chriſtians in that place, which are meant by the word Church præceding. And ſo here the Church is all the members of the Church of Chriſt, the Chriſtians; and then οἶκος houſe ſignifying in like manner not the walls of the houſe, but the family, the perſons in it, (as when 'tis ſaid of Cornelius that he was a proſelyte σὺν παντὶ τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ, with all his houſe, i. e. he and all the perſons in his family,) it is evident what is meant by the Church in their houſe, i. e. all the beleivers of their family. The ſame are called ἡ κατ' οἶκον αὐτῶν ἐκκλησία Rom. 16. 4. the Church or Chriſtians belonging to their family: the præpoſitions [ἐν] and [κατ'] being promiſcuouſly uſed in theſe writings.

ἡ κατ' οἶκον ἐκκλησία

d. Μαρὰν ἀθά

Of ἀνάθεμα, as it was the ſecond degree of Cenſures taken from the Jewes, and accommodated to the uſe of the Chriſtian Church, ſomewhat hath been ſaid, note on c.5.e. Now the addition of Maranatha μαρὰν ἀθὰ] to it, ſignifies the third and higheſt degree of excommunication, ſuperadded to that ſecond. For though ſome queſtion have been of late made of it by learned men, yet there is little reaſon to doubt, but there were among the Jewes thoſe three degrees of excommunication נזוי, חרם, and שמאתא, the firſt a remotion from familiar converſe, ad quatuor paſſus, for four paces, the ſecond more ſolemne, with execrations out of Moſes law added to it, the third leaving the offender to divine vengeance. This laſt is denoted, without doubt, by the origination of the word שמאתא whatſoever that be. For three derivations it is capable of, two mentioned in Meed Katon, in theſe words, What is Schammatha? Rab anſwered שם מיתה there is death, and Samuel ſaid שממא חוא there ſhall be deſolation. The third is from שם אתא Dominus venit, the Lord comes. That this third ſhould not be it, there is onely this pretenſe, that then there would be no reaſon for the dageſh or doubling of the [מ] in ſchammatha. But conſidering that that is no great change, and that in either of the other two, greater are admitted, in the firſt the ה in the end of מיתה turned into א. and much greater in the ſecond, the word μαρὰν ἀθὰ here will give us great reaſon to forſake the two former, and pitch upon that third derivation, it being clear that the word אתא comes,] is the ſame in both, and for the שם and מרן it is as clear, that they are directly the ſame. The word שם is name, but in ordinary ſpeech among the Jewes ſignifies the name of God, or God himſelf. And ſo doth Maran in the Eaſtern tongues ſignifie Dominus, Lord, whence in Etruria the Kings were called Marani, ſaith Servius on Æneid: 12. and the Syrians are now called Maronita, becauſe they call Chriſt מראני our Lord. Agreeable to which it is, that in Epiphanius, God is by the Gazari called Marnas, and by the Cretians their virgins are ſtyled Μαρναὶ, i. e. Κυρίαι Ladies. And thus both theſe words Schammatha and Maranatha will be directly all one with the denunciation of Enoch, Jude 14. ἰδοὺ ἦλθε Κύριος the Lord cometh, and that there explained by ποιῆσαι κρίσιν doing judgment againſt wicked men, that will not be reformed. According to this it is, that among the Spaniards, who have ſo much of the remainders of the Jewes among them, this form hath been uſed, ſit Anathema maranatha, & excommunicatus, or מורמא מן רחמא אל רב let him be excommunicated from the hope of the Lord. A paſſage there is in Stephanus Byzant: מ: מא: which in all probability belongs to this word. Κεφαυνωθεὶς πε πεμπτῷ λέγει Ῥαμανθας, τυτέστιν ἀφ' ὑψους ὁ Θεὸς, A ſhepheard being thunderſtrook, ſaith he, cried out Ramanthas, i. e. God from above. Where though, out of Philo the Grammarian, he derive it from Raman, ſignifying height, and Athas, God, yet there is little doubt to be made, but the word is a corruption in the vulgar, and ſo in the ſhepheards uſe of it, for Maranatha here. The onely thing remaining of difficulty is, how, ſuppoſing this a form of excommunication, it can here be appliable to the not loving of Chriſt, which, being a ſin of the heart, ſeems not to be capable of any judges cognizance, nor conſequently of their cenſure. But it muſt be obſerved that the love of Chriſt, ſignifies that perfect love that caſts out fear, and contains in it the confeſſion of Chriſt, adhaering and cleaving to him (as to love a maſter, *Mat.*6.24. is, to hold to him in that verſe) the not loving of Chriſt, is the denying of him in time of trouble, and ſignifies here him that was tainted with the error of the Gnoſticks, and ſo would not confeſſe Chriſt in time of perſecution (ſee note on Rev. 2. b.) and then there is nothing more reaſonable, then that the Apoſtle, having written this whole Epiſtle againſt the ſchiſmes, and vicious practiſes, and hereſies infuſed into the Church of Corinth by theſe men, ſhould conclude with a denunciation of the higheſt degree of Excommunication againſt all thoſe, who ſhall thus renounce Chriſt, and fall off to theſe damnable hereſies, denying the Lord that bought them, 2 Pet. 2, 1.

ἰδοὺ ἦλθε Κύριος

ποιῆσαι κρίσιν

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAVL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

THE occasion and time of writing this Second Epistle are the onely things, which will here be necessary to be premised, And both of these may probably be discovered. At the end of his three years stay in Asia, when he was now hastening toward Jerusalem, 1 *Cor.*16.8. that is An. Ch. 54. he had before his departure from Ephesus (see note a. on the title of 1 Cor.) written his first Epistle to them, for the checking of many enormities among them, which Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus had brought him word of; And when the successe of that Epistle of his was soon declared unto him by Titus, how that the Censures inflicted on the offenders had reduced many, and that there was a very discernible reformation wrought amongst them by these means, he makes all hast (assoon as he had received this account) to send this second, milder Epistle unto them, to qualifie the seeming severities of the former, and to take off the Censures again from those, that had thus seasonably been reform'd by them, c. 2. 7. and 10. This shewes that it was written within a short time after the former, And the same also appears by the solemn mention of the danger, which he had past at Ephesus, (which he had but intimated in the former Epistle c. 15. 32. but now enlargeth on it, at the beginning of this Epistle, c. 1.8. and c.4.7. &c.) viz: that caused by Demetrius and the silver-smiths, Act. 19. 24. in which he had like to have been brought to the theatre, to combat with wild beasts, and escaped narrowly with life; Which deliverance of his was, it seems, now fresh in his memory, and fit to be recounted by him again and again, and to be thankfully acknowledged by all that had any interest in him. 2. Δευτέρα ἐπὶ Κορινθίους

As for the point of time, wherein it was written, it may be thus probably collected. In this Epistle c. 2. 12. he mentions his being at Troas to preach the Gospel, and his good successe in converting many, which is the meaning of the dore being opened him in the Lord, from thence saith he hastened to Macedonia, on purpose to meet Titus, and understand from him the successe of his former Epistle to these Corinthians, and there it seems he found him, and presently dispatcht this second Epistle to them, which is accordingly in the subscription of it dated from Philippi in Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas; That this was done in that journey set down Act. 20. in the beginning, there is no question, but in what verse of that chapter this his being at Troas, (mention'd here c.2.12.) is described, that is the only difficulty. That it is not to be referred to that mention of Troas Act. 20. 6. appears by this, that there they came from Philippi (i.e. from Macedonia) to Troas, but at the point of time mention'd in this Epistle, 'tis evident they went from Troas to Macedonia. Again in that verse of the Acts they stayed at Troas but seven daies, and in those daies the disciples came together to break bread, on the Lords day, and Paul διελέγετο διαλέγετο discoursed to them till midnight; All which supposeth them of Troas to have formerly received the Gospel, whereas at his being in Troas, which is mention'd in this Epistle, he seems to have first revealed the Gospel unto them, the dore which was then opened unto him, being the first reception of the Gospel in that place. It is therefore most reasonable to suppose this his being at Troas to be contained Act. 20.1. in his passing from Ephesus the Metropolis of Asia, into Macedonia. That Troas was not so much out of the way betwixt these two, but that by it he might passe from one to the other, appears in the following verses, for in the return from Macedonia v.3. into Asia v.4. they are all found at Troas v.5, & 6. and from thence it is as clear, that Troas might be taken in his way v.1. as he went from Ephesus to Macedonia, But the brevity of S. Lukes narrations keeps this from being mention'd there, which yet may be supplied by this of S. Pauls own pen, c.2.12. And from thence it will be concluded that either at his being in Macedonia v.1. (at which time he met with Titus there, 2 *Cor.*2.12.) or possibly at his return through Macedonia from Greece v.2,3 this Epistle was written by him, to follow the former, assoon as he discerned the successe of it, and to comfort them, whom that had cast down. And that it was in the second point of time, that of his return from Greece through Macedonia, may appear by c. 1. 16. where mentioning two resolutions, which he had had to visit them, the former in his passage into Macedonia, the second at this his return from it, both of these must needs be past, before the writing hereof; In this Epistle he also excuseth his not coming to them, and addeth many other things occasionally, Especially he is carefull to vindicate his Apostleship from some calumnies, that malicious seducers, crept into that Church, had cast upon him. And this is all that was usefull to be said before hand on this Epistle.

CHAP. I.

1. Timotheus that was ſent to you by me with the former Epiſtle, to ſee my directions obſerved among you, to the Chriſtian Church in the city of Corinth, and in all other cities and regions through all Achaia.

1. PAVL an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, by the will of God, and [Timothy * our brother, unto the Church of God which is at Corinth, with all the ſaints that are in all Achaia,] * the

2. Grace be to you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

3. I have all reaſon to bleſſe & magnifie the name of God, which purpoſely ſent our Lord Jeſus Chriſt into the world, and by that, and his many other gracious acts of his particular providence hath ſhewed himſelf to be a moſt mercifull and gracious Father unto us,

3. Bleſſed be † God even the father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the father of mercies, and the God of all comforts,] † the God and Father

4. Who in all the preſſures that have befallen me, hath eminently relieved and ſuccoured me, and by thoſe experiences hath enabled me to refreſh and cheer up all thoſe that are in any affliction.

4. Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we our ſelves are comforted of God.]

5. By this one conſideration, of which I have had ſo frequent evidences, that according to the proportion of our ſuffering for Chriſt, Chriſt doth conſtantly afford us comforts and reliefs, the greater our afflictions are, the greater alſo our refreſhments from Chriſt.

5. * For as the ſufferings of Chriſt † abound in us, ſo our conſolation alſo aboundeth by Chriſt.] * Because † upon us abound

6. And ſo what afflictions ſoever befall us, there is no reaſon, you ſhould be ſtartled or diſcouraged in your Chriſtian courſe by that means. For ſure 'tis for your advantage that we are ſo. Our afflictions are matter of comfort to you, viz. that you can fall under no perſecutions your ſelves, but what ye ſee us endure before you, and thoſe meerly for our doing you good, preaching the Goſpel to you, endevouring to bring you to repentance and to bliſſe, which is not ordinarily to be come to, but by ſuffering after my example. And then the refreſhments and extraordinary reliefs that Chriſt afforded me in all my ſufferings, thoſe ſure will be matter of comfort to you alſo, as a pledge of aſſurance that Chriſt will afford you the like refreſhments here, and reward hereafter.

6. And whether we be afflicted, it is for your conſolation and ſalvation, which is * effectuall in the enduring of the ſame ſufferings which we alſo ſuffer, or whether we be comforted, it is for your conſolation and ſalvation.] * wrought by

7. And of this I make no doubt, but that as you have your parts in the afflictions, ſo ye ſhall alſo of the reliefs and advantages by ſuffering.

7. And our hope † of you is ſtedfaſt, knowing that as you are partakers of the ſufferings, ſo * ſhall ye alſo of the conſolation.] † for you * you are

8. All this I ſay by way of preface to this advertiſement which I deſire to give you of the ſharp perſecutions that I lately met with at Epheſus, the chief metropolis of Aſia, Act. 19. ſee note on 1 Cor. 15. c. where I had like to have been brought out to the theatre to be devoured by the wild beaſts, and indeed had no humane means to avert, nor conſequently to eſcape it.

8. For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble which came to us in Aſia, that we were preſſed out of meaſure, above ſtrength, inſomuch that we deſpaired even of life.]

9. And this advantage I had of it, that the more I beleived I ſhould be put to death, the more I might be engaged by my deliverance, never to depend on any worldly truſt, but only on God, who can reſcue from the greateſt extremity, even from grave and death it ſelf.

9. But † we had the ſentence of death in our ſelves, that we ſhould not truſt in our ſelves, but in God which raiſeth the dead.] † we our ſelves had

10. Even that God who hath actually delivered me out of that imminent danger, and ſo ſtill continues to deliver me, and I verily beleive will yet longer continue preſervations to me,

11. To which purpoſe I ſuppoſe 'twill much conduce, that you will earneſtly pray for me, for as the prayers of many are an effectual motive to God to doe what they pray for, when by that means the favour being granted to many at once, thoſe many ſhall be all engaged to thank God, and magnifie his name, ſo the benefit afforded me in favour to many others, viz: to the beleivers who pray for me, and may receive profit by my life, may by thoſe many be received with thankſgiving to God in my behalf.

11. You alſo helping together by prayer for us, that † for the gift beſtowed upon us [a] by the means of many perſons, thanks may be given by many on our behalf.] † the favour confer'd on us for the ſakes of many, may by many be thankfully acknowledged, in

12. For of this I can ſay with joy and comfort, that my conſcience gives me a cheerfull teſtimony in all my actions, that I have had no ends or deſignes of my own, but in a pious ſimplicity and ſincerity of heart, not as worldly wiſdome would direct, but according to the Goſpel-rules (ſee note on Heb. 13. c.) we have behaved our ſelves toward all men, but toward you beyond all others.

12. For our rejoicing is this, the teſtimony of our conſcience, that in ſimplicity and godly ſincerity, not with fleſhly wiſdome, but by the grace of God, we have had our converſation in the world, and more abundantly to you-wards.]

13. For my writings to you are perfectly agreeable to the doctrine preacht by me, and by you received, when I was among you, what in my Epiſtles you read, you cannot but acknowledge to be that, which ye have been taught, and I hope you will never be drawn away from that acknowledgment.

13. For we write none other things unto you, then what you read, * or acknowledge, and I † truſt you ſhall acknowledge even to the end.] * or, thoſe things alſo ye acknowledge; for the Syriack leaves out † hope that

* again from Macedonia to come to you... πάλιν ἐκ Μακεδονίας ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς

16. This I firſt meant to doe in my way to Macedonia, and being hindred from doing it then (and going another way, viz: by Troas, c.2.12.) I have had a ſecond reſolution of viſiting you, at my going from Macedonia into Greece, Act. 20. 16. 2. that ſo might have been conducted by ſome of you toward Judea, whither I am a going with contributions to the poor Chriſtians there.

17. When I therefore was † thus minded, did I uſe lightneſſe? or the things that I purpoſe, doe I purpoſe according to the fleſh, that with me there ſhould be [b] yea, yea, and nay, nay?]

† had this reſolution τοῦτο βουλευ... or, was thus willing. for the King's MS. reads ἐβουλόμην

17. And though I did not come, yet have my calumniators nothing to lay to my charge for this, as if I did make reſolutions lightly, raſhly and inconſtantly, as men uſe ordinarily to doe. b.

18. But as God is true, our word toward you, was not yea and nay.]

18. No I aſſure you as God is faithfull there was no levity or inconſtancy in my reſolution.

19. For the Son of God, Jeſus Chriſt, who was preached among you by us, even by me, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, was not yea and nay, but * in him was yea.]

19. As little as there was in our preaching of Chriſt Jeſus the Son of God among you, which is alſo calumniated by ſome, as if it were light, uncertain, liable to inconſtancy, but that moſt unjuſtly, for what was preached by us there among you, was confirmed by Chriſt himſelf, i. e. by miracles wrought by his power among you.

20. For all the promiſes of God † in him are yea, and * in him, Amen, † unto the glory of God by us.]
